wards Rome it felf, pitch'd his Camp at the Disches of Clalia, five miles from the Citie. This forced Senare and people into agreement, all in common being seized with horrour and amazement, so that it was agreed a message should be sent to him, offering him his restitution. The Messengers were Patritians, and fuch as for their love to him he had most cause to favour; but though with all advantage possible they made their addresse, yet he received them with wonderfull severity in a Council of Officers, and gave them this answer, that if they would expect peace, they should restore to the Volsci all Towns and Territories taken away in War: and make them free of the Citie as the Latines were: and he would give them 30 dayes time to confider of it. Hereat the Captains of the Volfti, especially Tullus, took occasion to malign him, though he employed this time of Truce very profitably, fubduing feven great and strong Towns. When the time was out . and he returned, another Message came to him, desiring that refraining himself he would draw off the Volsei, and then consult in common; for they would do nothing by constraint or fear: but if he thought the Volici were to be gratified, they would yield to him if they would fay down their Arms. He replied, he carried himself not as General of the Volsci , but as a Roman Citizen, and defired, that, having a respect to justice and moderation, they would return within 3 dayes with a grant of what he had formerly emanded; else he must proceed in his enterprize. Hereupon the Senate, in so great a Tempest which threatned all, betook them to their facred Anchor as they accounted quired they should either accept of the terms, or expect hostility to the utmost. 57. The Prietts being returned, the Citizens were warned to be ready at the Walls, thence to repel the Enemy if he came, for that no other hope remained, than what time, and vicifitude of fortune might afford. The whole Citie being full of tumults, trembling, and amazement, the women flocked to the Temples, but the most, and especially the chiefest, made their supplications at the Altar of Tupiter in the Capitol. Amongst these was Vateria the fifter of Poplicola, into whose mind came this device, that they should go to Veturia (fay Dienysius and Livy) or Volumnia (faith Plutarch) the mother of Coriolanus, and procure her, with Volumnia (fay they) or Virgilia (saith he) her daughter-in-law, to go, and intercede for their Countrey. Veturia earnestly pressed to undertake so pious a work, answered, they had little hopes to obtain their fute, for that her fon had never fent to fee them fince his departure, being falln out with his own family as well as his Countrey; yet the was ready to improve that interest the had in him, and fet forth towards him with her daughter-in-law, and two Nephews. Coriolamus feeing the women come, resolved fully to give them a denial, but when he perceived his mother amongst them, he descended from his Tribunal, and went to meet her. Having courteoutly received her with his Wife and Children, he gave it, and ordered all the Pontifies, Priefts, Governours of their superstitions houses and Augurs, in their several habits, should go & beseech him to compose the matter: But neither was Marcins moved with this Pompous train; but re-ear to her request, which she made with all the Oratory that she could compasse out of the impending ruin of his own Countrey, and the infamy which SECT.I. would necessarily follow a fruitlesse attempt. When herewith she could not prevail, the put him in mind how much nature, together with a carefull education of him in her widdowhood, had ingaged him to obedience, and in conclusion cast her self down at his feet which she imbraced and kissed. He A.M. 3517. presently lifted her up, and cried out, Mother, thou hast got the victory, ad- 01,73, an.,

His mother prevaileth with him to

CHAP. IV.

vantageous to my Countrey, but destructive to my felf, and accordingly drew V.C. 266. off the Velsel into their own Countrey, who were variously affected. Some Daii 34. blamed both him and the action: others that were studious of peace did neither; and fome, though they condemned the thing, yet abfolved the man, who Coll. was constrained by so great necessity to do it; yet none refused to obey his orders, but followed him, more through the authority of his virtue than of his

58. But when he was come to Antium, Tullus, the great Æmulator of his glory, supposing he had a sufficient advantage against him, required him to lay down his Office, and give an account of his actions to the people. He refused to resign his place, except commanded by the people to do it, unto which he said he was not afraid to give an account of any thing he had done. at that present. The people being called together, the principal of Tullus his faction instigated them against him; but when he arose to speak for himself. those turbulent spirits for shame gave way, and all sober and peaceable men openly declared they would hear him candidly, and judge him according to right and equity. Inlim then fearing the mans eloquence, and fufficiently apprehensive how much repute the very Crime objected would bring him (for they could not seem to be injured by him in not taking Rome, without confidering that he had brought things to that paffe by his incredible valour and dexrerity, that they were near taking of it) would not expect the judgement of the multitude, but crying out with his complices, that the betrayer of the Volfci was not to be suffered to hold the Tyranny over them by refusing to lay down his Office, rushed our, and slew him in the place. Though no man stood up in his defence, yet that this wicked act displeased most, it presently appeared. For upon report of his death they came generally out of the Towns and buried him honourably, adorning his sepulchre, as of a General and a famous Warrier, with Arms and Trophies. Such was the end of the Eminentest mun of that age for valour, who by his four rigidity procured extreme hazard to his Countrey, and destruction to himself, whilesthe preferred private revenge before publick good, and yet would not floop to any provision for his own fafety. 59. At Rome upon Marcius his retreat was such exultation, as is suitable to the joy of those that are rescued from utter desolation. The Senate Decreed to the women what honours they would ask, but they onely defired they might build a Chapel to Women's foreune, in the place where they had delivered their Countrey, which was done at the publick charge, and they at their own dedicated the image. When the death of Coriolanus was heard, there was neither expression of joy nor forrow further than this, that the women were permitted to mourn for him ten moneths; the longest time allowed by Nama for the nearest relations, according to Platarch. The Confuls not long after took the field with a confiderable Army, but had no occasion to make trial of it; for the Volsci and Equi joyning their forces together resolved to take the Romans unprovided; but in their march they fell out about a General, of whether Nation he should be , and from words to blows, in such a manner that they fought a great battel, and if night had not severed them, one party had been utterly destroyed. The year following the new Confuls , C. Aquilius and T. Sicinius, overthrew, the one the Hernici and the other the Volfci, amongs whom fell Tullus Actius, a man of personal valour, but no good conduct. Their Successors, Proculus Virginius, and Sp. Cassius took the field with the Legions; the Aqui falling to the former, as the Volfei and Hernici to the later. The Volfei presently asked

Lil a

443

He is flain.

raignty.

SECT. 1. peace, having in the last battel lost the flower of their strength, and after them shortly the Hermei, refusing any more to contest for equality with the Romans. Cassius having received money and provisions, as from such as confessed themselves conquered, gave them truce, and referred them for conditions to the Senate. 60. After along debate, the Fathers resolved they should be received into amity, and that Cassing at his discretion might prescribe the conditions of the League, confirming whatfoever they should be. Cassius returning home, asked, and obtained a triumph, though he had neither taken any City, worlded any Enemy, nor had any Captives or spoils for ornament of the solemnity, which possessed men with an apprehension of his arrogancy, and procured him envy. After his triumph he published as conditions of peace, the very same that were granted to the Latines, which gave great diffifte, it being conceived an unworthy thing to make frangers equal in privilege with their kinfmen the Latines; fuch as could allege no merit, with those who had exceedingly well deserved of the State: the Patritians took it also disdainfully that he would determine fully on his own head a matter of fuch weight, without asking any of them his advice. His three Consulfhips, and two Triumphs, made him caffin aimeth the Principality would now content him. Knowing that the ordinary way to at the Sove- it was to gain the favour of the People, by some great act of kindnesse, he at the Sove-feem to himself far superiour to any of the same rank, so that no lesse than resolved upon that course, and first to divide amongst them certain publick grounds, which through the neglect of the Magistrates, had been seized on, and possessed by the rich. The successe might have been dubious had he stryed here; but he would also have the Latines into the lot with the Hernici his new denizons, that he might procure the favour of those Nations. The day after his Triumph, calling together the People according to the custom. he recalled to their memories the great services he had done in his several Confulfhips : how in the first he had lubdued the Sabines , in the second reduced the Commons into the City, after the appealing of the Sedition, as also received the Lailnes into fellowship and Communion: in the third, the Volfes of Enemies were made friends, and the Hernici, a great and nowerful Nation, received into close and inward confederacy. By these discourses he infinuated, as if above all others he took charge of the Continonwealth, and so would continue to do. And he concluded with a promife to do more for the Commons, than any man ever did who was most in favour, and that should presently appear.

6x. The day following, he called together the Senate, which was yery much troubled at his speech, and declared, that because the Common People were very uteful both in procuring Dominion, and defending Liberty. it was convenient to divide to them those publick grounds, which were most impudently held from the State by some Patritians, and pay the money back out of the Treatury, that they had laid out for that Corn, whi. If being given freely to the City by Gelon the Tyrant of Stoilis, ought to have been divided amongst the Inhabitants. The Pathers heard him with great diffain, and rejected the motion, his Colleague Virginius grievoully acculing him as feditions. For leveral daies after, Caffins discouffed of this to the People, and Virginius held the Senate conflicting how to withfland him. The Tribunes of the People at length, either for that they were jealous of fome deligne, or were displessed that they themselves had not first proposed this thing, withflood it, alleging it was an unjust thing that what they had dearly burchased with their labour and blood, should be common to ftrangers as well as themfelves. As this raifed some dishine, for Coffins again drew them to his party, by propounding that the grounds might be divided amongst such as had most need, and by urging that it was better to have a little, than by expecting much to be frustrated of all. As the People were thus perswaded to and fro, C. Rabilleins one of the Tribunes found out a way, which for the present ended the dispute. Virginius precending that he was for a division of the grounds, but not unto foreiners, hoping that these would ever be joyned; and Callius being both for Citizens and ftrangers; he took them both at their SECT. I. words: for the one and the other yielding there should be a division, he bade the People accept of that, and defer that wherein they differred to another time.

62. For some dayes after this, Callius kept his house, pretending sicknesse, and fludied how he might caute his Law, called Les Agraria, to pille by force. For this purpose he sent for the Latines and Hernies to be present at the Comitia, that he might carry it by greater number of voices, so as the City was filled with them. Virginia: hereupon made Proclamation, that all fuch as dwelt not in the City, should depart within a short time prefixed. and Caffins caused it to be proclaimed, that all such as were free should stay till the matter were determined. No end of the contention appearing, the Fathers feared it might come to blows, or further inconvenience, and therefore affembled to make some effectival provision for the publick Peace.

After a little debate they came to this resolution, that ten men of Confular dignity should be created to survey the grounds, and declare how much of them was to be let out to farm, and how much divided to the People. That it should be declared, that for as much as it was inequitable for the new afficiates, or denizons, to expect pair in such Lands as were gained to the State before their admission, if any afterward should be got by their affistance, to each several People should be assigned it's portion, according to the League. That for the choice of the ten men, and the distribution of the ground, the succeeding Consuls should make provision. This Decree being published to the People, appealed all, and frustrated the design of

His design fruftrared.

Callins.

CHAP. IV.

63. In the year following, being the first of the 74 Olympiad, wherein A. M. 3521.
Altrius of Syracule was Nictor, Leostrains executing the place of principal of 74. an. 1. Archon at Athens, according to the computation of Dionylius, in the first V. c. 269. year of Arraethis Reign, Q. Fabiat and S. Cornelius were Confuls. Now vet 70, two most applie young men. Cafe Eabiat, the brother of the Conful, and Arrae, vet 2. L. Valerius the grand-fon of Poplicala, being Quaffers, and thereby having authority to attempt the People, fee a day to Cassius the late Conful to answer in the Comitia to the charge of affected tyranny. Then in full Affembly did they lay open his actions; how he had bestowed upon the Launer the third part of the plunder, who thought it happinesse, fufficient to be mide free of the City: then the Hernies, who could expect no lesse than to be deprived of their own Lands, he cookerather to make Friends than subjects, and Citizens than Tribitaries, whence both grounds and plunder being divided into three parts, two of these must go to Subjects, and Strangers, to that if it were found necessary afterwards to give others, the same privilege of the City, the Roman Citizens being by right Lords of all, should not have remaining one third to the maleres. They aggravated this with the management of the buinshes, as his doing all without confusing the Fathers, and against the interposition of the Tribunes. That these things tended to the designed establishment of a Tyranny, they proved from the money and arms wherevith the Lasines and Harnici had furnished him, as also from the company of stout young men of those Mations which he had about his person. In testimony bereof they produced several credible persons, both Citizens and Associates, who asserted ir. In these the Popple giving credit, notwithstanding his premedisated Ortions, and his chree children, who with many friends and clients ac-He is con-semprified him in mourning habit, and interceded for him; not withfland-demned, and ingall his services, and the honour obtained by them, they would not at all put to death, picyhim, but out of extreme barred to Tyranny condemned the man, and that to death-left being hanished, he should procure the State such trouble and danger as Margius lately had done. Therefore judgment being paffed, the Qualities presently led him to the Rock near to the Forum, and thence cast him down headlong in the light of the People, this being the then ordinary kind of punishment. His efface was confifered, and his house razed. Some would

CHAP. IV.

SECT.I. would have had his fons also put to death, but the Senate refused to use such feverity, and at Rome the children never suffered for their Father's fault, although for high Treason, till the Marsian War, wherein those that broke the custome miscaried, and he who destroyed them restored it to the State, as Dionysius observeth, who disliketh the practice of some of his Countrymen the Gracians, in killing, or condemning to perpetual banishment the fons of Tyrants themselves. 64. By the death of Cassim the Patritians were more elevated, and the Commons grieved after they faw this, and confidered how ferviceable a man to their interest, as they foolishly thought, they had cut off. They now called hard for the execution of the Agrarian Law, but the Senate being resolved to put it off, caused the Consuls to make provision for an Expedition. None would give their names, and the Tribunes interpoling hindred the Confuls from punishing any; but it being given out that a Dictator would be created, the multitude fearing to fall into the hands of Appius, lifted themselves, and fo Cornelius Wasted the Territories of the Velentines, as Fabius those of the Agus. The year following, being the 270 of the City, when Nicodemus was Archon at Athens, the Patritians procured Cafo Fabins one of Coffins his accusers, and L. Emilius, to be created Consuls, during whose Office all was quiet at home, the Volfei renewing the War upon the Romans. Fabius was sent to the assistance of the Latines and Hernici whom they had invaded, and Amilius led the other part of the Porces to Antium, where he was worsted by the Volsci, and being forced to defert his Camp, had with his whole Army been cut off, but that his Colleague in good time fent some choice Companies to recruit him. For the next year M. Pabius brother to Cafe, and L. Valerius fon of Marcus, who put Cassius to death, being Confuls, proposed it to the Senate to fill up the Army at Antium. A Decree passing for new Levies, the People refused to be listed, calling for the division of the grounds, and one of the Tribunes withstood the Confuls. This The Confuls put them upon this device, to fit in the Campus Martius, where who foever evade the in-was cited and did not appear, they punished him, if he had any Lands, by terpolition of cutting his trees, and pulling down his houses 1 or if he hired grounds, by the Tribunes driving away his Carrel, or other wayes, the Tribune not being able to do them any good, for that the power of his Office was confined within the walls; foasit was unlawful for them to lye one hight out of the City, except in the Launs feria, where all the Magistrates for the common safety were wont to facrifize in the Albanian Mount unto Jupiter.

65. This forced the Commons to submit, and so the Consuls making Levies led out the Legions, Pabius to the defence of the affociates, and Valorius against the Volsci, who ingaging with him in battel, came off on equal terms; and afterwards neither party were forward to fight. It was believed in the City, that the Roman Army wilfully neglected an opportunity of viotory, out of harred against the Consul, whom they despited as a man of no experience, and in revenge against the Pathers who had to long ffustrated their hopes about the divition of publick grounds. At this time one of the Vestal Nuns Opimia by name, being convicted of incontinencie, was thut up within the ground in the Forum, and her corrupters (courged and put to death. At the next election of Confuls there was great confention, the Patritians having a defire to prefer some in whom they could confide, and particularly pirching upon the fon of Appint, a man of the fame temper with his Father; and the Commons as much labouring the Contrary. When the Consuls held the Comitia, the Tribunes interpoled, and when the Tribunes called the People together, the Confuls would not suffer any thing to be done, contending that it belonged to their Office. Both parties being incompassed with those of their Factions, railed, and sometimes came to hand cuffs, fo that worse threatning, and the Senate consulting what was to be done, fome moved to have Distator named, who might first correct all distempers of late brought in, and then deliver the power to men of approved integrity; but a middle way pleased; to create Interreges for holding of the Assemblies.

Commotions in the City.

The first was A. Sempronius, who for his five dayes governing affaires in a SECT. 1. peaceable manner, the other Magistrates having laid down, created according to the manner Sp. Largius. He in the Conturiata Camitia made Confuls with the well liking of both fides, C. Julius a favourite of the Commons, and O. Fabius now the second time elected, a man addicted to the power of the great ones. In their Consulthip the Equi and Veientes invaded the Roman Territories, and did much hurt. Against the later they were sent with the Legions, after some contest with the People (who were hardly drawn in by Largins, because the Senate had now deferred the execution of the Agrarian Law five years) and harrazing the Country returned home with much spoil; neither was any thing else of moment done that year.

66. The year following (which was the first of the 75 O'ympiad, wherein Xerxes made his Expedition into Greece, Callias being Archon at Athens) had for Confuls Cafo Fabins again, and Sp. Furius, to whom came meffen-gers from the Latines, defiring affistance against the insolence of the Agui : and all Herraria was reported now to be in arms at the defire of the Veientes. The Consuls were ordered to affish the one, and suppress betimes the other; but when they came toraife men, leilius one of the Tribunes interpofed upon the old pretence of the Agrarian Law. The work being hereby hindred, Appins advised the Senate to set one Tribune against another, by drawing ever some of them unto their fide, as the onely way to abate the power of that Office now so sacred and inviolable. This course both at present and afterwards was Wars abroad effectual, and the Consuls with their Armies departed each one into his Province & Furius against the Aqui, and Fabius into Herruria. Furius harrazed the Enemies Country, and returned home with great booty. Fabius, though an able Warriour, was so hated by his men, that when they had in battel routed the Enemy, they refused to pursue or do any thing more, but departing against his command to their Camp, thence also marched home, less they should procure him the honour of a Triumph. The following Confuls Cn. Manleus, and M. Fabius, again were both fent to carry on the War in Hetruria, where they held the Soldiers in the Camp fo long, till the Enemy was ready to fall upon it, and for shame they defired to be led forth. Fabius taking this opportunity, upbraided them with their disobedience to the Conful the last year, in that place; and shewing them how little cause he and his Colleague had to trust them, having sufficiently humbled them, led them forth. A greater and longer battel was never fought by the Romans, who Were thought tobe Victors onely, because the Herruscans, the night following, forfook their tents, Manlins was flain, and for that cause his Colleague refuled the Triumph, faying, it was not right for him to take the Luirel at his funerals. Having disbanded his Army, he laid down his Office two moneths before the time, because his wounds disabled him for service; and by the second Interrex in the Comitia, were declared Confuls Cafe Fabias his brother (who having extraordinarily deserved in the late battel, was now honoured with this Office the third time) and T. Virginius.

67. Virginius being sent into Hetruria against the Voientes, was overpowered by them, and had loft his whole Army, but that Fabius upon the intimation of his extream necessity came out of the Country of the Agui, and brought him off. When the Romans were retreated, the Veientes made excursions very near the City, to the great losse and disparagement of the State. The Senate found it necessary to have a constant guard upon the borders ; but the Treasury was low, the tributes of private men were not sufficient for this new charge, and it seemed that none would give their names willingly to so constant a work. When they were at a stand, the whole family of the Fabii, by the procurement of the Conful, voluntarily offered to take both the charge and trouble upon it felf onely, which was gratefully ac-

The family of cepted. The Fabii then under conduct of Marcus the last year's Conful, forthe Fabii in- tified a Castle near the River Cramera, and not far from Veii. Their whole geg against number was at first 4000, whereof their Clients and friends made up the greathe Villener. ter part, and of such as bore the name of the Family there were 306: af-

CNAP. IV.

SECT. 1. terwards another Company followed, being led by Cafo Fabius the Conful. Out of this Castle, which they named Cremera from the River, they made excursions, and much endamaged the Enemy. This caused the Veiences again to implore the aid of all Herraria, which making preparations, news came that the Agui and Volsci also had agreed upon an invasion. The Senate hereupon ordered their Armies to be provided, whereof L. Æmilius the next year's Conful led one against the Herrasci, with whom joyned Caso Fabius as Proconful. C. Servilius the other Conful, marched with another part against the Volsci: and Ser. Purius with the third against the Aqui, having also the power of Proconful. Furins no leffe happily than fodainly finished his work. Servilius rashly managing his affaires lost many men, and not daring to adventure all in a battel, drew out the War in length; But . Amilius giving battel to the Veientes and their Affociates, overthrew them.

and then florming their Camp, forced them to beg Peace. 68. Having purchased a Truce by the grant of provisions for two moneths to the Consul's Army, and fix moneths pay, they had leave to lend to the Senate. The Fathers upon reading of Amilius his letters, who advised them by all means to finish the War, resolved to make Peace, and lest the conditions thereof to him. He having a respect rather to equity than the profit of the Conquerours, made a League with them, neither taking from them any grounds, nor any more money, nor receiving any Hostages to secure their obedience, which procured him much evil will, and deprived him of the due honour of a Triumph. They ordered him to affift his Colleague against the Volsci; but he complaining grievously of them to the People, and fuggesting to the multitude that they were angry, because the War was finished, out of a desire to have the Peoples thoughts diverted from the Agrarian Law, disbanded his Army, as also that of Furim, and hereby afforded much matter for contention betwixt the Nobility and Commons. The year following, being the first of the 76 Olympiad, wherein Scamander of Mitylene was Victor in the course, and Phadon Archon at Athens, the new Confuls, C. Horatius, and T. Menenius, found some obstruction in the Levies; the Commons still complaining that the Agrarian Law was not executed. But necessity cut off the dispute, eleven several Ciries of Herraria having declared against the Veientes, for making Peace without publick confent, and forced them to break it. The pretence was, for that the Fabili were not drawn off from Cremera, who fending intelligence to the Senate of this intended breach, it ordered Menenius to march into Heiraria, as Horating against the Volsci. While Menenius loirered in his Expedition, Cremera was taken, and the Fabii all cut off. Some wrote that it was by an Ambush, as they were returning to Rome, to sacrifize for the whole family, according to their custome. But others delivered more probably, that being accustomed to make depredations, they were drawn into snares by the Heeruscans (who caused herds of Cattel to be driven thither, where they had bestowed a sufficient quantity of men) and being overpowered, were all at length destroyed, though with the great losse of the assainants, except such as they had left to keep the Cattel. These were so far from being discouraged > from the hands of their Enemies. 69. A tradition remained to postericy, that 306 of this family being cut off, none remained except one Boy, who for his youth could not ferve in the Expedition. Dionyfins the weth the vanity hereof, by these reasons. 1. All except one could not be unmaried, or without children, for an ancient Law commanded all at a legitimate age to mary, and provide for Posterity, which being difigently observed till their age, the Fabii alone would not contemn:

All the adventurers are cut off.

at what had betallen their fellows, that they also stood it out to the last man, enduring all extremity, and fighting when half dead, with weapons wrefted

Whether on-but, 2. Grant this; it is not to be granted, that none of those had a brother A. M. 3528. ly one Boy re- of young years. 2. If their Fathers had been so utterly deprived of their V. c. 277.
mained of the Sons, yet cerrainly all would not have been so old and dry; as to despair of Xerxia e. any more iffue, and confequently make no provision for it by mariage. 4. And family.

if they had no fathers living, yet would it be a prodigious thing to suppose that none of them left any fon as yet an Infant, a Wife with Child, or a young brother. This is true, that of the three brothers, Cafe, Marcus, and Quintus, in the family of whom the Consulship had continued for seven years. Marcas onely left a young fon, befides whom none of this name afterwards being famous, thence the report might rife that none elie was preserved. Concerning the time of this defeat Authors something differ. (a) Macrobins (a) Lib.t. maketh the day to have been the 17th of the Calends of Sextilis; (b) Plutarch c. 16. after the Summer folltice, and about the full Moon in the middle of the (b) In Camilla moneth Quintuis. (c) Livy and (d) Tacitus on the fifteenth of the Calends & Problem. of Sextellis, which furer h with that of Platerch, and (c) Quid on the Calends (c) Lib, 6. of Sexulis, which fuireth with that of Plurarch , and (e) Ovid on the Ides of (d) Lib. 18. February.

70. The Peientes having recovered the Castle, went confidently against the Roman Legions, which lay incamped not far of, and as was thought might have relieved the Fabii, but that Menenius the Conful out of envy would not make use of the opportunity. They took the advantage of his unskilfulnesse, and seized on an Hill near unto him, where placing a Guard, they made fallies upon the Camp, and so straightned it, that they brought him to fight upon very unequal terms, and put his Army to the worft. The Romans forfook their Camp, and fled in so tumultuous a manner, that had the Veientes not been too greedy of plunder, they might utterly have dellroyed them. The day following they invaded the Roman Territories, and came as far as The Veientes the Hill Janiculus, two miles from the Citie, whereon they seized, and thence peirce within made excursions to the great difgrace of the Romans, Horarus the other Conful returning from the Volfei, overthrew them twice, and gave the people some respit from their fear. The following year two skilfull men in Military matters, Sp. Servilius and A. Virginius, entred the Confulship after the Summer folftice in the moneth Sextilis. Now the Herrufcan Warre, though difficult enough, seemed profitable, compared with domestick affairs; for the feizing upon the Mount, and the depredations thence made had hindred Tillage for the last Winter, and no Traffick having been for that time, there was such scarcity of Corn that the Citie was brought into extream want, containing 110000 men of ripe age, as appeared at the next Cenfus, besides Women and Children, Slaves, Merchants, and Artificers (for no Roman Citizen was allowed to keep a Victualling-house, or to exercise any fordid Trade) thrice as many. The people made great tumults, and we'll ready to take away violently the provisions of the rich : the Tribunes also made great disturbance. 71. The Consuls laboured to satisfie the poorest fort by buying in all they could, and causing such as had Corn to sell it, till their Levies were finished. Then led they out by night against the Enemy, and passing the River before day, unexpectedly fell upon him, and got a bloudy victory; after which the Mount was forfaken by the Garrison, which having no relief sent in, retired to Menenius fined Veil. This War being ended, Menenius the last year's Conful was called to

(c) Faft, z.

iwo miles of

the Citie.

for the mil- an account, and condemned in a pecuniary mulet for fuffering the Fabil to eatriage of the miscarry, whom the people so gratefully esteemed, that they hated all who feemed to have been to blame as to their defeat, and placed the day thereof amongst their Nefasti, or unlucky ones, wherein no good work was to be begun. The following year also, when Servilius was out of his Office, he was called before the people, for that in the last battel against the Herruscans, he had so unadvisedly pursued the Enemy, as thereby to lose the flowr of his Army; but the man's abilities being confidered, and his own defence with that of his Collegue weighed (who defired either to fland or fall with him) he was acquitted. This year and that following, the Veient s were for overpowered, having been overthrown in battel together with their affociates the Sabines, and now closely befreged, begged peace once more, and having with a whole year's pay for the Confuls Arm, and money for two moneths provision purchased leave to send to the Senate, obtained a Truce for fourty years. The next year being the first of the 77th Olympiad, whe in Dates an Mmm Ar ive

CNAP. IV.

Appius and Assiss Spoil-

eth all.

Great ftirs about the Agrarian.

450

SECT. 1. Argive Was Victor, and Chares Archon, L. Emilius Mamereus the third time, and Vopifens Julius were Confuls. Their Confulship was very turbulent through the attempts of Cn. Genatius Tribune of the People, who required them to divide the grounds formerly Decreed to the people by the Senate. They denied it belonged to them to execute what had been Decreed in the Confulthip of others, and alleged that a Senatus Confultum was not of force, but for one year. Because he could not compel his Superiors, he fer the day to Manlins and Furius, the last year's Consuls, to answer before the people, why they did not divide the grounds, pretending some reasons wherefore they ought to be questioned more than others, though it was now 12 years fince the passing of the Decree, and alleging, that except the present Magistrates were quickned by a sence of punishment inflicted upon others, they would never fet upon the work.

72. The Patritians exceedingly startled at so bold and impudent an attempt, resolved by sorce of Arms, if fairer means would not prevail, to protect the accused, and the Citie might have been in bloud had not Genatius died fuddenly that very morning, no fign of violence appearing on the body. This allayed the fury of the multitude, and the Sedition might have been quite appealed, had the Confuls born their successe with moderation, and confidered what was fitting for the time. But making new Levies, they would force one P. Voiero, who had before-time been an Officer, to go in the prefent e pedicion as a Common Soldier, and when he alleged that he ought nor to be compelled fo to ferve, for that he had not deferved it by any offence, they commanded him to be firip't and beaten. He flying to the affistance of the Tribunes appealed to the People, wherewith they not being at all moved, he became a Tribune to himself, with blows repelling one or two Lictors: and when the Confuls fent all their Officers to take him, fuch Plebeians as flood by calling one upon another rescued him from their hands. This diverted mens minds from thoughts of Land, and raifed a zeal for privilege and liberty; the Patritians complaining that the Chief Magistrates should be so contemned, and the Plebeians alleging it was a great breach upon their right for a Roman Citizen not to be heard when he appealed to the people, but fcourged like a Slave : and they demanded Justice of the Senate against the Confuls; with these stirs, without any other thing of moment, was their Confulfhip passed over. For the following year Volero an impudent fellow, obtained, though a man of meanest condition, to be Tribune, having made himself popular by resisting that Office, which was once equal to the Kingly, and promiting that he would clip the power of the great ones. He proposed a Law for holding the Assemblies of Tribes at the Election of Tribunes, in-Creation of flead of the other of the Curia: betwixt which there was this difference. In

A Law propoled for Affembly of Tribes.

Tribunes in the the Curiata Comitia were fuch things treated on, and confirmed by the fuffrages of the Curia, as the Senate had first Decreed, and that with the auspicia; for except the birds predicted good, the Comitia were null and fru-But the Tributa Comitta were managed without any consulting of the Senate, without the superstitious observation of birds (called Aufoicia, and observed at the Election also of Patritian Magistrates) and all things were determined by the fuffrages of the Tribes gathered

73. When the day for determination of the question was come, great endeavours were used on both sides; the whole time consumed in speeches, for, and against the Law. The Tribanes then put it off till the Tribandinum against which time the Patritians improving all their interest, Volero resolved by force to keep them from the Comitia, and the Confuls from difwading the thing, because they carried it mighty highly, and with their friends, and Clients, took up a great part of the Forum. He was prevented by a grievous plague, which like a Torrent carried away multitudes, so as his year being our before he could accomplish his design, by his great promises be obtained to be Tribune again, as also his two Collegues who sided with him in this enterprize. The Fathers to ballance him procured to be made Conful Appine

Claudins, the fon of Appins, absent, against his will, and to their own presudice. His Collegue was T. Q. Quintins Capitolinus, of a contrary disposition. Quality Con- Appies was all for Wars, that by expeditions the multitude might be diverted from Seditions attempts, the effects of idlenesse; and Quintius contended that causes were not to be sought for, lest the ordinary fort being forced to unnecessary War, should break out into rage, and trample Magistracy under their feet; and the Government being his, faith Diony fins, this moneth, he prevailed. But Volero renewed his endeavour for the Law, and thereto added, that the Ædiles should be Elected by the Tribnia Comitia, as also whatfoever should concern the Commons, might be transacted, and passed in them; which tended to no other than to transfer the power from the Senate to the people. Appins now earnestly pressed to make Levies, and undertake some expedition; but Quintins prevailed that they should rather go about to diffwade the people by reasons, than to compell them by

74. Quintius to this purpose made a seasonable speech in the Assembly and so far prevailed, that the Law as unjust had been laid aside, but that his

Collegue used, though just and true, yet unseasonable words, speaking to the Commons, not as free Citizens, who had an hand in making, and abrogating Laws, but as a rabble of base persons. He upbraided them with unthriftinesse, defrauding of their Creditors, revolting from the Consuls, and voluntary Exile; as also perjury, and turning of the Weapons taken up in defence of their Countrey, into its bowels. He faid, it was no wonder that fuch as they were should proceed thus from one wicked act to another, instancing in their Seditious attempts for the gaining of the just power of the Patritians, Having spared no contumelious, or afronting language, he came to that which gave most offence: that the State would never be at rest so long as the Tribunitial power remained; for as much as it was impossible that what took its Original from violence, iniquity, sedition, fear of a Civil War, and other abominable things, could produce any profitable effects. He concluded with an affeveration, that as long as he was Conful he would neither fuffer this, nor any other Law to passe without approbation of the Senate, and this he would stand by both with Words and Deeds also if need should require; so that, if never before, they should learn in his Office, of what force was the Consulship. Then flood up C. Listorius, the principal man amongst the Tribunes, and in answer to his accusations related what labours the Commons had sustained before, and fince the banishment of Tarquinius; how, for all this pain and danger, they were not made partakers of any thing which they had obtained by their bloud, till forced to separate from the Patritians. Thut then they got this Office of Tribuneship, as a protection for the poor, with other Laws afterwards, as of judging the Patritians, and translating the suffrages from the Centuriata to the Curiata Comitia, all which he accounted nothing. Then reproving Appins thatply, he told him he would thew him of what force that Office was upon which he had trampled, and of the people called by him for-

ed to depare

did, and without House or Harbour. Having spoken this, he swore most folemnly that he would, and not live except the Law passed, and commanding silence, when all men expected earnestly what he would do, he sawcily rethe Assembly, quired Appins to depart the Assembly. 75. Appins not obeying, but incircling himself with a Company he had

And to be sent brought for that purpose, having made silence to be proclaimed by a Crier, he declared that the College of Tribunes commanded the Conful to be carried 10 prison, and therewith sent an Officer to apprehend him. He was beaten back by the Lictors, whereat Lectorins himself exhorting the multitude to stick to him, went to lay hands on him. Appins being defended with a company of flour young men, a great and unfeemly Contest followed with railings and thrustings to and fro : and at length it came to blows, and throwing of Rones. The Conful Quincins by his intreaties throwing himself into the middle, and the more grave Senators, hindred the tumult from proceeding to a further inconvenience, which was ended shortly after by the night.

Mmm 2

Severat

SECT.I. feize on the Capitol,

Several dayes were spent with mutual recriminations; but at length the Tribunes and People feized on the Capitol, and there kept watch night and day. The Senators very folicitous what to do, both in respect of the danger, and the difference betwixt the Confuls; for Quintim thought the Commons defiring no unjust thing , were to be gratified ; but Appins would rather die than yield. Quintum taking great pains, at length procured the Tribunes to refer the Law to the discretion of the Senate, which after a long disswasion of Appins, and perswasion of the Tribunes, permitted it to be put to the question of the Comitia, wherein the Commons readily passed it. After this, the Consuls were sent out with the Armies; Quintim against the Aqui, whose Territories he wasted, and returned with honour, which his Soldiers were careful to purchife for him; but Appin going against the Volsei, bore himself so austerely towards his men, that they would not obey him, but out of hatred, and to procure him an ignominious retreat, when they came to fight, retired to their Appins his Sol-Camp without firiking a stroak, and no more could he draw them forth adiers refuse to gainst the Enemy, so that he was constrained to depart homewards, and in his way put to death such Centurions and Ensignes, as had been faulty, with every tenth man in the Army. Some were beheaded, and fome knocked on the head with clubs: this decimation being an usual punishment amongst the Romans, of fuch as had forfaken or loft their Colours.

76. The following Confuls Q. Valerius again, and Tib. Æmilius, being both well affected towards the Commons (the former out of envy to the Patritians, for that they had denied his Father a Triumph, and the later because he would reconcile himself to the multitude, offended by him for accuting Cassius the Author of the Agrarian Law, when he was Quastor) promifed the Tribunes to promote in the Senate the division of publick grounds. The Tribunes in confidence of their affiftance, came into the Senate, and spake very mildly in favour of the Law, which the Consuls would not contradict, left they should seem to seek after contention, but asked the ancienter Senators their opinions. L. Valerius Father to the Conful, prefled the divifion of Lands; but Appins so severely and plainly withstood it by several invincible reasons, that he caried it against the other, for which the Tribunes life.

Before the Trial he felf.

the Agrarian, fet him a day to answer before the People for his life. The crimes were: for which he That he gave ill advice against the Commons, raised Sedition, laid violent hands for footh on the Sacrofanct body of the Tribune, and being General of andwer for his an Army had received a defeat, and returned with ignominie. The Patritians exceedingly concerned, left nothing unarrempted to fave him, and defired him, that giving way to the time, he would take the habit agreeable to his condition; but he flatly refused to do any thing poorly, or unworthy of his Ancestors, adding, that he would die a thousand deaths rather than rouch the knees of any, as was the cultome of Suppliants. He forbad his friends to supplicate for him, saying, his shame would be doubled, if he saw any do that in his behalf, which he himself distained to do. Giving out many fuch like speeches, he neither changed apparrel, nor his countenance, nor remitted any thing of his antient magnanimity, and when he saw the whole City earnestly intent upon his tryal, a few dayes before the appointed time he killed himself. His friends gave out that he died of a natural death, and the killeth himbody being brought forth into the Forum, his Son was there ready, and asked leave of the Confuls to commend him in a funeral Oration, according to the custome. The Tribunes commanded the body to be taken away without any ceremony; but the People were thereat displeased, and suffered the young man to perform this last and usual Office of honour to his deceased

77. For this and the two following years the Romans fought successively against the Agui, Sabines, and Volfei. From the later was taken Antium, being surrendred to T. Quintins Capitolinus the Consul, who placed therein a Garrison. In the following year, wherein were Consuls Tib. Amilin: again, and Q. Fabius (fon to one of the three brothers, that with their Friends and Clients died at Cremera) the Tribunes made new ftirs about the Agrarian, and Amilias furthering the businesse, the Senate to gratiste the multitude. decreed that some part of the Lands lately taken from the Volsci and Antiages. should be divided. Yet not many would give their names.

being unwilling to forfake their native Country, fo that the Colony was made up out of the Latines and Hernici. The Confuls marched, Amilius against the Volsci, and Fabins against the Aguin; both had successe: the later forcing the Alani to beg Peace, the conditions whereof were left to him by the Senate. But the Aqui receiving the Fugicives of Antium, fuffered them to make excursions into the Territories of the Latines, and refuled to give them up, whereupon succeeded another War, though the Romans obtained a bloody Victory, in the third year after the making of the Peace. In the next Consulfhip which was executed by L. Ebutius and P. Servilius Priscus, fell a more grievous plague upon the City than ever before hapned. It first confumed almost all Carrel, and from the Country came into the City, wherein it swept away an innumerable company of slaves, and a fourth part of the Senators, and amongst these the Consuls, with most of the Tribunes. Livle Writerh, that the Ædiles supplied the place of Confuls. The difease began about the Calends of Sepsember, and continued that whole year, sparing no Sexe or Age. 78. When this was known by the neighbour Nations, the Volsi and

A most gric-

GMAP. IV.

War with the Agui, supposing the time of destroying the Roman Empire to be come, pro-Aqui and Velfci.

vided all things for a Siege, and to divert the Romans invaded the Latines and Hernici their affociates. These sending to Rome for aid, Eubutius was already dead, and Servilius as yet alive, in small hope affembled the Senators, who were brought half dead in their Litters to the Court. They gave them liberty to defend themselves, which doing, when the Enemies had wasted their grounds at their pleasures, they marched for Rome, but contrary to their expectations, they found it fufficiently guarded, though with fick and feeble men. When the next Confuls were created, L. Lucretius and T. Veturius Geminus, the Pestilence ceased; and all things being quiet at home (for the Tribunes making adoe according to the custome about the Agrarian, were commanded by the People to defift, and expect better times) they invaded those who had taken advantage at the publick calamity. They had good successe abroad, and better near home, when the £qui in their absence came and thought to have surprized the City. For understanding the walls to be furnished with armed men, and four cohorts of 600 apiece to stand before the gates, they altered their course when they came to Infeulum; but Lucretius met and gave them battel, which they were hafty to imbrace before the coming of his Colleague. For a time they fought couragiously; but seeing a band of men behind them, which came from a certain Castle, they thought it had been the other Conful, and fearing to be inclosed ran away, having lost both their Captains, and many other valiant men. Afterwards without any let, the Confuls wasted the Territories both of the Equi and Volfei, and returned home at the time of the Comitia: Lucretius in full triumph, and Veturius in the other called Ovation, by decree of the Senate, with the like pomp in all things, except that he entred on foot, and not in a Charlor; which words conclude the ninth Book of Dionysius his Roman An-

79. For the year following (which was the first of the 80 Olympiad, wherein Torymbas the Theffalian was Victor, and Phraficles Archon) P. Volumnins and Ser. Sulpitius Camerinus were created Confuls, who having nothing to do abroad, imployed themselves at home in defending the power of the Patritians against the Commons, now much instigated against it by their Tribunes. They were come fo far, as to affert, that it was most agreeable with the constitution of a free State, for the Cirizens to have equal power in Government. The People now would have all things done by the A. M. 3545. prescript of Laws, whereof as yet there were none written, the Kings having 01. 80, as, 1.

Fresh ftirs 2bout new Laws.

tiquities.

judged according to their own discretion, and the Consuls by certain presidents of those Princes formerly in power. The least part was recorded in the s.

Book II

454

Cafo Quintius

account.

SECT. 1. Books of the Pontifies, which none could come at except the Patritians. C. Terentius, or Terentillus Arfa according to Livie, Tribune of the Commons the foregoing year, had endeavoured to circumscribe within certain limits the power of the Consulship; but left the matter unfinished, because the greater part of Citizens were imployed in the War; the Consuls on fer purpose drawing it out in length, till the Comitia. Now the whole College of Tribunes renewed the attempt by the procurement of A. Virginius one of the number; the whole City being divided about it. Much contention there was in the Senate, betwixt the Tribunes and the contrary Faction: but at length, not doing any good in that place, they called the People together, and proposed a Law, that ten men might be chosen in Lawful Asfembly, such as were most eminent for age, prudence, and dignity, and who especially respected their repute, and honour: that these men should publish Laws both concerning private and publick businesse, by which right should be prescribed, both to private persons and Annual Magistrates. The Question they put off till the Trinundinum, giving any one leave to speak freely, either for or against it.

80. The Patritians extraordinarily moved, that the Senate's authority in this matter was utterly neglected, both by fair and foul means laboured to hinder the debate: casting the meanest fort like Slaves out of the Forum. who minded their private commodity more than the publick Peace. Amongst those sticklers Caso Quintim the son of L. Quintim Cincinnaum, was principal, one of great Nobility, beautiful in person, and very stout and expert in War. Him the Tribunes resolved to make an example to all young men.

and called him to answer for his life before the People. He refused to anfwer, except at the Tribunal of the Confuls; but his Father earneftly intreared for him, recounting the feveral eminent fervices he had done for the State, and imputing this miscariage to his youth, and indiscretion. The multitude plainly declared by figns, that they were ready to gratifie him, which when Virginius perceived, knowing, that if Cafe escaped without punishment, the insolence of the young Patritians would be intolerable, he procured M. Volscius, one of his Colleagues, to tell seigned a story, how in the time of the Plague he and his brother returning from a friends house in the night, were fet upon by Caso and his drunken Companions in the Forum, who killed his brother outright, and left Volscius himself half dead. He added, that both the Confuls dying of the Plague, he could have no fatisfaction, and in the succeeding Consulship, whensoever he cited Caso before the Magistrates (as several could bear witnesse) he received nothing blows. This so inraged the multitude, that they had torn him in pieces, but that the Confuls and fome of the Tribunes kept them off. His tryal then was deferred, not withour a great controversie, whether he should lye in prison, or be out upon bail, the latter whereof at length was accepted by the interpolition of the Senate, and he fled into Hetruria, leaving his ten sureties to pay the money, which condemned.

was exacted of them by the Tribunes, who also condemned him. His Father fold the greatest part of his estate to reinburse the sureries, and content with a small quantity of ground beyond Tiber, and a little cottage, sustained himfelf very laboriously by the help of a few slaves; for grief and poverty abstaining from the City and his Friends, and neglecting to divert himself with publick folaces.

81. The Tribunes were much croffed in their expectations. For the calam ty of Caso was so far from moderating the insolency of the young Patritians, that they grew much higher, opposing the Question both by words and deeds; fo as in this Consulship the Law could not be preferred. For the following year P. Valerius Poplicola, and C. Clandius Sabinus, were created Confuls; and the Commons made the same Tribunes as the year before, who perceiving the Law was not by perswasion to be enacted, sought to ter-A plot of the rifie both People and Confuls. They caused various rumours to be spread, that Enemies had hatched a great conspiracy against the Commons, then coming into the Senate, there affirmed it, pretending they had letters from

83. Quintins restrained the Tribunes from preferring the Law, by cenouncing, that except they were quiet, he would lead out all the Citizens fome friends to affure them of it. They faid certain Senators were in the Short. 1. plot, but that the greatest part confished of the order of the Equats, which it was not seasonable then to name; but they had designed in Conjunction with Cafe Quintius the Exile, to murder the Tribunes with others by night, and then at their leasure to rescind whatever had been granted by the Senate unto the Commons: In conclusion they defired the inquisition of fo grievous a defign might be committed unto themselves. The Senate being very sollicitous, Claudius the Conful (who was fully perswaded that what the Tribunes went about was the onely conspiracy) by ripping up their defigns conceening the Agragrian Law, and the bad successe of their endeavours which put them upon this exploit, fully convinced the Fathers how the matter flood, especially when they would neither name their friends from whom Discovered by the Letter came, nor the Messenger : and though the Tribunes highly complained of him, and the Senate, unto the People, yet the most sober amongst the Commons were satisfied with his reasons. Whilest the hear of this contention remained, the Citie fell into fuch danger from outward Enemies as never before, which, faith Dionysius, had been foretold by Sibyll's books that it would arise out of intestine division, and was likewise fignified by the prodigies of the foregoing year, when besides strange sights and noises, it rained pieces of flesh, of which some were devoured by all forts of birds before they fell to the ground, and the rest continued long upon the earth, without either change of colour or fmell.

CHAP. IV.

Ao. Herdonius Capitol,

82. Ap. Herdonius a Sabine with 4000 men feized upon the Capitol, feigeth on the and called the Slaves to their liberty. At this time of extream of danger, the Tribanes made what disturbance they could, instigating the multirude not to fight against the Enemy, except the Patritians would ingage by Oath to Create ten men for the making of Laws, and suffer the Commons to live with them upon equal terms of privilege. Claudius would have wholely omitted them, and carried on the War by the Patritians, and their Clients onely; but Valerius thought it necessary to have a closure in the body before it should go about to defend it self from outward attempts, and therefore promised with an Oath, that if the people would chearfully carry on that War, as soon as peace was restored, he would permit the Tribunes to put the question, and indeavour to satisfie the desire of the Commons. Claudius then being appointed to look to the Citie, Valerius on all fides fer upon the the Capitol, which was taken by florm, though he loft his life, having omitted neither the part of an able General nor valiant Soldier; For though he had received many wounds, yet he gave not over, till climbing the Walls a great stone was tumbled down upon him, which took away his life. The War being ended, the Tribunes required of Claudius to make good the promife of his Collegue; but he deferred the matter by several pretences, and at length alleged he could do nothing of himself. He appointed then the Comitia for

Which is re-

Creation of a new Conful into the room of Valerius. The Patritians were very follicitous to get fome chosen that would defend their interest, and refolved upon L. Quintins Father to Cafo, lately banished, who at the day appointed was chosen by all the Centuries of the first Classis, as well Equites Risaling made as the other, so that the rest of the Classes were not called. They that were fent to fetch Quintins into the Citie, found him at Plow withour as much as a Coat about him, onely in his Truffe, and a Cap on his head. Seeing the company make towards him, he wondred what it meant, but being told by a Viator that run before, he put on other apperel, and in a feemlier habit presented himself. Being saluted not by his own name, but by that of Conful, invested with Purple, honoured by the Fasces, and other Ensigns of Magistracy, he was defired to begin his journey, whereat paufing a little he answered with tears: Then for this year this little field shall be unsown, and we shall be in danger of want. After this, taking leave of his Wite, and commending his houshold affairs to her care, he departed for the Citie.

against

Book IL

456

SECT.1. against the Volfei. When they faid they would not permit him to make Levies, he called the people, and put the younger fort in mind of their Sacramentum, or Military Oath, whereby they had bound themselves to the Consuls to follow whitherfoever he would lead them, and not be wanting to the Majefly of the Roman people. He affirmed they were all obnoxious to him by this Oath now he was Conful and sware he would animadvert upon Offendors according to the Laws. Herewith he commanded the Standards to be moved out of the Erarium, and told them that to make them know they should have no leasure for Tribunitial actions in his Consulship, he let them understand, he would not return out of the Enemie's Countrey till his Office was at an end, and bade them prepare for wintring in the Camp, The multitude terrified in his Office. herest, defired him to forbear this rigour., and he did it upon this condition, that they would not molest him for his whole time, but suffer him to spend it in administring Justice. He behaved himself with such prudence, Justice, painfulnesse, and courtesse, that the Commons thought they flood not in need now of any new Laws, and the Senate was defirous to have him Conful for the following year, to oppose him to the Tribunes, who executed that Office now the third time. But as he approved it not in them, so he himself would not commit the same fault as he counted it, and in the Assembly speaking much against such as would not quit their Office when their time was finished, fwore most religiously, hat he would not accept the Consulship till he had laid down his present charge. Having finished a new Election, he betook himself to his little Cottage, and his former laborious course of life. 84. The year following, the Aqui surprized Tusculum, which action caused a War betwixt them and Rome, wherein they were worsted, together with their friends the Volfer, and forced to beg peace. But in the next Confulshipthey were drawn again to revolt, and making War upon the Latines, by Gracchus Clatius their Captain, an industrious man, who had improved the power granted him by his Countrey almost to regality. He drew the Dionysist of Roman Army into so disadvantagious a place, that it was thought convenient pra Livinihis, to make a Dictator, which was L. Quinsins Cincinnatus; The Meffengers found him newly dreffed; for when he espied the company, suspecting they came to him, he left the Countrey-work he was in hand with, and put on his better Clothes. Seeing himfelf made Dictator, by the trapped Horses, the 24 Axes, the Purple, and other royal Enfigns, he was so far from being delighted with this honour, that he said with indignation: This year's Crop will also be lost by reason of mine implayment, and my family must be famished. When he came to the Citie he incouraged the people, and named Mafter of throweth the Agui.

He is made

Dictator.

Hors-men, L. Tarquinius, a man of no great esteem by reason of his poverty, but a good Soldier: Having gathered together the Forces, he gave Clalius battel, and beat him into his Camp, which having belieged some time, he forced the Equito give him up, with other incendiaries, to be punished with death according to their deferts, as also to passe under the Jugum (two Spears ser in the ground, and a third laid over upon them in form of a pair of Gallows) in token of servitude; and because they had the year following without any provocation plundred Tusculum, to suffer him to deal in the like manner with Corbio. The choicest part of the plunder he caused to be carried to Rome; the rest he gave to his own Soldiers, and those of T. Quintins the Quafter, faying, that the other of Minutius the Conful, who had been befieged by the Enemy, ought to be content that they fell not as a prey into his hands. Having caused Minutius to lay down his Office; he returned to the Citie with a more illustrious Triumph than any Captain before him, (the General of the Æqui, and other Eminent prisoners in Chains preceding his Chariot) having overthrown a strong Army, and plundred, and sortified a Citie of the Enemy within seventeen dayes after his Creation. That absolute power which he might have kept for fix moneths he presently refigned, having first given an account of his administration. And when the Senate and his private friends would have enriched him with publick Ground, Plunder, and Contributions, he utterly refused it, and betaking himself again to his small Cottage, preferred a laborious life before Kingly power, for that he SECT. T. pleased himself more in his poverty, than others in the abundance of their

85. The year following, the Sabines, whose grounds the other Consul Namins had wasted, as also the Aqui, were in Arms, having retaken Corbio. against whom when Levies came to be made, the Tribunes again withstood them, being all new Created the fourth time. Hereupon the Fathers with weeping eyes signified to the People, that being forsaken by them, who hitherto had stiled themselves their Children, they would go forth and fight against the Enemy in their own persons, wherewith the multitude being sore moved, and Virginius feeing that do he what he could they would give their names, he averred it to be the refolution of the Commons to live and die with them; onely they defired some reward for all their pains and danger, which was, that they might live in equal freedom. If this could not be granted, they waved it, and defired another thing, which he was fure would not intrench upon the Senate's privileges. The Conful affirming the thing should be proposed if they would but refer it to the Senate, he desired that the number of the Tribunes might be increased unto 10. The Senate debating the matter,

C. Claudius, the fon of Appins the Elder, spake against it, alleging, that the Commons would never be fatisfied; but Quintins, who now bore the greatest fivay, commended the opinion of Appins, that the * onely way to croffe the * Vide Curia design of the Tribunes was to set them one against another; and if so, it Parag. 66. would make more for the interest of the Senate to have their number increased. Accordingly a Senatus Consulum was drawn, that it should be lawfull for the Commons to increase their College of Tribunes to the number of created to 10. 10. and it was presently confirmed by the People. After this the Sedition against the Sabines and Agai.

year of the Citie according to Caio, as the 298 after the account of Varro, 01.81, no. 2. had for Confuls M. Valerius and Sp. Virginius, who having nothing to do V. C. 280. abroad, had too much employment in the Citie. Before this time, the Tribunes onely reigned in the Assemblies, neither taking upon them to call together the Senate, nor give their voices therein. But now they ventured to affemble the Fathers, by the procurement of Icilius principal of the College, an industrious, and eloquent man, who prefumed to make a further innovation in the State, requiring the Aventine Mount for the People to build upon. which being a mile and an half in circuit, was not as yet fully inhabited, but being appealed, the Confuls levied Forces, and managed the War successfully 86. The ensuing year, being the second of the SI Olympiad, and the 297 A. M. 3350.

publick, and full of vvood. The Tribune moving the Confuls to procure a Decree of the Senate for his new project, and they deferring the mutter, an Apparitor was fent from the College to cite the Confuls before it. He applying himself to one of their Lictors, was hearen, and sent back, which so inraged the Tribunes, that apprehending the Lictor, they led him to the Tarpeian Rock, the Confuls, though much troubled, not being able to rescue him: for that none could hinder the execution of what the whole College refolved; all they could do was to defire some of the Tribunes themselves to interpose. But this could not be effected, they having refolved at the beginning not to diffent from one another, that thereby they might preferve their Authority inviolable. As concerning the Lictor, then they answered they were resolved. yet they put not the man to death, giving his life to the intreaties of the graver fort of Pacritians, lest that order should be driven by just indignation to attempt fomething extraordinary. Having then affembled the Senate, the Confuls tharply reprehended them, but Icilius excused what had been done to the Lictor, by the facred Laws, which forbade all, both publick and private, to crosse a Tribune. By a premeditated Oration he endeavoured to shew. that he had not unjustly affembled the Senate, and when he had feemed fuf-Lawfor di- ficiently to have answered the charge of the Consuls, he mentioned the issin of cer- Law: That what private men were possessed of, and was justly gotten, should tin grounds, remain unto them; what ground by force, or fraud, was already furnished with buildings, the expence of building being considered by arbitration, (hould be recovered to the use of the People, and what was yet publick be divided amongst them. He shewed that this Law would be exceedingly profitable for the suppression of all Agrarian Seditions, forasmuch as the Commons would be fatisfied with possessions at home. No man diffenting, except C. Claudius, a Decree of the Senate passed for it accordingly.

CHAP. IV.

SECT.I.

Diffentions renewed.

87. The remainder of the year was spent in building. For the next were created Confuls T. Romulius and C. Veturius: Icilius and his Colleague being continued in their Office: The civil diffentions supposed to be removed by the late Law, were again revived, and the forein Enemies of the Commonwealth were in Arms, to the greater profit than discommodity of it. For fuch a viciffitude now there was, that Peace brought Sedition, and Warre procured Concord, which the chief Magistrates apprehending, wished for nothing more than external motions, and when there was Peace abroad, fought occasion for War; as understanding the growth of the Citie's prosperity to be procured thereby. The present Consuls were of this mind, being jealous of the beggerly and idle multitude. And their opinion was right, that they were to be diverted; but there they failed, that wheras in so ill a crass of the State, they ought to have proceeded gently, they admitted the excuse of none who defired exemption from the War, but severely inflicted penalties upon all; which gave occasion to the Tribunes to make disturbance, crying out, that they violated the privilege of their Office, by imprisoning fuch as appealed to it. From mutual revilings fometimes it came to blows, both parties being berounded with those of their faction, and the People not fully complying with the Tribunes in their demands, they went into the Senate, where they required, that the Confuls might either lay down their Offices, or answer their crime against the Sacrosan& Tribunitial power before the People. The Senate determined nothing, feeing it dangerous to diminish the power either of the Consuls or Tribunes, at which the later much discontented, returned to the multitude. Some were for departing again from the Patritians; others more moderate, would expect the course of Law against those who had violated so sacred an Office; and a third (the most sober party) disliked this as well as the other, for that the Consuls were the Supreme Magistrates; and thought it meeter to punish their abettors. If the Tribunes had not at length restrained their anger against Senate and Consuls, the City that day had destroyed it self, so intent were both parties upon Arms and War. But they fet the Confuls a day to answer before the People, and then were prevailed with to let the matter fall, telling the Commons, that they remitted what concerned themselves for their sakes whom they ought not to deny it, but would revenge the injury done to the whole, to prevent an ill example. 88. This was by promulgating the Agrarian Law, which hitherto had

years with another of equal right published.

layn dormant for thirty years, to which another was added of equal right, Law after 30 which the former year could not be passed. Having with an oath promised to prefer these Laws, they appointed a day for the Comitia, wherein having first themselves spoken largely, several others related what good service they had done for the Commonwealth, and laboured to shew how unworthy a thing it was for them to be defrauded of those grounds, which by their labour and danger they had gained, and admitted to no part of reward. The multirude gladly hearing fuch discourses, none more affected mens minds than L. Siccius Dentanus, a man of admirable shape, 58 years old, and furnished with military eloquence, for a seditious attempt. He told them, he had ferved his Country in the Wars forty years, and been an Officer thirty; sometimes a Centurion, afterwards a Tribune. He was raised to that honour by Sicinus the Conful, for defending the Enfign of his Cohort, when the Centurion was slain, for which he was also adorned by his fellow Soldiers with agolden crown. In another battel, wherein the Tribune of the Camp was struck to the ground, and the Eagle (or Standard) taken, fighting for the whole Legion, he recovered it and laved him, for which the Tribune would have given him his place, but he retuled it, and the Conful SECT. 1. made him Tribune of the first Legion, which Office was then void. Having thus purch fed himfelf honour; to maintain his credit he spared no libour, nor refused any danger, being eyer rewarded by the Confuls with spoils, crowns, and other rewards and honours.

89. In short; during those forty years, he had fought 120 battels, recei-The archieve, ved 45 wounds, all before and none behind, whereof twelve that day wherements of Sie- in he fought against Herdonius, who seized upon the Capitol. As for reins Dentatus, wards after the feveral battels, he had obtained fourteen Civici Crowns (which faith Gillias, were bestowed upon him who had preserved the life of a Citizen, and were made of Oake, because the most antient meat was thought Lib, 5, c, 6.

to be the fruit of that tree;) three Murals (which were given by the General unto him who first mounted the walls, and entred a Town, being adorned with an image of the batlements) and eight Golden Crowns; befides 83 Golden Chains, 60 Golden Bracelets, 18 pure Spears, which were Spears having no iron at the ends of them, being also called Hast a donatica, and Halla gramines, and 23 Horse traspings, whereof nine were for killing Enemies that he had challenged to single Combats. To this relation of Dionyfius, Gellius addeth a Crown, called Obsidionalis (which was given to one who had freed the presenter from a Siege) and increaseth the number of Bracelet; to above 160, that of Spears to 22, and the other of Ho, fe trappings to 25. He calleth him L. Sicinius Dentatus, and writerh, that for his incredible atchievements, he had the appellation of Achilles Romanus.

90. Sicceus proceeded, faying, that though he had fought fo many years, ferved in fo many Expeditions, received so many wounds, and helped to gain fuch large Territories for the Roman People, yet neither he, nor his fellowfoldiers partakers with him in the fame dangers, had received any portion of those Lands, being possessed by others, who could neither shew title nor merit for them. After this, he accused the Patritians of having put Cassius to death, for no other cause than favouring the Commons, as also of privily murdering Genutius the Tribune, eleven years after, which had terrified others fince from such attempts as his were. He mentioned the affronts lately made to the Tribunes, and concluded with an exhortation to the multitude, to free themselves from this Tyranny of the great ones, by passing the Law without giving heed to the diffwafions of any. The Affembly was fo moved by his words, that they feemed impatient of any thing to be faid against it; but Icilius rifing up, after he had excolled the worth of the man, said, it was neither just, nor agreeable with the custome of the City, to hinder any one from speaking against the Law, especially such an one as afferred right, and opposed violence. He adjourned then the Comitia till the next day, when he comanded all to be present, who would speak any thing against it. The Patritians meeting at the Conful's house in the evening, resolved, if they could not with words, by deeds to hinder the piffing of the Law, and betimes in the morning took up the Forum, spreading themselves all over to hinder the uniting of the Commons. The Comitin being full, those that spake could not be heard, some incouraging, and others interrupting them bout the Law, with great clamours. The Confuls protested against this carriage, and that if any violence succeeded, the Commons were the procurers of it; and the Tribunes answered, that they had heard long such discourses as they were now making. The day being far fpent, the People required the ballots; but then the young Patritians hindred them from uniting in their Tribes, and fnarched away the pots and ballots, beating out of the Forum the Officers attending for the gathering of Suffrages. The Tribunes crying out, and casting themselves into the throng, they gave way to them, where ever they went, but hindred fuch as would have followed, and rendred their Office thereby unserviceable. At length the Patritians prevailed against the passing of the Law, by the means of three Families especially, viz. the Posthumii, Sempronii, and Clalii, most eminent for Nobility, Riches, and Clients, who also especially hindred the confirmation of the A grarian by a Plebiscitum. or. The

Nnn 2

SECT. L.

or. The Tribunes confulting how to vindicate their cause the most moderate opinion prevailed, that neither the Confuls, nor any other Patritians, fave those of the three Families now mentioned, should be called to answer before the People; and not for their lives, but estates, for resisting the Tribunes in preferring the Law. The Patritians gave way to it, and having redeemed the estates, restored them to the owners. Afterwards, when the Tribunes again went about to prefer the Law, news came that the Enemy was on his march to Rome, as far as Tufculum, which place onely stopped him, but could not long hold our. Levies now being to be made, according to a Decree of the Senate, the Tribunes endeavoured to hinder them, but another

Diverted by War.

Decree being published, that the Patritians with their Clients, and such as voluntarily came in, would undertake the War; fome for shame, some for plunder, and others to gratifie the Nobility, gave their names; and among ? the rest Siccius himself, whom followed a Cohort of 800 old Soldiers to do him honour, though excused from warfare by the Laws. A strong Army being presently raised, the Enemies retired, and were followed by the Consuls to Antium, where the Armies lying incamped one against the other, the Agui, confident of their strength, at length provoked the Romans to fight. Romulius having then the command, fent for Siccius, as the story goes, and gave him order with his Cohort to go a certain way, and fall behind upon the A plot against Enemies Camp; intending either to disgrace him upon refusal, or destroy him by so impossible an undertaking. When Sicosus laboured to thew him that the thing could not be done, he upbraided him with his speeches used in the rour.

these 800 to see no man return alive. Siccins led them not the same way as the Conful thought, which being mountainous, would have brought certain destruction to them ascending, but another through a Wood, by which He escapeth they came upon the Camp of the Lqui, where it was forfaken of the guard, as Conquenow gone to behold the fight of the two Armies, before this time joyned. Falling in with a shour, the Equi supposing the other Consul present, forfook the Camp and fled, after which Siccius and his Cohort marched down towards the battel, whom the Enemy discovering on their back, and knowing their Camp to be taken, were also discouraged and fled : The Romans purfued them till night, and did great execution, but none so valiantly demeaned himfelf as Siccius Dentatus.

Comitia concerning his own exploits, and objected to him pretended valour.

Herear he undertook the matter, and giving all to understand his case, departed with his men all weeping, to the regret of the Army, who expected of

92. Siecius having lodged himself and his men in the Enemies Camp, the next day fet it and all the stuff therein on fire, and with haste marched for Rome, on purpose to deprive the Consuls of the honour they expected. Coming into the Forum, he related to the Tribunes and People the whole paf-

fage, how he and his old men being destined to ruine, had obtained the Vi-He revengeth Story. Hereby he not onely ingratiated himself with the People, but prohimself upon cured the displeasure of the Senate also against the Consuls, who were denied the Confuls. the honour of a Trimph. The Commons gratified Siccius in the highest meafure they could, making him one of their Tribunes for the following year, wherein Sp. Tarpeius, and A. Ternius (or Thermus rather as Gellius hath it) were Confuls. The first he did relating to his Office, was to set the former Confuls a day to answer before the People, for violating the power of the Tribunethip, and deviling the destruction of him and his Soldiers: and fo resolved was the whole College, that the judgment passed without interruption intended by the Patritians, and they were both condemned in a pecuniary mul. The prefent Confuls were hereby rendred more inclinable towards the Commons; fo that they procured a Decree of the Senate, and a Law passed in the Centuriata Comitia, that All Magistrates should have liberty to punish such as violated their authority, which was formerly the privilege of the Confuls onely. Burthe mulet was not left to their differetion, provision being made, that it should not exceed the worth of two Oxen, or thirty Sheep; which Law was long observed by the Romans. After this, the Tribanes propounded to the Senate, that Laws might be made, which the SECT. 1. Romaline per- Citie should use for ever. After a grave debate, the advice: of Romaline the late fwaderh the condemned Conful prevailed, who contrary to the expectation of both parties spoke in behalf of the thing propounded. He said, he was for the interest of the submit to new Patritians as long as there was any hopes of its continuance, but finding things in such a condition, as it must necessarily decline, he thought it wifdom to comply with that necessity, and advised that Ambassadors might be fent to the Greek Cities in Italy, and to Athens, thence to fetch fuch Laws as were most excellent, and befitting the Commonwealth. After their return was to be propounded to the People the choice of Law-makers, what their power should be, for how long, and what other things should appertain to them. Siecius extraordinarily affected with the mans ingenuity, faid he was now friends with him, and remitted his fine; but he refused to forbear the payment of it, because already sacred to their gods, A Senatus Confultum being made, and confirmed by a Plebiscitum, Ambassadors were Commissiochosen to fetch Laws from the Greeks. These were Sp. Posthumius, Ser. nerschosen to Sulpition, and A. Manlion, to whose use Gallies were affigned, and furfetch some nished at the publick charge, as was suitable with the Majesty of the Roman out of Greece.

> 92. For the following year, being the first of the 82 Olympiad, wherein Lyons a Theffalian of Laviffa was Victor in the course, Charephanes exercifing the Office of principal Archon, the 300th year of the Cicie being now ended (as Diony fine computeth, following the account of Caro) P. Horatius and Sext. Quintilius were Consuls. Now fell a greater plague than ever had been known, upon both Citie and Countrey, which swept away Quintilms the Conful, and Sp. Furius chosen in his place, with four Tribunes, and many Senators. The succeeding Consuls were L. Monenius and P. Sextius. who took care for Corn to supply the Citie, which laboured under a famine, by reason that the grounds lay untilled the former year. In their year the Ambaffadors returned out of Greece with Laws, presently after which the Tribanes required, that according to the Senates Decree, law-makers might be appointed. 'The Confuls knowing not how to deny them, yet unwilling to weaken the interest of the Patritians, deferred the matter, faying, that the time of the Comitia was at hand, after which they would labour, joyntly with the Confuls Elect, in the bufinesse. The Tribunes were content; but when the Comisia were palt, wherein Appens Claudius, and T. Genusius were chosen, they grew idle, and neglected the administration of affairs, as now belonging unto others; and Menenius was fickly, pining away, as was thoughtby melancholy; of which Sextins took advantage, pretending he could do nothing by himself. The Tribunes then betook themselves to the Consuls Elect, and though they had not yet entered upon their Magistracy, importuned them to gratifie the Commons, by proposing great honours and rewards. Appius being elevated with the hope of a new kind of Magistracy, grew popular, and perswaded his Collegue to a compliance, so that Sextins was forced to call together the Senate, and propound concerning Laws. 92. Many things were spoken, as well by those that defired a new model. as others, who thought it fufficient to rest satisfied in the customs of their Countrey. But the opinion of the defigned Confuls prevailed, which Applies the principal of the two delivered, being asked his advice, according to the custom, before any other Senators. Their sense was, that ten men out of the chief of the Senate were to be Elected, whose power continuing for a year should be the same with that of the Kings and Consuls, and all other Magistracies cease till they might be renewed according to Laws: in the mean time the ten men, or Decemviri, were to administer Justice to private men. and model the Commonwealth. When the day came wherein this Senature Confulence was to be confirmed by the People, the defigned Confuls refigned their Office, for which they were exceedingly admired, and remembred in the choice. In the Centuriate Comitia were created App. Claudius and T. Genutius, late Confuls Elect; F. Sextime Conful for that present year, the

SECT. 2. three Ambassadors who fetched Laws out of Greece, P. Posthumius. Ser. Sulpitius, A. Manlius, and one of the former year's Confuls T. Romalius, The Decembiri who had been condemned by Siccius the Tribune, and afterwards was the author of this popular act : besides these, out of the Senate C. Tulins, T. Vetuchosen. rius and P. Horauns, all of Confular dignity. The Tribunes, Ediles, Quafors, and all other Magistrates were for a time devested of all power. Instead of Horaius, Livy mentioneth P. Curiatius.

SECT. II.

From the Creation of the Decemviri to the War of Privernæ, which fell out the same year that Darius Codomannus died : the space of 121 years.

Decemviri, as the first was from Kings to Confuls) hapned in the 302 A.M.2554.

I. THe second change in the Government (from Consuls to Ten men, or The fecond change of year of the Citie; according to the account of Case, and the 303 after the Ol. 81. all 2. computation of larratius and Varre, which fell in with the 2 and 3 years of V. C. 302. Government when.

the 82 Olympiad, the 14th of the reign of Arraxerxes Longimanus, 449 before the Fra of Christ, A.M. 3554. and, as may be gathered both out of Diony fins and Livy, on the Ides of May. 2. The December; having taken upon them the Government, in reference the December to a new confliction, agreed that onely one of them at one time should have the Fasces and other consular Ensigns. He affembled the Senate, confirmed the Decrees, and did other things agreeable with chief Magistracy. The rest (for to lessen envy) differed little in habit from private men, having onely an Accenfus, or fort of Beadle, going before them, which Livy'addeth to the relation of Diony fins. They succeeded by turns, for a certain limitted time, till the year went about. The present Possession of the Fasces onely faith Livy, but all of them as Dionyfius feemeth to mean, judged private causes together with publick ones belonging to their subjects, and atfociates. All things they managed with fuch Justice and moderation, that the Commonwealth seemed most happy under them, having no need of appeal. Appins above the rest grew exceeding popular by his familiarily with the ordinary fort; so as in a manner he carried away the praise from the whole College, for that he had a further defign than any of the rest.

for the first year.

3. At length having made a model out of fuch Laws as were brought out of Greece, and their own Countrey's customes, they proposed it to the view of all men in ten Tables, that any one might make exceptions; liberty being given to private persons to inform the Law-makers, who consulted much with the Nobility about the work. When all approved of them; a. Senatus Consultum passed, nemine contradicente, for the ratifying of these Laws, and the question being put to the People in the Centuriata Comitia, they wers confirmed most religiously in presence of the Pontifies, Augurs, and Priests. Then were they ingraven in braffe, faith Dionyfins and others, in Ivory faith Pomponius the Lawyer, and proposed to the publick view in the most conspicuous part of the Forum, as Minos of old, according to Place, and long after him Solon, caused his Laws to be written in Tables by the Athenian: called * Cyrbes and Axones. The year being almost out, the Decemviri * Kircus & moved the Senate about the Comitta. After a great debate it was resolved to "Atoric. continue this kind of Magistracy for the following year; because something feemed yet winting to the new model, through the shortnesse of time allotted to the work; but especially for that by this Office the Tribuneship was suspended, of which the Patritians had cause to be most jealous. The commons thought they had good reason to concur with the Fathers in this choice, and the day for holding the Comitia was appointed.

skies, the Commons labouring earnestly to retain him in his place, for that

CHAP, IV.

The most antient and honorable of the Fathers stood for this Office, SECT.2. fearing that if turbulent spirits were possessed of it, they might have a great advantage against the State. Above all others was Appins extolled to the none had behaved himself better than he. He defired to be excused, pretending he had rather be discharged of so troublesom and ingratefull a work. Appins obtain- At length overcome as it were by the intreaties of the people, he professed eth to be De- himself amongst the Candidates, and by accusing all others, as owing him compire the fe- ill will for his publick spirit, made way for himself and his friends. In the Centuriate Comitia he was made Decemvir the second time, and with him cheating the was joyned Q, Fabius Vibulanus, who had been Consul three times, a man credulous multitude.

hitherto of unblameable carriage: out of the other Patritians by the procurement of Appins were created M. Cornelius, M. Servilius, L. Minucius, T. Autonius, and Manius Rabuleius, persons of no great Eminency, and out of the Commons Q. Petilius, Cafo Duellius, and Sp. Oppius, whom he took in, the more to ingratiate himself with the rabble, saying, it was just that the Commons should share in that Magistracy, which was to govern and command all. 4. Appius, a man more popular than any Magistrate that ever governed, either King or Conful, with his nine Collegues, entred his Office on the Ides

Collegues labour to eftablish themfelves.

of May, which faith Dionysius hapned in the full Moon, according to the course whereof moneths at that time were observed. The first thing the Decemviri did, was mutually to agree and confirm by Oath to be of one mind, not to hold the Assemblies, but perpetually to retain the power in their own hands : to admit none into their number, and to be of equal power and authority among st themselves: to make use of Senatus Consultum's, and Plebiscitum's, but rarely, and never except in case of necessity, atting most things by virtue of their own power. On the first day (which to the Romans was ever Festival and Religious) after their superstitious Ceremonies were over, they all appeared with regal Enfigns, which exceedingly terrified the people, especially the Axes added again to the Rods, which Poplicola had laid aside, and none of his Successors the Consuls used in the Cirie. By this fear they fought to procure themselves security, each of them getting about him a company of flout young men, such as were most addicted to him.

Some preferring their private commodity before the publick good flattered them, and even amongst the Patritians themselves were not wanting, who though Eminent both for birth and effite patiently bore the oppression of their Countrey. The Decembers indulging their pleasures, exercifed now their authority with all licentionsnesse, nothing valuing the Roman Senate and people. Being both Legislators and Judges, many Citizens they unjustly put to death, and deprived others of their Estates, whose causes were all formally judged, that they might have some shew, and pretence of Iustice, accusers being suborned out of their Dependents, each one affording all affiltance herein to his Collegue. Such private persons as in their futes feared their cause were constrained to joyn themselves to the party of their Judges; fo as it came to passe in a short time that most of the Citizens were also corrupted. Such as were offended with the extravigancy of the ten retired themselves, expecting the Comitia for the Creation of new

They add two Tables of Laws to the

5. The Decemviri added two Tables of Laws to the ten that were made the year before. Amongst these new Laws there was one which fotbad marriage betwixt the Pairitians and Plobeians, for no other cause as Diony sie conjectureth, than lest the families being joyned together, concord (a) Lib.2. should ensue betwixt the two orders. These Laws thus by accident, Dig. de Orifaith (a) Pomponius, came to be called the Laws of the twelve Tables, gine Juis, being written by the December, through the perfection of one Hermodorus (b) Tujcking. being written by the Decemviri, through the perswasion of one Hermodorns (b) Tuscular, libs. Plin, an Ephefian, as some reported, then banished into Italy, concerning which 100, 2410. person (b) Cicero and others are to be consulted. These Laws being esta- Strabo lib.14.

blished,

SECT. 1. blished, it followed, that disputations and controversies of the Court should be necessary, for as much as an interpretation was to be built upon the authority of the Learned. This disputation, or this unwritten Law, composed by the Learned, is not called by any peculiar name, as all other parts, but by the common one of Jus Civile, or Civil Law onely. Besides, out of these Laws, at the same time almost, were composed certain cases, wherein men contested one with another, which cases, left the People should make them at their pleasure, were to be certain and solemn; and this part of Law'is cal-The Original led Attiones Juris , or Cafes at Law. Thus almost at the same time these three forts of Laws arose, viz. the Lams of the twelve Tables; from these flowed the Civil Law: and from the same were composed Cases at Law.

Roman Affairs Contemporary with Law.

But the knowledge of expounding all these, and the Cases themselves, were kept by the College of Ponisfices, who appointed yearly those that judged Private Persons, which custome the People used almost 100 years. Afterward, when Appius Claudius had propounded, and reduced these Cases into form, (c) Gnaus Flavius his Scribe, and the fon of a Libertine (or of one (c) confule whose father was once a Slave) stole the Book, and gave it to the People, Valer, Max. which accepted fo thankfully of the gift, that he was made Tribune of the Lz.c.s. exemps. Commons, a Senator, and Ædilis curulis. This Book was called 745 Ci- A. Gellium vile Flavianum, as the other Jus Civile Papirianum. Yet Flavius ad- 1.6. c. o. & ded nothing of his own to the Book. The City increasing, and there being as Cicero. Dro Misver wanting certain forts of Cases, not long after Sextus Alius composed rena, other Cases, and gave a Book to the People called Tus Elianum.

6. There being now in the City, the Lex or Law of the twelve Tables, How the parts the Tas Civile, or Civil Law, and the Cafes of Law, it came to paffe, that of it came in the Commons disagreeing with and separating from the Patritians, appointed Laws of their own making, called Plebifcita. After their return, there being a great controversie about these, it was thought good to receive them also for Laws, and so it was enacted by a Law preferred by * Horrensius the Di- * Vide Livi-Etator; fo though there was a difference in the form of making a Law (cal- um, lib. 3. led Lex) and a Plebiscium, yet the authority was the same. Then for that 1, 15, 6,26, it was difficult for the People to meet, because of it's multitudes, necessity it felf devolved the care of the Commonwealth upon the Senate. So the Senate began to interpose, and whatsoever it resolved was observed: and that Law was called Senatus Consultum. At the same time the Magistrates also administred Justice, and that the People might know what they would determine con erning any thing, and to fore-arm themselves, they published Editts, which Editts of the Prators constituted the Fus Honorarium, so named from the honour and authority of the Prator. Lastly, as the course of affaires reduced the making of Laws to fewer fashions, at length it came to passe through several Factions (viz. of Sylla, Marius, Pompey, and Casar) that there was necessity of the Commonwealth's being governed by a fingle person. For the Senate not being able to govern all the Provinces, a Prince was ordained, and what he appointed was taken for Law. So that in the Commonwealth of Rome, all Law was either fo constituted by a Law called Lex, as that of the twelve Tables; or properly called Jus Civile, which being unwritten, confisted in the interpretation of the Learned; or Cafes of Law, which contained the form of Pleas; or a Plebiscitum made without the authority of the Fathers : or the Editt of a Magistrate, called Tus Honorarium: or a Senatus Consultum, which without a Law (Lex) was ordained by the fole authority of the Senare : or Principalis constitutio, which the Princehim-

7. These things are written by Pomponius in this narrative of the Original of Law; for the better understanding whereof, it is to be noted, that the word Just fignifieth all Law or right in general, and is that genus whereof Lewis but a species, being defined by (a) Justinian the Emperour to be that which the People of Rome upon the quastion put by a Senatorian Magistrate (a)SER Scibe (for example a Conful) did enatt. As for the twelve Tables, they were niams Institut. furnished with Laws, partly borrowed from the Gracians, partly added at the L. Tit. 2. discrediscretion of the Lawmakers, and partly the same as formerly were in use. SECT.2. Of the first fort were such especially as concerned private interests. Of the fecond was that which forbad mariage betwixt the Nobility and Commons. And of the third, that Law which from Dionyfins we formerly mentioned to have been made by Romalia, giving power to a man to call together his wives kindred, and judge her for drinking wine, or dishonesty: this is atteffed to have been taken into the twelve Tables by (b) Pline; and (c) Gellins (b) Lib. 14. also hinterh as much. From (d) Ausonius is observed, that these twelve cap, 13, Tables were divided into three parts, whereof the first contained what be- (c) Lib. 10. longed to the Religion of the Romans, the second what concerned the pub- cap 23. lick, and the third the rights of private men. Great are the commendations which many give of them, but the most amineral Court and the child quod tions which many give of them, but the most eminent is Cicero's Encomium, ter Sanzere that we name no more. Disputing under the name of Crassus; in (e) one quaterne Saplace he thus speaketh: If diversity of Studies please any, in the twelve Ta- cvum, Privables there is a great image of Antiquity : because the antient use of words is tum, Populi knowr; and ceresin kinds of attions declare the life and custome of our An commune quod cestors. If any look at Polity, you shall find it all in the twelve Tables, which (e) Lib, 1 de describe all the interests and parts of the State : or if any one be taken with Oratore. this glorious Philosophy, I will speak more boldly, these are the fountains conduction of the 12 of all his disputes contained in the Civil Law (Jure Civili) and Laws (Legibus.) Though all be displeased, I will speak what I think : that little Book of the swelve Tables alone, in my opinion excelleth the Libraries of all the

that when he was a boy, they were wont to learn the twelve Tables as some ne-ceffary Poem. Laftly, a collection of the fragments of these Tables out of approved Authors (fuch especially as conduce to the explication of the Institutions, and of antient Law With deep Antiquities) hath been made by I. Crif-

8. But (to return) the Decembiri at the usual time of the Comitia bid-pinus, to which the Reader is referred.

cierro his

CHAP. IV.

Philosophers (if one view the fountains and heads of Laws) both in weight of anthority and copions of advantage. In another (f) place he writeth, (i) 2.

The Decemvii: retain their power,

They affens-

nate about

ding farewel to the customs of their Country, and the new Laws, neither regarding the approbation of Senate nor People, continued themselves in power for the year following, which was the third of the Decemvirate, the first of the 83 Olympiad, according to Dionyfius, wherein Crifo of Himera was Victor, Philifeus being Archon at Athens. They so ordered the matter shortly, as even all the considerable part of the Citizens, (Patritians and others) they either killed, or forced to quit the City. This pleased them well enough, but the Sabines and Aquithinking it a fit time to attempt fome great matter against Rome, invaded the territories thereof, and of the Latines. The Decemviri much troubled hereat, after a consultation how to mike relistance several wayes, found themselves constrained to assemble the Senate, wherein Appins with a premeditated Oration propounded the matter of the War. L. Valerius Potitus, the fon of him that befieged the Capitol, and grandfon of Poplicola, first arose, and though he was commanded by Appins to forbear, flew high against the tyranny of the present Usurpers. He being forced to filence, was seconded by Marcus Horatins Barbatus, great grandson of the Collegue of Poplicola, who having expressed great indignation, the Decemviri incensed with his biting words, threatned to cast him down headlong from the Rock. All the Senators at this cried out as at a breach of their privilege, and made a tumult, whereat the Ten repented of what they had done, and excused themselves, saying, they deprived none of speaking to the matter in hand, but interrupted Seditious Orations, which they might do by their power of Confuls and Tribunes received from the People, not for a year onely, nor any limited time, but till the work of Laws were finished, untill which time they were resolved to act, and then give an account of their administration. Appins having delivered this in the name of all, asked the opinion of C. Claudius his Unckes.

9. Claudius, beginning his Oration with the occasion of their meeting, firly shewed what was the occasion of ir. The War he demonstrated to be begun by no other inducements than what the present distempers of the State afforded, which were bred by the arbitrary and tyrannical carriage of his Nephew, and his nine Companions. He made out what thefe distempers were. and by virtue of his relation to Applus, took upon him, after a sharp reproof, by the nearnesse of their blood, their Ancestors, and the December's Father, with all that was dear and religious to them both, to conjure him. that putting a stop to his ambitious course (destructive to himself as well as the publick) he would refign his usurped power, and restore the Commonwealth to it's former government and liberty. Appins answered him not a word, which so moved him, that with tears he fignified he would depart to Rhegillum, the feat of his Forefathers, and there continue till that fell upon the Decempirate, which he guessed would happen in a short time; for as much as he could not endure to behold his Nephew degenerate fo much from the antient worth of their Family. As concerning the War, he advited the Fathers to resolve nothing, till the accustomed Magistrares were first created. The graver and more eminent fort of Senators that spake after, were all of this opinion, which made the Ten resolve to ask none now according to their age, as the custome was, but M. Cornelius called upon his brother Lucius to deliver his opinion. He attributed all that had been said against the Decemviri to envy, faying, it was because the speakers themselves could not compasse the Office, and laboured to shew, that it was most foolish counsel to refolve upon new elections, which would require time, and defer the War that threatned ruine and desolation. By pressing the danger very close, and urging what necessity there was of committing the War to the management of the Decemviri, he drew almost all the younger fore to his party, there being many even in the Senate from whom fear wrested compliance. After all these, the Decembiri gave Valerius leave to speak, whom first of all They had interrupted. He professed he was of Claudius his judgement as to the whole, and answered all the reasons of Cornelius by one proposal; that a Distator might be instantly named, shewing, that if they missed of this opportunity, they could not expect again to bee affembled by the Decem-

Stirs in the

. 10. Few that delivered their opinions after him remained unconvinced, and many were changed from the sense they had before delivered. He required then of the Ten, that the matter might be further confidered of, and all might have liberty to recall their votes, which caused a great contest betwixt him and Cornelius, who defiring that the Decembers might have the command in the War, cried out, that the thing was already decided in a legal manner, and defired the parties might be counted. Much heat being shewed by both, the Fathers were also divided, which advantage the Ten took to do what they pleased. Appius then formally declaring for what cause they had been assembled, told them they were divided according to the three several opinions of Claudius, Cornelius, and Valerius, every one having had liberty to speak his mind freely: and feeing that most had approved of what Cornelius had propounded, he declared his partie to have overcome. Then commanded he the Clerk to draw up a Senatus Consultum, whereby power of raising Forces, and commanding them, was given to the Decimeiri; and therewith the Senate was dismissed. They were by this kind of victory rendred more consident, and imperious, as having now in their own thoughts established themfelves, by having an Army at their command, which Valerius had advised the Fathers earnestly to beware. Horatins and Valerius made provision for their own defence, by gathering together their Clients and dependents, and Claudius, as he had faid, departed into the Country of the Sabines, whose example multitudes following, left their native fear, with their wives and chidren departing into voluntary exil. The Decemviri troubled hereat, endeavoured at first to hinder them by shutting the gates, but again fearing they might out of fury attempt some dangerous thing, they let them depart, but foized on such goods as they left behind, having accused them of defection.

These things being added to the former miscariages, incensed much more

They make use of the Senate to their own advantage.

both Pairitans and Piebeians against them. Yet had they proceeded no SECT. further in fuch like outrages, they might probably for a much more longer a time have secured their power, through that influence which the mutual emulation of these orders afforded. For the Plebeians were glad to see the high spirits of the Patritians dejected, and the Senate void of all power; on the other fide, the Nobility rejoyced that the Commons had lost their former liberty, having not the least help, because the Tribunitial power was taken away. But they neither using moderation in War, nor temperance at home, constrained all to unite for their destruction, which followed certain hainous offences committed against the Commons.

They lead out II. They divided their Army into three parts, whereof one remained an Army a- With Appins and Oppins in the Citie, the two other their Collegues led forth gainst the Sa- against the Sabines and Equi. The later forced the Romans to forsake their her and de Camp, and shamefully to fly, which caused great rejoycing in Rome amongst the Enemies of the Decemviri, fo that Appins fearing some attempt, wrote to his Collegues in the Army, by one means or other to destroy their known adversaries, which was effected upon diverse. But at Rome, Siccius Denratus, the Roman Achilles as he was named, amongst others spake much against the Captains as Cowards and unskilfull, which Appins understanding, with good words perswaded him to go as Lieutenant or Legatus to the Army then lying at Crustumeria against the Sabines. He not suspecting what was defigned, undertook the employment, for that the Office of Legatus was most facred and honorable amongst the Romans, having the authority and power of a General, and the inviolablenesse and veneration of a Priest. When he came to the Camp he was fent out with 100 men upon service, who had Sinius Denta. Order to kill him. He fought with them all, flew fifteen, and wounded twice as many, so that finding it too difficult a task to kill him by hand-stroaks. way by them, they threw Darts and Stones at him, and thereby at length, and at a distance, performed what was injoyned them. Though the murderers according to agreement gave out he fell by the Enemie's hand, yet the Soldiers fetching him off to give him honorable burial, by feveral circumstances plainly perceived the truth; and demanding Justice against the instruments, when that was put off, and they concealed, they eafily underflood who were the principal cause, and thought of nothing more than how to revolt.

12. The Army lying at Crustumeria and Fidena being thus incensed against the Decemviri, another wicked act of Appius caused the other which liv inc mped at Algidum against the Equi, not onely to think of, but fully to effect a revolt. There was one L. Virginius a Plebeian, who had a daughter the most beautifull of all Roman women. The maid being but young and at School near the Forum, Appius as he passed that way fell in love with her in such a measure as by no means could be allay his brutish passion. Marry her he could not, being a Plebeian, neither could he hope to obtain her for his Concubine : there remained then no other way for him to enjoy her, than by procuring M. Claudius one of his Clients to challenge her as his Slave, so that the matter being brought before him to judgement, he might judge her forobe. Claudius laid his claim, by affirming the was the true and natural daughter of his Slave, and that the wife of Virginius, now dead, her felf being barren, procured the Child, and brought it up for her own; which though he and others knew well enough, yet being young, he had not opportunity till now to right himself. The pretence was so impudent, as raifed the indignation of all perfons no otherwise concerned than as in the publick liberty. Numitor the maid's Uncle by her mother, and Icelius the fon of Icilius one of the first Tribunes of the Commons, to whom the was already contracted, sufficiently evidenced the truth; but Appins being beneupon his luftfull design, would hear no reason, and had not a tumult hapned our of the indignation of the multitude, would have given her up in the hands of Claudius, till such time as her father could be sent for from the Army to defend her cause. Being hardly drawn to put off the matter till the next day, and not giving any more time, wrote to Algidum to hinder Vir-

bominable

Virginia,

Sect. 2. ginius from coming, bidding Antonius the Commander of that Legion to confine him, left he should hear any thing of his daughter. But Numitor, and the brother of Icilias, prevented the Letters, and Virginius pretending the death of a near relation, getting leave to depart, through by-wayes returned to the Cirie, fearing a pursute after the arrival of the Letters, which accordingly hapned, but he thus evaded it. 13. Virginius then was present in the morning to the great assonishment of Appins, when his daughter was commanded to be brought forth. He proved the maid to be his own daughter, and no supposititious brood; but Appius, a man of no great natural abilities, besides the brutish, corrupted by the greatnesse of his power, and inslamed with the excesse of his passion, neither considered the defence of Virginius, nor was moved by the bitter tears of the Virgin, being angry at the pity of the standers by, who apprehended the case of Father and Daughter no otherwise than as their own, as if he himself were more to be pined, enduring more for her beauties sake than the herfelf. Interturking those that spake in her behalf, and commanding them filence, he told them, that this was not the first time he had had knowledge of this matter, for that Claudius his father being a Client to their family had committed him yet a Boy, when he died, to his protection. In the time of his Guardianship he said it had been cleared to him how Numitoria had procured the Girl of Claudius his Slave, but he thought it more conve-Applies his anient to let the matter rest till Claudius was grown up, either to take, or sell her as he should like best. Since he came into imployment he had not medpractices for led with his Clients affairs, but he himself it seemeth making an inventory of his goods, and having notice of this Slave, now challenged his right, and accordingly he both witnessed, and judged him to be the right Lord and owner of her. Great outcries and lamentation being made, as well by the by-standers as the Virgin's relations, Appius commanded all to depart, and gave order to Claudius to take possession of his Slave. Virginius, seeing there was no way but to yield to the Tyrant's luft if his daughter lived, defired he might speak with her a little aside, as to take his last farewell, which being granted, he drew her, hanging upon him, and pitifully bewailing her condition, towards a Burchers stall, whose knife taking into his hands, he said, Daughter, I will fend thee to our Ancestors, both free, and of honest repute ; for the Tyrant will not suffer thee to be either here; and therewith he stabbed, and disparch'd her. 14. With the bloudy knife in his hand he ran through the Citie, calling the People to their liberty, and coming to the Gate, rode Post to the Army; a company of 400 Plebeians following after. In the same posture he came to the Camp at Algidum, holding the knife, which together with his cloaths was all bloudy. Calling the Soldiers together, he took occasion from his own misfortune to let them see in what condition their liberty stood, and with urgent reasons perswaded them to revolt from the ten, and redeem their Countrey. They being confcientious, as to their Sacramentum, or Military Oath, whereby they had sworn not to forsake their Leaders, but follow them whitherfoever, he told them they were discharged from any Obligation, because the Law for the Oath supposed the Captains should be created according to the Laws, which the ten were not, having ufurped the power ever fince the last time for the Comitia. Being fatisfied herewith, the Army departed, fome few Centurious onely remaining, and took up its station in the Aventine Mount, and the next day fortifying the Camp chose ten Captains, whereof M. Oppin was the Chief. Presently there came a great party from Fidena, and joyned with them, being offended with the murther of Siccius, and they chusing also ten men out of their body, to the twenty the whole matter now contended for was referred. Appins in the mean while having gone by force to suppresse the tumult he had raised in the Citie, was overpowered by the faction of Falerius and Horatius formerly mentioned, and now perceiving that most of the odium lay upon himself as the principal cause, he kept himself in his house. Sp. Oppius therefore affembled the Fathers, at SE CT.2. which time came the Captains from Fidena, requiring that the revolters might be punished. L. Cornelius accordingly moved that they should all be remanded back to their charges, which if they obeyed, the Ring-leaders onely were to be punished, but if they refused, the Senate then should consider how all those might be dealt with, who had betrayed their trust. But the Fathers were too fenfible of present grievances, to hear the motion of such cor-Procureth the rupt interest, and were prevailed with by Valerius and Horaius, to make deftruction of Peace with the Army (which by this time was departed to the Holy Mount) the December on condition that the same form of Government should return, as was in being before the creation of the Decemviri.

Confuls prefer Popular

Laws.

15. Valerius Potitus, and M. Horatius Barbatus, both inheritors of popularity, were created Confuls in the Centuriate Comition, who (according to their promise to the Commons when they procured them to lay down Arms, that they would by all means possible procure their benefit) preferred divers Laws to the regret of the Patritians. One was, that such Laws as the Commons enacted should passe in the Comitia of the Curia, wherein they were more prevalent than the Partitians, as those in the Centuriate, by reason of their influence upon the Equites, and the richer fort of Plebeians, were ever too frong for the multitude, by reason of the distribution of the several Classes into Centuries formerly thewn. After this the Tribunes, whereof Virginius was one, thought fit to call the December to an account. Virginius being appointed the accuser of Appius, insisted most, faith Livis, upon that Law, which commanded the defendant to have liberty till fuch time as his or her flavery was proved, which Appius had gone about to violate in his daughter's case. Before the trial, being committed to prison, for that no bail would be taken, he was there found dead, as some thought secretly made away by the Tribanes, but as they and others gave out, having hanged himself. After him Sp. Oppius, as next to him in guilt, was accused, and being condemned, died the same day in prison by his own hands, saith Livie. The other eight banished themselves, and Claudius the pretended Master of Virginius was driven out after them : with which justice the State was satisfied, and indemnity given to all others. Things thus feeming to be fetled, the Confuls took the field against the Aqui, Volsei, and Sabines, against whom their successe was fuch, as deserved a Triumph, but the Senate gave them a repulse, being grieved at the Laws they had made in behalf of the Commons. Claudius also the Uncle of Appins accused them of the murther of his Nephew, and other violent courses taken against the Decembiri, and their party, whereas all ought to have been (according to agreement) buried in oblivion. The Confuls appealed to the People, and complaining much of the Senate, procured by the help of the Tribunes a Law to passe for their receiving the privilege of Triumph from the People.

16. The Commons by all the privileges already obtained, were but more inflamed with a defire of greater, each morfel out of the prerogative of the Patritians, adding unto their appetite. After three years they required to be made partakers of the Confulfhip, which hitherto the other had enjoy-Yer the mul- ed, being elected in the Centuriate Comitia, wherein they themselves had the power. The Tribanes provided a bill for making the People free, and at their infitiable and own choice, whether they would create Patritians or Plebrian at every election, which thing the Senators bearing most hainously, as feeing their privileges utterly ruined thereby, thought all things to be endured, rather than the Law should passe. The Allies of Rome now sent for aid against the Aqui, and Sabines, who invaded them, and news was brought that the Veiences and Ardeates would revolt; but the Tribunes those Popular Tyrants hindred all

Confulfhip.

Publick bufi- Levies, suffering none, that refused to be listed, to receive punishment; neinesse hereby ther could the Senate prevail with them, to defer the matter till the Warre should be ended. The Confuls in so difficult a time held a private conference of certain Senators, whereof Clandius, according to the genius of his Ancestors, was all for resistance, urging that nothing was in this matter to be

yitalded

SECT.2.

vielded to the Commons, who went about to change the constitution of the State, and thereby were enemies to it. But T. Quintins shewed what inconvenience force and civil War might bring, and the rather, for that their Ancestors had made the Tribunes inviolable, by a curse laid upon themselves and posterity, in case their persons were hurt, or the conditions then sworn to in their behalf should be broken. When the rest were all of his opinion, Claudins proposed an expedient as seasonable in so great necessity. He advised by no means to suffer the Consulship to come into the hands of Plebeians, but to create certain Governours in the room of Confuls, fix, or eight , whereof an equal number at least should be Parritians; for hereby they should seem not to take too much power to themselves, and yet not give up the other Office, whereinlay the fecret of their prerogative, to be managed by base and unworthy men. When this project marvailously pleased all, that nothing might feem to be defigned beforehand, he advised the Confuls not to ask them the graver men their opinions first, as the custom was, when the Senate should meet, but the younger and most popular: and hee appointed T. Genutius the Consul's brother to propound this way of reconciliation as his private sence. 17. When the Senate was affembled, Canuleius the Tribune, who chiefly profecuted the matter in hand, without pressing it, inveighed against the

An exedient found out by Claudius.

Confuls, as holding fecret meetings, and hatching clandestine delignes against the State: and those Senators who had not been called took the thing in some disdain. But the Consuls protesting their innocence by an oath, said they would also by deeds declare it, and therewith gave any of the younger fort leave to speak, and when none rose up asked Valerius first of all his opinion. He advised the Fathers to favour the Commons, who had deserved so well both in acquiring dominion, and in getting and preferving liberty, and urged that the City could not be free if there were not an equality of right; yet for that the War was now urgent, he defired the thing might at prefent be forborn till that was finished, upon promise that then the Law should be propounded. Horacius being asked next, and others, seconded him; and at length Claudin being defired to speak, that he might conceal the design, according to his own custom, and that of his Family, flew out into invectives against the Commons, and advised that the Law might never passe, neither then nor ever after. A greater tumult following, 7. Genutim was asked his opinion, and as of himself propounded the expedient, that fix Governours might be chosen, three out of each order, who having Consular power, when the time of their Magistracy should be expired, then the Senate and People meeting together, might resolve whether they would have the same Office or that of Consuls for the following year; and what was concluded by most voices, should prevail at the end of every year. This was gladly embraced, both by Senators and Tribunes, and leave given to any Plebeians to Rand for the new Office. But so fickle a thing is defire without reason, and so easily changing into the other extreme, especially of the multitude, that those who fo exmestly before sought that the chiefest Magistracy might be communicated to their body, threatning else to leave the City as formerly, and take arms, when they had their defire, were glutted with it, and changed into the other extreme. For many Plebeians standing for the Office, and using their utmost endeavours to be preferred, they thought none of them worthy of that honour, but bestowed it upon eminent Pairitians onely, who appear-

The fickle & inconstant humour of the multitude

ment to the

Tribuni Mili-

tum.

ed as Candidates. 18. This third change of the Government at Rome, hapned in the third year of the 84 Olympiad, as Dionysius computerh, Diphilus being then Argrand change chon at Athens; but as others, in the first year of that Olympiad, which fell in with the 3 to year of the City, and the 21 of Artaxer xes Longimanus, A. M. 3661 M. Genutius and C. Quintius according to him, but L. Papyrius and L. Sem- Ol. 84. 40, 1. pronius according to them, being Confuls. These new Magistrates called V.O. 310. Tribuni Militum, Were A. Sempronius Atratinus, L. Atiliu Longus, Atax, Longin. and T. Clalins (or Cacilins, as Livie hath it) Signins. Thus at first they were but three in number, afterward it grofe to fix, and at length to eight. Pomponius the Lawyer writeth, that fometimes there were twenty, and fomrimes more; which feemesh incredible, no other Author agreeing with him L. 2, ff. de herein, so that Budoms with reason thinketh the place to be corrupted from Orig. Janie. Seni to Viceni. This mumber of Collegues, together with the mixture of Plebeians who afterwards prefied in, procured, that although they had both the power and enlignes of Confuls, yet their privilege and dignity feemed willike, whence a Trebune in way of contempt called them a Preconfular smare and P. Manlins the Dictator, thewing that a Master of horse-men was inferior to a Confail, compareth his power to that of theirs. Having been for some years created, and for others laid aside, at length in the 388 year of the Ciry, they were quite cast off, at what time Q. Santins a Pleheian was admitted to the Confulthin. But thefe first Tribunes having held their Office 73 dayes; then were confirmined to lay it down, for that the Augurs found some flaw in their election, and the Government returned into it's former course, the Senate naming T. Quintins Barbains, who in the Comitia created

L. Papprius Mugillanus, and L. Sempronius Arrainus, although it be doubtful, to fay truth, whether there were Tribunes onely, or Tribunes and Another change after 73 dayes to Confuls again,

CHAP. IV.

Confuls.

Contails both for this year. 19. But to befure, for the year following the People having it in their power whether to elect Tribunes or Canfals, refolved upon the later, and created in Decamber, the Moon being then full, M. Geganius Macerinus the second time; and T. Quintins Capitolinus the fifth. This year were the Confors made, Officers who being but contemptible at the beginning, rose to great dignity and power. Their original and power might have been more clearly discovered, but that Dionysius his History is here in the beginning of The Cenfors, this flory broken off, the remaining part being loft, to the great dammige his his his his his his figure of the studious in Antiquity. For nor to speak of his smooth style, and the

is broken off, Attick purity thereof, he hath therein delivered the Antiquities of Rome from the following the first Original, with such diligence, that he seemeth in this respect to have par being loft excelled all Writers, both Greek and Roman. For what Latin Authors have neglected, as vulgarly known amongst themselves, as Sacrifices, Games, Triumphs, Ensigns of Magistrates, the universal discipline of the Roman

Commonwealth, the Caufus, Auspicia, Camitia, that difficult distribution of the whote People into Caria, Classes, Centuries, and Tribes: further, the anthority of the Senare, and Commons, with the Power of Magistrates, he of all others hath delivered most accurately. That these things may be It's commen-better understood, he compareth them with the customs of Greece, as where he speaketh of Clients, he occasionally maketh mention of this relation amonest the Athenians and Thessalians, as Casar also writeth it to have been ordinary amongst the Galls. He compareth the Roman Dictator with the Harmoftes of the Lacedamonians, the Archons of the Theffalians, and the Asymmetes of the Mityleneans. The Laws of Romulus, Numa, and Servine, had perished but for him, as also the knowledge of the Original of Rame in a great measure: and so choice are all his Collections, that they tend, as to the instruction of the Reader in the depth of State mysteries, so also to his acquiring or retaining a religious awe of Providence. Such is his History (faith * one well able to judge) that if it had been kept intire (for * Bodinus Meit confisher hof twenty Books, as Photius informeth us) there would have been thad, Hiffor, no cause of bewaiting the losse of Varro's treasures, with whom he was very cap. 4. familiar, as well as Pompey the Great and Tubero; and from whom he feemeth to have derived his choicest Antiquities. These things render a sufficient account, why he is made use of in the History of Roman matters, rather than > 20. Servius Tullius the fixt King of Rome first instituted the Census, as was shewn before, and did the work himself, without any peculiar Officer, as also did the Consuls untill this time. But now in the 66th year from the banishment of Tarquinius, and the 311 of the City, there having been no Census for seventeen years, for that the Consuls were necessarily diverted

CHAP. IV.

SECT. 2. from that work by more urgent businesse, the Senate procured out of their own order two peculiar Officers to be created, who were called Confores, because according to their Censio or estimation the People was cessed, faith Varro, or because every one accounted himself worth so much. quanti illi censu-iffent, as they judged, or estimated, according to Festus. 21. At the beginning they were created for five years, because according to Servius his constitution the People were to be cessed at ever Lustrum, which conteined so many. But their dignity and power so increasing, that they The duration feemed of too long a continuance, nine years after, in the 320 of the City, of Cenfors.

by a Law which Mamerous Amilius the Dictator preferred, the duration of their Office was confined within the term of one year and an half. Though their Office at first was onely to take an estimate of mens Estates, and defcribing all publick and private riches, to distribute the People according to their wealth into Classes and Centuries; yet within a while they came

Their power to have inspection into manners also. For they upon misdemeanour put out of the Senate, took away publick horfes, and cast out of the Tribes. The former kind of punishment was inflicted upon Senators, the fecond upon Equites, and the last upon meer Plebeians. Their removing Senaters, was by passing them by at the new election. For, such Senators In vace Piate. faith Festus, as were passed by in former times, were lyable to no disgrace, with because as the Kings chose and substituted whom they pleased, so after them the Consuls and Tribunes Military, such as they had greatest interest in; first Patritians, and then after Plebeians, till by the Tribunitial Law of Ovinius, it was ordained, that the Cenfors out of every order or rank, should (curiatim) elect the most worthy into the Senate, whence it came to passe, that fuch as were passed by or removed, were noted with ignominie. This note out of Festus hintern to us the antient power of the Roman Kings in making Senators, one of the greatest supporters of the Throne of their

> Empire. 22. As for the diffrace which they put upon Equites; It was the custome for every Eques at the publick Cenfus to appear before the Cenfus with their Vide Plate-Horses in their hands. If they approved of them, they bade them passe by narrantemin and lead away the Horse; if they determined otherwise, they took away Pombeia. the Horse, and commanded him to be sold. The third note of disgrace con- Living lib. 19. cerned the Plebeians, whom they either removed from their own Tribe into Festumin out another leffe honourable, according to Livie, or made them Erarii, and cenfio, registred them in the tables of the Carites, whereby they were deprived of their Centurie, and remained Cirizens onely in this respect, se pro capitibus fuis tributi nomine ara solverent, as writeth Asconius Pedianus upon the Oration of Cicero against Q. Cacilius, called Divinatio, which disputeth who ought to be admitted the Accuser of Verres. Gellins telleth us what was zib, ic, call. meant by the cabula Caritum. The Carites (inhabitants of Care in Tuscany, once called Agylla) we under frand to have been first of all made Municipals, without any right of (uffrage : and it was granted them that they might receive the honour of being free of Rome, without any trouble or burthen, for that they received the Sacra (or idols) of the Romans, and preferved them in the Gallick War; that is, when Rome was taken by the Galls, as Livie hath the flory also in this fourth Book. Hence were the fe called Tabula Caritum, vice versa, whereinthe Cenfors canfed such to be registred at they depriwed of the right of Suffrage. Although these several sorts of punishment respected the several rancks of men, yet sometimes those of higher degree Livie Uh. 4. tafted of all or most of them, so that Senators might not onely be passed by, and Equites deprived of their Horses, but lose their Tribes also, and be reduced to the condition of Erarii. 23. This Office being committed to the prudent management of able The effects of persons, became effectual to the repression of such vice, as fell not under the particular cognisance of penal Laws. Private faults, and domestick miscariages were by them noted, with fuch actions fometimes as now would not simply incur the censure of precise illegality or indecency. Some of their questions upon oath were such as these : (a) Hast thou a mife according to the mind? to which one once making a jefting answer, was made an Ararius. A certain man yawning before the Cenfers, had been punished in that (a) Lege A. fort, but that he swore he did it unwillingly, being troubled with that disease Gellium, 1. 4. which the Romans called Ofcedo. P. Scipio Nafica and M. Pompilius be- cap. ult. ing Confors, and finding a certain Knight very far and compt, whose horse was exceeding lean and ill favoured, they asked him the reason of that difference, to which he answered : Because he looked to himself, but Statius to by horse; for which irreverent answer he was registred amongst the Eraris according to the cultom. Now Station was a servile name, given by the antients to most Slaves, whence Cacilius the samous Writer of Tragedies was called Statius, though it was afterwards as it were turned into a firname. and he called Cacilius Statius. They were wont alfo to take away horses from yery big and corpulent men , as unfit for service , but (b) Gellius ob- (b) Lib, 7, 5, 220 feryeth, that this was no punishment, as some thought, but a taking away of the employment without ignominy. This Confus was managed in the Campus Martius, and it being compleated, the Lustrum was made, with prayers for the publick safety, and a sacrifice of the Sugretaurilia formerly mentioned. Besides these imployments, the Confort (c) let to farm the customes, (c) Liv. lib. and sent (d) our their constitutions throughout the Provinces, called Leges 39. Cenforia. They erected (e) publick buildings, made other publick works, Cicero de Legis. and took care for their repair, as also of the high-wayes, in, and about the (d) Idem ad Citie more early : and in other places afterward ; they also provided for the Attic, Et. 1. 69 expence of publick facrifices. But not onely were there Cenfors at Rome Teti passing. (as the Gracians also used the Census) but the Colonies also had their (e) Liv. lib. 42, Subcenfors, who gave account to the other, what numbers of men, and what Festus in voce wealth they found in the several places, which upon information was registred in the publick Tables. 24. The power of the Cenforship remained untouched (although the power of the Confors was weakned by reftraining their time to a year and an half.

though they were named every fifth year) untill the Tribuneship of P. Clodins, who by a Law which he preferred (4) forbad any Senator to be passed by , or (4) Asconius any of the other Ranks to be noted with ignominy, except lawfully accused, Pedianus in and condemned by fencence of both the Cenfors, He took an advantage (as Orat. Ciceronis it seemeth from (b) Pedianus) at the hatred which had possessed the multi- cont. L. Pifatelement from (b) regionals) at the native winding pointed the intermitted nem tude against the severity of the Office, which procured it to be intermitted (b) laDivinat. for certain years. But afterwards (whether by reason of the corruption that was crept amongst Judges, or for other reasons) Metellus Scipio the Conful procured Clodius his Law to be abrogated, and so the antient Vigour of this he various office returned. Lipfins writeth, that under the Dispersions a ware of the and lay for dead till the time of Decins. But C. Cafar the Dictator, thu he principal part of the Office confifted in forming of manners, he called himfelf Magister Morum , not Cenfor. Then the form of the State being Diod. lib. 54. changed after the victory of Allium, Augustus having the care of manners Pag. 527. committed to him by the Senate, looked to nothing more diligently than the Census, for thrice he performed it, not onely in reference to Roman Citizens, but all Subjects of the Empire, with fuch care and diligence as none ever before him. Under Tiberius and Caligula the Census was not observed. Sueton, in Anbut under Claudius the 74th Lustrum was celebrated. Being intermitted gulto. during the reign of Nero, Velpasian renewed it, and celebrated the 75 Census. Domitian named himself amongst his other titles Perpenual Cenfor, but made Idem in Domino Lustrum, fo that for 160 years the Cenfus was intermitted till Decius tiano. the Emp. created Valerian Cenfor with unlimited power. After this the Trebellius. Cenfor fo p was utterly omitted to the great detriment of the Roman Empire, which being at length broken into Eastern and Western, the Emperous of the former (Greekish Emperours) made use of it, as others also of later Confule Boditimes, and it appeareth that in the intermission thereof, in the dayes of Tra-lib.6, cap.1. Jan, particular Provinces and Towns had their Confors, who made choice of meminit Legis cenforia, vid.

Ppp

SECT. 2. their Senators. Lastly, the Cenfors during the popular Gouernment were of Consular dignity, ever after the second Punick War, though it was otherwise sometimes before. The same persons were never created twice. And in case one of them died in his Office, his Collegue continued not therein. neither was any put into the place of the dead, because in that year wherein Rome was raken by the Galls it had so hapned; whereupon it was counted Livile ominous, and a Law made against it for the time to come. Their dignity was exceeding great, they being therein though not in power above the Consuls, and having all other Ensigns the same with them except Li-

25. The Fathers rejoyced they had got these Officers Created out of their Legelin, 14. own body, and the Tribunes counting that power inconfiderable, which at Val. Max. own body, and the Proposes counting that power incommons egged on by lib. 5. cap 3. first was presented to, gave way unto it. But the Commons egged on by Extend to the continual complaints of the later, proceeded in their grudge against the Libe 64 Patritians, taking it in ill part that marriage was forbidden betwirt the two exemp. t. orders, and breathing after no leffe than equal power in the State. This ani- Floram libra. Sp. Melius his mated Sp. Malius, a rich Knight, by his large bounty towards the poorer cap, ult.

fort in time of a great dearth, to hunt after popularity, and through it to done has the Soverainty aspire to the Soverainty. He was hereof accused by L. Minucius, to whom pro Miller. the care of provisions was committed, and the Senate afrighted with the strangenesse of the matter, by the advice of T. Quintlins the Consul, commanded a Dictator to be named. Quinttsus Cincinnatus now 80 years old was the man, who chose C. Servilius Ahala for his Master of horf-men. The Dictaior furnmoning Malius to appear, when he would not obey, Abala killed him in the Forum, and was justified for so doing by Quintins, who commanded his goods to be fold, and his house razed. It should seem from Live that Abala escaped without punishment : But Cicero and Valerius on the contrary affirm, that he was banished by the incensed multitude. This hapned in the 315th year of the Citie after Varro's account. Valorius and Livy say, that the Area of his house for a memorial of his punishment had the name of . Equi - Melium.

The Tribunes feek to revenge his death by bringing in Tribunes Military again. The fecond Quima Spolia,

blafted.

474

26. The Tribunes inraged about the death of Malius, procured for the year following Tribunes Military with Consular power to be created now fix years after their Institution, hoping that into the number of fix some Plebeian might creep, which thing would give them an opportunity to revenge the death of Melins: But three onely were created, and their expectation unanswered thereby. This year Fidena, a Roman Colony, gave up it self to Tolumnins King of the Viiences, and by his Instigation murdered the Ambalfadors fent thither. For this war Mamercus Emilius was named Dietator, who overcame the Enemies in battel, wherein Cornelius Cossus a Tribune in the Army, flew, and spoiled Tolumnius, thereby obtaining Opima Spolia. Varro thought they were called Opima ab opibus for their riches; but Plu- In TROTHELO W. tarch thinketh rather ab opere, because the consecration of them was granted Marcelle. to a Captain, who with his own hand flew the General of the Enemy. They were consecrated to Jupiter Fereirius, so called, because the Trophy was carried in a Fereirum, or certain little carriage, as some thought, at that time there being many Greek words in use with the Latines, or a Feriendo, from Impiter his smiting with Thunder-bolts, or else from the blows given in battel. This honour of carrying in Triumph the Opima Spolia hath onely thrice hapned to Roman Captains faith Plutarch untill our time. First to Remulus, who flew Acron King of Canina; fecondly to Cornelius Coffus, who killed Tolumnius, (the Erruscan in one place he calleth him, and the Tyrrhenian in another) and thirdly to M. Marcellus, who fo killed, and spoiled Britomarius (in one place, but Virdumarus in another) King of the Galls. A controversie there was of old, whether any but a General from a General could take Opima Spolia, which maketh Livy Apologize for what he writerh in honour of Collus; but Varro wrote, as (*) Festus witnesseth, that a Manipular Soldier might rightly be faid to take them, fo it were from a General of ma Solis. the Enemy.

27. Two years after this, Fidena was taken by another Dittator, A. Ser. SECT. 2. vilius, through the working of a Mine. But when the Confuls had kept the power four years, they were forced again to give way to the Tribunes Milia tary, for the Creation whereof, though the Tribuni Plebis prevailed, wet the Chief of the Commons milling all this while of being joyned with the Non bility in the honour, were much offended. At the end of two years, the Se-

Confuls 6gain.

After four

courles of

again,

Confuls Tri-

buses Military

nate took occasion from the War wherewith the Equi and Volfei threatned Rome, to bring in Confuls, which also gave way to a Distauor, A. Posthumins Tubero against their wills through the power of the Tribunes. He finithing the War successfully, laid down his Office. And in this year wherein T. Quintins Gincinnains the fon of Lucius, and Cn. Julius Mento were Confuls . Livrby a groffe mistake would have the Carthaginians to have passed over into Sicily the first time, by an occasion of the disagreement of the Islanders amongst themselves. After five years the Commons prevailed to have Tibuns Mili-Tribunes Military created the fifth time, four in number, who shewed how unprofitable the equal command of many in an Army is, and gave occasion to

A paffage

Monarchy.

the making of a new Dittator. For, Fidena having now again revolted, and joyned with the Veientes, three of those Tribunes were sent against it and them, and the fourth left to Govern the Cirie. When they came to ingage with the Enemy, One cried fight, but another faid Stay, and each one bethewing the ing of a feveral mind, matters were at length brought to that passe, that the excellency of Roman Army fled. The Citie was flruck with great amazement at the report, and was in an uproar, which caused Mamereus Emilius the third time to be named Diffasor, shough the Cenfors had removed him from his Tribe, for that in his fecond Office (to which he was called, because of the thirs made by the Herrussans upon the taking of Fidena) he confined their Office to the term of one year and an half, Emilius being named Dillator, appointed for his Master of horf-men A. Cornelius Cossus, who obtained the Opima Spolia of Tolumnius King of the Veientes. 28. By the prudence & valour of these two Fidena was retaken and sacked after the Herrifoans were overthrown; and the Diffator returning to Rome in Triumph, laid down his Office when he hid held it 17 dayes. For three years the Tribunes Military continued, at the end whereof the Senate took occasion at the War, which threatned from the Volsei, and at their absence, to bring in the Confuls again, notwithstanding the Tribunes of the Commons. opposed it. But C. Semproning one of the Confuls, managing this War very Tribunes Mili- carelesly, the Tribunes thence took advantage, and the Tribunes Military again refumed the Chief power. This was for one year, at the end whereof the Senate again procured Confuls to be made. When this year was expired, there was so great contention about two Quastors, which the Com-

Confuls.

Confuls.

mons would have created out of their body, that the State fell into an interregnum. L. Papirius Mugillanus being Interrex for a Composura procured the Tribunes Military to be again admitted, and four Quaffers for Tribunes Milithe following, year to be created, either out of Pairitians or Plebeians, as the People should think fit in their Comitia; but this satisfied not the Tribanes, nor the better fort of Plebeians, not one of this order being preferred (though fome flood) either as Tribune Military or Quaffor. In the second year after this, the Slaves conspired to set fire on the Citie, and seize upon the Capicol; but the plot was timely discovered. The Tribunes Military held the Government for seven years, and then another Interregnum because of the Contention following, Fabius Vibulanus the Inter ex brought in Confuls

Disturbances made by the the Grand Popular Ty-

Confuls.

29. The Tribuni Plebis according to their custom made a bad construction hereof, and having now and then mentioned the divition of publick grounds, preffed it earnestly with an extent now to all that at any time had been gotten by War. The Patritians no leffe vigoroufly opposed it, and the Tribunes hindred the Levies of Soldiers, so that with much ado, and upon extream necessity onely could the Confuls procure any to oppose the Equi and Volfci, who now made incursions. In the fifth year the Com-Ppp 2

27. Two

not been in use.

SECT.2.

litary.

Commons being croffed in their intentions by the Senate, of refuming the Tribunes Military, created three of the Quaffors of their own rank, and the chief amongst them designing to be created Tribane Military for the next year, stickled hard for that kind of government. The Senate at length was Tribunes Miconstrained to yield; else no opposition could be made against the former Enemies, who now again made inrodes into the Roman Territories, and by confederacies exceedingly strengthned themselves. For this cause also, though much against the mind of the Tribums, a Dillacor was named, who overthrowing the Enemy in one battel, washed his Country and returned. In the third year after this, the two orders were formething reconciled, by the plunder of a Town taken from the Volfei, and especially by a Decree of the Senate for the publick pay of the Armies (with braffe money) before which time every one bore his own charges in the War. But such was the contentious disposition of the Tribunes; those grand incendiaries, that they drew this into odium, as grievous to fuch who had formerly maintained themseves in the Wars, and now were to pay others. They effected, that for a time the pay was denied, and after three years they procured one Plebeian (P. Licinia

(alvu) to be chosen amongst the Tribanes Military, wherein they mightl-The first Plely applieded themselves, and readily permitted the pay of the Army to be beian 2-Tribunes Mill- gathered. Licinius caried himfelf fowell in the Office, that for the year following all the Tribunes Military fave one, were Plebeians. tary. 30. For these several years the War abroad was carried on with the Herras-

cans, with various successe, and Vell the principal of their Cities was befieged, no lesse in compasse than Athens, and exceeding wealthy, being within twenty miles of Rame. It's Inhabitants, called Vaiences, had in behalf of the Fidenates, waged War with Remains, afterwards being conqueted, had seventimes rebelled, and ever perfidious in time of Peace, alwaies wasted the Roman Tetritories. They compelled the Fidenmes also to rebel, perswaded them to kill the Ambassadors, and the Romans thirher sent to inhabit, for, they vied with the Romans themselves for power and riches. They had moreover injured the Roman Ambaffadors, and not once produced Herruria to rife against the State; wherefore the People offended with fo many injuries, refolved utterly to destroy Veit. Whereas the Soldiers untill this time, were wont in Summer onely to be abroad in War, and winter at home in the City, now were they confirmed both Winter and Summer to continue the Siege. The seventh year thereof drawing towards an end, the Tribunes Military were blamed of remissies to that for the following year new ones were created in their rooms. Amongst them was Farins Ca. millus, who having got much credit in the battel fought with the Agus and Firm Caril Volfei under Post bumins Tuberius the Dictator, was honouted other wayes, as by being created Cenfor; in which Office he caused the Bachellors to mary the Widdows of fuch as had lost their lives for their Country, and first of all others obliged Orphans to pay Tribute, for that the depending Wars, especially the Siege of Voil, were very chargable to the State. Being now Tribune Military the second time, he did nothing against Ven, it having fallen to his lot to represse the Falerienses and Capendies, veho disturbed the Romans Platachin in their enterprize. At length in the tenth year of the Siege, they created

Made Dicta- him Dictator, as the most fit person they had to finish it. 31. Camillus appointed Cornelius Scipio to be his Master of Horse-men, and first overthrowing in a great battel the Falifei and Capennes, went against Veil. Finding it full of difficulty to take a place of such frength by form, he wrought a mine up into it, through which his Soldiers iffuing, be easily surprized it. Being elevated by so great an atchievement, whereby he Surprizeth had thus subdued the corrival of Rome, in the tenth year of the Siege, he tri-Veii. umphed in a Chariot drawn by four white Horfes, which his Country-men thinking proper onely to the King and Father of their gods, were much offended at it : and indeed no man neither before nor after him (faith Platarch) affumed to himself fo much honour. Being offended with this cariage, they found themselves as much concerned in another matter. The Tribunes of the Commons proposed a Law for dividing afunder the Senare and

People, whereof the one should stay at Rome, and the other remove to Veis; this parting as they thought, being a ready means for the enrichment of both. by the possession of two such considerable Cities. The Plebeians now many and rich vehemently prefled it, and the Patritians judging it would prove the overthrow of the State, as earnestly opposed the Law, betaking themselves to Camillas, who put it off by diverting the multitude into other courses. Having contracted an alienation of mind from them upon these accounts, ano-Incurrecth the displeather thing cast him into an absolute harred, and that if not upon a just, yet a fure of the plausible pretence. He had made a vow, that if he took Veir, he would demultitude. dicate the tenth part of the plunder to Apollo, but when the City was taken. for hindring the separation either because he was unwilling to displease the Soldiery, or forgot it, the thing of Patritians was omitted. After he had laid down the Office of Dictator, he moved the and Plebei-People in it, and the Priests reported that the facrifices portended the anger ans, and oof their gods, which must be appeased by gifts; so that the Soldiers who had therwife. already spent what they had got upon their necessary uses, were forced upon oath to restore the tenth part, wherewith a present was made to Apollo, Because there was litle Gold in the City, the women contributed their ornaments, in way of requital whereof the Senate decreed, that at their burial they should also be commended by funeral Orations, which before this had

Tribune Military with five others. He befieging the Falerii, who inhabited a strongly fortified City, the School-master thereof drew out his boyes into his Camp, and offered to give them up into his hands, which treachery he so far derested, as to cause the Pædagogue cobe stripped, and put rods into the hands of his boyes, wherewith they drove him back into the Town. Herewith the Falerii were so affected as they yielded, and the Senate referring them for conditions to Camillus, he onely fined them a fum of mony, and received them with all the Palifei into friendship. But the Soldiers who hoped to have inriched themselves with the plunder of this place, inveighed grievously against him, and now the Tribunes pressing again the Law for separation, he used such freedom in opposing it, that they out of revenge accused him of having piffred the plunder in the Heirnscan War, whereof forme brazen dores had been, as they faid, feen in his house, The multitude now upon feveral accounts exastperated against him, resolved to shew their

so that not having any way to evade their displeasure, he went into unjustly and meerly by the lust and malice of the multitude banished, they might fodainly repent it, and that it might appear to all men, how much the Romant Rood in need of and defired his prefence. Being gone, he was fined 15000 Era, which sum in Silver made up 1500 Denarii. For As or brasie was then used for money, and Denarius thence had the name, for that it contained ten Affes thereof. But within a while it fell out, that Camillus

He gould life exile, lifting up his hands towards the Capitol, and praying, that if he was

22. The Tribunes again moving for a separation, the War with the Falisti ropportunely fell out to divere the multirude, for which Camillus was chosen was both miffed any defired, according to his wish. 23. Many thousands of the Galls called Celta, finding their own Country too narrow for them, with their wives and children left it, to feek out new fests. Some of them paffing over the Sea, pierced as far as the Riphean mountains, and placed themselves in the utmost limits of Europe, others took up their habitation betwixt the Pyrinaans and the Alps , near the Senones and Colleris. These a long time after having tasted of some Italian wine, were furiously transported with a defire of inhabiting so rare a Soil, as brought forth such fruit, and passing over the Alps, got into their power all that Country once belonging to the Erraftans, and which reached from the Alpr to both the Seas: for, that the Errufcans once inhabited all this Country, Platareh proveth thence, that the Northern Sea was named Adviatick . from Adria, one of their Towns, and the Southern, Tyrrbenian, from the Tyrrbeni the same with Herrisci. At this time the posterity of those Galli

SECT. 2. Senones under the conduct of their King Brennus, besieged Clusium 2 City of Heiruria, whose inhibitants sent to Rome, desiring of that State to in-The Galls be- terpose, by sending Ambassadors and Letters to their unjust oppressors. The fiege Clusium. Senate performing this neighbourly part, the Galls required part of the Territories of the Clusini, who were, as they faid, unable to manage them all, and Brennss not condescending to any other conditions, the Ambassadors (all three of the Fabian family) in great anger went into Clusium, and caused the Inhabitants to make a fally out against the besiegers. It hapned, that in the fight Fabius Ambustus one of the three killing a Gall, whilst he disarmed him, was discovered: whereupon Brenniu conceiving just indignation, broke up his Siege, and marched towards Rome.

34. Yet because he would not seem to proceed unjusty, he fent thither, requiring that the Ambassadors might be given up to him, as having broke the Law of Nations. But favour fo far prevailed above equity, that the matter being referred from the Senate to the People, no fatisfaction could be had from either: nay the Ambassadors on the contrary, were with three others Romans at Alia, created Tribines Military, for carying on the Warre. Brennus then continuing his march, and breathing revenge, was met by the Tribunes at the River Alia, eleven miles from the City, who scarce striking one stroak, quickly berook them to their heels, and their Army after them. The Galls perfued them, being amazed at the flight and cowardize of those who had already obtained for their valour a great name in the World; but were aftonished when they found the gates of Rome open, and none upon the walls to make refistance; for it had been resolved to quit the City and secure the Castel. The greater part of the People departed into the adjoyning Country; the rest possessed themselves of the Capitol, all but certain old men of Senatorian degree, who in their robes placed themselves in the Forum, resolving to take such quarter, as the disrosition of the Enemy would afford them. Come to Rome Brenniu at first fearing some stratagem, after he perceived all to be clear, the Capitol.

Defeat the

which is for entred the City. His Soldiers were amazed, to see the grave Senators sittaken all but ting without fear in the Forum, and hurt them not, till one handling the long beard of M. Papirim, the old man flruck him with his staff upon the shead, whereupon the Gall flew him, and then all the rest were killed, with all of both Sexes and all ages that were found about the City, which was also now burnt to the ground, and the Capitol closely befieged. 35. While the Galls lay before the Capitol pribey carelest demeaned A. M. 3616.

themselves, as secure of any Enemy, and were scattered into the Country of 97,48,3 adjoyning. Camillus at this time living in exile at Ardea, procured the In- V. c. 364. habitants of that City to iffue our upon them; and killed many; which the Artax, Mam. Romans, who lay at Veii, understanding, chose him for their General, desiring 15. him to forget injuries, and fuccour his diffressed Country. He objected his condition of banishment, and refused to act, except by commission from those in the Capitol, whom he considered to be the body of the Roman

State yet furviving. There was one Pontine Comining, who undertook to procure him leave from their friends in the Capitol, whither by a strange advencamilles made ture he got, paffing by the Enemy, and swimming the River till he came to the Rock, which then he made a shift to climbe, and having procured the Senare to pronounce Canillus Distator, returned in the same manner. By this time as well the beliegers as belieged were well wearied, both parties for want of provisions, and the Galls by reason of a Plague which raged amongst them; fo as (having once attempted to futprize the Castel, by climbing up the Rock, they were discovered by the crying of the Geese, consecrated to June, and repelled by the valour of one Manlin especially) they agreed for fifty pounds of Gold to rife and depart. Yet so covetous were they, that they took out the Gold as it was weighing, and added to the weight, which being complained of, Brennus cast in his Sword also, crying Va villu, which afterwards became a proverb. But in the mean time came Camillus, and nulling this compact, as made without his confent, who before was Dictator, and therefore alone had power of making Peace, overthrew them in fight, and did such execution upon them in pursure, as what remained of them, was SECT.24 overpowered and cut off by the Country. Thus Rome, which was unexpectedly taken by the Galls about the Ides of the moneth Quantilis, was more unexpectedly recovered about the Ides of February, fo that as Plutarch writeth, the Barbareaus held it seven moneths, in the 265 year of the City, and the fixteenth of Artaxerxes Mnemon 36. The Tribunes now renewed their importunity about removing unto West, which caused the Senate to procure Camillus his holding of the Office from depart- of Dictator, though contrary to the custome, for the whole year. He with gentle language appealed the multitude, shewing them, how unworthy a thing it was to forfake the feat of their Ancestors, and of their Country rites (which were appropriate to the same place) for to inhabit a conquered and enflaved City. Then was Rome rebuilt in great hafte, whereby afterwards it became rather an heap of houses than a well ordered Town, and that the watercourses formerly laid in the streets, now ran for the most part under privare houses. Camillas having laid down his Office was forced the year fol-Lowing to reassume it, because of the Volsci, who now took Armes, as also the Agriand Eurofeans, all which he overthrew, and forced the Volfei to Livius lib. 6. yield themselves after the War had continued with them for 70 years. In the third year after this he overcame them again, and with them the Hernioi and Latines, whereof the later had ever from the battel at the Rhegillan Lake been trusty and faithful until now : and from the Errascans he recocovered two Towns which they had taken from the Allies of Rome. This he did being Tribane Military, though envied by M. Manlius, who having done special service in the Capitol, by repelling the Galls, obtained the Sirname of Capitalinus. Being naturally haughty and ambitious, he was herewith puffed up, fo as to extenuate the deferts of Camillus, and by in-by the defection of the Hernici and Latines, caused the Senare to resolve that a Dictator should be created. 37. This was A. Cornelius Cossus, as Livie writeth, though Plutarch nameth Quintins Capitalinus, whom the other reporteth to have been Mather of the Horse-men to Coffus. He triumphing over the Enemies from Plutarch in Without, called also by the help of the Tribunes Manlius to account, and Camillo. thur him in prison. The multirude much afflicted hereat, took mourning garments, and made fuch disturbance, that after some time he was set at liberry. But holding private meetings in the night, and growing more bold in his design, the Senate committed it to the care of the Tribunes Military, whereof Camillus was one, (as afterward in cases of great exigency to the Confuls) to take care that the Commonwealth (hould receive no dammage. Being then brought to his trial again in that place, whence a view of the Capitol might be had, he would ever point to it, and put the People in mind of what he had done there for them; whereupon Camillus caused his Indges to gratiating himself with the common fort, through paying their debts, and railing against the great ones, plainly to aim at the Soveraignty. This, together with the War depending with the Volsei, which was also aggravated remove without the gate, into the grove called Lucus Petelinus, where being Manlius thrown from no fight of the Capitol, he was condemned. He was thrown headlong from the Tarpeian the Tarpeian Rock, the place both of his honour and infamie : and it was decreed, that none of the Maulii should afterward be called Marcus, 28. After these things the Latines rebelling, and the Volsei, were severally overthrown withour, and great tumults hapned within, by reason of the debts of the Commons, now again exceedingly increased. Their Tribunes incenfed them against the Patritians, and the contest was tharpened by Fabius Ambustus one of this order, who having maried one daughter to a Patritian and another to a Commoner, this took fuch distaste at her husbands condition, being void of honour, that Fabius told her he would so order the matter, that the same dignity should be communicated to her house, as was to that of her Sifter. From this time he confulted with Licinius Stolo her husband, and L. Seltius, about the preferring of a Law, for making one Conful out of vigorously about it, that after long and great contention it came to that passe, wards being found himfelf to have above, was punished by virtue of his own constitution. Whilest the Contention was on foot about the Consulship, news came that the Galls, many thousands in number, were marching from the Adrianick-Sea towards Rome, which composed the difference for the attendants repelling the man, such a noise and tumult followed as never before had been known, the multitude crying out, pull him down. He laid not down his Office, but departing to the Senare-house, had a serious debate with the Fathers about the matter, and after a great and various Contention, that party prevailed which granted to the Commons that one of the after he had recovered Rome from their Countrey-men.

Overthroweth them & rescueth Rome.

ing to Veii.

Rock.

SECT.2. the Commons. These two being made Tribunes of the People, laboured so that for five years they suffered no Supreme Magistrates to be created. Nine years this dispute continued, those two continuing Tribunes still, and the matter had come to another separation or worse, but that Camillus re-Sedition and conciled the parties. He was made Dictator the fourth, faith Plutarch, for confusion 2this purpole, but finding the multitude too flubborn, which threatned to Fine bout the Conhim except he complied, he again laid down his Office. The Senate then caufed another Diffuor to be named, under whom Licinius Stolo preferred a Law, which forbad any man to possesse above 500 Akers of ground, and after-

Wonderfull

étator again

present, and made them cast their eyes upon Camillus as Diffator the fifth time. He being near 80 years of age refused not the employment in this fifth time Di- time of fo great danger, and perceiving the Galls to fight with swords, ftriking at the heads and shoulders of their Enemies without any art or dexterity, he furnished his men with light iron Helmets, and bound their Targets overthroweth the River A about with braffe, teaching them how to fence, and receive the ftroaks. By this device he rendred the swords of the Galls so unserviceable, that giving them battel at the River Aniene, he eafily overthrew them, in the 23th year

39. After this fight the Romans despised the Galls whom before they exceedingly feared, infomuch that wheras by a Law immunity from War was granted to Priefts, an exception and Proviso was added as to that with the Galls. Camillus in his retreat had Velitra given up into his hands; but having now finished all his warlike exploits, a very considerable one remained to be performed by him at home. For at his return he was received with fierce and impatient Contells betwixt the Senate and Commons about the Consulship, and retaining his power, that thereby he might serve the interest of the Nobility, an Officer was sent from the Tribunes to pull him down from his feat in the Forum, and bring him before them. His

Unheard of Seditions.

Procure to the Confuls might be created out of their body. For this they defired, and ob-Commons the rained of the Commons, to have a Prator created yearly out of the Patritian ces of Pretor and Adilis Curulis to the Patritians.

order for administration of Justice in the Citie. By this agreement a good understanding eing revived betwixt the parties, for as long a time as the infirmity of the Government could bear, a Temple was dedicated to Concord, which Camilles had vowed, moreover a fourthday was added to the Latine Feria, and the greater fort of Games were folemnized, which when the Ædiles of the Commons refused to manage, the young Patritians offered themfelves, and the Senate procured also of the People that two Patritians every year might be mide Adiles, who from the Chair called Sella Curnlis, had the name of Ædiles Curules. What their Office was hath been shewn before. As for this Chair, Gellins writeth, that antiently fuch Senators as had Lib.3. capt 8. born a Curule Office, were for honour's fake wont to be drawn to the house in a Chariot, wherein was a Chair in which they sate, and which thence (from the Chariot or Currus) was called Curulis. But others think that both the Orthography of the word, and the difmension of the thing crossed this What the Cn-derivation, and that it was called Curulis from Cures, a Town of the Sabines. rule Chair was. The form of it upon old Coins represents that of Spanish Chairs, used by Princes as Chairs of State : It had also crooked feet, as Plusarch in the life of Marius describeth it; several ascents there were to it: it was covered with Ivory, as several Authors shew, and carved or ingraven, according to Ovid. 40. But

Book IL

What the Pratorfhip.

CHAP. IV.

40. But as for the Prator, there were two causes of the Creation of this SECT. 3. Officer: Amilation and Use. The former was wrought in the Patricians by the Commons, who now had wrested into their own hands the Consulthin. The later was brought about by reason that the Consuls were for the most part imployed abroad in Wars, and therefore there was a necessity of a Magistrate, whose peculiar work it should be to administer Justice in the Citie, The Pra.or was so called a pracund, as write both (a) Varro and (b) Cice o, (1) Pretor diand agreeably with this Etymology it was once the name of (c) Confuls also, the qui preserve as we showed before, and of all, or most other Magistrates, Civil or Military.

A quo Lucitus,

It is provable, that this name, as the other of D. Hator, Addis, and Duumvir, Ergo Pretorum might come out of Herruria, there being fuch Officers there of old, as Spar-ell prejec. tianus feemeth to hint, and otherwise may be gathered. There being but one De Ling, Lat. tianus feemeth to hint, and otherwise may be gaussied. There being out one lib4. P.22. created at his time, v.z. in the 388 year of the Ciric, afterward about the 500 (b) Vide c.p. year another was added, who administred Justice unto strangers, so that for buins Sett 1. distinction the one was called Praior Urbanus, and the other Peregrinus, the Parage, I. former being in Dignity above the other, and his Constitutions called Tus (c) Veteres Honorarium, as we shewed before out of Pomponius. This same Author chim omnom Honorarium, as we thewed before out or romponius. Inis tame Author Majifratum (having thewn, that after the bringing in of this Prator Peregrimm; 5 the Dec. on parent excemviri for judging of Causes, the Triumviri for coyning of Brasse, Silver, excitus Pratoand Gold, the Triumviri Capitales for keeping of Prisons, and the Quinque- remappellaveviri for both fides of Tiber for executing what belonged to Magistrates in the runt links & evenings (at which time they were not to be abroad) were created by de- Pretorium tagrees) writeth further that Sardinia being made a Roman Province, after that dicitus, or in Sicily, then Spain, and after Norbonensis; so many Prators were mide as cally is borta there were Provinces, who partly governed at home, and partly abroad, pretoria, & Lipfins more particularly affirmeth, that, in the 520 year of the Citie, Sardi- hodie quoque nia and Sicily being both made Provinces, there were two added, who as the Prafettus praformer two affilted the Confuls in administring of Justice, so these in the go- Asconinus Pevernment of the Provinces. When Spain (Hispania in the plural number) dianus in Verwas subdued, in the year 557, two more were added. So there were in all rem de Pretura fix Prators, whereof two onely remained in the Citie, and the other, as foon wibis. as declared, departed into the Provinces, as they fell to them by lor; this order continued till the examinations called Quastiones Perpetua were appointed, at which time the Senate refolved that all the Prators for the year of their Office should continue in the Citie, and judge some controversies, either pu-

41. Pomponius proceedeth, faying, that Cornelius Sulla appointed other publick Examinations or Inquisitions: As, for example, De faife, De Paricidio, and de Sicario, for which he added four Prarors more; but Lipfins faith he is mistaken in the number, proving out of Cicero that he made bur two. C. Julius Cafar appointed other two, as also two Ædiles called Cereales, and afterward 16 Prators, as appeareth from Dio, who also relateth the Triumviri with greater liberty to have made 64. Augustus filled up the number to 16. faith Pomponius, though first Lipsius will have him to have confined the number to 12. Claudius added two, who where to judge onely concerning Fidei Commissa, as the Law term is. Time took one from the number: but Norva restored and appointed him to hear and determine Causes betwixt the Exchequer and private persons. Another was appointed by M. Antonius Philosophus, called Prator Tutelaris. So, in all there were

18. till, as the Empire decreased, they decreased also in number, and at length were reduced to that of three by a Law of Valentinian and Marcian. As for the Office of Prators, the Prator Urbanus, who was also called Prafettus Urbi (though the Prafettus was afterward onely chosen for the Latine Feria) in the absence of the Consuls executed their Office in the Senate and Comitia. But three things especially belonged to them: Games, Sacrifices, and Tudicature. The former onely continued to them in a manner when the Empire decayed. Their Judicature was either in publick or private matters. Private causes concerning meum and tuum, two onely handled, viz. the Urbamus and Peregrinus: Publick or Criminal matters were managed by all the

482

SECT.2. reft, who yet had their feveral and diffinet Crimes, one or two, which they judged; and yet sometimes in their Provinces they managed Civil matters also. They had the same Ornaments and Ensigns of power as the Consuls; onely but fix Lictors apiece, whereas the other had twelve. In respect of their power and honour, as also because they were created by the same Auspicia,

Livy calleth them the Collegues of Confuls. 42. The first Conful out of the body of the Commons was L. Sextins, by Liv. Lib.1. whose Law the privilege was obtained; the first Prator Sp. Furius, the son of Camillus , and the first Adiles Curules were Cn. Quintins Capitolinus, and P. Cornelius Scipio. To Sextius was given as Collegue from amongst the Patritians L. Emylius Mamercus, and so the Consuls again returned after 23 years, these being the 88 pair as they are found in Livy, and the Tribunes

the Roman

The many al- Military were for ever laid afide after 48 courses of that Office, and fifteen terations in changes from the Consulship to it, and from it to the Consulship. Besides these changes of Government in Rome, there were the two Grand ones from Kings to Confuls, and from Confuls to the December; and to this time from the first of these alterations had intervened 20 Dictatorships, besides the feveral Interregnams. The first Interregnum was extraordinary, being betwixt the reigns of Romulus and Numa, when the Senate governed for the space of a year: the other were ordinary, and continued but for five dayes under particular men, at the end whereof another was Elected, and called Interrex, having for that time the power of Confuls. All these charges of Government, except the Interregnums betwixt the reigns of the Kings (whereof none but one is confiderable) hapned to the Commonwealth of Rome within the space of 124 years, scarce so many having compleatly pasfed from the banishment of Tarquinius, to this alteration in the Consulship. It is not in vain to have made these observation, that the Reader may plainly fee the ridiculous ficklenesse, weaknesse, and danger of the Roman Government after that it came to be Antimonarchical.

43. In the beginning of the year, news came of the Galls their meering together, who had before been dispersed through Apulia, and of the intended revolt of the Hernici; but all preparations were deserted by the Senate, because it troubled them that any thing should be done by a Plebeian Conful, and there was a great filence with a general intermission of businesse as in some great Vacation. Onely the Tribunes were not silent, because that for one Plebeian Consul the Nobility had got three Patritian Magistrates, who sate as Consuls in their Curule Chairs, and their Pratexta: especially were they concerned about the Presor, who administred Justice, was a Collegue of the Confuls, and created by the same Auspicia. Modesty therefore suffered not the Fathers to create both the Adiles Curules out of their own body: so that it was agreed first that every other, year they should be chosen out of the Commons; but afterwards they were Elected promiscuously. The year following fell a grievous plague upon the Citie, which took away, befides great multitudes of the common fort, One Cenfor, one Ædilis Curulis, and three Tribunes: And who was more than all, Camillus himself now died, having born the Office of Consul more than once, been five times Dictator, having Triumph four, and done such things as he deservedly was written the second founder of Rome. The plague raging both in this and the following year, gave place to no means that were used, fo that all mens minds being superstitiously bent, the Stage-playes were brought up to appeale their impure gods. The Actors were fent for out of Herruria, in the language of which Countrey Hifter fignifying a Player, thence was derived the Roman word Histrio: these playes were very barbarous and antick at the first. Two years after this the ground cleaving afunder in the Forum, M. Curtim is faid to have rode into the hole, and fo being swallowed up, purchased conquest for his Countrey, according to the Declaration of their gods. After this there was action abroad with the Hernici and the Galls. One of these provoking any one Roman to a single Combat, T. Manlius accepted of the challenge, and killing his Enemy rook a Torques or chain from his neck, whence he and his potterity obtained SECT. 2. the Sirname of Torquaeus. In this fight the Galls had the worlt, fo also three years after, and eight years after that, when M. Valerius a young man, and Tribune of the Soldiers, fighting with another Gail, as Manlins did, had the same successe. As he was fighting a Crow came, and sitting upon his head, with beak and wings affifted him in his combat, whence he had the Corpians.

Camillus with dieth of the plague.

A1. Curting.

Torquatus.

Sirname of Corvinus. At this time also were several Victories obtained against the Latines and Herruscans, 44. But, (that we may joyn domestick affairs with those of the Camp) after the Commons had enjoyed the Confulship nine years, the Patritians took it from a Plebeian Dictator them again, out of disdain that the year before C. Martius Rutilius a Plebeian had been Dictator. Hereat the multitude was so inraged, that at the end of three years more, the Senate was forced to restore the Office, and causeth great because Usury was again grown exceeding burthensom to the poorer fort, they appointed five men to order the payment of debts out of the Treatury. For the following year also one of the Censors was chosen out of the Plebeians. Hitherto were the Wars of the Romans as it were at their gates : now they were removed further off, and henceforth continued longer: For in the 412 year from the founding of the City, and the 46 from it's restauration, began the War with the Samnites , a People of Italy, * descended from the Sabines, from whom also they had their name, or from Saunia or Sannia, which in the Greek tongue fignific Spears; or from the hill Samnium, where, with the sam- as they came from the Sabines, they feated themselves, according to Festus. They had the Sabines, Peligni, and Agui on the West, the Picentini and Apuli on the East, on the South the Campanians and Sidicini, and on the North the Marucini, Dauni, and Apuli, as is observable out of History, faith * Joh. Stadius. It was the custome of the Romans by helping others to * In Florio ! 1. espouse quarrels. The Sammes having unjustly molested the Sidicini with c. 16. War, they betook themselves to the Campanians for succour. These being luxurious and effeminate, were eafily worsted, and sent to Rome for aid, their Ambassadors imploring it with tears, and giving up themselves and Country into the hands of the Senate and People. The Senate was at first unwilling to use any force, for that the Sammites were their friends in confederacy; but upon the importunate cries and prayers of the Ambassadors, and the scornful denial of the Samnites to abstain from the Territories of Capua and Campania, their request was granted, and the Confuls fent forth, the one to Capua, and the other into Samnium, where the Samnius vvere overthrown in both places, and many thousands of them slain: For, in Campamia, Valerius after a bloody battel became Master of their Camp. In Samnium Cornelius having unvvarily led his Army, thither where they lay in wait for him, P. Deoins a Tribune in the Army, possessed himself of an hill above the Enemy, vvho much vvondring thereat, applied themselves thither, and so gave liberty to the Consul to dravy forth his men into a more convenient place. Then brake he through, though befieged, vyhereat the Enemy vvas fo much aftonished, that the Conful falling on obtained fo great a Victory, that 30000 of the Samnites vvere flain.

The War

45. This defeat, together with inroades made upon them the next year, drew them to make a peace, the Sidicini being left to their mercy. They defired that the Latines and Campanians might be commanded not to affift the Sidicini; but because the Senate would not deny that these Nations were under their command, and were also asraid to provoke them, so ambiguous an answer was made, as the Samnites being left but dubious, the Latines and the other thought themselves so far disobliged as to rebel. T. Manlius Torquatus now Conful the third time, with Decius Mus his Collegue, was fent to chastize the Latines. Upon dreams which they both had that one General on the one part, and the Army on the other, belonged to the Dii Manes and Tellus mater, they agreed, that in what part the Roman Army should be distresfed, he under whose command it was should devote himself, and that strict discipline should be observed, fo that all were forbidden to fight without or-

Qqq 2

flitution of the State

All Latium

Subducd.

changed.

The second

Book II.

CHAP. IV.

the Persian Empire.

SECT. 2. ders. The Army being forely put to it in Decim his wing, he devoted himtelf, and rulhing into the midlt of his Enemies, after great flaughter made. lost his life. L. Manlies the other Consul's Son, passing with his Troop, bedevoteth him- fore the battel, near the Camp of the Enemy, was challenged by Geminius Ol. 110, ac.

Metus Captain of the Tufculans, whom when he had flain and ftripped, his V. c. 416. Father for a reward caused him to be put to death; whence cruel Commands Ochi 23. Father for a reward canded milito be put to the manner of the Comwere wont to be called Manliana Dieta. Of the manner of the Com*Lib. 9.491.1.

The Latines being 0. bit * Autus Gellius, or Agellius is to be consulted. The Latines being overthrown were wholly subdued, and begged Peace; which being given to them, though not with the same conditions to all, Manlim returned, and was met by antient men onely, the young ones refusing to do him that honour, who ever after both hated and curfed him in reference to his fon. 46. After his return, the Antiates and Ardenes made incursions into the Roman Territories. Being by ficknesse rendred unfit for War, he named L. Papyrius Crassus for Dictator, who appointed L. Papyrius Cursor his

Matter of Horfe-men; but nothing memorable was done. The Confuls for the following year, T. Amilius Mamercus and Q. Publius Philo, overthrew The Latines the Latines, who had rebelled because of the grounds taken from them. Puboverthrown.

lins, by whose condust and anspicium the Vistory was obtained, receiving into amity fuch Cities as had been worsted, Emilius led the Army against Pedus, which received supplies from several places. Though he had the better in all skirmishes, yet the Town holding out, and he hearing that his Colleague was returned home to his deceed Triumph, he also left the Siege, and departed to demand that honour. The Senate was offended, and denied to permit him the honour, except Pedus was either taken, or furrendred, which caused him out of revenge all the year following to joyn with the Tribunes against the Fathers, his Collegue not opposing it, because a Plebeian. The Senate having a defire to be rid of them, commanded a Dictator to be named, but it belonging to Amilius to name him, he whose were the Fasces for this moneth, named his Collegue, who appointed Junius Brutus his Mafter of Horse-men. And his Dictatorship was very grievous to the Nobility, being full of invectives against them, and the procurer of three Laws, whereof the The very cone first alrered the very constitution of the State. This was, that the Plebiscita should bind all the Quirites, or the whole People, comprising all rankes, and degrees. The second, that such Laws as passed in the Centuriata Comitia. should be proposed by the Fathers before the Suffrage. The third, that one of the Cenfors at least should be a Plebeian, whereas now it was come to that paffe, that both might be fuch. Thus did the Government of Romo devolve > broken by the force of the former Law (which proved as a Lex talients to them, and as a punishment for their rebellion against their Kings) in the 416 year of the City, after Varro's account, which fel in with the first of Arfes King of Perfia, and the 23 of Philip King of Macedonia. 47. In the following year, wherein L. Furius Camillus and C. Manius > fall to a Democratical temper, the interest of the Pairitians being now quite were Confuls, Pedus was taken by florm, and the Confuls in purfute of the Victory subdued all Latium, for which they triumphed, and had Statues on horseback set up in the Forum; an honour but rare in those dayes. The several People of Latium, had feveral conditions of Peace fet them. To Antium was fent a new Colony, and the old inhabitants were forbidden the Sea, had all their long-ships taken from them, had leave to enter themselves in the Colony, and were made free of the City. The ships were partly brought into the Roman Arcenal, partly burnt, and with their Roftra or beaks was the Gallery or Pulpit for Orations adorned, which was built in the Forum; whence that Temple was afterwards called Rostra. The year following Mi-The Rollin at nuita a Vestal Nun was buried quick in the Campus Sceleratus, which I be-Rame whence lieve, faith Live, had it's name from Incest; for so the fault of incontinency in those women was termed. And in this same year Q. Publica Philo was to called, made the first Prater out of the Commons; the Senate not regarding now what hapned in this kind, because they had been overpowered in things of greatest greatest consequence. Now also a War arose betwixt the Aurunci and Si- SECT. dicini, whereof the former were constrained by the other to forfake their antient seat, and depart to Sueffa, which was afterwards called Anrunca. The Aurunce had given up themselves to the Romans, who thereupon ordered them relief, but the Consuls deferring it, this fell out in the mean time. But the next year the Sidicini and the Ausones who inhabited Cales were overthrown, and Valerius Corvinus now the fourth time Conful for the following year, and the greatest Roman Captain of this time, took Cales also, where a Colony was placed. In the second year after the taking of Cales, the Census was solemnized, and two Tribes added, Metia and Scaptia, for the newly admitted Citizens: the Acerrani were also made free of the City, without the privilege of Suffrage, by a Law preferred by L. Papirius the year they were overthrown, in the next he was either taken or delivered up, and Privernum either flormed or furrendred, both being affirmed by Writers, A. M. 3675. of whom Livie is to be confulted: the principal actors were together with Fi. A. M. 3675. truvius put to death, and the rest of the Inhabitants made free of the City. V. C.424. The first year of this Warre fell in with the last of Daring Codomannus, the Daring 7. last King of Persia, being the 424 of the City, when L. Papyrius Crassus Alexandri 7. the second time, and L. Plantins Venox (or Venno) were Confuls.

48. In the year following, above 170 women were put to death for the art of poyloning, being discovered by a she Slave, whereas heretofore there had been no inquifition made after this crime, which therefore was counted fuch a prodigie, that a Dictator was made for fixing of a nail, which they had read in their Annals to have been a remedy for the diffempers of the State, when the Commons separated from the Patritians. For the two succeeding years a War was managed against the Privernates, who were drawn into it by War with the Viernvius Vallus, a man of principal note amongst the Fundani. In the first Privernates.

AN

INSTITUTION

General History.

The First Part.

BOOK III,

Of the Empire of the Macedonians, and Affairs of the World Contemporary with it.

CHAP. I.

From the beginning of the Monarchy of Alexander to his death; containing the space of six years and ten moneths.

Lexander riding hard after Darins, came a little after he had expired, saw the body, and bewailed his death with tears: he cast his own Garment over him, and fent him to his Mother to be royally interred amongst his Ancestors. His brother Oxyastress he received Cortius tib. 5. into the number of his own friends, and maintained him in his former Dignity. Then did he begin to purflue Bassis; but finding that he was fled far before into Bastria, he lest off his pursue, and returned to Hacatompolis in Parthia, where his Soldiers being tickled with a runtour that the Macadonians should should have leave to return home, rouzed him up from his idlenesse and Curtius 16,6, luxury, to which now he began to give way after the Persian fashion : but Gapp. 2.3.

Hyrgania.

they were at length quieted, and perswaded by him to persect the work thus far carried on in Afia. Leaving then Craterus in this Countrey with some Forces, he marched into Hyrcania which Nabarzanes had seized on, who Marcheth into yielded it up, and himfelf to him. After this he invaded the Mardi, a neighbouring people, who, not being wont to be thus provoked by any, made refistance with 8000 men, and intercepted Bucephalus his most beloved horse, which, being given him by Demaratus the Corinthian, when unfadled would A.M. 2676. fuffer none to come on his back, and when adorned, none but the King him- Olisana felf, whom to receive he bowed down. Alexander exceedingly moved with V. C. 425. the loffe of him , after he had flain, and taken most of these men, cur down Alexands. all the Trees, and threatned the Nation with utter destruction in case they did not restore the horse, so that for fear they did it, and with him sent their Presents, and asked pardon, by 50 Meslengers.

The Macedonian Empire.

2. Returning back, he received 1500 men which had been fent out of Greece to Darius with 90 Ambassadors. Over this party he made Captain Andronicus, who brought them to him, and then went on to Zadracarea, the principal Citie of Hyrcania, where he staid fifteen dayes. Hither Tha-Whether the leftris Queen of the Amazons, is faid, with 300 vvomen, to have come to have Confule The Queen of the issue by him, which story, though it be delivered for a truth by some, yet is saidsmind. Amazons ever there better ground to suspect it, seeing that neither Ptolomy the son of lexandre came to him. Lagus, who was then with him, and wrote his Acts, neither any other good Aniamatha, Author of those times approved of it: and Alexaeder himself in his Letters to Antipater, wherein he gave him an account of his affairs, mentioned how the Soythian King offered to him his daughter in marriage, but not a word of this matter. After this , he returned into Parthia, and purpofing now to go against Ressus (who in Battria had taken upon him a royal Robe, and the name and little of Areaxerxes King of Perfia) he thence removed into the Countrey of the Arii. Saiibarzanes the Governour thereof meeting him at the City Sasia, he confirmed him in his place, but after his departure he revolted from him, whereby the King was constrained to march back against him, which he hearing fled with 2000 men towards Beffus; so as Alexander following him some time, but in vain, reduced the Countrey to obedience, and returned to his former expedition. Then came he into the

the Aiii.

That of the Zuangai.

He cometh

Countrey of

into the

ving had an hand in the murther of Darius, now fled into India, whence he was afterwards fent, and put to death. Here in this Land of the Zarangai (or Dranga) was a conspiracy against Alexander discovered; first by Dymnus to Nicomachus, who though he swore secrecy, communicated it to Zeballinus his brother. Zeballinus (or Ceballinus) acquainted with it Philotas the fon of Parmenio, who, delaying to tell it to the King, either through heedlesnesse, or on purpose, thereby procured the destruction of himself and Countrey of the Zarang ai, which was governed by one Barfaentes, who ha-

3. For, Ceballinus suspecting him to be in the plot, because of his delay, discovered the matter to Metro a young Nobleman, and Master of the Armory, who acquainting the King therewith, he presently caused them all to be apprehended. Dymnus knowing wherefore he was called, killed himself. Ceballinus cast all the blame upon Philosas, who denied not that he lib.6.67. had been told of fuch a businesse, but said he revealed it not to the King Plutanth. onely through neglect, and because he esteemed it of no consequence. Being Diodorna at brought to the Rack, he either confessed the thing as it was, or feigned a flo-prine.

Philotas put to death for Treason, ry, and wrongfully accused himself to escape the extremity of Torment; after which he was put to death. Now was Parmenio his father, a man of 70 years of age, Governour of Media, one vvho had done especial service for the King, and his father Philip. Alexander, either for that he feared he was privy to the confinercy, or thought it not fafe that he should outlive his And Parmenio son, sent one away with speed, who delivering a counterfeited Letter to him as from Philosas, flevy him as he read it. Amongst others that were shot his Father.

to death for this conspiracy, was Alexander Lyncestes the son-in-law of Antipater, who had conspired the destruction both of Philip and Alexander, and for his treason been kept in durance now three years. This being done, the King proceeded in his Expedition against Bellius. 4. Though the Soldiers condemned Parmenio and his Son while living, yet they pittied them when dead, and conceived great indignation against their Judges. Alexander understanding this, that he might know their several minds, gave out, that he was fending into Macedonia, and whofoever would. might have an opportunity thereby to write to their friends. By their Letters. all which he caus'd to be opened, he knew who were discontented and ready ro Mutiny, and all those he gathered into one company, lest they should corrupt the rest, setting over them one Leonidas, an intimate friend of Parmeno. The King in his March came to the Country of the Arimaspi, or Agriaspa, called also Energeta by Cyrus the Great; for that when he went against Diodorus ut the Scythians, they furnished him with Provisions in his great necessity. He prins. used them very curreoully, bestowing upon them Mony, and as much Ground cap, 3.

as they would ask, which was not much: And here he heard that Satibarzanes, Arrianus, being returned from Beffie, had withdrawn the Arii from obedience. Against him he fent 6000 Greekish Foot and 600 Horse, under the command of Erygius and others, who joyning Battel with him, he pulled down his Helmet, and challenged any one to a fingle Combat. Erygius accepting of the Challenge, flew him in the place, and then his Soldiers, who had followed him rather by constraint, than out of any good will, yielded themselves. Alexander having staid among the Energeta 60 days, passed on, and in his way mucheth a- fubdued the Gedrosians, the Drangi and Dragogi, as also Arachosia, where > and 600 Horse. 5. The next People he passed through were the Paropamilade. This heing in the Winter-feafon, his Army fuffered extreamly through the coldnesse of the Climate: Thence he came to the Mountain Caucasus or Paropamisus, > he got that Army into his power of which Parmenio had the command, con-filling of 6000 Macedonians, and 200 Gentlemen, befides 5000 other Greeks.

Mountain Pa- (as that part of it was call'd) which he passed in 17 days, and built some Cities about it. Besses had now in Baltria about 8000 of the Inhabitants up in ol. 113, 44, 1. Arms, who thinking that Alexander would rather turn towards India than come V. c. 426. against them , kept with Beffus , till they plainly perceived that the King in- Alexandri 9. vaded their Country: Then they all betook them to their own homes, and Beffus with his other followers passed over the River Oam into the Country of the Sogdians, being still accompanied with Spitamenes and Oxyartes, in whose fidelity he confided. But Alexander invading Battria, after he had ta-Invadeth Ba- ken divers Cities, had the whole Country yielded to him; after which he paffed to the great River Oxus, but in his way was so diffressed for water, that his Army languished; and when it came at the River, so many drunk intemperately, that he loft more men thereby than he had formerly done in any Barrel. Ere he passed the River, he sent home 900 Macedonians and Thessatians, the former being old and wounded, and the later the remnant of the Volunteers: those he rewarded, and gave thanks to such of the rest that remained as were willing to ferve in the Wars yet behind. He passed over the River upon Skins and Bladders joyned together, wanting materials to make a better Bridge, and came to the place where he heard Beffus lay with all his Forces. Beffus was now forfaken by his friends, for Spitamenes conspiring against him with Dataphernes and Catanes, fnatched the Diadem from his head, tore Darius his Road from off his back, and gave notice to Alexander, that if he would fend any of his Captains with some. Forces they would deliver him up. Alexander fent Prolomie the fon of Lagus, and one of his Guard, who Affardeliver brought him to his presence in an Halter, whence he was delivered to Oxyar-tes the brother of Darius, to be tormented to death in that place where he had most wickedly slain his Soverain, his Lord and Master. oft wickedly slain his Soverain, his Lord and Matter.

6. About this time he utterly destroyed the City of the Branchida, with Strabol, 11,60. all its Inhabitants, in revenge for a fault committed 150 years before. For, 14.

Christis & A.

Cometh to Ballira.

He defroyeth Xerxes flying out of Greece, they betray'd the Treasures of Didymaan Apollo the Branchide. into his hands; and for this, not daring to flay behind, they left Miletus and followed him, who gave them this place, where their Posterity dearly paid for their fault. After this, he marched to the River Tanais, (another than that which severeth Europe from Asia) falling down from the Mountain Caucasus into the Hyrcanian Sea. Here fome of his Soldiers going forth to gather for-

Cometh to Maracanda.

ver with great difficulty, and hazard to the King himfelf, who received a riame. wound in his thigh. Thence in four days he marched in a Litter to Maracanda, the chief City of Sogdiana, where leaving a Garrison, he over-ran the neighbouring Territories; and shortly came an Ambassage from the Scythians, called Abii, who thereby gave up themselves into his power. But in the mean time the Barbarians of Maracanda flew the Garrison of the Macedonians, being, together with the greatest part of the Sogdians, drawn back by those that took Beffus, who also drew to their party some of the Battrians and Sufians, Alexander fent to suppresse them Spitamenes and Catenes, who had delivered up Beffus; but they confirmed them in their Rebellion, and became age, were intercepted by the Enemy, which to the number of 20 or 30000 betook himself to an Hill, and thence was beaten down and wasted to 8000,

Leaders in the Revolt, giving out, that the Baltrian Horse was sent for by the King on purpose to be made away. 7. To reduce these Revolters , Alexander presently sent Craterus , who belieged Cyropolis the chief City, so called, because built by Cyrus the Great; and he himself besieged another called Gaza, which he took, and put all of ripenesse of age to the sword, for a terror to their Country-men. After this he reduced several other Civies, and then went to the affistance of Craterus against Cyropolis, which was defended by 1 8000 men. Here he lost many a valiant Soldier, and by a stroak of a stone on his neck was fell'd down sensless; but this increased his natural vigor, so that out of indignation he set furiously on, and presently took the place. Eight thousand of the Inhabitants were flain, and the restretiring into the Castle, shortly after yielded for want of water; and then one City remaining onely of feven, whither the Barbarians had fled, he reduced that also in a short time. Spitamenes now had shut himself up in Maracanda, where he besieged the Macedonians in the Castle. Against him he sent a Party, and began to build a City upon the River Tanais, which being raifed in few days, with a wall fix miles in compasse, he called after himself Alexandria. His design was to have a convenient Fortresse Gastins & Fight for the Invasion of Septhia, which the Scythian King, inhabiting beyond the gullin, in. River, suspecting, sent his brother with a party of Horse to beat away the Anianusi, 4 Macedonian forces, and demolish it. Comming to the narrowest place of the River, they not onely cast over their Darts, but opprobrious speeches, which foincenfed Alexander, as though he was extream ill, and for fome time had nor been able as much as to speak to his Soldiers, yet he resolved to passe over thians.

against them.

8. With admirable industry he got over his men, partly in Boats, and part-Marcheth a- ly upon Bladders, notwithstanding the earnest opposition of the Enemy, whom he put to the Rout, and, though he was very much indifpos'd in his own person, pursued them 80 surlongs, then fainting, he commanded his men to follow the chace as long as the day would permit. The want of water in this place was fuch, that the Army was thereby exceedingly distress'd, and the King himself drinking of some that was corrupt, fell into a Diarrhea. But not longafter the Scythians sent to excuse themselves, denying that the War had been undertaken by their general consent, but onely by a certain party that lived upon robbery. Giving themselves up into his hands, he dismiss dehe Ambassadors courteously, and with them the Prisoners he had taken. By this time Spitamenes had cut off the party fent against him, which Alexander understanding, in three days time marched 1500 furlongs to Maracanda, whither he had notice that he was returned; but hearing of the Kings comming, he fled amain, and was purfued for fome time, but to no purpose. Alexander then dividing his forces, over-ran the Country which being otherwise named Zariaspa) where he caused Bessus to be brought to the head of his Army: Here he made his note and ears to be cut off, and then fent wills punish him to Echarane to be judged and executed by Sentence of a Council of edfor his exe- Medes and Persians. Thus Diodorus relateth the the story; but Plutarch crable Trea- writteth, that by Alexanders command, the boughs of two Trees being first drawn together, and he made fast to them both, they then were suffered to

The Macedonian Empire.

had revolted, and gave command, that all of ripe age should be put to the fword, for a terror to others, by which severity fell 120000 of the Inhabitants of Sondiana. Leaving Pencelam there with 2000 Foot, he departed to return to their natural fite, and he was thereby pulled affunder. 9. Having much encreased his forces by the comming in of fresh supplies, Arrianus. he once more over-ran the Country of the Sogdians, as yet not fully subdued, and the five parts of his Army afterwards mer and united at Maracanda, whence he fent Hephastion to lead out Colonies into the Cities of Sogdiana, as Canus and Arrabazwa against the Scythians, for to them he heard that Spitamenes was fled, who with a company of Battrians and Sogdians, and about 800 Horse of the Massagetes, got a Castle near Baltra into his hand; then came against Zariaspa, or Baltra, & by an Ambush cut off many of the Defendants in their Sally out against him. Upon Canns his approach the Maffageres fled, but he purfued & killed many of them. Alexander having subdued more of the Sogdians returned to Maracanda, whither the King of the European Scythians curtius lib. 8. inhabiting above Rofphorus, sent to him, offering him his daughter in marriage; cap. 1. or if this liked him not, he delired, that the principal Macedonians about him might contrast affinity with his Nation; moreover he offered to come in per-

Baltra, (a City so called from the River Baltrus which runneth through it,

Banaria, which had been unrouched for four Ages. Herein a Lion coming upon him, Lysimachus (who afterwards reigned, and had flain a Lion ere this) went about to save him off; but the King forbad him, and receiving the Beaft, Alexador kil- flew him at one stroak. Four hundred Beasts more being killed, he feasted his whole Army, and again repaired to Maracanda, where he flew Clyins. 10. In a Feast (to which he had invited him) being heated with Wine, he I lem. ibid. fell of commending his own acts, and therein foared to high, as to fpeak fcornfully of the things performed by his father Philip. Clysus having also drunk quality. fufficiently was netled with this, and defending Philip, in his replies plainly attendants brake into his Tent, and comforting him, caused him to eat. The Macedonians judged Clytus rightfully put to death, and decreed he should not be buried; but he commanded this last office to be performed to him.

Leaving a good Guard with Canus to defend Sogdiana, and take Spitamenes

if he should come that way in Winter, he marched to Xenippa, where, after ther up, and being got to the top, the befieged were amazed, and thinking their number greater than it was, yielded the place. In this Fort amongst others fon and receive his commands. After this, Alexander hunted in the Forrest of reprotehed Alexander; who therefore ran him through and killed him out-Killeth Clytus. right, having a little before defigned him to the Government of Sogdiana in the room of Artabazus, who excused himself by his old age; For being the fon of Dropis, and brother to Hellanica Alexander's Nurse, he had done good service to both Kings, and was now an old Soldier. Alexander, when he came to himself, considering what he had done, would have made way for following him by his own hands, and when he was hindred by his friends from violent attempts, would have done it by fasting four days. On the fifth, his a sharp Encounter, he received the Battrian Exiles, who having revolted had Spring following, being the toth, year of his Reign, he fet upon a Fort in V. c. 427. Sogdiana, fituate upon a Rock, fo strong by Nature through its excessive Alexand, 10.

Rrr 2

Cometh to Xe4:00.1

heighth, that the Defendants counted it invincible, (many having fled thither out of the Country) and upon his fummons, Arimazes the Governor, who held it with thirty thousand armed men , demanded if the Macedonians could flie? But he proposed large rewards to such as would first mount it, whereby certain young men being animated, made a shift to climb and help one ano-

others for

India.

treason.

Marieth Roxane.

was Oxyaries the Satrapa of Governour (who had revolted from Alexander) with his wife and children. Of his daughter Roxane the King was so enamoured, as he shortly after maried her, and perswaded the great ones about him to take them wives out of that place.

The Macedonian Empire.

11. He thence departed into Naura (or Parataca) where he understood that many Barbarians had possessed themselves of another Fortresse, fituate as the former, and fortified moreover with an exceeding deep ditch. This yielded to him through the perswasion of Oxyartes, and then with his Horse he cleared the Country of the revolters. About the same time Spitamenes coming into Sogdiana was encountred by Canns, who drew from him Arrianu. the naturals of the place, and the Baltrians, fo that he had onely left him curtim. a Company of Massagetes. Those flying with him into the Wildernesse, when they heard that Alexander pursued them, cut off their Captains head and fent it to the King, though some write, that his own wife cut it off, and presented it to Alexander, who detesting the treason, commanded her to depart his Camp. After this the Daha who had revolted by the procurement of Dataphanes, delivered him up, and returned to obedience, and Craterus with Polysperchon having finished the War against the revolvers in a short time, they all met at Battra. Alexander was now so puffed up, as to require divine honours from his followers; which Callift benes the Philosopher stifly refusing to give him, felt the effect of his ambition.

12. It hapned that the King hunting on a time, one Hermolaus 2 Gentleman of his guard, and Scholar to Callifthenes, killed a wild Boar, which Alexander himself intended to have struck, for which he was beaten by his Command. The young man bearing the difference most heavily, as also Softrains his inward friend, they conspired with others of the Guard to kill the King, Curius at the which to perform, they agreed that one night they would all watch together. Did It was long ere they could so change their courses as to bring this about, but at plantach in length having done it, it chanced that the King fate up drinking all that Alexand night, fother the marter being frustrated, was revealed by one of them, and Orofinalik 3. night, to then the marter being fruithated, was to called Callifthenes, cap.18, they were all floned to death. Now whether any of them accused Callifthenes, Arianus tib. 6. as some reported, or Alexander did it himself, he was made away, though as to the manner of his death, they who were present themselves agreed not in Callifthenes pur their relation. Callifthenes was the Scholar of Aristotle, and the fon of his to death with Coulin germane, of so severe a temper, that he could not order himself according to his Master's directions, who when he fent him to Alexander, advised him, Either very pleasantly or very rarely to conver se with him, that so Vale. Mu. he might be either more acceptable for his discourse, or safe by his silence. Ari-lib, 7, ca, 1, forte also himself seemeth to have been threatned in a letter written by the King to Antipater in Macedonia. 12. Alexander had ere this time refolved to make War upon India, and bound his Conquests with the East. That he might not leave any impediment at his back, he commanded 30000 men to be raifed out of the Provinces, that he might have them both as Soldiers and Hostages. Out of a conceit of the glory of the Expedition, headorned the shields of his Soldiers with silver plates, their Horses with golden bridels, and their Armour was set out with gold and filver. Leaving then Amyntas in Baltriana with 3500 Horse, and marcheth for 10000 Foot, he fer forwards in the Spring, leading an Army of 120000 men. In ten dayes he passed over Cancasin and came to Alexandria, which he had caused to be built in the Country of the Parapomisade, whence he marched to the River Cophenes, and fent to Taxiles to meet him, who came with such presents as India afforded. Dividing now his Army, with one part of it he sent Haphestion and Perdiccas another way, with command, that when they came at the River Indus, they should provide things necessary for passing over it. He with the other invaded the Aspians, Thyraans, and Arafacans; and croffing the River Choe, the first City he came at opposed him. He himself and Ptolomy the son of Lagus were wounded in the form, but he took the place, and putting all the Inhabitants to the fword, burnt it. In the Country of the Aspians he got a booty of 40000 men, and 230000 head of cattel, whence marching toward the Gruraans, custing with difficulty he passed over the River Graraus. Invading the A sagenians Justin lib. 12, he took the City Massaga, the King whereof being lately dead, his mother Cleaphis reigned, and by the proflitution of her body to Alexander, procured a confirmation in the Kingdom.

14. After this, he took Basira, and Nora was forfaken by it's defendants, who betook themselves to a strong rock called Aonnes. This place was exceedingly fenced by it's wonderful height, and the River Indus which ran by one fide of it; as also by deep pits and craggie rocks, by reason whereof the report went , that Hercules himself attempted, but could not take it. The flory of Hercules inflamed the King with a defire to mafter it. who having first taken several other places, brought his forces, and by means of an old man who shewed him the onely passage, closely besieged it. By incredible diligence he filled up the dirches, fo as he could bring his men to fight, but yet he was not able to florm the Rock, and therefore refolved to flarve them out, leaving a way for their escape; and they feeing his resolution, took the advantage, but many were flain in the perfute. Taking order then for the full clearing of the Country, he passed on to the River Indus, near to which he hunted Elephants, and continuing in the plains thirty dayes for the refreshment of his Army, facrificed to his gods, and celebrated games and exercises. Now Hephestion and Pendicon had finished all things necesfary for passing the River; and not of this onely, but others also with one (almost) and the same labour. For, divers Rivers runing through India (as befides Cophenes, Coes, and Indus ; Hydaspes, Acefines, Hyarotia, Hyparms, and Ganges;) they so framed the boats, as they might easily be taken in pieces, and being conveied in cariages, be as easily, upon occasion. again joyned together.

River Indus

Croffeth the Parius, in the Spring, Alexander passed over the River Indus, and was received above his expectations. For', Omphis, o': Maphis, King of the A. M. 3679. Country, had perswaded his Father when yet living to submit himself, and now of. 181. and 3. having succeeded in the Kingdom mer him in the way, and gave it up into his P. C. 428. hands, who restored it to him, and permitted him to assume the name of Taxiles, common to all Kings of that Country, of what family foever. Coming to Taxilathe Metropolis, he was sumpruously entertained, and receiving great gifts, gave also very liberally, to the disdain of those about him. of whom Meleager in his cups congratulated with him, that at length in India he had found a man worthy to receive from him in way of free gift 1000 Talents. Alexander remembring how he had repented the killing of Clying, contained himself, but not impercinently answered him, that Envious men are nothing elfe than their own terment : The next day Abifarus King of the Indians inhabiting the mountains, and who together with Powns had wars With Taxiles, by Ambaffadors gave up himself and Kingdom. Alexander leaving a Garrison in Taxila, marched towards the River Hydaspes, beyond which reigned Porus : Thinking by the terror of his name to affright this Prince into obedience, he sent to him beforehand, willing him to pay tribute, and meet him on the frontires of his Kingdom, to which he answered, that he would do the later onely, and that armed. Near unto Ponus reigned another of his name, and his Nephew, who out of harred to him, fent Ambaffa-

15. In the eleventh year of his reign, and the fourth after the death of

dors, and gave up all he had into the hands of Alexander. 16. The boats formerly spoken of being conveyed from Indus to the River curtius ut pri-Hydaspes . Alexander with Taxiles , several other great persons of the "s. Hydaspes, Alexander with Taxies, reverse outer great persons of the Diodonis.

Country, and 5000 Indians more came thicher: Bar James the Governous Arrianus 1, 4. of the Dranga being presented to him in his way, whom he afterwards purto Orollus 1, 3, death for his treason towards Darius. On the appelite bank of the River lay c. 19. Porus with an Army very great indeed, though the differtion of Writers Plutarchia about the numbers almost equalize the bignesse of ir. He had his Elephants Alexand. ready to affright the Horses, and keep the Army from landing, which Alexander perceiving, made as if he intended to patte the River at the place

And Hydaspes, over against which Porms stood, leaving somethere to make a noise, as if he still remained, and in a dark and rainie night got into a little woody Island, which lay lower down the River, whence in the morning, though with much difficulty (through the rifing of the water by abundance of rain) recovered the further bank, where he defeated a Party led by Porus his Son, who by some is said in this ingagement to have lost his life. Porns, understanding this, drew down his battel in the form of a City, whereof the Elephants, being many in number, were as walls. They grievously distressed the Macedonians for sometime, and the Indians continually retired to them as a bulwark; but at length being driven up closetogether, they made great slaughter of the Indians themselves, whom Alexander also encompassing with his men did great execution upon them. Porns himself, a person terrible to encounter (his height, as is faid, being five cubits, and his bredth fuch as his Armour extended it to the proportion of two lufty men) fought himfelf . most valiantly, and encountering Alexander hand to hand, slew his Horse under him, so that he was saved meetly by the interposition of his Guard, many of his men having fallen at his fide. 17. Porus gave not over as long as he had any to stand to him; when all had left him, he retreated on his Elephant most stately to behold. As many of the Indians were flain in the chace as had been in the battel, by reason that Craierus and others, who had been left behind, came over-aftesh to the perfute. Alexander having a great defire to fave their King, out of respect to his great valour, fent after him Taxiles the Indian, whom perceiving to come towards him, he ran at him with his lance as his ancient Enemy. But others being full fent, and amongst the rest Merges an Ind an, Porus hearing his voice, and being fore diffrested by thirst, stood still, and then alighted from his Elephant. Alexander coming on spake to him first, and asked him what the thing was which he defired, to whom he answered, that he might be nsed like a King. The other replied, that this should be done for his over fake, and bad him ask for his own commodity what he pleased, to which he made answer, that all things were contained in his former demand. With Overthrowthis the Conquerour was so well pleased, that he received him into the eth and taknumber of his friends, and restored to him his Kingdom, inlarged with new eth Porus. Territories. Alexander hoping that by his late Victory all India was laid open to him, intended to fail into the Ocean; and perceiving there was in this place much wood, he caused such a quantity to be cut down, as might furfice for the building of thips. He gave order also for the building of two Cities: one in the place where the battel was fought, which he called Nice, and another on the other fide of the River, named after his Horse Bucepbalm, who here died, being about thirty years old.

18. Leaving Craterus to perfect these Cities upon the River Hydaspes, he marched into the Country adjoyning to that of Porus, which having fub- contint lib. 9. dued he bestowed on him, and also the Kingdom of the younger Porus, who cap, 1, out of fear of his Uncle had now fled, with as many as he could draw after him to the Gangarida. After this he subued several Nations beyond the River Hydraores, and invaded the Cutheans, who together with the Ocydraca and Malli opposed him, of whom in the siege and storming of the City Sangala perished 17000, and about 70000 were taken Captives. These Cuthans had a Custome, that when any man died, his wife was to be buried with him, to which the wickednesse of one woman that poysoned her husband gave occasion. The City Sangala was destroyed, and their Lands given to certain Indians, who lived in the form of a Commonwealth, and had formerly given themselves up into the hands of the Conquerour. This severity made other Cities without any relistance surrender themselves. Then Sopishes yield advanced he into the Kingdom of Sopishes , who meeting him with his two Sons, with a Rod of Gold adorned with precious Sones, delivered up into his hands himfelf, his children, Kingdom, and all he had. Having received back his Kingdom, he magnificently entertained Alexander and his whole Alian Hill. Army Amongst several other presents ; he gave him 150 Dogs begotten of animal, 18.1.

Tigers, as is reported, and of thrength and activity, as appeared by four of them which were let out upon a Lion extraordinary for strength and

19. Ere Alexander flitted from this place, Hephaftion returned to him Curting lib. 9. from his expedition. (having subdued India in a great compasse that way he Diodorne was fent) whom he received with honor fuitable to his worth. Afterward he Arrianus, departed into the Kingdom of Phegens (or Phegelus) who also submitted himfelf, and receiving the Conqueror, entertained him very magnificently. After two days he marched toward the River Hyphasis (or Hyparis) taking Phegeus and Porus along with him. At the River fide he enquired of Phe-The River Hy- gens what Countries lay beyond it? He answered, That there was a vast shells the Ea-Wildernesse of 11 or 12 days journey, and next to that ran the River Ganges, his Expediti-beyond which inhabited, besides others, the Gangarida, over whom reigned Agyrammes (or Xandrames) provided of 20000 Horse, 200000 Foot, above 2000 Chariots, and about 4000 Elephants. These things feeming incredible to the Macedonians, he asked Porus of the truth of them, who confirmed what the other had faid as to the strength of that King, but withall added That being by a Barber begotten on the Queen, who had killed her Husband that he might reign, he was for this cause despised by his People. Alexander now confidered the labors and perils undergone by his Soldiers, who from the beginning of his reign had followed him eight years; withall, how of late for 70 days together they had been forely distressed by Rain, Thunder, and Lighthing; that he might oblige them, he gave them the plunder of the enemies Country, being very rich, and in their absence gratifi'd their wives and children. Then after their return to the Camp, with a præmeditated Oracion he laboured to perswade them to undertake the War with him against the Gandarida, but in vain.

20. For, Canus the fon of Polycrates, answered him in such a manner, as he might eafily perceive how contrary the affections of the Soldiers were to the Expedition. After which, as Arrianus writeth, he kept himself close in his Pavillion for three days, and would admit none of his friends to his prefence. Then fending for his Officers, he told them, That feeing the minds of his men were averse from proceeding any further, he intended to return home; yet, ere this, he had facrifized for passing over the River, but finding that the Intrals of the Beast were not lucky, he ferled himself in a purpose to retreat. He caused twelve large Altars of fifty cubits heighth, like to some warlike Towers, to be erected near the River, whereon he facrifized according to the custom of his Country, and he celebrated Games in the grounds adjoyning. After this he caused to be made a Ditch 15 foot broad and 10 foot deep, whereon, of the earth, he raifed a confiderable Wall, making the compaffe of his Camp feem three fold larger than indeed it was. He commanded the Foot, that each one in his Tent should get two Bedsteads of five cubits apiece, and the Horsemen to make theirs with the Mangers of their Horses as big again as they were wont to be. He caused Arms, Bridles, and other things to be framed after the same proportion, to amuse posserity with a false appearance of a Gigantick proportion of his own person and his followers.

21. He returned the same way he came, fetling the Government of the Provinces in his passage, till he arrived at the River Hydaspes. Ever since his departure hence, the weather had been rainy, which spoiled much of his new City Bucephalaa; but he caused it to be repaired; and here died Canus his trufty and faithful friend, but one who had grieved him by his Answer to his late Oration. Down this River Hydaspes he resolved, according to his former purpose, to sail into the Southern Ocean, and therefore providing for fuch blaces as he should leave, he reconciled Porus and Taxiles by affinity contracted betwixt them, and made the former, King, not of that Country onely lying betwixe Acesines and Hydaspes, which formerly he had given to him, but also of such free Nations, as lying betwixt Acesines and Hyphasis he had larely subdued. Having increased his Army by a new supply fent him out of the West, he divided it into three parts, whereof two he committed to Craterus and Hephastion, commanding them to march on either side the River, down which he sailed with the third in a Fleet of 1000 Vessels. down the Ri- Loofing from shoar about the beginning of November, he first landed upon ver Hydafpes, the coasts of the Sibari, who being reported to be descended of those Greeks that with Hercules attempted the florming of the Rock Aornes, claimed kindred of him, and submitted themselves. Making excursions into the neighbour Countries, he destroyed many thousands of the Inhabitants that would not yield; and then returning aboard, hasted against the Oxydrace and Malli, who, as he heard, had carried their wives into their strong Towns, and intend-22. Comming down thither where Hydaspes and Acesines meet, the Chinel being narrow, and the Stream exceeding great, two of his tallest

Ships miscarried, and he himself missed narrowly of being Shipwrack'd: dorns at pairs. Here his Soldiers also began to murmur that they should begin a new War, but Arriants lib. 6. he quieted them eafily by a Speech. The Indians having gathered together Plutaribut 80000 Foot and 10000 Horse, shewed themselves near the River, having sapa, & chosen their General out of the Oxydrace, who made many fires, and used Orofins other vain attempts to affright the Macedonians 3 yet as foon as these began to Arm, either out of fear, or by reason of diffention amongst themselves, He fighteeth a away they fled to the craggy Mountains. Alexander then marched with all speed, through a large, drie, and barren Country, against the Malli, to defeat Malli and Oxy-

them ere they should joyn with the other; and coming unexpectedly upon them, many he slew, both in the Country, and those strong places which he stormed. After this he marched to the River Hydraotes, where he killed many of them, and thence to a City of the Brachmans, whither he heard that some of them had fled: This he took, with the Castle into which they retired, as also the chiefest City of the Malli, whence they fled beyond the River Hydrantes, on the bank whereof they drew up into a Battalia. He followed, and with his Horse skirmished a little, not thinking it fit to engage with them in Battel, being 50000 in number, till the Foot came up. Then they betook themselves to the next fortifi'd Town, where by his hardinesse he ran into extream dinger.

23. Demophoon his Priest acquainted him, how that by his art great danger was portented to his person, and therefore he advised him, either to omit, or at least to defer the fiege. But he rebuked the man, because hereby he weakned the valor of his Soldiers, and dividing them into two parts, set upon the Town, whereat the Defendants left it and fled into the Castle. The King with those about him broke open a Gate, and entred first; Then he commanded Ladders to be set to the Castle wall, which being but slowly performed, he took one from a Macedonian, and rearing it mounted himfelf: after him went up Peucestes, who bore usually his Shield before him , (which being taken out of the Temple of Pallas at Ilium, he would always have so carried) and after him Leonaius by the same Ladder, and one Abreas by another. The Argyraspides also, (or those who used the sivered Shields) sollicitous for the Kings safety, mounting hastily broke the Ladders, and thereby hindred others as well as themselves. The King upon the Wall was laid at with Dares on every fide, and when his left arm was wearied with holding his Target, his friends would have had him leap down again unto them, who were ready to receive him in their arms. But by an unparallel'd attempt he leaped down on the other fide into the Fort, where if he had not by good chance light upon his feet, he might presently have been slain or taken. But casting himself to fall upon them, and seeing a Tree hard by, he applied himfelf to it, fo ashe had it on his right hand, and the wall on his left.

24. None of his enemies were so hardy as to come near him, onely they plied it with Darts afar off, whereof the greatest part being kept off by the boughes and leaves of the Tree, the rest he received on his Target. But the Casteth him Indians drawing never, threw showers of Parts upon him, and with stones felf into ex- broke his Helmer. Being speht, and not longer able to stand, he felfupon his tream danger, knees, whereupon despising him they came to him; and yet he so received their General who boldly fet upon him; then none would venture to approach nearer, but plied it with Darts afar off. By this time those three that mounted the wall after him were got down, and fought floutly for him, of whom Abreas was shot in the face and fell; the King also in the breast with an Arrow which piercing through his Armor near his Pap, some affirmed, that blood and breath iffued together out of the wound, and he fwooned, being covered by Pencestes with his shield. Now the Macedonians brake into the Castle, and put all to the sword, sparing neither Sex nor Age. They carried their King out on a Target, not knowing whether he was alive or dead : but shortly after he came to himself, and his wound was dressed, (some say by Critobulus the Physician, others by Perdiccas) out of which much blood iffuing, he swooned again, and that very thing staunched the bleeding. While he flayed a little in this place, a report flew to the Army then lying with the Fleet at the meeting of the two Rivers Hydraotes and Acefines, that he was dead, and it gained fuch belief, that the Letters he fent were taken but as counterfeit. Therefore he hasted to the Camp, where he presented himself to the view of them all there. 25. Having escaped this great danger amongst the Malli, (for amongst them with his fword, as two fell down dead before him, and after this he killed them it was, and not amongst the Oxydraca as some have mistaken.) and returned to his Fleer, he failed down the River, and on the fourth day came to a place forfaken of its Inhabitants, but convenient for to make fome stay in. Here he rested many days for the better curing of his wounds, and employed his men this while in building of thips. Hither the Malli and Oxydraca fent to ask pardon, and submit themselves. After which he sailed further, and came to the confluence of Hydraotes and Acesines, the former whereof loseth it self in the later. Proceeding further, he came through Acesines into Indus. fubduing a certain People in his way who lived in a Free State; and here he made Philip Governor of the Malli and Oxydraca, with all the Country down to this place, wherein he also gave order for a City to be built. Following on his voiage, he arrived at the Country of the Sanbesta, (or Sabrace) who living also in a popular way of Government, were very populous and strong, and hearing of his coming had got together 60000 Foot, and near the River Indus he caused to be built another Alexandria, which he furnishbebuildeth an ed with convenient Havens and Arfenals. Thence he failed down with such expedition into the Country of Musicanus, that he was upon him ere he and hibducth heard of his coming; therefore the Indian met him with fuch gifts as his Country afforded, and gave up himself with all he had into his hands, acknowledging his fault that he had no fooner done it. 26. Having here commanded Teryestes, whom he had set over the Paro-

Saileth into

8000 Horse, but upon a fight of his Fleet they let fall their courage, and sent fifty of their principal men to ask peace. From this place on the fourth day he came to the fear of the Sogde, who also yielded themselves; and here by pamifade, to be put to death, for abusing that People by a coverous and tyrannical Government, he caused a Fort to be raised in the chief City of Musicinus, whereinhe left a Garrison, because the place seemed very convenient for keeping the neighbouring Nations in obedience. Leaving Musicanus in his former power, though not authority, he failed down to the Prasti, another Indian Nation, over which ruled Oxycanus. Here he stormed two Cities, in one whereof their King being retired into the Castle, sent to him to beg pardon, but too late; for ere the Messengers could come at Alexander, two Towers fell down, which made way for the Macedonians, and Oxycanie, who entring, killed Oxycanus amongst the rest; which being reported to the other Cities, they all yielded themselves. After this he came into the borders of the Brachmans, whose King Sabus (or Sambus) caused the Gates of his principal City to be opened, but afterwards revolted at the instigation of his Subjects, some of whom paid dearly for it in a certain City wherein they were taken, Sambus himself with thirty Elephants escaping. Some of them were upon pain of death to answer to certain hard Questions, which Sff diace.

having done, they were dismissed with rewards, as I lutarch informeth us. But ere this, Mulicanus had revolted, against whom Pithon was sent, who overpowering him took him prisoner. He was Crucified in his own Countrey by Alexander's Command, with all such Brachmans as had drawn him

27. Returning to the River Indus, in the fourth day he came to a Citie of the Brachmans, called Hamatelia, the inhabitants whereof hearing that he was invincible, poisoned the heads, of their Arrows, trusting to their own valour, and the natural strength of the place. He sent a party, which by approaching their Walls, and then retreating, drew them forth, by which stratagem, of 3000 he took 1000, and killed 600. Many of his own men died, and those who survived were brought into extream danger, amongst whom was Ptolomy the fon of Lague. He being almost ready to die, the story goeth, that Alexauder in a Dream had an Herb shewed to him, which drunk, and ourwardly applied, helped against the poyson; the truth being, that the virtue Strate libit. of this plant was by some declared to him, and this story seigned out of slattery. For all this, the befieged yielding, had indemnity granted to them, and then came Maris King of the Island Pattalena, which he gave up into the Conquerours power. Alexander restored, and sent him back, commanding him to provide all necessaries for his Army; but sailing down thither he found that he had left the Citie, and retired to the Mountains, with all his fubjects, both of Town and Countrey. Alexander fent some hors-men to perswade them to return, which accordingly diverse did. Then did he order Hophastion to build a Fort in the Citie, and sent a party to dig Wells in that Coast of the Countrey which wanted water. The Enemy fell upon these men out of the Wildernesse, and killed many of them, which forced the King to He fayleth to fend others for a supply. Now had he fayled almost 10 moneths when he

the Island Pattalena,

Is diffreffed

hand fayled down that Channel, his Army being led according to the custom, near the Rivers side. The next day arose such a Tempest, as exceedingly distressed the Fleet, some ships being driven so far as scarcely could they be recovered; whereupon for some time the King stayed here at a ceatain Island, and sent men on shore to take up some Natives to be their Guides. Coming lower, where the Chinel was very broad, another Tempest forced them into a certain Creek, where as great a fear seized on them, and so much the greater, because they were unacquainted with the occasion of it. It hapned, that the Tide being exceeding high (as it is at this day at Cambaia, where the River Indus falls into the Sea) all the grounds near the River were overflown, except certain Hills, which appearing like fo many upon the wa-Islands to them, the Macedonians swom, and left their Boats. When the water fell again, the Vessels were left on the drie ground, some being overwhelmed, and others turned upon their fides. But the River according to the course of the Tide overflowing again at the due time, such Vessels as sluck fast in the Mud were lifted up unhurt, but those that the water found otherwise placed, were either dashed against one another, or miscarried after some

28. At this Island the River Indus parteth into two branches, whereof both retained the name as far as the Sea it felf. Alexander taking the right came to Pattalena.

29. Repairing his Navy, as he could, he fent before two Boats to make difcovery of another Island below, by the Indians called Cilluta, but by him Scillastia, near which he must needs fayl down into the Ocean. Hearing that it was large, and very Commodious to harbour in, he gave order for the Fleet to go thirher, but he himself proceeded further, to search whether there was easie passage at the River's sall for the whole Navy into the Sea. Having passed some 200 surlongs, he discovered another Island, and then returned to the Fleet, where having facrifized to some gods, he went back, and performed this service to others after another fashion, saying, he was commanded fo to do by the Oracle of Jupiter Hammon. Sayling out of Indus into the Ocean, he factifized Bulls to Neptune, and after the burning of Incense cast CHAP. I. Paffeth into the Ocean.

out a Golden Vial with Golden Cups into the Sea, praying for a prosperous voyige to his Navy, (which he intended under command of Nearchus his Admiral should sayl through the Ocean into the Persian Gulf, and so up Euphrates and Tigris) and that no mortal after him might passe the bounds of his expedition. Then returned he up the River to Parcala, whither he found Pithen come with the Forces, purposing to leave half the Fleet at the Citie (to this day called Pattala in Cambaia) he commanded Hephastion there to make an Haven, and provision for shipping. He himself sayled down the ffream on the left hand, which first lead him to a Lake, where he left Leonnatus with most of the Soldiers, and with 30 ships passed through this Mouth of Indus into the Ocean.

30. His design was to see whether the Fleet might not best say! this way into the Sea; and he satisfied himself that it might. Then did he Travel up the shore, and caused Wells to be digged thereon to furnish the Navy with water. Returning then to Pattala, he fent part of his Army to dig more, and going to the Lake, he caused Havens to be made, and provision for shipping: he also left there a Garrison with necessaries for 8 moneths. At this time the Etefian vyinds in this Countrey blowing from the South (though in other places from other quarters) hindred Navigation, wherefore he was con-Strained to leave Nearchus at Pattala with the Fleet till they should cease. He journeyed through the Countrey of the Arabita (or Arbita) to the River

Arabius (or Arbis) digging pits on the shore for the use of the Fleet in its Nearthus the passage by these Coosts. Nearthus and his followers were two moneths af-Admiral fayl- ter Alexander's departure driven out by the Inhabitants of Pattalena, and compelled to begin their Voyage ere the season of the year well served. Coming to the mouth of the River, they were forced to cut through a Rock (for some way) such a Dirch as by the help of the Tide might convey their ships safe into the Ocean. The Arabita hearing of Alexander's approach, fled into the Mountains, so that without opposition he passed over the River Arabins, and came into the Countrey of the Orita, of whom killing some, and taking others, (because they had not submitted themselves) he rhence marched into the Borders of the Gedrofians, with whom the Orice had joyned, but upon his approach sent and begged peace, which he granted, on condition that they would depart to their dwellings. He fet over them Apellophanes with whom he left Leonnatus one of the keepers of his body, with a party of horse and foot to expect the coming of the Fleer, and in the mean while to build a new Citie, and fettle the affairs of the 31. In his passage through the Countrey of the Gedrosians, greate losse and damage hapned to him than in all his expedition through Afia besides: because, what for want of water, by excesse of heat, ill diet and hunger, he Alexander past carried not out the fourth part of those forces he brought into India. Yet, fest the Coun- was not this losse suffained through ignorance; for some tell us, that he knew, Grangary with of the danger very well; but hearing that this Countrey had been formerly incredible dif- invaded both by Semiramia and Cyrus, whereof the former was forced to fly but with 30 Attendants, and the later with 7. he had an itching defire to paffe through it, and in the glory of his adventure to excell them. After incredible crouble undergone, for 60 dayes, he came to Pura the chief Citie, where (as it was time) he refreshed his Army, and thence marched towards the Borders of Caramania. Hither news came that Philip, Governour of the Oxydraca, and of other Indians, was killed by the Mercenary Soldiers; but that his death was revenged upon them by the Macedonians; vvhereupon he vvrote to Taxiles and Endemus to take care of the Countrey, till fuch time as he could fend one to succeed Philip. Coming into Caramania not far from Persia, he animadverted upon the Governour, as upon Cleander and Stealces, who being fent to kill Parmenio, had after his death committed grievous outrages upon the people in those parts. He also punished Ozines and Zariaffes, who had folicited the Persians to revolt, and Heracon, who had rifled the Temple at Sufa: here also he made Penceftes

To Perfepolis.

daughter of

Davius.

one of the keepers of his body, they being before this seven in number. In the mean time Nearthus having passed the borders of the Arabit, Orica, Gedrosians, Ichthyophagi, came into the Persian Gulf, and arrived at Armusia (now called Ormin) where understanding that his Master was but distant five dayes journy, he went to him, and having made a report of his Voyage, returned prefently to the Fleet, with order to passe up to the mouth of Emphrates, and thence row unto Babylon.

32. It beng now very good failing, Alexander sent Haphassion by Sea into He cometh to Perfia, with the greatest part of his Army, and shortly after departed himfelf and came by Land to Pafargade, where he bestowed money on the women, according to the custome of the Persian Kings when they came thither, Perfia. Here he much lamented the violation of Cyrus his Sepulchre, which fince his former being here, had been robbed of all it's riches, except a Litter, and a continuity to golden Urn wherein was the body; and this also was cut and mangled, the Diodorus &c. cover being taken away, and the body cast out. He commanded the Urn to be A. M. 2680.

repaired as well as might be, and the reliques of Cyrus being therein deposi- 01, 113, 48,4 ted, the dore-place to be walled up. From Pafarguda, now called Chelquera, V.C. 429. he came to Perfepolis, the fear of the Perfian Kings, where great complaints Alexand, 12, being made against Orxines (who being descended from Cyras and the seven Conspirators, had contained the Persians in obedience after the death of the Covernour Phrasortes) he was crucified through the malice of Bagoas the Eunuch, Alexander's minion, who hated him, upon no other account, than for that bestowing great gifts upon the Courtiers at their return, he neglected him. Phradases also, who had been Governour of the Mardi, Hyrcanians, and Tapyri, washere put to death, for affecting Kingly power. But, Penceftes who protected the King among the Malli, and as a reward had been received amongst the Keepers of his body, was now further made Governour of Persia, and thereupon fully conformed himself to the fashions of the Country

33. Alexander had a great defire to fail through Euphrates and Tigris into the Persian Gulf, to compasse about Arabia and Africk, and so to passe Avianus in a through the Straights leading into the Mediterranean (now called the Straights of Gibraltar) for which purpose he commanded wood to be cut down in Libanus, to be catied to Thapfacus in Syria, and being made into thips, thence to bee conveyed to Babylon. Not long after, Nearchus brought the fleet up Passigris to a bridge newly made for the pasfing over of the Land-army, where for the meering of both the Armies, after fix moneths fail, Alexander facrifized, and celebrated games. Thence marching to Sufarthe Provinces by their Deputies there accused many of their Officers, besides other offences, of violating their Temples. He caused them all to be put to death, without respect to any former friendship, and with them Cleander, Sualces, and Heracon, whom he had formerly condemned in Caramania. This feverity noised abroad, nerled many that knew themselves faulty; Some scraped together much money and fled, and others that commanded the mercenaries revolted, which caused him to send up and down Afa to disband the Stipendaries, who being thus put out of employment, robbed all over, and at length met at Tenarus, a Promontory of Laconia in Greece, whither many of their Captains fled to them. Alexander now maried Statira the daughter of Darius, and gave her younger fifter Drypetis to his beloved Hephastion, having a great defire that his children might be cousins He marieth to him. To some so more of his Commanders he gave wives of the daugh-Statira the > Macedonians that had maried wives in Affa he gave gifts. 34. Moreover he paid the debts they had contracted in Afia, and because they were unwilling by giving up their names to let him fee how bad husbands they had been (for they suspected him of such an intention) he caused the mony to be given them, without taking account to whom, and this expence reached not fully 10000 talents (as appeareth from Diodorm, Curitin, and Plutarch;

ters of the chiefest Medes and Persians, to which he assigned dowers. He made one great wedding-feast for himself and them all : and to the other

The Macedonists mucinie,

But having

Plutarch i though Justin and Arrianus mention 20000) fo that as Curtius observeth, this Army which had conquered so many Nations, brought more victory than booty out of Afa. He also rewarded them severally, as they had done him most eminent fervice; and to Pencestes, Leonnaus, Nearchus, Onesicratus, Hephastion, and other keepers of his body, he gave golden crowns. But this did not fatisfie the Macedonians, fo as to keep them from mutinying. For, having failed the River Eulans to the Sea, thence to the mouth of Tigits, and up this River as far as Opis, he there calling them together, give liberty to all who were rendred unfit for service, either through age or mairnednesse, to return home, promiting great rewards to such as would voluntarily flay and finish the War with him. Though he intended hereby to gratifie them, yet they made a bad construction of it, as proceeding from Contempt of them and their fervice, as counting them unfit for War. They called also to minde how he used the Persian habit and customs, as did some of his favourites; that the barbarous Nations were admitted amongst that Troop called his friends; and that he had lately caused 30 odd young men to be picked up out of the Provinces, whom trained up in the discipline of Macedonia, he called Epigoni, or his pofterity. Confidering thefe things, and thinking that he now despited their persons, fashions, and Country, they all defired to be disbanded, and bade him go alone to the Wars with his father Hammon, feeing he fet fo light by his Soldiers. 35. The King inraged, presently caused thirteen of the ringleaders to be apprehended, and drowned in the River; and reviling the rest bade them all be gone home. Then entering his Palace, for that day and the next he would admit none to his presence. On the third, having confined the Macedonians to their tents, he called such strangers to him as followed his Camp. Their faithfulnesse to him and the former Kings he commended, he related whit favours he had showed them, and told them he now took them as fellow Cirizens, gave them the Arms of the Macedonians, and would have the Kingdom of Europe and that of Affa the fame thing. Out of them he chose 1000 young men, to whom he committed the charge of his person in the Court : he bestowed the commands of the Army amongst them, and made choice of some, whom naming his kinsfolk, he permitted to kille him. These things cut the Mucedonians to the heart, and made them feriously repent of their rashnesse. Coming to the Palace, they threw down their Arms at the gate, and with great lamentation defired to be admitted, offering to give up the incendiaries, and defiring him rather to kill than thus diffrace them. He refused to admit them, but they continued still two dayes and as many nights inconciled before the gates, professing that they would not depart till he had compassion on them. On the third day, perceiving them thus humbled, he came forth to them, and Callines after mutual weeping, told him, that it troubled them to know others received into his kindred, and themselves excluded from it.

He answered, that he received them also, and so would call them thenceforth: then he offered himfelf to be kiffed by as many as would. Being thus received again into favour, they returned with great joy to their tents, and afterwards were feafted by him, together with Persians and others, to the number of good guests. 36. He difmissed now such as were unserviceable for the Wars (though some fay it was not till a little before his death) to whom he paid not onely their arrears, but gave them money to bear their charges, and a talent to every man besides. He sent home with them Crasers his beloved friend to govern Greece and Macedonia in the room of Antipater, who was to bring over a the count to to Echatane the chief feat of Media, where Hephellian by drinking got a Peaver, and then impatient of a ftrict dier, died of it in feven dayes. In the absence of Glaucus his Physician (who was gone to the Theater to behold the ly, faffed three dayes, and refufed to be comforced. He commanded the sports) he eat his dinner, and after it drank a cup of cold wine, which, as is was thought, increased the distemper. Alexander took his death most beavi503

He cometh to

Where he

Feaver.

Babylon,

Phylician to be crucified, bespoke an universal mounning, wherein the Cities shared by the removal of their ornaments from the walls. He ordered Perdiecas to convey the body to Babylon, where he intended him a most sumptuous monument, and refused to fill up his place of Captain of his Thousand friends, left his name should be forgotten, by which he would have the Company fill called. Then, for diversion, he made War upon the Coffai, a People bordering on the Oxii, which having flood out against the Persians, despifed him alfo, in respect of their valour, and the strength of their Country. firuate upon the mountains of Media. Yet for all this, and the coldnesse of Winter, he brought them under within 40 dayes. 37. Having a great defire to fail the Cafpian Sea, he fent Heraclides with divers Ship-carpenters into Hyrcania to build thips, and then he took his journy towards Babylon. Being distant from the City two or three dayes journy, the Chaldaans fent to warn him that he should not come into the City, for they were told by their god Belm, that, if he did, it should be fatal to him. He intended to follow their advise; but being perswaded otherwise by Anaxarchia and other Gracians, at length he refolved on the contrary. Then they defired him that he would not enter with his face upon the West; but it being difficult not so to do, by reason of the Fens about the City, has ving flighted their former advice, he also rejected this. Being arrived, he gave audience to Ambassadors sent to him now from all parts, not onely out of Asia, but from Africk and Europe alfo , Out of Africk, from the Nations fituate but from Africa and Europe and Sout of Africa, from the Patrons induce A. M. 361, upon the Sea-Coafts as far as the Atlantick Ocean: from Europe, befides Ol. 114, 42, 1. the Gracians, Thracians, Illyrians, and Soythians, from forme Nations of urbis condite Tialy, as the Brutii, Luçani, Tusci; from Sicilie, and Sardinia; as also 430. from the Spaniards and Galls, then first known to the Macedonians ; but as for Alexand, 13. the Romans, though some ranked them in the number, yet have we no reafon to give credit to their report. At the celebration of the Olympick games. he caused it to be proclaimed, that all Greek Exiles might return home, except fuch as were banished for Sacrilege or murther, against which the Athenians and Atolians onely made refistance. Then celebrated he the funerals of Hephaftion with vast magnificence, and sacrificed to him as an Heroe. After this he made great preparations for shipping, intending also to invade and conquer Arabia, which, hearing that it was no leffe than India, he fent fome to discover. 28. While these preparations were making, and an Haven in digging at Rabylon, he passed through Euphrates into Pallocopa, a River, which being supplied with water from the former, thereby hindreth it from overflowing the Country. Here he opened the passages, made a new one towards the Lakes, and coming into the borders of Arabia, built there a City. Then deriding the Chaldeans, for that he had both entred, and failed in fafety from Babylon, he thither returned, and liking the City exceedingly, inrended to make it the feat of his Empire; though it was but for a short space, as it fell out. For, having fare up feafting and drinking very late one night, as he was departing to go to bed, he was again invited by Medius Theffalian falleth into to another carowze, where chaffenging, and being chaffenged, he drank fo much wine as put him into a Feaver, whereof he died the eleventh day. Some Vide water have delivered that he was poyfoned by the procurement of Antipater, who Plutarium & fulpecting he was through the malice of Olympias called out of Macedonia for Diodoum See no good towards himself, fent his fon Cassander with posson to be delivered to spill as to sale and his other fone, that then waited on the Vision to be delivered discounting to Collas and his other fons, that then waited on the King. Indeed Caffander 6, 17. was not at all fayourable, as he ought to have been, to the interest of Alexan- Macrobium der'spollerity, as neither to his reputation; and coming to him a little before Salurad, libs. his death, he did but little frive to fuit his humour. For feeing the Barba- cap, 31. riant adore him, and being unacquainted with fuch afight, he burst forth into laughing, for which Alexander caught him by the hair, and knocked his head foundly against the wall, as Plut arch tellethus, But as for matter of poison , the long lying of his body in fo hot a Country, during the contentions of his Captains, betraied no symptoms thereof, and therefore others give no credit to the report. Moreover, the course of his ficknesse presenteth us with no fuch symptomes, as it is described to us by Plutarch and Arrianns out of his Diaries. 39. On the 18th day of the (Macedonian) moneth Dufius (May the 12)

The iviacedonian Empire.

he flept in a Bath, because of his feaver. The day following he returned to his Bed-Chamber, and frent it with Medius at Dice then being walhed at nicht, and having finished his devotions, he supped something liberally, and all the night was much distempered. On the 20th day he washed, and having finished a solemn sacrifice, in the Bath heard Nearthus relate the story of his Navigation, and of what he had feen in the Ocean. On the 21th having done the same thing his Feaver increased, and he had an ill night. The day after he was held with a sharp Feaver, and was removed near the great place for swimming, where he discoursed with his Officers about supplying V.1cant places in the Army with the fittest persons. On the 24th his difease increasing he sacrificed being borne out to the place, and commanded the principal of his Officers to fray in the Court, and the rest to watch before the Gates. Being removed into the inner Palace on the 25th day he rested a listle; but the Feaver abated not, and when the Captains came to fee him he spake not a word. So he passed over the 26th day, whereupon the Macedonians thinking him to be dead, came with great noise to the Door, and compelled his friends to let them in: fo in their Coats every man of them paffed by his bed's side. The same day Pithon and Seleucus were sent to the Temple of Serapis, to ask if he should be removed thisher, and received answer. that he should continue where he was. On the 28th day towards the evening he expired. Though he (a) fainted by the violence of his difease: vet lean- (a) Val. Max. ing on his Elbow, he reached out his hand to all Soldiers that would touch lib.s. cap. 1. it in their paffage, and (which feemeth incredible) (b) continued in Exter. Exemp.r. the same posture he had set himself, till the whole Army had saluted lib. 10. cap; 7.

40. The Soldiers being all gone, he asked his friends about him whether they thought they should have such another King. When all kept filence he faid, that as he was ignorant hereof, fo he knew, could Prophesic, and almost Justia libers. fee with his eyes how much blood Macedonia would feed in this controver - com, Noposin sie, with what flaughters and bloudshed it would make him a Parentation Eumene, when he was dead. At length he commanded his body to be buried in the Curtius in fu-Temple of Hammon, and when his friends asked him to whom he would pro. leave his Kingdom, he answered, to the most Valiant. Yet having taken his Ring from his finger he gave it to Perdiccas: whereby all conjectured that he commended his Kingdom to him till his Children should grow up. Again, Perdiccas demanding of him when he would have Divine honours Of which he given to him, he replied, then, when they (his followers) were happ;

live any longer. So, refraining from all fustenance she died the fifth day af-

Of which he given to man, at terminal and a little after he departed. He which were his last words, and a little after he departed. He will 32 * Justin curyears and eight moneths, reigned twelve, and also eight moneths. He died 1181, Diadoisis fix years and ten moneths after the murther of Darius, in the first year of the 114 Olympiad, A. M. 3681. 222 years before the Ara of Chrift. Siftgambis the Mother of Darius having with some patience born the loffe both of her Son's life and Empire, when the heard of Alexander's death refuted to

CHAP

CHAP. I I.

CHAP. II.

Of fuch things as hapned after the death of Alexander amongst his Captains, till their Cantonizing of his Empire into their particular Kingdoms, and their taking the Stile and Title of Kings upon them, containing the space of 17 years.

Alexanders If. I. fue and Linage.

504

A Lexander, though he had taken several Wives, yet lest but one Son A already born of Barline, the Daughter of Artabazus a Perlian, and another in the belly of Roxane, the Daughter of Oxyaries. His Son called Hercule was despited upon his Mothers account by the Captains, who much scorned the Conquered Nations. He had a fifter named Cleopatra, Widow to the King of Epirus and their Uncle, who was slain in Italy; and a base brother called Aridaus (begotten on Philinna a vvoman of Larissa) who married Eurydice the daughter of Amyntas, whom being the right Heir, and his Nephew, Philip kept from the Kingdom of Macedonia, after he nad exercifed the Office of his Procellor, and on him bestowed a daughter of his own in marriage. This Amynias bore patiently the want of the Kingdom all Philip's time, but in the beginning of Alexander's reign, with the loffe of his life, attempted fomething. His title through the prowesse of the two late Kings was utterly forgotten ; Cleoparra (as a woman perhaps) was not thought of. Aridaus neither by birth, personage, or qualities was fitly endowed; yet upon him the election fell, for want of a better, because the Captains were at a losse what course to take. 2. For, Ptolomy the fon of Lagua (as he was called; but reputed the fon of Philip, who, as it's faid, having used the company of Arfinos his Mother, Contention amongst his Captains about the fuccession.

put her off in marriage to Lagus, when great with Child) rejecting the title of the half Persian brood, though as Alexander's Children they should have been confidered, was for the Captains their taking the rule upon them, and deciding all things by Vote of the major part. But as he might think this course most likely to serve his own ambition, so Aristonia perhaps on the fame grounds betook himself to the words of Alexander, which he interpreted as meant of Perdiceae, because, saying, that he lest his Kingdom to the worthiest, at the point of death he delivered to him his Ring. He was feconded by many, who either bore good will to Perdiecas, or out of fear that he would carry it, would not venture to oppose him. But he would needs make a shew of modesty, thinking thereby the more to indear himself, whereat Meleager an envious man, and one who bore to him a particular grudge, took advantage to inveigh against him, and disturbed all Councils, by perfwading the Soldiers that whofefoever was the Empire, they had the best title to the Treasure. During the uproar Aridaus was mentioned, and his name laid hold on by some peaceable spirits, who labouring betwixt the parties wrought a composure for the time, wherein yet Perdiecas had the better of his advertary. It was agreed according to the defire of the Infantry, that Aridans the base son of Philip should be King, and for as much as he was stupid and dull (rather through the practifing of Olympias upon him, as some thought, than any Original indisposition) Perdiccas was made his Protettor, and Commander of his Forces, who hereby in effect was King for a time, though that title, with the name of Philip, for a greater grace was conferred upon the 3. Then did the Officers distribute the Provinces of the Empire amongst themselves. Macedonia and Greece were left to Antipater, Thrace with the neighbouring Countreys was affigned to Lysimachus; Egypt, with all that which of Cyrene, A frick, and Arabia had belonged to Alexander, was fet ces distributed over to Prolomy the son of Lagus. Syria and Phanicia were committed to amongst the Laomedon; Amenia to Neoptolemus; Mesopotania to Arcesilaus. In Asia the leffe, Cappadocia and Paphlagonia, with the Countreys thereto adjoyning, which Alexander had passed by in his Conquests, were assigned to Eumenes; A. M. 3682. Pamphylia . Lycia . Lycaonia , and the greater Phrygia to Amigonus ; the Ol. 114 agn. 2. leffet Phygia as far as the Hellespont to Leonatus; Cilicia to Philotas, to- V. C. 431. gether with Ifauria; and Caria to Cassander. Menander was confirmed in 321. the Government of Lydia given him by Alexander. The Isle of Cyprus re-Piolom, 1, mained in the power of certain Governours to which he had granted it; and all that part of his Empire from Babylon Eastward continued in the state wherein he left it. Thus was his Dominions disposed of otherwise than he Diodorus L 20. intended, for one telleth us that he made a Will, which he delivered to the ad 01,118. Rhodians, and another affirmeth, that thereby all was given to one onely Suc- ann.4. cessor. After this his Funerals were thought of, his body having Iven seven Ammianus dayes neglected. Yet no corruption had feized on it, and it looked as fresh in the face as though it had been living, which as it's faid made the Agypti- Tulting ans and Chaldeans afraid to touch it; but having prayed that mortals might Curtius I. to. lawfully do it, they embalmed, and after that adorned it with royal En- Diodorus ad figns. The care of the burial was committed to one Aridaus (not the King, Olymp. 114. though some have so mistaken) another of the Captains, who spent two years ann. 2. & 3. in making preparation for it, which made Olympias tax the late ambition of her fon, and bewail his misfortune together in the same speech, as * Elian * Var. Hill. observeth. For, the burial of Alexander was to be ushered in by the Funerals "Var. rup. of many of his followers. 4. Prolomy got possession of Egypt vvithout any trouble, and settled him-Ptolomy ger teth possession self therein, partly by his fair carriage rowards the Inhabitants, and partly by the power of an Army, which he raifed by the virtue of 8000 Talents, Hearing that Perdiccas had an intention to deprive him of his Government. he contracted affinity with Antipater, and making away Cleomenes his Lieutenant, because he was much addicted to the Prosettor, fortified the Countrey. Antipater was now imployed in the Lamian War against the Athenians and Ætolians, vvho refused to receive their Exiles, as vvas hinted be-War in Greece, fore, and so distressed him in battel, that he was forced to fly to Lamin, a Citie of Pthiotis. Here Leosthenes the Athenian General besieged him; but when he perceived him forfaken by the Liolians he issued out, and slew him in the charge, being an excellent Soldier, and one who had deferved well of Greece. Leanatus Governour of the leffer Phrygia, allured by promise of his daughter, came over to help Antipuer; but marching through Theffaly was driven into a Fen by the Gracians, and there flain. At his mishap Antipater (vyho coming thicher the day after, united his Forces with his own)

Arideus decla red King.

is faid to have rejoyced, because he had determined to make himself Master of Macedonia. At this time Perdiceas taking the King along with him, went Predictor sub- against Ariarathes of Cappadocia, vyhom getting into his hands he Crucified, ducth Cappaand subduing those Countreys which Alexander had passed by, gave them to docia, Eumenes, according to agreement. Craterus not long after passed over into A. M. 3682. Macedonia, to the affiftance of Antipater, with 10000 Macedonians, and 150 01,114, and, 2. Persians, which Force united to the Army of Antiparer, overpowered the V. C. 431. joynt strength of the Gracians.

5. After this begun the Civil Wars betwixt the Captains themselves. For, Perdiccas breathing after the Soveraignty, and knowing how able the other were to withstand him, grudged Ptolomy exceedingly the possession of Egypt, and through the perswasion of Eumenes procured much enmity, in Died.

that having married Nicaa the daughter of Antipater, by his advice, he refolved to put her away, and take Cleopatra to wife, the daughter of Philip. and fifter to Alexander. This being made known to Ansigonus, he certified Antipater of it, and being calumniated by Perdiceas (who intended to make him away) he fled unto him, with Demetrine his fon. Perdiceas confulting with his Officers what in this case was to be done, resolved first to set upon

Egypt, lest Ptolomy during his absence in Greece, should seize upon Alla. And to keep Asia against Anupater and Craterus, he lest Eumenes with Perdiccas golarge power over the Provinces, joyning with him Alceras, his own brother, th against Ptolomy. and Neoptolemus. Perdiccas taking along with him Aridaus the King, and amongst the Captains,

Civil Wars

young Alexander now born of Roxane (who was eight moneths gone with child of him when his Father died) for a more specious pretence, marched against Piolomy. Antipater, and Craterus, hearing how things went, clapped up a Peace prefently with the Atolians, and leaving Polysperchon to go- A. M. 36847 vern Macedonia and Greece, passed over the Hellespont, and dispatched away Ol. 114.41 messengers to Prolomy to enter into a league and society with him. 6. Alceras, with those Macedonians he commanded, flatly refused to fight Ptolom. 3.

against them; and Neoptolemus envying Eumenes the chief command, plain-

Eumenee lefr by him in Afia ectreth the

v revolted. After this, some were sent to feel Eumenes, but he answered, that he would rather die than betray his trust, whereupon Antipater and Craterm divided their Forces. Antipater marched towards Egypt to joyn with Prolomy, and Craterin staied to oppose Eumenes, with whom fighting in Cappadocia, his Horse stumbled, and he was run through with a Lance, and after the fight died of the wound: Neoptolemus also grapling with Eumenes was flain by him. By this time Perdiccas with the two Kings came to Pelusium in Agypt, where though Ptolomy purged himself of the crimes objected against him, yet he would pursue his enterprize, though contrary to the inclination of his Soldiers, his end being hereby to be brought about. Divers of his friends presently forsook him; yet he set upon a Castel near the Nile, and not being able to gain it, marched away and came over against Memphis, where the River parting into two streams, maketh an Island very convenient for the lodging of his Army. Endeavouring to bring his men into it, he loft 200 in the Ford, for that those who first waded over so removed the sand at the bottom, that the River was too deep for such as followed. Yet did he command those who had got safe over to return; of whom part were drowned. fome caried down the fream to the Enemie, and others being toffed to and fro in the River were devoured by Crocodils. By this imprudent act the Idem, Paulan. Perdicens flain, minds of his followers were so turned against him, that 100 of his chief Officers revolting, he was flain by certain Horse-men, after he had continued in Eumen.

in his rower almost three years. * One reporteth, that he was slain at the River Nile by Seleucus and Antigonus. 7. Piolomy came over to the Kings, whom with the Officers he magnificently entertained, and then an election being to be made of a new Governour for them in the room of Perdiceas, though he could eafily have procured himself to be chosen, yet he got two others elected, viz. Pithon one of Alexander's most incimate friends, and Aridaus, who having the care of the funeral committed to him, had at the defire of Piolomy buried the King's bo-

Pithon and Arideus chofen into his And Eumenes declared an dy at Memphis, against the will of Perdiccas. The Army now being displeased at the death of Craterus, declared Eumenes an Enemy, and chose Antigonus together with Ant pater Generals for the subduing of him. But Pubon and Aridans held not their places long, for Enrydiae the wife of Ari-Fither layeth dans the King, being a woman of a notable spirit, would have nothing done down & An- without her knowlege, and grew so incolerable, that Pithon therewith weatipnter chosen ried, and seeing the Macedonians too much addicted to her, called the Solinto his Place. diers rogether, and laid down his Protectorship. Into his room then Antipater was elected with full power.

8. Against him also Eurydice raised such a Sedition in the Army, taking occasion at the want ofpay, that with much ado he escaped the danger of his ol, its on, life, by the means of Antigonus and Seleucus. After this, he anew divided V.C. 434. fuch Provinces as he saw convenient, placing and displacing Governours. He Ptolom. 4-He createth Antigonus General against Enmenes.

created Antigonus General against Enmenes, sending his own fon Cassander as Collonel with him, by whom he might be certified, in case he attempted any thing for his own establishment; and then with the two Kings he marched for Macedonia. Eumenes having intelligence concerning these Councils, made all preparations possible for resistance. In the Spring Antigonus came against him into Cappadocia, where he first attempted by Libels thrown into his Camp, to draw his Soldiers from their obedience, offering a great reward for his head. Eumenes gave his Soldiers thanks for their fidelity, but told them, that these Libels were feigned by himfelf to try them, which was a notable device (and sumenes worfled through ercachery.

V. C. 433.

a confiderable party, but was purfued and taken, and being put to death, the Soldiers returned to obedience. But Apollonides his General of the Horse did most mischief, for being corrupted by Antigonus, when they came to ioyn battel he passed over with his Troops to him, whereby Eumenes had the world of it, and loft about 8000 men, with his Cariages.

of fuch he was full) to make them wary of giving credit to fuch for the time to come. Yet fome proved false to him, as one Perdicent, who drew away

The Empire of the Macedonians.

o. Apollonides the Traytor he caught and hanged : then , flying a private way, he returned to the Camp, and there buried his dead, to the wonder and amazement of the Enemy, after which he could have plundred the carriages of Antigonia but for burthening his Soldiers with the booty. Being driven to and fro in this flight, at length he betook himself to a Castel called Nora, fituate in the Confines of Cappadocia and Lycaonia, and dismissed all his Army, except 100 Horse-men, and 200 Foot, as also such friends as were unwilling to undergo the hardship of a Siege. Anigonus before he would lay close fiege to the place, called him forth to a Treaty, requiring him to come to him a Superiour, to which he answered, that he accounted no man his Superiour so long as he had a Sword by his side. This parley, though managed with much respect, came to nothing, and Antigonus leaving a party

his place to Polyfperchon.

Besieged in sufficient to carry on the Siege, marched against Alcetas and Attalia, two of A. M. 2686. Eumenes his confederates, whom he suppressed. About this time Antipater ol. 115, an. 2. died in Macedonia, and at his death more swayed by the Publick good than V. C. 435. Anipater dieth any selfish respect, lest Polysperchon (who after himself was the oldest of Ptolom. 5. Alexander's friends now living) Protector of the Kings, and Captain, with full authority. Caffander his fon stomached this very much, and confulting how to advance himself to be chief, secretly entered into confederacy with divers Captains. Amongst these was Piolomy, whom he defired that he would fend him some ships out of Phanicia (for all that Country, together with Tudea, hee had now got into his power) into the Hellespont, But the death of Antipater strangely also made way for the inlargement of Eumenes.

10. For, Antigonus now being lest chief in Asia, thought of no lesse than getting it all into his power, and for that end strove to ingratiate himself with the several Caprains. Judging that the conjunction of Eumenes might be of great advantage to him, he fent Hieronymus his Country-man (who being an * Historian, wrote of the acts of Alexander and his Successors) to * Vide Vollium defire him, that forgetting the fight in Cappadocia, he would enter into fociety de feript. Grewith him, and receive a larger Province. He required that he should take an 64. 1. 1. 2. 11.

Eumenes,

oath, which, flightly passing over the Kings, he had framed to his own advan-Eumenes unwilling to swear fealty to him, with the affent of Hieronyproduceth the mas and the befregers, changed the form of the oath, and fwore to have the inlargment of fame friends and enemies, not onely with him, but with Olympias, and the Kings. Hereupon the Siege was raifed after a years continuance, which he had born with admirable chearfulnesse and prudence, and now being let loose drew many followers after him, fo that within a few dayes, befides the 500 which had continued with him in the Castel, he had 2000 at his devotion. Antigonus was very angry that he had changed the form of the oath, and by Letters checked the befiegers, for admitting of it, requiring them to befiege him again; but it was too late. Thus, they were as far from clofing as before; and still were further fet at distance by the affaires which now were on

11. Polysperchon having succeeded Antipater (as was before said) recal- A. M. 3687. led Olympias out of Epirus, whither her enmity with Antipater had driven 01, 115, an, 30, her. inviting her to take the care of her young grand-fon upon her. But Cafe, V. C. 436. her, inviting her to take the care of her young grand-fon upon her. But Caf- Plot 6. lander resolving to venture for Macedonia, entred into consederacy with Prolomy and Antigonus, the later whereof gladly promifed him affiftance, out of love to the memory of his father, as he pretended, but indeed defirous that he should be diverted by so great a Warre, whilst he in the mean time might make fure of Afia. Polysperchon to secure Greece, in the name of Ttt 2

the

508

King's intereft.

To Sufa.

the Kings published an Edict for the abolishment of all such Oligarchies, as fince the paffing of Alexander into Afia, had been erected in any of the Cities, which by virtue hereof he restored to their former liberty, hereby to oblige, and keep them from yielding to Caffander. In the same name he alfo wrote to Eumenes, upon whom he confirmed his former Government, and bestowed more, beseeching him, that together with himself, he would take Caffander laupon him the protection of the King's house; if he pleased, in Macedonia, but Macedonia, & rather in Afia against Anigonus, who now had visibly revolted from it: Moreover, he wrote to the Treasurers in Cilicia, to furnish Eumenes with Eumenes is flired up to money, and to the Argyraspida (or the old Soldiers with Silver Shields) to stand for the obey him in all things. Olympia also by letters defired his help, owning him as the most faithful of those remaining, who could assist against the ruine and desolation of her family. 12. Eumenes not able to stay any longer in Cappadocia, because Menander was fent from Antigonus against him, hasted into Cilicia, where the Argyraspide being 3000 in number joyned with him. Feating the envy of the Macedonians, for that he was but a Stranger of the Cherrone fus of Thrace, he caried it with great civility towards all, and made himself but equal to the other Captains. To contain them in order, he feigned that Alexander had Died. appeared to him in a dream, fitting upon his Throne, and commanding as Plutarth & formerly, in compliance wherewith, he caused a Throne to be erected in a com, Neps in Tent as for the King, whereon was also laid a Diadem and Scepter; and Eumene, here the Council of Officers were alwaies to affemble: Then fending his tagim, i. 4. friends abroad he raifed many men, the report of the largnesse of his pay drawing Soldiers out of Greece it felf. Ptolomy and Antigonus fent to take off the Argyraspide, and Teutamus one of their Captains was perswaded by them, but was reduced to his former resolution by Anigenes his Collegue, and the common Soldiers were quieted by Eumenes, who came upon them while yet they were in fear of Amigonus, who threatned, that except they would deliver him up, he would come and destroy them with his Army. After this, Eumenes marched into Phanicia, intending there to provide shipping, that if need were, he might have entercourse with Polysperchon. He also intended to rescue Phanicia out of Ptolomie's hands; but finding himself unable to accomplish this design, he began his march through Colesyria, and passed on till he came to Carra near Babylon, where he took up his Winter

Who march- quarters. 13. Antigonus having overthrown at Sea Polysporchon's Navy, and attempeth to Carra. red something against the Governours near the Hellespone, now hasted to make a full conquest of Asia. He chose out of all his Army 20000 Foor, and 2000 Horse, wherewith, for expedition, he marched with speed into Cilicia to supresse Eumenes his forces ere he could get them together, which caused the other fooner to depart into Phanicia, whence he marched to Carra. Whilst he here remained he sence Selencus Governour of Babylon, and Pithon of Media, for aid against the enemies of the Kings; to which they an- Ol. 115, 41,4 fwered, that they were ready to affift the Kings, but not him, who was con- V.C. 437. demned by a Council of the Macedonians, and they folicited the Captains Ptolomia.

of the Argyraspida to forsake him; but in vain. After this he resolved for Sufa, thinking to get aide out of the upper Provinces, and money out of the Treasury, and thither he came with much difficulty, Seleucus having fo drowned his Camp, that he was forced to get off his men with boats. It hapned that the Governours of the Provinces were at this time gathered together with many forces against Pithon, who having flain Philotas, had placed his own brother Endramus in his stead. Fearing the like might be arrempted against themselves, they armed, and having overthrown him in barrel, drove The Gover- out of Parthia to Babylon, where he fled to Selencus for relief. Having nours of the formerly sent them Letters from the Kings, he now also solicited them for upper Provin- aid when thus met together, to which they agreed, and came down. These ses joyn with were Pencestes Governour of Persia, one of the Keepers of the late King's body, and now chosen by the rest for their Generalissimo; Polemon of Caramania, Sibyrtius of Arachofia, Stafander of Aria, and Drangiana; Andrabazus, who was fent from Oxyaries Governour of the Parapomifada, and Endamns (or Endamon) Governour of the Oxydraca and Malli, who brought with him out of Ind a 120 Elephants (besides other Forces) which he got into his hands after he had flain Parus the King. Their united Force consisted of above 18700 foor, and 4600 horse, which being joyned to Enmenes his Army, made up a confiderable body.

14. They had falln out about chusing a new General, had not Eumenes his former device of fetting up Alexander's Pavilion and Throne prevented it, whither he perswaded them to repair, and rule in common; after which he took as much money out of the Treasury at Susa as his wants required. In Spring Antigonus being come into Mesopotamia marched to Babylon, A. M. 26893. where joyning in Confederacy with Soleneus and Pithon, he received some Ol, 116, and, 1. Forces from them, and paffed the River Tigru. Eumenes hearing of his co- V. C. 438. ming went down to Passigris, where he fell upon such of his Soldiers as Ptolomai 8. were got over the River, which he filled also with Carkeises, and took 4000 prisoners. Antigonus therefore bent his course another way to the Citie Badaca fituate upon the River Eulaus, whence he journeyed through the Countrey of the Coffeans with great difficulty, & hardship, into the habitable parts of Media, where he refreshed, and quieted his/men now ready to mutiny, by reason of their teadious journey. Eumenes marched into Persia, where the whole Army was Magnificently entertained by Pencestes the Satrapa, who now thought to establish himself in the Chief power, but by the great cunning of Eumenes, together with the other Captains, was retained in his former condition, and brought to a greater observance of him. Antigonus, following him into Persia, he returned to meet him, but feasting his Army, he drunk so excessively, that a great distemper thereby contracted, stopped him for some dayes, and then was he carried in a Litter out of the noise, till fuch time as the Front would not march without him in the head of them. He was therefore constrained to lead them, and shortly after to frame the battel in his Litter, which Antigonus faw, and laughed at it.

Antigonus marcheth against him.

gonus endeavoured to draw away Eumenes his men; but to no purpole; and afterwards resolved to go 3 dayes journey off into Gabiene, for that the Armies were both much straightned for necessaries. Eumenes hearing this, sent some, who as Fugitives should acquaint him how as that night he intended to fall in upon his Camp, which he believing, stayed, expecting him, and then did Eumenes make haste to get into Gabiene before him. Anigonus feeing himfelf deluded, marched after with great expedition, and leaving behind the rest of his Army, with a party got before him. He presented then himself to his view upon the Mountains, which Eumenes feeing, and thinking he had all his Forces with him, made an Alt, and so they mutually deceived each other. Here in the Countrey of the Parataceni they joyned battel, wherein Eumenes had the better, though the other got the advantage of ground; but then his Soldiers beginning to be refractory would needs depart to their bag-

15. Four dayes were spent in light skirmishing, during which time Anti-gage, and not stay to bury their dead. Whereupon Anigonus doing this first. controverted, the victory came to be controverted. 16. Antigonus finding himself to have had the worst of it, went his way Diodorus ut to Gamarga in Media, where was plenty of Provisions, and then Eumenes Supra, Plutarch. finding his Army in no good case to pursue him, departed to Gabiene. Here Cornel, Nepos, he divided his Forces into their Winter quarters, not according to his own defire, but the pleasure of the Soldiers, for the old ones which had followed Alexander in his Conquests were grown so high, as they would rather give Laws to their Captains than receive them. Antigonus hearing this, thought to surprize them on a sudden, and for that they should know nothing of it, refolved to take a by-way, which yet was declared to Eumenes, who not being able to call his Soldiers together fo foon as was requifite, betook himfelf to his feldom failing policy. He caused fires to be made on the Mountains where the Enemy was to passe, which they beholding, thought he had there with him his whole Army, and so took the common way, after they were come into the midft of their journey. Antigonus stayed one day to recruit his Army, and Enmenes gathered in the mean time his Forces together which admired his prudence so much, as they ordered him to be the Chief, which made him come into the danger of life, divers of the great ones conspiring against him, which made him say he was amongst a company of wild beasts, and caused him to make his Will, and tear his Letters, lest any of them that had wrote unto him should be troubled after his death. This as it was faithfully done to his friends, so was it also in good time, as it after fell

The victory

Book III

17. For, shortly after, Amigonus and he came to a Pitch-battel, which decided the controversie, though not for the Conquerour. Eumenes lead into the field 36700 foot, 6050 horse, and 114 Elephants, Antigonus brought 22000 foot, 9000 horse, and 65 Elephants. The Argyraspides (or filver shields) got the victory, for they put all Antigonus his foot to flight, and killed 5000 of them, fo that though Pencestes withdrew himself out of the fight with his own horse, and 1500 more; yet Eumenes with the losse of 700 on his fide got the day. But neither valour nor wifdom could befriend him, for the place where they fought being exceeding dufty, so as ones fight was taken away at a little distance, Antigonus sends a party of his horse to plunder his Enemies baggage, fo that the Macedonians though Conquerors, after teth the betthe battel fell into a deep melancholy for the losse of their Wives and Children taken away, and Touramus first without the knowledge of any one

But is betrayed by his men,

whereupon the Macedonians, the 1000 which Pencestes commanded, and most of the other Captains revolted, and Eumenes having his hands tied behind him was delivered up; his Army shamefully following him to the Tents of Anigonus, leading it felf in Triumph after him. Antigonus for thame would not see Eumenes his old fellow Soldier in that condition; but affigned him to Keepers, at first requiring he should be strictly looked to, but afterwards remitting that rigour till almost all perswaded him to make an end of him. This he was loath to do, and took 7 dayes to consult in; but then fearing some Sedition might arise in the Army, he commanded his dayly allowance of meat should be withdrawn, faying, he would never lay hands upon him. Two or three dayes he languished in this condition, and then the Army being to march, one was fent in, and killed him without the

fent to Antigonus, who Covenanted with him to restore him all, on condition

Eumenes were delivered to him, and they would all passe into his Camp,

And killed.

knowledge of Antigonus; fo fell this brave man, excelled in Military glory but by few Captains, in the eighth year after the death of Alexander. 18. Caffander having obtained of Antigonus 35 ships, and 5000 men, Diedena Lit. fayled with them to Athens, which together with the Haven he had got into his power, by means of Nicanor, whom he had fent before-hand for that purpose. Against him came Polysperchon, intending to besiege him, but his Provisions failing, he lest his son with a party in Attica, and with the greatest part of the Army marched into Peloponnessus against the Inhabitants of Megalopolis, who onely amongst the Cities had refused to take away their Oligarchy, and had joyned with Cassander. Here he had the worst of it, and that brought him fo into contempt, as most of the Greek Cities revolted from him to Cassander, and the Athenians seeing they could not shake off his Garrison, agreed with him that he should retain the Fort Munychia, till the War was finished with the Kings, but that the Citie should be governed by one whom he appointed, which was Demetrius Phalereus the Philosopher, Theophrastus his Scholar, who Governed ten years with moderation, and was honored with 260 Statues. Then Cassander making an expedition Laminsin into Macedonia, found there many friends. The year after, Polysperchon by vita the help of Aacida, King of the Molossians, reduced Olympias with Alex. Photissis. ander the son of Rhoxane her Grand-Child into Macedonia, whereupon Enrydice the Wife of Aridans the King fortified herself, and sent to Cassander for aid', but the Macedonians fearing the Majesty of Olympias fell away from alumbias de- her, and the with her husband being both committed to prison, he was first froveth Ari- made away, and then Olympias sent her a Sword, an Halter, and Poyson, to dess and his chuse which of them she pleased; so she praying the gods that she might have at length fuch gifts fent unto her, hanged her felf with her Garter. This hapned after Aridaus had enjoyed the title of King six years and four monerhs.

19. Olympias killed Nicanor the brother of Cassander, and destroyed the Diodorns 1,19. Sepulchre of his other brother Iollas, and then chusing out 100 of his chiefest Willeth Nica- friends put them to cruel deaths. But he hearing the was arrived in Macestrand others, donia, marched out of Peloponnessus against her, whereupon she made Ari-Bonous her General; and commanded him to meet Cassander, the betaking herself, with Alexander her Grand-son, his Mother, and others, into Pydna, hoping the should have many affistants, but she was deceived. For, Cassander A. M. 3690: befieged her by Land and Sea. Aacida was coming to affilt her, but by his Ol. 146, ann. 2. means his men fell away from him, and banishing him his Countrey, joyned V. c. 439. themselves and Kingdom to the other; others in Macedonia intended to aid her, but fearing Cassander, fell off also to him, and as for Polysperchon in whom rested now all her hope, Callas being sent against him corrupted also most of his Soldiers. The fiege therefore lasted without any let, till famine fo prevailed in the Citie, as many of the Defendants came out, and the was then driven by necessity to yield, very hardly obtaining promife of fafety to her person. Afterwards he caused such as whose Kinsfolks she had put to death to accuse her to the Macedonians, who naturally hared, and now incensed by them, condemned her. Then did he send some of her friends She is also murdred by to her, willing her to fly, but the denied it, and resolved to plead her cause Callander. before the people, fo that he fearing their affections might be moved towards her, fent some Soldiers to kill her. They were so struck with her Majefty, as they returned without doing their errand, but then fome the friends of whom the had made away came in, and flew her, not at all amated, or behaving herfelf otherwise than as the Mother of Alexander, whom she had outlived for eight years. 20. Pithon the Governour of Media, envying Antigonus his power, and greatnesse, laboured to draw most of the Soldiers now in their Winter quarters to his own party, intending to establish himself, which Antigonus being death by Anaware of, gave out that he would commit the East unto him, and by divers friendly Letters drew him to him, after which he got him condemned in a Council of his Affociates, and put him to death. Then marched he into Perfia, being received by the Inhabitants as King, for that now without controversie he was Lord of Asia. Here calling a Council, he confirmed divers in their Governments, and amongst the rest Sibyrtius of Arachosia, to whom he delivered Who ordering 1 000 of the most turbulent Argyraspides (who had delivered up Eumenes) matters as he under precence to ferve him in the Wars, but indeed to destroy them, giving but in the him secret order to expose them to ruin, that so they might never see more here, he removed him from the Government, to the great grief of the people, and then got the Treasure at Susa into his hands, out of which he made 25000 Talents. Thence he journeyed to Babylon, where Selencus the Governour royally entertained him, but offering to punish a certain Officer of the Army without his knowledge, he called him to an account for the Revenues of the place. Seleneus denied to account, faying, that place was given him by the Macedonians for his faithfull service performed to Alexander; but the Contest grew sharper every day, so as he remembring, and fearing the case Siturus flyeth of Psthon, with fifty horse in his Company fled into Egypt. Antigonus was glad he had gotten Babylon, and that without any violence offered to his antient friend; but being told by the Chaldeans, that if he let him go he should get all Asia into his power, and he himself should die in a battel against him,

Macedonia nor the Greek Sea. Perceiving Penceftes to be in great favour

he fent some to pursue him, but in vain, 21. Selencus being courteoufly entertained by Ptolomy, fent his friends into Europe to fir up Caffander and Lyfmachus against Antigonus, who fuspecting

Maketh the Captains

Whose Son

Demetrius is defeated by

Ptolomy.

512

speeding some such matter, sent also to retain them in his friendship, but they entred into confederacy together with Ptolomy against him, and all three fent their Ambassadors to him, as he was now marching towards upper Syria, to demand that Cappadocia and Lycia might be restored to Cassander Governour of Caria; Phrygia upon the Hellespont to Lysimachus, all Syria to Prolomy, and Babylon to Selenous, and to divide all the treasure he had got into his hands fince the death of Eumenes, with them and the other Macedogainst Antigo-nians who had lost their Governments. To this he answered sharply, and that he was already preparing for Prolomy, fo that the Ambassadors returning without any effect, they made great preparations both by Sea and Land. He understanding how full his hands would be, fent about to the chief States to retain them in friendship, and also to hire more Soldiers; he himself went into Phanicia, where he besieged Tyre, used great endeavour for the making of thips, and took in Joppe and Gaza. Ariftodemus also he fent into Lacomia, who there by the permission of the Lacedamonians raised 8000 Soldiers, and joyned Polysperchon and Alexander his son in confederacy with him, of whom the former was made General of Greece, and the later he defired to go over to Antigonus, who going accordingly, in an affembly of the Army accused Cassander, for that he had put Ulympias to death, had committed Rhoxane and her fon to custody, maried by force Thessalonica the daughter of Philip and fifter of Alexander, and so plainly affected the Kingdom of Macedonia: moreover, that he had re-edified Thebes destroyed by Alexander, and restored the Olinshians; whereupon he was declared an Enemy, except he would amend what was amisse, and obey Amigonus, and set all the Gracians at liberty, and so Alexander rewarded with 500 Talents was fent back. Not long after he revolted to Cassander, being for that declared General of Peloponnesus, and shortly after was traiterously slain by the Sicionians.

22. Seleuciu in Cyprus prospered against the party of Antigonus, and Diadarus Polyclism his Lieutenant overthrew Theodotus his Admiral both at Sea and Land, after which Ptolomy and Antigonia met and conferred together; but to no purpose. Caffander shortly after fearing Antigonus might passe over into Europe, to divert him, fent an Army over into Caria to help those Cities which were confederate with Selencin and Prolomy, Cassander the Gover-nour there joyning with him , which Antigonus fearing, left Demetrius his fon in Syria, with order to entrap Piolomie's forces if they should march that way, and for that he was but then 22 years old, left 4 grave men his friends to counsel and direct him. Upon his coming to Caria, Cassander the Governour having too great a burthen upon him, made a Peace, on condition to keep his place, and gave his brother for an Hostage, whom yet he getting again out of his hands, he presently revolved, after which Antigonus got divers Cities into his hands, and restored the Milesians to their liberty. At this time the inhabitants of Cyrene revolting, Ptolomy reduced them again to obedience by the means of Agis his General, and in Cyprus suppressed some of the Kings which were of the contrary faction. Returning home he was follicited be Seleucus to undertake an Expedition against Demetrius then in Calefyria, fo that with 18000 Foot, and 4000 Horse, he marched to Gaza, where Demetrius expected him. In the fight the forces of Demetrius feemed rather to prevail, till his Elephants being wounded and taken, his Horse out of fear ran away. He himself fled accompanied with many till he came to passe by Gaza, but then so many forsook him and went in thicker to ferch out their goods, as multitudes flocking to the gates, and they therefore being hindred from being shur, the enemies entred with them and took the Town. Prolomy took Siden also, and befreged Tyre, whose Governour Andronicus upon fummons refused to yield, and reviled him; yet he getting the place into upon fummons refused to yield, and reviled him; yet he getting the place into A. M. 3693 his power through the fedition of the Soldiers, when he looked for prefent of 117, and death, not onely forgave him, but entertained him courteously as his fami V. c. 441.

23. Protomy getting the places about Syria into his power, returned into Piolos, 1. Ægypi,

Ægrpt, being followed thither by many which were drawn by his great courtesie and clemency. But Seleucus thinking this a good opportunity for him to return to his former Principality, obtained of him 800 Foot, and 200 Horse, and with them marched for Babylon. In his way in Mesopotamia he gor, partly by fair means, partly by foul, those Macedonians which quartered at Carrha to joyn with him, but when he came to Babylon, the Inhahitants there willingly received him, and he shortly after stormed the Castel which was held by Antigonus his garrison. Nicanor the Governour of Media hearing this, came against him with above 10000 Foot, and 7000 Horse, whom he went out to meet with but few more than 3000 Foot, and 400 Horse, and knowing himself too weak to engage in a set battel with him, he hid his men in the Fens till he was past with his Army, and then came upon him lying careless in the night without any strict guards; so as the Persians vereth Babylon coming to fight, Enagrus their Captain was flain, with other Officers, at and the Ea- which being struck, and also weary of Antigonus his government, they revolted, and Nicanor with a few at his heels escaped, being glad he was not delivered up. Seleucus by this means getting a strong Army, easily made himself Master of Susiana, Media, and the Countryes thereto adjoyning; fo as getting hereby Royal Majefty, and Glory suitable to his dignity, some have from this year fetched the rife of that Era, which afterwards was called that of the Selonciae, and of the Greeks; for that his Kingdom proved the most considerable; about the year of the World 3694, the first of Eusebing in the 117 Olympiad, 209 years before the Era of Christ, and twelve years af- chronico, alii. ter the death of Alexander.

24. When Antigonus heard of it, he fent his fon Demerrius against him. who had now redeemed his credit by the overthrow of Cilles, fent to expel him out of Syrla by Ptolomy, and upon it called thither his Father, so as they recovered all that Country, and Phanicia out of his hands, he not daring to stav and try a battel with Antigonus. Demetrius led with him an Army of 15000 Foot, and 4000 Horse, with order to recover the Principality of Babylon, and then go down to the Sea. Pairocles, whom Seleucus had left A. M. 3694.

out, beyond which he could not flay, he left Archelans with a ftrong party to beliege the other. Then giving leave to his Soldiers to plunder all they could he departed according to his Father's order to the Sea, where he befieged

Halicarnassus, but was beaten off by Ptolomy, and so as it were took his leave of that Province for ever, taking what he could get along with him, and perhaps for this reason the Chaldeans with the Author of the second Book of he for whom they pretended themselves Administrators, and was their Soveraign Lord, was taken away. For Cassander taking notice that young Alexander grew up, and that the People began to talk, that now he ought to be Donetrius his gainft him, Governour of Babylon, hearing of his coming, advised the inhabitants to leave Ol. 117.00.2, the City, and flie some into the Defart, or over the River Tigris, he nimself Seleuci 2.

with a Band of men flew up and down, taking advantages at the Enemy, and Ptolom, 13. fent to Seleucus into Media for aid, fo that Demetrius coming and finding the City for saken, stormed one of the Forts therein, and for that his time was the Machabees in this year (one after the other) fix the Era of Seleucus, Not long after, Ptolomy, Caffander, and Lysimachus, made a Peace with Antigonus on these terms : that Caffander should be Captain General of En-An agreement rope; Lysimachus should retain Thrace, and Ptolomy Egypt, and the rest between Piolo- which he now enjoyed, until Alexander the son of Roxane should come to age, and that Antigonus should be over Asia, and the Greeks live after their own & Lyfimachus. Laws. This agreement was not kept long, each one feeking under any pretence to inlarge his Dominions, and indeed they might better do it, feeing delivered out of custody, and to enjoy his Fathers Kingdom, he fearing his own interest, commanded secretly Glaucius his Keeper to kill him and his Mother, and concealing their bodies, to acquaint no person living with it : The death of Thus he who was unborn when his Father died, died by the hands of violence young Alex- and treason, thirteen years after him.

25. He had a brother yet living elder than himself, who being begotten brother.

of Barlines (never maried to Alexander) was held as illegitimate by the Captains, though born before his Father's death. His name was Hercules, Hercules his being now kept at Pergamus, whence he was called shortly after the death of the other, by Polysperchon, who now being in Peloponnesus, and enving Cassander the Principality of Macedonia, sent about to his friends, intreating, that the youth being seventeen years old, might be brought, and established in his Fathers Throne. The Ætolians especially, with others, imbraced the motion, so as he got together about 20000 Foot, and 1000 Horse, in no

oreat space, and within a while after gathered up a numerous Army, with which he marched and came on his way to Stymphalia. Here Cassander opposed him, and seeing that his Macedonians took well enough this reduction Disagnus at of their Prince, and fearing they might revolt to him, fent to Polysperchon, Juliu lib. is and with vast promises secretly perswaded him to make away the young man, A M, 3696 Made away.

which accordingly was performed. About this time Demetrius overthrew Ol. 117.64.4 Prolomy his Lieutenants in Cilicia, and he to be revenged invaded Licia, V.C. 445. where he took some Cities, after that failed into Greece, where he endeavoured in emulation to Antigonus to fet the Cities at liberty, but the Greeks not keeping their promise of sending money and corn, having received Sieyon and Corinth from the Widdow of Alexander the fon of Ephaltion (who had revenged floutly her husbads death, and kept still these places) he agreed with Cuffander that each should retain such blaces as he had in his power, and returned.

26. Alexander had yet a fifter living called Cleopatra, formerly the Widdow of Alexander King of Epirus (who making an Expedition into Italy, ad Olympus, 20, ad Olympus, 20, ad Olympus, 20 perished, against the Lucanians, as Livie tells us) and after that maried to Perdiccas, whom also now being at Sardis, Antigonius feems to have wooed. But the inclining rather to Prolomy, Itole out of Sandis to go to him, whereupon Antigonus took fuch order by the Governour of the Town, that the

was not onely stopped in her journy, but by means also of some women secretly made away, after which to colour the matter he put some of them to their Aunt.

death, and buried her body with royal magnificence. Shortly after this, Demetrius was sent into Greece to set the Cities at liberty, which he accomplished at this time for Athens; Demerrius Phalareus being driven out, and conducted to Thebes, where he lived till Caffunder's death, and then fled to Ptolomy. After this, Demetrius being recalled to make War in Cyprus. thither he passed, where he overthrew Menelaus, Prolomy his brother and Governour there, and pursuing him to the City Salamine, flew 2000 of his men, and took 1000, and then befreged him in that place. Prolomy hearing of the defeat of his men, came both with Sea and Land forces, and ingaged remetrius his the besiegers in battel, wherein though he overthrew that Wing against which

of Kings,

Victories 2- he himself fought, yet the other prevailing, he was discomfited with the losse gainst Ptolomy of 8000 men, and all his ships save eight, with which he fled away, and Dewhereupon Antigonus and metrius became Master of the Town and Island. Antigonus being elevated Identified. then the reft with this successe, received the title of King given him by his friends, and a Platarible take the title Diadem fer upon his head, which title and honour he also gave to his Son Dunchia. Demetrius. The £gyptians also hearing this, lest they should feem to be A. M. 3698. dejected for their loffe, gave the name of King to Piolomy, who thence- of, 118,463, forth in all his Letters stilled himself so. Neither now would the other great V. C. 447. ones come behind these; for Seleucus, Caffander, and Lysimachus, after Seleucis. their example, took upon themselves the same dignity and title, all the near Ptolom, 17 relations of Alexander being quite extinct.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

From Alexanders Captains taking the Title of Kings, to the death of Seleucus the Surviver of them, containing the space of 24 years.

Neigonns animated by his late successe against Prolomy in Cyprus, Diodorus ibid. A now thought of no leffe than outing him also of Egypt it self; wherefore recalling his fon from the Island, he commanded all his Forces to meet at Antigonia (a Citie newly built by him upon the River Orontes in Stria, as convenient for the lying in wait against the upper Provinces & Egypt) which afterwards Selencus destroyed, & translated the Inhabitants to his Selencia, Antigonus leading the Land-forces himself, committed the Fleet to his fon, which was to fayl along upon the Coasts with the Army as it marched. Having good Provision both for men and beasts, he marched through the desert; the Navy went through great hazard at Sea, but the Tempest ceasing in good time, they came all together unto Nile. Prolomy by this time had so fortified the several mouths of the River, as the Sea-forces could do no good, though food at that time of the year, the water being very high: Moreover, many fell A. M. 3609.

Antigonus his

fmitleffe expedition as gainft Ptolo-

And as fruir-

leffe againft

they removed from one to another, and the Land-Army could not find any away to the Enemy, being allured with his promise of 2. 1. to every common 01.118. ann.3. Soldier, and a Talent to an Officer; fo that Antigonus was fain to retreat V.C. 448. into Syria, Ptolomy being exceeding glad hereof, fent to his Confederates to Ptolom 18. acquaint them with his good successe, and now having thus defended his King- Ptolomens in dom, accounted himself rightly to enjoy it, and hereupon some have accounted Regum Canone. the beginning of his reign from this very time, fixing it at 19 years distance from the death of Alexander.

2. This want of fuccesse allayed not the ambition of Antigonus. For, he Diodorus ibid.

fent his fon Dometrius prefently against the Rhodians, who had formerly difpleased him by a denial to send him aid, and ships. For, they endeavouring as near as they could to keep in with all these great onessyet were drawn by their private interest, especially to favour Piolomy, from whose Kingdom they got the greatest part of their livelyhood by way of Traffick. Demetrius according to his fathers command, went, and befreged their Citie, lying before it nigh a whole year, during which time he made all fores of opposition he could, till ordered by his father to make peace with them, which they were prone to accept of, though Ptolomy with others fent them Provisions, and supplies of men. Departing from Rhodes, Demetrius passed into Greece to restore the A.M. 3700.

other places to their freedom, Caffander feeing things by the help of Demetrius to go well with Greece, fent over to Antigonus to defire peace, but he refused it, except he would refer himself whole unto him. He being affrighted at this, fent to Lysmachus in Thrace, to come and Consult with him, and then they both diffritch away Messengers to Piolomy and Selencus, to let them see how they were concerned also to refift Amigonus. They hearkned willingly to the Cities which Caffander and Polysperchen had lately maftered through the ab- Olitis aun. 4. sence of Anigonus his Porces. Chalcis he freed from a Garrison of the Ba- Selenci 8. onans, whom he also withdrew from Caffander's friendship, joyned in so- Ptolom,19. ciery with the Liolians, and afterwards restored Sievon, Corinth, Athens, and offers mide unto them, and joyned in Confederacy against him as their common Enemie, promising great supplies for carrying on the War. 3. Caffander thinking it good policy not to flay for the Enemy to come upon him, but invade him first, gave part of his Army to Lysimachus to passe over with it into Afin, and with the rest marched for Thesialy, there to oppose Demestins and the Greeks. There meeting, and incamping with vaft Armies, ing the great neither of them would begin the battel, expecting how things went in Afa, till Demetrins was recalled thither by his father. Lysimachus being landed

A Combinaion against

Unn z

516

CHAP. II.

Callandor

there, the Inhibitants of Lampfachus submitted to him, whom he restored to their liberty, stormed Sigens, and placed a Garrison there; then he taketh in Phrygia upon the Hellespont, and divers other places, by the means of Docimus, an Officer of Antigonus, whom he had drawn over to him; Prepelaus also, whom he sent with a party to subdue the Cities of Aolis and Ionia, took other Towns. Antigonus was at this time celebrating publick Games at Antigonia, when hearing this news, he prefently broke them off, and with all speed marched against Lysmachus. Whom he reached, and besieged him in his Camp for some time, till he taking the opportunity of a dark and rainy night fled away: Then hearing that Seleucus was drawing down his Forces from the upper Provinces, he sent for Demerrins to come over with all expedition. Selencus had lately made peace with Sandrocottus (or Androsours) who being a man of no quality, had follicited the Indians to revolt after the death of Alexander, and to kill his Officers, and thence took an occasion to subdue them under himself. Battria being subdued, Selenens had waged War with him, but now for a Composure gave to him some Countrey lying upon the River Indus, which Alexander had taken from the Arians, and received 500 Elephants again of him in exchange. Ptolomy with a compleat Army had come into Calesyria, where he reduced divers Cities; but as he was belieging Sidon came a false report that Antigonus had overthrown Seleucus and Lysimachus, and now was coming thitherward, wherefore he long after came up again to that fatal ingagement with Antigonus. The Forces of these several Princes were drawn down to be in readinelle against the Spring. Antigonus had an Army of 70000 foot, 10000 vita Dienthii. horse, and 75 Elephants, the contrary party had made up amongst them Applianting 64000 foot, 1500 horse, 400 Elephants, and 120 Chariots. Antigonus brag- Syriacis. ged that he would scatter the meeting of these Kings together, as one might do the flocking of birds gathering Corn, with the throwing of a stone; but when they approached, he was more melancholick than usual, and was seen to discourse with his son in private in his Tent, which he never used to do; commended him also to the Army as his Successor. This battel was fought at Ipfus, a Town in Phrygia, in which Demetrius leading the best party of horse, ingaged with Antiochus the fon (and afterwards Successor) of Selencus, whom he routed, and put to flight; but being too hot in the purfute undid all: for retiring back he could not again joyn himself with the foot, by reason that the Elephants were gotten between them. Seleucus feeing this, made as if he would have falln upon the Infantry, thus destitute of the horse, wherein his expectation failed him not, for they fearing it, part revolted to him, and the Antigonus stain rest were broken, and put to flight. Antigonus standing his ground, expected continually Demetrius to come to relieve him: but in that expectation ended his life by a multitude of Darts thrown against him, being now something above 80 years old. Demerrius his fon with 5000 foot, and 4000 horse fled to Ephefue, but there fearing his Soldiers might be some way falle to him, A. M. 3704

he fayled to Salamine in Cyprus, which he then held. This fell out Ol. 19.444 in the 3704 year of the World, the fourth of the 119 Olympiad, 23 years Science 11.

after the death of Alexander, and fix after their taking the Title of Kings up- Ptolom.22.

made a Truce with the Sidonians for five moneths, and returned, but not

5. The Conquerours parted his Dominions among fithem, as we are told; tidem. but it feems to have been chiefly Seleucus and Prolomy, who did not well agree about their prey, and upon this account left a contention to their Succeffors. Selencus fell prefently upon building Cities, the first of which he called after himself Selencen; and the later, to which he transferred the Inhabitants of Antigonia (to the number of three rhouland five hundred) as we said before, he called Antiochia, either after his father or son's name; for both are affirmed, and this afterwards proved the Metrapolis of Syria. Prolomy after the death of Autigomus got Syria again, with Cyprus , and after- vide ulfains wards Cyrene also into his power, and married his daughter Arsinoes unto Ly- in prime put simuchus, as few years after his other to Agathocies the fon. Selencus fee-

The Alliances ing that thus these two strengthned themselves in affinity, thought not amisse of the Kings. to joyn also with Demetrins, though gone down the wind; and accordingly fent to him for his daughter Straionice. He receiving this unexpected Meffage, fayled with her into Syria. Paffing by Cilicia, which then Caffander held, Pliffarchus his brother cried out that he would invade his Territories, and went strait to Selencus to exposulate with him his being reconcited to the common Enemy. But Demetrius landing went to Quinda, where finding yet 200 Talents left in the Treasury, he took them away, and fo went and met with Selencus at Orossus, who taking his wife away with him to Antioch, Demetrius seized upon Cilicia, and sent his wife Phila to Caffander her brother; to purge him of those things laid to his charge by Pli-

Notwithstanding Caffander he held Cilicia; but Seleucus his son-in-law Plutarch, ibid, required, that for a fum of money he would give it up into his hands, which he refused, and then he with some anger demanded Tyre and Siden of him, not being content, though he held all from the Syrian Sea, as far as India, that his father-in-law should and quiet with it, being sufficiently tossed with adverse A. M. 3707. fortune, but he as floutly denied this also, faying, that though he were a Ol. 120.ann 3. thousand times more overcome, yet would be never purchase the affini- V. C. 456.

ty of Selencus, and fortified the Cities with Garrisons. The next year Selenci 15. Cassander King of Macedonia died of a Dropsie (which was so loathsom, as Lice withall broke out of him) after he had ruled that Countrey 19 years; 26 after the death of Alexander, A.M. 3707. 6. He left three fons by The falonice the daughter of Philip, and fifter to 1dem ibid.

ther, but died presently of a Consumption, Antipater coming after him killed his mother, for that after her husbands death she seemed to favour his younger brother Alexander more than him in the division of the Kingdom; though the belought him by her breafts that gave him luck to spare her life. After her death he endeavoured to expel his brother out of Macedonia, who therefore craved aid of Demetrius, and Pyrrhus King of Epirus, who being Stirsbetwixe expelled out of his Kingdom, had married Prolomy's Wives Daughter, and by Mus preferred. Demerrius being now employed otherwayes, the other the Kingdom. came, and received fome Countreys in way of incouragement and reward for his fervice, which he fortified with his own Garrifors. Antipater now had his recourse to Lysimachus his father-in-law, who being also hindred with other affairs, and fearing Demetrius his coming, advited him to make an agreement with his brother; and for that he knew Eyrrhan would in any thing feek to gratifie Ptolomy, that he might take him off, he feigned a Letter to him from him, wherein he adviseth him for 300 Talents received from antipater to forfake his Enterprize. Pyrrhus as foon as he opened the Letter, eafily diferried it to be counterfeit, for that it was not directed after the usual manner, as from the father to the fon, but as from the one King to the other. 7. Lysmachus his persivation seems to have wrought so with the Elder, together with the presence of Pyrrhus, as they came near to an agreement; but the coming of Demetrius spoiled all. For, he having lost Copress lately to Platareh, in Prolony (which forced him to quit Lacedamon, after he had taken Athens, Demotrio. and now had almost taken it also) came, into Macedonia to amend his for- A. M. 3712, Procuret the tunes. Alexander being troubled at his coming, seeing he knew the peace 01.11. ann. 3. definition of wis partly mide, went out to meet, and received him with a real transfer. V. C. 460.

defruction of was partly made, went out to meet, and received him with great honour, but Selenci 18. told him he now had no need of his help; but he either having, or pretending Ptol. 30. to have a suspicion of him, procured him to be slain, telling the Macedonians a fajr tale afterwards, who feeing the one of Caffanders fons thus dead, and haring the other for his impiety towards his mother, received him as King, Some have delivered that A'exander used Demerrius his help, first in killing Pausanias in his brother Antipaser, and so revenged the death of his Mother upon him. Basileis. Others fay that Lusimachus after Alexanders death, for that he was im: Justinue ployed in a War with Dromichetis King of the Geter, delivered also up to fupra. Demetrins, that part which belonged to Antigater his fon-in-law, and after-

Alexander; Philip, Antipater, and Alexander. The first succeeded his fa- & in vita

But labouring

to get

CHAP, III.

wards flew him also, when he complained to him that by his means he had loft his Kingdom, and imprisoned Eurydice his wife, his oven daughter, for partaking with him in the complaint. But thus (one way or other) Antipater was rewarded for his mother's death; and so in a short time fell the posterity of Cassander, by the just Judgment of God, as Heathen Writers observe.

8. For some time Demetrius enjoyed Macedonia, during which he still aspired after his former height and power: for now having this Kingdom and Platarchild. Theffalse in his hands, as also Athens and Megara, and the greater part of Peloponne fus, he subdued the Baotians. Then hearing Ly simachus to be ta-

Demetrius get- ken prisoner by the King of the Getes (who shortly after yet fer him at liberting Macedo- ty) he refolved to return for Thrace; but the Baotians revoluing caused him to retreat, though on his march thithers coming back he found that his fon fill after his Antigonus had overthrown the revolters in fight, but Thebes fill remained former height, unraken, and whilst he was going about that, Pyrrhus of Epirus (being now alienated from him fince the death of Deidamia his fifter which Demetrius had maried) invaded Thessaly from his own Frontiers, and pierced as far as the Straights of Thermopyla. Demetries hearing this, left his fon in the Siege, and hasted against him; but he staied not his coming but retired, and then Demetrius fortifying Theffalie returned to Theber, where the Inhabitants fo flourly defended themselves, that he lost many men, and himself was wounded in the neck; yet according to his skil and fortune in taking of Cities (whence he had the Sirname of Poliorcetes) he stormed the place, and though he presended at first severely to punish the Inhabitants, yet he satisfied himself with the death of ten or thirteen, and banishing a few, pardoned the rest. Pinding that his Macedonians were quiet when abroad, but feditious at home, he fell upon the Atolians, to divert them. Wasting their borders Plutario, there he left Pantauchus with some Forces, and with the rest marched against Pyrrhus, who hearing it, came out to meet him, but they missed of each other, and went feveral wayes; Demetrius into Epirus which he harrased; Pyrrhus light upon Pantauchus, who challenging him to fight gave him a wound, but he received two for it himfelf, and thereupon falling he had been flain, but that his friends presently refcued him, after which his Army was put to flight, and 5000 of them taken. After this, Demetrius fell fick at Pella, and then Pyrrhus again invaded his Territories a great way, no body refifting him , nay, he had fuch an opportunity, as scarce could he have desired a better, for feizing upon the whole Kingdom, many revolting to him, and Demetrim his Captains making but flow endeavours to hinder his progresse. But he having his mind fet more upon booty than any thing elfe, flayed not their coming, but fled away, loting many of his men in the retreat. For all this Demerrius seeing him have a restlesse spirit, thought it not amisse to reconcile him unto him; but especially at this time, for now he resolved to make for his Father's Kingdom with all the might he possibly could, and therefore lest he should leave an Enemy at his back, concluded a Peace, and entred into a league with him. 10. Greater preparations he made than ever had been fince Alexander his time. For he got together little leffe than 100000 Foot, and 12000 Horse, a Navie also of 500 fail; some ships whereof, were of extraordinary bighesse; Selenciu, Piolomy, and Lysimachin, being startled fiereat, combined together for refiltance, and joyntly fent to Pyrrhus to move him to break the league which Demetrius had made with him, as they affeged, not to reft in peace, but to make War upon whom he pleased. He belleving as much, agreed with them, for that he hoped Demetrius might as easily lose Macedonia as he had got it, and then Fielemy failing into Greece, follicited there the Ciries from their obedience. Lyfimachus from Thrace, and Pyrthus from A. M. 311. his borders made inroads into Macedonia. Demetrius first began to 01. 11.41.11 march against Lybonachus har afreewarde haaring that Parkhus had are V.C. 46. march against Lyfmachus, but afterwards hearing that Pyrehus had got- science st.

Companies, and after all the Army revolted to him; fo as Demetrius was much deceived, who fearing they might do so to Lylimachus, little suspected this towards the other being a stranger. Pyrrhus thus obtaining all the Army without a stroak, was faluted King of Macedonia by the Soldiers; but Lofeth all, Lylimachus coming shortly after, alleged the endeavour of suppressing the Enemy to have been common to them, both, and demanded the parting of the Kingdom; to whom he affented, for that he did not trust the Macedonians, and so the Countries and Cities were divided amongst them.

11. Demetrius thus outed of his Kingdom fled to Cassandria, and thence into Greece, where after a little time he got some Forces together, and being angry with Athens, for that revolting from him, the Inhabitants had fent for Pyrrhus, he befieged it; but upon the entreaty of Crates the Philoso-

And flying up pher (whom being a man of, great authority they had fent to him) he gathered together his ships and failed away into Asia with 11000 men. His defign was to take, if he could, Caria and Lydia from Lysimachus, and he took divers Towns, and seized upon Sardis, but Agathocles, Lysimachus his fon, coming down with an Army against him, he marched for Phrygia, with intention to passe into Armenia and Media; and so attempt to make himself Master of some of the upper Provinces of Asia, which at the worst would afford retreating places enough, and other helps to a beaten party. In his way hee was superiour to Agasbocles who pursued him, but being brought into great diffresse for want of provisions, there fell withall such a Plague upon his Army, that he lost 8000 men, and so was forced to retreat, and came to Tarfus. This place being under Selencus, he was very loath to hurr, for fear of giving him offence, but being forced by want, he wrote to him, whereby he excused himself, and fadly lamented his condition. Selencus pitying him at first, commanded his Governours to use him and his Army with great respect; but Procles one of his most familiar friends, filled his head with such suspitions, that he led down an Army towards Cilicia against him, whereat hee wondering retired to the most convenient place of the mountain Taurus, where he fent to him to give him leave to feize upon some drings, and spend the residue of his dayes.

Country of the Barbarians, where he might put an end to his flight and wan-

12. Selencus making a bad interpretation of the message, onely would Idem. give way, that giving up for Hostages the chiefest of his friends, he might quarter for two moneths in Catoania (a Country bordering upon Cappadocia) and fecured the passage out into Syria. Here he was kept up as a wild beast, what by Seleucus on one fide, and Agathocles on the other; fo that he was conftrained to betake himself to force, and wasting the Territories alwaies had the better of Seleucus in their encounters, and got possession of the Straights which led into Syria. This fo encouraged him, that he thought now of giving battel to Seleucus, but falling into a ficknesse thereby his affaires were ruined, his Soldiers falling away from him to the Enemy, or running away, yet he recovered after forty dayes, and away he marched, and getting over the hill Amanus wasted the bordering Territories. Then Seleucus coming near him, he joyned and fought him, and overthrew one of his wings, but then all his Army revolted, and he with a very few sed into the Woods, whence endeavouring to passe to the Sea through the mountains, his discoforced to yield vering there the Enemies fiers prevented that attempt, and then one faying he must even yield himself, he drew his Sword and would therewith have ended his life, but being hindred by his friends, he fent to Scheneus by their advice and vielded. Selencus caused him to be royally received at first; but the great confluence thereupon to him leffened that respect he else would have allowed him; fo as fending Pausanias with 1000 men, he caused him to be caried fraight (vvithout as much as feeing him) into a Peninsula of Syria. Here he vvanted nothing defirable, not onely for necessity but pleasure; only his liberty, vehich yet to comfort him there was hope given of, after that

Antiochus should come vvith his vvise Stratonice, vvhom his Father Selencus

At length is Stlenens.

ten Berrhes into his hands, returned and went against him thither, where pidem 19

when he was come, divers from the Town came into his Camp, and so ex- 30.

colled

DOOK III.

upon his passionately falling in love with her, had yielded to him. Antigonus his son much interceded for him; so did divers Princes and States; onely Ly simachus offered 2000 Talents to have him killed, vvhich Seleucus abhorred. At first he exercised himself much with hunting and such toiles; but by little and little grevv fluggish, and, as if he had never been Demetrius Poli-And dieth at- orceies, gave up himself to drinking and dice, whereby he grevy fat, and ter tirrec years contracted a disease of vyhich he died 54 years old, after he had continued three of them in restrainr. 13. Lysimachus and Pyrrhus after his expulsion out of Macedonia pre- 1dem. fently fell out, for the former feeing Demerrius thus made fure and captivated by Selenems, grew secure of his condition, despised Pyrrhus, and upbraiding the Macedonians for fuffering him (being an alien, whose Ancestors alwaies had ferved them) now to reign over them, drew many from him, paufan, in Atand afterwards overthrew him and Antigonus fon of Demetrius in a great ticis barrel, and soquire dispossessed him of Macedonia. After this he killed his Justin lib. 17. eldeft fon Againocles at the infligation of his wife Arfinee, who was follicitous for her own children, if they should fall into their brother's hands after their Father's death. Lyfandra the widdow of Agathocles, and sister to Arsinoe, accompanied with Alexander another fon of Lysimachus fled to Seleucus, whom they defired to make War against him; and after this he putting divers of his chief Subjects to death for bewailing the young man, many of his Captains and Governours followed, all earneftly defiring that Prince to make War upon him. Selencus was eafily perswaded to it now, having the Lysimachus ha- whole itrength of Asia and Syria united into one Kingdom after the fall of ving expelled Demetrius, which the other being aware of, thought it best first to begin Pyribus out of With him, and so passed over the Hellespont. These two being now only alive Maccaona is of the 26 Captains and fellow-foldiers of Alexander, joyned in a great and A. M. 3713. flain in battel oloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst Seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst Seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel in Phrygia, where Lyfimachus, though fighting most valiantagainst seleu- bloody battel seleu- bl ly, was overthrown and flain, having formerly loft fifteen children divers Seleuci 30. wayes, and now compleating the ruine of his Family, after he had lived 80 Piolom Philiyears, and held Macedonia four, A. M. 3722, the second of the 124 Olym- delphi, 1.

piad, and 40 after the death of Alexander the Great.

14. Selencus being exceedingly elevated with the thoughts of his Victory, and more with confideration that he onely survived of Alexander's followers, resolved to passe into Macedonia and there to end his dayes, giving up Asia to his fon Antiochus. Hee passed the Hellespone, and the surviver of journying towards Lysimachia came to a place called Argos, where his time being but to live seven moneths after Lysimachus, he was slain by Ptolomy Sirnamed Ceraunus the fon of Ptolomy the first by Euridice daughter to Antipater, who having fled out of Ægypt, for that his Father preferred his

Captains is flain by Ptolothe same year, younger brother before him, joyned himself first to Lysimachus, who had younger brother before him, joyned himfelf first to Lymachus, who had question maried his fifter, and afterwards to Seleneus, by whom he was lovingly en Memora and tertained, though he thus requited him. Prolony, as foon as he had done his photium. feat, posted away to Lysimachia, when putting on a Diadem, and taking a Company of Gallants along with him, he went to the Army, which received him as King', having all Seleucus his money given unto them. Antigonus Genatas (so called it's probable, from a place in Perrhabia, where he was born) fon of Demerrius Poliorceres presently after undertook an Expedition for the recovery of Macedonia, hoping to justle out Ptolomy ere he could be well setled; but he having notice of his coming, and enjoying Lysimachus his Fleet, went and met him at Sea, where he overthrew him, and forcing him to retire into Buotia, then confirmed himself in his Kingdom.

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

The Macedonian Kingdom.

From the death of Sciencus to the Captivity of Persons, and the end of this Kingdom, containing the space of 139 years,

Ptolomy Cerannus King of Macedonia maketh Alli-

1. Prolomy, that he might provide for the time to come, made Alliances with other Princes, as Antiochus of Afia, and Pyrrhus of Epirus, who now being about to paffe into lealy, made him Overfeer of his fon, and Kingdom : he also wrote to his brother Ptolomy Philadelphus, pretending to acquiesce in the missing of that his fathers Kingdom, being sufficiently satisfactors. fied with this taken from his fathers Enemy. Moreover, he counterfeited himself to be in Love with his sister Arsinoe, and married her, for that it was according to the custom of Egypt, promiting to adopt her Children, which he badly performed, for being received by her into Cassandria, he caused them to be first killed in the bosom of their mother, and then thrust her out of the Citie, from whence she went to Samothracia. At this time the Galls being too many for their own Countrey, under three Captains went to feek their fortunes fo many feveral wayes; fome towards Thrace, under the Conduct of Cerethrius; others unto Pannonia under Brennus and Acichorins, and the rest to Macedonia, being headed by Belgins or Bolgins. These Ptolomy met with a stragling company, being more heady than wife, refusing 20000 men offered him by the King of the Dardanians, and peace by the Galls, if he would but buy it, which he fcornfully rejected, and answered, he would not yield them it, except they would give up the Chiefest amongst them as Holtages, and deliver up their Arms. Joyning battel, his Army was overthrown, and he being fore wounded was cast by an Elephant on which he rode, and so taken alive by the Enemy. They tore him in pieces, and cutting off his head, put it upon a Lance, and carried it about to the terror of his followers, of which a few escaping, all the rest were either taken or flain. This end came Ptolomy to, after he had held Macedonia scarce a year and a 2. Meleager his brother succeeded, but onely for two moneths; for then Porphying is the Macedonians cast him out as unworthy of the Dignitie, and in his room Gracu Eusebii. placed Antipater fon to Philip, the brother of Caffunder, whom they fire Justin lib. 24. named afterwards Etefia, because he continued but 45 dayes, during which term the Etelian winds blew. After this succeeded an Interregnum (if we look at the title of King) for Softhenes, who gathering together a company of young men, and thereby restraining the pride and covetousnesse of the Gauls, though he might have been preferred before divers of Royal Races; yet refused the name, and made the Soldiers swear to him onely as General. But Brennus hearing of the good successe of Belgius, and what plunder he had got in the East, with 150000 foot, and 15000 horse marched thitherwards; but 20000 falling off from him by the way, and turning up for Thrace (where they brought under the Cities of the Proponiis) he came into Macedonia, where he made havock of all things. Belgius, as it feems, before his coming being softients over repelled or gone, Softhenes went, and met him with an Army; but carrying too few against so great a number, was easily overthrown; after which the Macedouians fecuring themselves in the Cities, Brennus wrought his pleafure in the Countrey and Villages throughout the Land. When he had fatisfied himself here, with an Army of 152000 foot, and 20400 horse, of Celtes (or Cimbres) and Illyrians together, he invaded Greece. Each horfman had two fervants followed him on horf-back, who were to fucceed their dead Masters; which custom they called Trimarkasia, or Trimacasia rather; for, Mare in the Tentonick fignified the whole species, as also in our own matus.

Xxx

Saxon

nymus.

s. Scarce two years did Pyrrhus hold Micedonia; for, Cleonymus the Spartan being rejected by his Citizens from being King in the room of his father, procured him to march down against his Enemies. He went down thither with an Army of 2 5000 foot, and 2000 horse, and wasting their Tervoureth to restore Cleoritories deferred the entring of the Citie till the next day, out of contempt of the small number of the Defendants; who taking that occasion, and making what means they could for relistance, especially the Women, hindred him a little from entring, and when entred, his horse being killed under him, forced him notwithstanding to retreat. During his absence, Antigonus Genatas recovered again the Cities of Macedonia, and taking it for granted, that after he had done his work in Laconia he would return again thither, thought it best to hasten into Peloponnesus, and prevent him. Being come to Argos. Pyrrhus provoked him to fight for the Kingdom, but Embassadors came to them both from the Town, desiring they would depart from their Citie, and not fuffer it (which was observant of both) to come into the power of either. Antigonus obeyed, and fent his fon to them for an Hostage, Pyrrhus pretending he would, entred the Citie in the night, being let in by Aristeus; whereupon Aniigonus was sent for. He sent in a strong party, & Areus King of Sparta was at hand with 1000 Cretians and other Lacedamonians; Pyrrhus marched up into the Market-place, and there faw a brasen Bull and a Wolf standing in a fighting posture, set there in memorial of Danans his election, and ejection of Gatenor, 1200 years before, which startled him fore, for that it had been told him by an Oracle, that he should die when he should fee a Wolf and a Bull fighting together. Hereupon he would have retreated, but fearing the straightnesse of the Gates, sent to his son He'enus to break > rhus in his coming back could not passe, and that occasioned his death. 6. He being fore crouded, what by them, those at his heels, and the Enemy, and fensible of his danger, endeavoured by force to remove the later. Then receiving a wound through his Brigandine with a Lance, turned himself against him that ran at him. This was the son of a poor Woman, who behold-

> down part of the Wall, and come in; but he miltaking, brought his men and Elephants through the Gate, which stopped so up the way, that Pyr-

ing the fight from the house, and seeing him ingaged thus with Pyrr hus, took up a stone with both her hands, and cast it down upon the Kings head, which home; for Alexander King of Epirus, to revenge his fathers death, had invaded Macedonia. Coming thither, his Army revolted from him, fo that once more he lost his Kingdom, and was compelled again to shift for himself:

brusing the Vertebraes of his Neck, he fell down from his horse, after which his head was cut off by one Zopyrus. It being brought to Antigonus by Al- A.M.3733. eyoneus his son, who rejoyced at the fight of it, he checked him, and wept 21, 127, ann. t. over it, and after caused it and the body to be magnificently burned : his bones V. C. 482. being put in a Golden Urn, he delivered to his son Helenns to carry them Antiochi Soteto his brother Alexander into Epirus, and then receiving his Army, deale ve- Prof. Philad. ry well with all his friends. After this the Cities of Peloponnefus were be- 13.

trayed to Anigonus, which caused great stirs in that part of Greece; the Gaulls Julin lib. 26, revolting from him, he cut off at Megara, befieged Athens, and not with-flanding that Patroclus from Egypt, and Areus the King of Lacedamon came Antiennus re- to relieve them, yet he kept all Provisions from them, and after they had covering Me-long stood out came to composition, whereby he placed a Garrison in their sthough pre- Fort Mujous, which yet not long after he drew forth again. Areus for want fandy lofeth it of necessarian was fore'd to return home; but they mer again afterwards at a start was a start Corinth, where Antigonus flew him, and not long after was forc'd to return

le flain at

delphi 11.

engaged in the War with Pyrrhus. 4. But Pyrrhus having finished his fruitlesse expedition into Italy and Si- Plutanhis city after fix years, and being returned home, now wanting money fought an Pyriba. occasion to divert and maintain his Army. He made therefore an excursion Juliant sain into Macedonia (having strengthned himself with a supply of some Gaules) where he took divers Towns, & 2000 Soldiers revolted to him; then marching against Antigonus himself , joyned battel with him. The Gauls on Antigomus his part fought very valiantly; but those which governed his Elephants being compassed in yielded themselves, and the beasts, after which the foot being affrighted, Pyrrhus making fign to them, and calling by name the Offi-But is expel- cers, drew them all over to his own party. Antigonus fled, but kept fome of led by Pyrthus, the Maritime Towns still in his possession, and Porrhus became Master of the upper part of Macedonia, and of The faly. Por all this, Antigonus gave not out, but retiring to Theffalonica, there recruited himself with Mercenary Gaulls, and then endeavouring to re-establish himself, was again defeated by expedition of Arress. Hadarnes paffed, and actting over, came upon the Who with his backs of the Sparrows are Grove then fled way, and they went to Del-whole Army is phos then to spoyl the Temple, where with Thunder and Lightning, Cold, fal-

All The Macedonian Kingdom

Saxon tongue) and so furnished, they entred Theffaly, and came to the Straights of I hermopyla. Here they were opposed by the Greeks, so as they loft many men, till being lead over the Mountains (the fame way that in the ling of Rocks, and the lopposition of the Enemy, most of, them came, to their ends. Brennus himself being wounded, and not willing for not daring) to outlive this shameful expedition of which he had been the Author at home, first drinking much Wine killed himself, the rest flying were taken with a Pannick fear, and killed one another for Enemies, and What by this means, the rage of the Countreys through which they paffed, with and then Antigonus Gonains having made peace with Antiochus Soier , re-had left fome Gaules to defend the borders, and they left they should be idle, with 1,5000 foot and 3000 horse, first fell upon the Gere and Triballi, whom purchase it with money; but especially to spy his Camp. He entertained nobly the Ambassadors, and to deter them from any warlike attempts shewed them his strength at Land and Sea; but they were so far from being afraid, as having an itching defire after prey, they stirred up their Companions to endeavour the attaining of that which they faw, no wayes in words diminishing the goodlinesse of any thing. By night therefore they fet upon his Camp, but he being aware of some such thing, had withdrawn his Army and all things into the Wood; therefore they go and endeavour to plunder the Navy, but are so repelled thence with such slaughter, as the credit of the victory over them procured Amigonus his quier, not onely from them, but his Neighbours round about him. About this time these Gaules, which parting at Da-Leoporius were Chief) they helped Nicomedes against Zypaus , who held part of Bithynia, and after he was overcome, wasting the Countrey far and near, divided the Kingdom with him, and fixed themselves about the River Halys.

in that place which fince has been known by the name of Gallogracia or Ga-latia, A.M. 3727. the third year of the 125 Olympiad, the Remans being now dania from Brennus, and going into Thrace, had at feveral places paffed the Idem ibid. 6

Sea into Asia, where uniting again under 17 Captains (of which Lutarius and Living this).

3. During their Ray in Greece, Softbenes died after he had ruled a years, Euleh turned, and obtained his fathers Kingdom. Brennus departing into Greece, Julia lib.ss.

hunger, and cold, scarce any of them ever returned to their homes,

Antigonus Go- overcoming, they then fent to Antigonus, offering him peace if he would

Ptolomy, the fon of Pyrrhus; fo that again retiring to hide himself, Pyrrhus jeered him, and called him impudent, because for all this he put not on a Coat A. M. 3731 but wore the purple still. He in way of return compared Pyrthus to a Game- of 126 and fler, which could throw the Dice well, but knew not how to improve his chance; V. C. 480. for he knew how to Conquer Kingdoms, and ger Victories, but could not dutiel see. improve his Victory, nor retain what he had Conquered, as it had hapned as to probe. Phile this Kingdom before, and now also shortly followed. 5. Scarce

But his fon Demetrins in his absence gathering some forces together, so or-Deminius his dered the matter against Alexander, that he not onely recovered his fathers Kingdom, but spoiled him also for a time of his own. After this, nothing covereth it. of great concernment occurs of Antigonus, who died after his first possession of Macedonia 36 years, (having ruled in fome Greek Cities ten years before)

when he had lived above 80. A.M. 3762. in the 2d of the 134 Olympiad. XXX 2

eth him.

7. Demetrins his fon succeeded him. He hired Agron King of the Illy- Polybius ad rians to relieve the Mydionians whom the Liolians had befieged, which wincipium !, ; he performed, though the besiegers were before ready to fall out about And succeed- their prisoners, whether the old or new Prator should have the honour to dispose of them and their goods. When it was agreed that both in common should do it, the Illyrians falling upon them, and killing many, forced them to break up their Siege, after which Agron possessed with incredible joy, gave himself up to surfetting and drunkennesse, and thereby falling into a 01, 134, 461. Pleurefie ended his dayes, and was succeeded by his wife Tenta. She being V. C. SII. elevated also with the former Victory, and not thinking of any thing from Seleuticallia without, gave leave to her Subjects to invade all persons in what place soever mici 4. by Sea, whereupon they took Phanice the wealthy City of Epirus, and in-Piolom, Eugjuring those of Italy, drew upon themselves the displeasure of the People of Rome, which the rashnesse of their Queen heightned to a War, as will be fcen hereafter. But by this act, Demerrim fo fet the hearts of the Etolians. against him, that whereas before they took part with his Kingdom against the

Achains, now they joyned in league with them against him. 8. He holding yet the Pirans or Haven of Athens, Arains the Prater of the Plutarch in Acheans pretending a defire to fet the Athenians at liberty from that bondage Arato, which thence lay upon them, endeavoured to take it out of his hands, but was overthrown by Biehves his General, whereupon a rumour arose that he was slain or taken. Diogenes the Governour of the Pireus hearing this, fent word to Corineh to command all the Achaans there to depart, the Town; and the Athenians to please him and his parcy very solemnly rejoyced, wearing Garlands. But Arains himself then was at Corinth, and hindring Diogenes his defign there, marched down to be revenged on the Athenians, and he came as far as the Academy, but then being overcome by entreaty, did them no Tullin, 1,28. harm. Some years after this the Etolians endeavoured to take away part of Acarnanina from Epirus, which then Olympias fifter and wife of Alexander now dead, governing in right of her fons Pyrrhus and Piolomy, berook her felf to Demetrius, and gave him her daughter Othia in mariage. He had before this the fifter of Antiochus King of Syria to wife (Antiochus Hierax as it seemeth, who endeavouring to dispossesse his brother Seleucus of his Kingdom, is called King by Justine) who thereupon fled to her brother, and ftirred him up to make War upon her husband. The Acarnanians fled to the Romans for help against the Ætolians, who were then commanded to abstain from their incursions, but despising the Ambassage, harrased the borders both of Acarnania and Epirus; and Olympias having delivered up the Kingdom to her son, they all shortly after died. Demetrius also and so after the death of Alexander the great. 9. He left hehind him a fon called Philip, who being very young, and the Princes of Macedonia fearing an Anarchy, they constituted Antigonus (the brother or nucle of the deceased, for both are affirmed) his Tutor, giving his mother to Plutarch in him in mariage. At first he held the Office by the title of Captain General, but of passassis, afterwards being found moderate and civil. he was Gland Vine Level by passassis. named Doson, for that he promised more than he did perform. After the death of Demetrins, the Greek Cities begun to lift up their heads, and the several Vide Politics Tyrants, which, through the incouragement of him and his Predecessors, had lib. 2. gor many places, for fear renounced their power, and joyned themselves with the Acheans, who being much reverenced of a long time by all their neighbour Cities of Peloponnesus for their Justice and Prudence, had united themselves together, in the 124 Olympiad, and drawn some others into a body A.M. 1971. against the Macedonians. Their affaires were mightily strengthened by 01, 136, 41.4.

Aratus the Sicyonian, who drayning his own City, though but young, joyned V. C. 521. it unto them, and afterward by his great wisdom and industrie secured and seleculiais H. bettered their condition. The Athenians being incouraged at Demetrius his Ptolom. Page death, now thought again of recovering their liberty, and he having done what

Book III:

(whom we read to have also enjoyed Cyrene and all Lybia, but know not Popply, is how he got it) survived not long after, dying when he had reigned ten years, Gratis, Estis.

he might before to help them, though in vain, and they again imploring his affiltance, though fick, he made himfelf be caried thither; and whereas Diogenes held for the Macedonians, Pirans, Sunium, Munychia, and the Island Salamis, he perswaded him for a reward of 150 Talents to deliver them all up, ewency of which Talents he presented of his own money. Whilst he thus laboured for the Publick good, especially of the community of the Warbetwixt the Atolians & Acheans.

Achaans, the . Æsolians envying their condition raised a dangerous War against them, in which Anugonus Doson came to be ingaged. 10. The Atolians though they had been helped by the Achaans against Idemibid, the house of Macedonia of late, being vexed about the businesse of Mydio_ Plutarch in nia; yet now feeing their union, and the flourishing condition of their body. vita Arati & envying and also fearing it, resolved to distinite if possible, and withdraw the Cities one from another. At this time Cleomenes reigned at Lacedamon, who refolving to better the conflictation of his Country by reducing it to it's Wherein Cico-must King of antient form, and taking away the Ephori those impudent and rascally Tyrants. santa cometh fought for an opportunity of War as most fit to bring about his putpose, to be ingaged Ever fince the Victories of Lyfander, luxury and other vices had crept into Sparta, together with the use of riches. And the equality of possessions in Land was taken away by one Epitades an Ephorus, who having a fon that difpleased him , that he might difinherit him, procured a Law to be passed, Lege Plutarthat any one might dispose of his Lands, either in his life time or at his death, chum in Agide to whom he pleased. Hereby it was come to that passe, that there being & Cleomene. 700 Cirizens of Sparsa and more, of those not above 100 possessed all the Lands and Estate, and the rest being void both of wealth and bonour lay idle at home, unwillingly ingaging in War, and expecting an occasion of chinge, The Ephori tyrannized with unparalleld impudence, domineering over the Kings, and ordering those at their pleasure, the servants of whom they had formerly been. Agis one of the Spartan Kings, of the family of Eurytion, the fon of Eudamidas, and the fixth from Agestlaus, burned with a desire of bettering the state of affaires, and as a means unto it, endeavoured the reduction of Lycurgus his model for the equal division of Lands; but Leanidas his Collegue being of a luxurious temper opposed him, and he was wickedly murdered by the hands of the Popular Villains the Ephori,

11. This noble spirited man being taken away, and his brother Archidamus destroyed, Cleomenes the fon of Leonidas was King alone, and being of a far different temper from his Father, upon hearing what Agis had gallantly endeavoured, resolved to pursue and accomplish what he had attempted, and to take away utterly the power of those Popular Tyrants, who usurped the whole authority. Neither did these two Kings defire to become affertors of Popular power by the restitution of the Lots of Lycurgus, but rather of Monarchy; for the rellitution of those Lots would not promote the power of the Commons who were still to be kept under, as they were by the Laws of Lycurgus; but onely reduced them to that equality of wealth which might fecure them from being insulted over by their fellow Commoners, as they had been of late, by such as had ingrossed the riches of the State. As this might be intended by the two Kings, fo it appeareth from Plutarch, that Agis attempted to get himself reputation, and Cleomenes for his preservation, by gaining the good-will of the People, and making them fure on their fide when foever they should be ready for the great defign of destroying the Ephori. channes kil- Now though Agis miscaried in his attempt, yet Cleamenes perfected what he hathe Ephori had intended. For he surprized the Ephori by his Mercenaries, killed four and refloreth of the five, overthrew all their chairs except one, which he intended as a Morgas his Chair of State for himself. Then restored he the Laws of Lycurgus, as to equal possessions and discipline, and for that there was none left of the family of Enrytion, made his own brother Leonidas King with him. But as > caused the War betwirt the State, and the Achains, and bribed the Ephori to fend him forth in the Expedition. 12. To him therefore the Etolians fent, and flirred him up against the

> was faid, perceiving this change would be better made in War than Peace, he

Antigonus Do-

526

ti zonus,

alcheans; and that they might strengthen themselves, and more easily suppresse them, they made peace again with Macedonia, and without doubt had brought about their purpose, had they not had to do with Arains, who under mined their Councils. They suffered Cleomenes to take in divers Towns which belonged unto themselves, not onely not opposing but confirming him in the politifion of them, which Aratus knowing well enough to be intended onely to strengthen him against his party, yet thought none were to be first opposed with War; but after that Cleamenes with great boldnesse had begun to build a Fort in the Territories of Megalopolis, then were the Lacedimonians declared Enemies. At first the Acheans undertook the Warre against them by themselves; partly for that they thought it more honourable and fafe to defend their own Estate, and partly for that they were loth to difplease Prolomy (who had been formerly a good friend to them) by seeking for the patronage of any other; but the War going on (Cleomenes now having overthrown the Achaans in divers battels) Aratus thinking it a disgrace for him to be worsted by the young Lacedamonian, and being jealous still of the knavery of the Etolians, concluded it was high time to look about him; at least for a supply.

12. Confidering with himself the power of Antigonus King of Macedonia, and withall his faithfulnesse; and that he was prone to enter into Leagues and alliances, he refolved to make a Confederacy with him; but that fecretly, as well because he knew the Ætolians would seek to prevent him, as for that his people would be discouraged at the thought of expecting help from an Enemy. Knowing therefore the Megalopolitans to be fore preffed with the War (having little help from the Achains) and how good affection they bore to the Macedonian Court ever fince Philip the fon of Aminia, who deserved very well of them, he sent for two of his friends thence (N.cophanes and Cercidas) and dealt privately with them to perswade their Citizens to crave aid of Antigoniu. These two were therefore sent to the Acheans, and to Macedonia if they should think fit, who giving way to it, they coming to the King, according to the instructions from Aratu, proposed to him to consider, whither this conjunction of Cleomenes and the Etolians would rend; and whether when the Acheans were eaten up, he himfelf would not be in danger, feeing the covetousnesse of the Etolians, and Cleamenes his ambition could not be contained in leffer limits than those of Greece it felf. He answering, that if it should feem good to the Achaans, he would fend aid to those of Megalopolis: these being at this much encouraged, laboured to perswade them to give way to it, but Arains then fearing that if the coming down of Antigonus should breed any inconvenience, the blame would fall all upon him, diffwaded his People from receiving as yet any aid, and made them try first what they could do of themselves, exhorting each particular City to fight stoutly for their liberty:but Prolomy finding the Lacedemonians now to be more for his pupose to withstand the Macedonian, stirred up Cleomenes against him, and furnishing him with money, he also had brought the Achaans by divers ingagements to such a low ebb, 29 they were now in great danger to lose all, and therefore they implored aid of Antigonus, and Aratus fent his sonto confirm whatsoever had been offered on his parr.

14. He then marched down, though a great difficulty there was at first for this to be hoped for by the Acheans, by reason that the Castel of Corinib Who march- which they had taken out of the hands of the Macedonians together with the cth down. Town, and which would be now mighty convenient for the carrying on of the And also dn-. War, they knew not how to restore unto him. But Cleaments now prospering exceedingly, and having reduced nine Cities into his power, the Corinthians fent to him, offering him their City, and commanded all the Acheans to be gone; so that at this Aranu taking occasion (who before durst not give them up into the hands of the Macedonians without their confent) restored the Castel into the power of Antigonus. Cleomenes (vvho after his taking the nine Cities, event and fate down before Sicyon) hearing the intention of the Abbanns and the King, marched with great speed to the Istomus, and then fortified the place between the Castle of Corinth and the Mountains Onis with a ditch and bulvvark; Anigonus with 20000 Foot, and 1400 Horle, conting through Enburg (for that the Etolians had forbidden him at his peril to halfe through the Straights of Thermopyla) found no little opposition from Chomenes, till Arges revolting to Aram (by the means of Ariffolle his friend, who with help from Siegon fer upon the Caffel, Megiffonns who was sehero relieve it being slain) forthat he feared if this Fort should be taken the Enemy might thereby ftop up the passage, and at his ease invade Lacohid, he drew down his forces from Corinth; then Antigonus entering Peloponnesus took Corinib in his way, where placing a Garrison he followed Cleomenes to Argos, who having by a wife entred the Town, laboured again to reduce it, and rook fome parts thereof, but seeing him come down from the Mountains against him, withdrew himself out, and so by Mantinea returned to Lacedamon. Antigonus coming to Argos commended and encouraged the Citizens, and thence marching presently for Arcadia, reduced divers Forts, which he delivered into the hands of the Megalopolitans : after which coming to Agiam to the general meeting of the Achaani (where he held consultations with them) he was declared General of all the Associates, and there took up Winter-quarters for his Army, viz. at Sieyon and

Part of the Empire of the Macedonians.

Is victorious.

He taketh

Mantinea.

Corimb. 15. At the beginning of Spring he gathered up his forces, and befreged Tegen, Polybius ibid. whete the Acheans met him. Having this Town yielded to him, he thence Plutareh, in mirched peedily into Laconia, where Cleomenes meeting him upon the bor- Arato. ders there passed some light skirmishes betwixt them, and then he hearing that the Garrison Soldiers at Orchomenus were coming to help the Enemy, departed fodainly thicker, and presently stormed the place at the first onset. Then moving to Mantinea, that Town prefently was taken, the chief of the inhabitants whereof (because though when Asalus took the City, her reflored them to their former privileges, yet they again revolted, and put all his Garrison to the sword) for their ingratitude were put to death; of the rest part were fold, and part sent into, Macedonia, their wives and children made flaves; and their Town was given by Antigonis to the Argives, who thither tefolved to fend out a Colony, and Araim being made Prator, made a Decree for changing the name of it into Antigonia. After this, Antigonia took Herea and Telphassa, and Winter then drawing on he went again to the general Affembly of the Acheans, fending out his Soldiers to their quarters, which Cleomenes taking notice of, and that Megalopolis was three dayes march from Agium, and wanted a sufficient Garrison, brake in thither secretly in the night, where though he found such opposition as both he and his were brought into great danger, yet became he Master of the place, and to cruelly raged against it (as Polybins a Citizen thereof telleth us) that no hope then feemed to be feft of Peopling it again. This City being taken, he marched away to Argos (where Antigonus Wintered) to harrase the Territofies; a rath enterprise as the Vulgar judged, but prudent enough of it felf, confidering that the King's Army being at a great distance, and he thereby unable to refift, the Argives would then murmur against him, and he thereby be brought into contempt. This hapned just as he imagined, but Antigonus though very much spent of the Prisick, lived to the next Summer to regain

16. In the beginning of Summer he led towards Laconia an Army of 26860 men (his own and of the affociates) which Cleomenes expecting fortified the passage betwirt the two mountains Eva and Olympus, placing his brother at the former, and securing the later himself, having in all about 20000 in his Army. Antigonus wondering at his skill and industry in this fortification, pitche his Tents upon the River Gorgylus, bethinking himself what he should do; at last finding all passages made up, they both agreed to try the matter in battel. At the beginning of the fight those on Cleomenes his party with the light Armour placed amongst his Horse, seeing the Illyrian cohorts not to be backed by the Achaans, fell upon their Reer, and had done great mischief , but that I hilopomenes a Megalopolitan (then but young) giving notice of it to the Officers, and they not regarding him, stirred up his fellow Citizens, and fell upon the Enemies horse, which made the other return to their former place to help their Companions. After this the fortune of the day inclined to Antigonus his fide for Euclidas undid himself by the bad choice of his ground, receiving the Illyrians not on the fide of the Hill, (whereby though he might have been repulfed, yet still he might have had the advantage of being higher than the Enemy) but just on the top, so that being thence removed, and forced downwards on the other fide, the Illyrians had the advantage of Cleomenes perceiving his brother overthrown, and the horse on the plain to have the worft, for fear the Enemy should compasse him in , was forced to remove the carriages from behind his Army, and draw it out as well as he could to prevent that. Then the Files coming to be ingaged, Antigonus pressing upon the Macedonians in great violence with his doubled Files, put them to flight, and many being flain, Cleomenes escaped with a few in his Defeateth Cleomenes.

Company, and got to Sparta.

> 27. Cleamenes coming to Sparta, advised the people which flocked about Polybins at him to receive the Conquerour, and then by night getting to Gythiam, thence fund, went to Alexandria in Egypt, whereas if had either deferred the battel a little longer, or flayed at home, he might easily have recovered his former condition. For, Antigonus suddenly following him got Sparta, and very nobly, and with great humanity used the Citizens, restoring to them their antient liberties, but shortly after was constrained to leave that place, and Peloponnesus also, being called home by an invasion of the Illyrians into Macedonia, where they made havock of all things. From Sparea he came to Tegea, which he again restored into the form of a Commonwealth, and thence to Argos, at The time of the Celebration of the Nemean Games, where by the Decree of the General Assembly of the Achaans in common, and each of the Cities in particular, he had all possible honour given him. After this he marched with great fpeed into Macadonia, where he overthrew the Illyrians in battel, but got his own death; for with exhorting his Soldiers, and shouting in the fight, he to strained his Lungs that he spat bloud, and thereby his Consumption was heightned, which in a short time made an end of him, after he had discharged the Office of a faithfull Guardian, a good King, and of an expert and valiant Captain ten years, A.M. 3782. and the 2d of the 130th Olympiad, 100 years af-

Consumption. ter the death of Alexander.

18. Philip then succeeded this his Uncle, and once his Guardian, being Paufan in fixteen years old, in whom the Prediction of Sibylla was verified, that the Athaics. · Macedonian glory, as it began in a Philip, so it should end in one of that name. Some three years after his coming to the Government he was also ingaged in the Social War of Greece, of which the Letolians and Achaens were the chief parties. For now the Atolians (who used to live by Pira- Polyb. liba. cy and Robbing) being weary of peace, though awed by Antigonus as long as he lived, and having in contempt the youth of Philip, and judging them-Philip succeed-selves stronger than the Acheans, they defired occasion to begin a War. The eth his tincle, first occasion was given by Dorimachus one of their body, who being sent and cometh to to Phigalea, a Citie of Peloponnesus in the Confines of Messena (under prebe ingaged in tence of securing it, and its Territories) to spy what was done in those parts, the Social war and feeing the Messenians to live in security, and neglect of any martial Discipline, ever fince the peace was made by Antigonus, being coverous gave leave to certain Pyrats to prey upon their grounds and drive their Cattel thence, though they were friends to the Etolians. They complaining of this to him, he went to Messena, but instead of giving them any relief, he derided, and A. M. 378. threatned the Owners of the Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron, then V. Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron, then V. Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron, then V. Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron, then V. Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron, then V. Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron, then V. Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron, then V. Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron, then V. Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron, then V. Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron, then V. Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron and the Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron and the Cattel, and by the persivation of Sciron and the Cattel, and Prator of that Citie, he was secured. It so hapned, that at this time there was Amiochi one Babyrta a filthy fellow, fo like to this Dorimachus, that one could scarce oligen, I. know them afunder had they been clothed alike, as therefore on a time Dori- Ptol. Emigli. machus was malapertly inveighing against the Messenians, Schron answered 24.

Melians.

him , Doft thou think , O Babytta, that we either care for thee, or thy threats? The Original This Ieer so affected him, as to be gone he restored them their goods; but getting him home, it fat fo deeply upon his heart, as by pretence of this injury alone did he stir up War against the Messenians.

19. He durst not in publick Conventions perswade the Etolians to the War, for that his private grudge was sufficiently known, but one Scopas being then Prator, him he perswaded to joyn with him in the invision of the Mesfenians. They two therefore, without any publick Decree, took the advantage of that time, wherein a few dayes onely were remaining to Timoxenus, the Prator of the Achaans, to continue in his Office (during which time yet Aratus, who was to succeed him, could not execute it) & calling together the Æiolians to the Promontory of Ægium, fayled over into Peloponnefus, and invading the Messenians (who being unable to refist, had secured themfelves within their Citie Walls) wasted all with fire and sword. Not onely the Me Senians, but the Epirotes, Achaans, Acarnanians, and Macedon'ans also being declared Enemies by Scopas, they gave out Commissions to Pyrats to infest them by Sea. A ship of the King of Macedonia was taken, and being brought into the Haven was fold, with all the men, and things belonging to it; the Sea-Coasts of Epirus were invaded, Thyreas a Town of Acarnania was fet upon, and a band of men being fent privately through Peloponnesus, a Castle there was seized on in the Territories of the Megalopolitans, which yet Timoxenus reduced by the help of Taurion, whom Antigo-nus had left to overfee his affairs in those parts. 20. The Acheans meeting at Agium, Decreed that aid should be sent Idem ibid.er

dayes before the time, made Levies, and fent to the Atolians to draw away their Forces out of the Messenian Territories, and not to trouble Achaia upon pain of being profecuted as Enemies. Scopas and Dorimachus hearing the Acheans were gathered together, marched towards the Eleans their Allies (with whom the Etolians alwayes maintained friendthip, that they might the better Prey upon Peloponne (us) fo that Aratus heating this, very indifcreetly, and not like himself (as Polybins thewerh) for that he thought they would retreat, dismissed all his Soldiers except 3000 foot, and 300 horse, with which, and Taurion his party, he marched against them. He constrained them to fight in a difadvantageous place for himfelf, fo that his forces were feated by the overthrown by them, and many being flain, the rest secured themselves in the Towns thereabouts, and the Etolians passing without let or hinderance through Peloponnesus, attempted to take Pellene, and wasting the Territorics of the Sicyonians, passed through the Ishmas, and so returned home. After this the Acheans affembling together, Aratus was grievously accused for taking up the Office before his time, disbanding the Army when he knew Scopus and Dorimachas were in Peloponnefus, fighting the Enemy with fo few, when he might have easily had aid from the Towns thereabout, and, which was worst of all, for ingaging not his best Soldiers in the plain, but onely skirmilling at the Roots of the Mountains, where the Enemy had the advantage of the ground, besides their being the greater number. But as > 21. These things having given the occasion to the Social war, it presently was decreed against the Atolians. For the Achaans meeting together, ordered that some should be sent to the Fpirotes, Baotians, Phocians, Acarnanians, and unto Philip, to acquaint them that they had broken the League now twice by the invalion of Achaia, to delire help against them, and to receive the Messenians into the alliance; moreover it was resolved, that the > foon as Arains appearing put them in mind of his former fervices, an-fivered to the things objected against him, and craved pardon in case he had failed of his duty in the fight, and defired they would examine the case not maliciously, but with humanity, the people changed to in their affections, as they were angry a long time with his accufers, and refted upon his Counfels to the Meffensans; but Timoxenus whose time was not yet out, being flow Plutarch, in in his preparations, Araus who was to succeed him got the publick fignet five Arato.

BOOK []] Praior should agree with the Lacedamonians and Messenians, what Forces should be raised by their States. The Etolians also assembling, that they might make a breach betwixt the Acheans and their affociates, refolved to make Peace with the Lacedamonians and Messenians, but as for the Achaans themselves, they absurdly decreed, that on no other condition would they have Peace with them, except they for look the fociety of the Messenians. The Epiroles, and Philip, after audience given to the Ambassadors, willingly received the Messenians into the alliance; but as for the Atolians, not at all wondering at their cariage (for that it being but agreable to their custome of piracy and robbing, their cultome fomething excused the badnesse of the A. M. 3786 action) they resolved still to keep Peace with them. But Scordilaidas the Ol, 140, a, L action) they resolved still to keep Peace with them. But occasional the V.C. 114.
General of the Illyrians making an agreement with the Evolusis about his V.C. 114.
Am. Mag. 4. part in the booty, with them invaded Achaia, and took the City of the Cy- Ptol. Photos nathenles, being betrayed by some Exiles, which their Citizens had lovingly 3.

received again; but to pay for their ingratitude, these Exiles were put to the fword as well as the reft, and their City was burnadown to the ground upon Philip march- the report of the Macedonians coming into Pelopermesus. For, Aratus ing down the had fent to Philip again for aid, who came prefently with an Army down to Social War is Corinth, where the Commissioners from the several associated Cities met him, and unanimously decreed a War against the Ætolians, in the first year gainst the of the 140 Olympiad (as Polybins telleth us) and about that time that Han-Alolians.

nibal took Saguntum.

22. Whilf Philip was about Corinth, great stirs hapned at Lacedamon by reason of him. For such as were his Enemies there, caused some of his party, lest they should rell how they stood affected, to be slain, and afterwards the Ephori (who had brought the People to decree a continuance in the league with him) to be murdered as they were facrifizing, and then joyned their State to the Ætolians, and after they had heard of Cleomenes his death in Ægypt, made a new election of Kings (whereof one was Lycurgus, an obscure man, and not of the race of Hercules) having lived in way of a Free

Laccdemon.

530

State about three years, ever fince they were fet free by Antigonus, till this time, when their liberty so called, had bred great strife and emulation. Philip coming to Egium to the general meeting, the Acheans renewed the leagues and confederacies formerly made with his Ancestors, and then with a great deal of credit he returned into Macedonia, there to make provisions for the War, where spending the Winter in levying Forces, and fortifying that Country against forein attempts, he also so dealt with Scerdilaidas, as hee drew him over from the Etolians to his own party, by reason they had not made him partaker of the boory, as they had covenanted with him. During this time feveral affociates were fent to for affiftance in the War, and amongst the rest the Messenians, who though they gave the occasion of it, yet answered, being overpowered by the Prators of the Atolians, that seeing Phygalea was fituate in their borders and belonged unto them, they would not affift in the War, except it was first taken out of the hands of the Ætolians. Lycurgus the Lacedamonian King getting some Forces together, invaded the borders of the Argives, and took several Towns, they not standing at all upon their guard, expecting no acts of Hostility from their friends as they counted them, and then was War proclaimed by the Ætolians against the Achaans. They were much elevated being now in a flourishing condition, the other on the contrary were put to it, for that Philip in whom was their chiefest hope, was onely yet providing for the War: the Epirotes would do nothing till they faw him begin, and the Messenians remained neuters; but shortly after, the marching of Philip from Macedonia revived their

23. For having got together an Army of 15000 Foot, and 500 Horse, Polybin w he departed from Macedonia, for The falie and Epirus, intending through supra. them to invade Etolia. Coming into Epirus, he was perswaded there by the Inhabitants to fet upon the City Ambracus and recover it, (which the Ætolians had gotten out of the hands of the Epiortes) to which he was fo unwiseas to agree, and thereby lost the opportunity of finishing the Warre presently, by neglecting to invade the inland Countries of Etolia, and by hirkening to the Epirotes, who more regarded their private profit than the publick good. In the mean time, in Peloponnesus things went on in favour of the Liolians; for though they had been repulsed with some losse from Agira, a City of the Achaans, yet Euripidas the General of the Eleans made inrodes upon divers of the affociates, got much booty, and took divers Towns, with the Castle of the Dimaans; Lycurgus the Lacedamonian took Atheneus a Town belonging to the Megalopolitans, and Aratus ion to the other the Captain of the Acheans could hire no Soldiers (because behind already with much pay) and with fear and indifcretion managed the bufuefle. Scopas the Pretor of the Esolians through Theffalse invaded Macedonia. Malias inva- where wasting all with fire and sword about Pierra, he thence went to Dium. which, the Inhabitants thereof not staying his coming, he burnt, and overthrew the images of the Kings. Philip by this time had taken Ambracus in the space of forty dayes, and thereby satisfied the greedy defires of the Epirotes : then hearing what Scopas had done in Macedonia, he passed speedily over the Bay of Ambracia, and through Acarnania invaded the Etolians.

deth Macedo-

24. Pirching his cents before Phaceas, after many sharp skirmishes he Idem ibid. received that Town upon composition, and overthrew a party of 500. Atolians,

And Philip Atolia.

who were coming to relieve it; after which, as he was wasting the Country, the Ambassadors of the Acheans came to him desiring help. He promised to take their businesse into consideration, and marched for Metropolis, the Inhabitants of which flying into the Castle, he burnt the Town, and thence moving towards Conspe, some Horse endeavoured to hinder him from passing the River, but finding it to be in vain, retired into the Town, and after this. none dating any more to shew themselves, he passed unmolested through the Country, taking many Towns and Castles, the walls of which he demolished, onely Oeniade he resolved to fortifie. Whilft he thus imployed himself, news came from Macedonia, that the Dardanians had resolved to make an invalion; whereupon judging it requifite to look home, he dismissed the Achaan Ambaffactors with this answer, that as foon as he had provided for the fecurity of his own Kingdom, he would use his best cudeavo; r to relieve them. Returning that way he came, with great journeys he passed through Epirus, and when he had arrived at Pella, the Dardanians hearing of his return difbanded their Army, and then he prefently marched back into Theffalie, intending to passe away the remaining of the Summer at Larissa. Dorimachus now being created Prator of the Atololians invaded Epirus, and harrafing the Country, robbed, and then destroys the Dodonean Temple; but Philip now in Winter, when it was little expected by any, leaveth Lariffa, and paffing over his Army from Theffalie into Eubaa, paffed through Baotia, and the confines of Megaris, and about the Winter folllice, cometh to Cortnib, whither calling Aratus the elder to him to confult of affaires, he writes to the Prator, and several Cities of the Achaans, affigning them when and where to meet him. 25. Having taken this order he departed from Corimb to Diofeurium, a City of the Phliasians, and thence to Caphya, where he had appointed the Acheans to meet him, lighting in his way upon a party which Euripidas was leading towards the Territories of the Sicronians to waste them, whereof 2200 he took; the other being flain by his men, and perishing amongs the high Rocks, 100 onely escaped with their Leader. This victory got him abundance of honour (it being beard he was come, and had overcome also at the same time) which to maintain and increase, after he was come to Caphya, he joyned Aratus the younger to him with about 10000 men, and marched to Pfophis an ancient Town of Arcadia, situate in the middle of Peloponnesus, and upon the confines of the Eleans, who then had it in their hands, and whither Euripidast eir Captain had now withdrawn himfelf after his defeat. This place Philip had a great mind unto, as very convenient for the carrying on the War. He got the Town presently, and after that

And Pelazara

Y V V 2

532

Apelles his

plor against

Aratus and

others.

death for

treafon.

died foon after.

His exploits. had the Castle yielded to him, and staying there some time gave up the place into the hands of the Acheans, as also Lasione shortly after, which upon his approaching was forfaken by a Garrison of the Eleans. After this he came into the Country of the Eleans, which giving his Soliers liberty to fack and plunder, he paffed the River Alphans, and came into Tryphalia including nine Towns fituate betwixt Flea and Meffena, which also the Inhabitants of the former had got into their possession a few years before, with Aliphira that belonged to Arcadia. Passing his men over by a bridge he caused to be made, he presently took Aliphira, and within fix dayes all Tryphalia, though Phylidas was fent from the Etolians to aid the Eleans with 600 men, to which were joyned 500 Mercenaries, and 1000 of the Inhabitants of Elea. Placing a Garrison in the Castle of Lepreatans, he came to Hewhere he divided all the booty amongst his Soldiers, and thence marching to Megalopolis, in the midft of Winter, he afterward came to Argos, where he spent the remaindert of that Season. During these motions Chilon the Lacedemonian killed the Ephori who had made Lycurgus King, but the fact being not approved, he was glad to betake himfelf to his heels.

26. Philip invaded again the Territories of the Etolians, and thence took very much booty, and returning to Argos to winter, fent his Army into Macedonia. At this time Apelles (who was one of them whom Antigonus had left his Guardians) much maligned Aratus, and joyning with Leontine Captain of the Cestati (called so from the wearing of a short buckler) and Megaleas the King's chief Secretary, refolved to remove Taurion from the Government of Peloponneson, and Alexander from his command of the Life-Guard; and had he not been hindred by Aranu, he had accomplished his purpose. He had procured also one Eparatus to be chosen Prator in the room of Araus the younger, and he managing his affairs very indifcreetly, the King could get neither money nor provisions, but was fain to flie to Araum for relief; and now it being refolved to carry on the War by Sea, he consulting with his two creatures, determined to stop up provisons from coming to the Army, and went to Chalcis for that purpose. He so managed his businesse, as he forced the King to pawn his plate, who now failed against the Cephalemians, whose ships the Ætolians constantly used in their invasions of Peloponnefis, and coming to Paira, there drew up his ships on shore. He laid siege to the City of the Pataensians, and having undermined a piece of the wall, fent Leonius to take the place, but he remembring the conspiracie of Apelles, Megaleas, and himself, to hinder the affaires of his Master, had corrupted the chiefest of the Officers, and suffered himfelf to be repelled, so that Philip raised his Siege, and consulted what was to be done. By this time Lycurgus the Lacedamonian King had invaded the Meffenians, Dorimachus alfo the Ærolian had made an inroad into Theffalie, fo that from both parts came Ambassadors to crave aid. Leontins connselled Philip to go to Messenia; but Aratus to invade Ætolia again, to whom he agreed, having had experience of his wildom, and begining now a little to trust the other.

27. Writing to the Prator of the Acheans to relieve the Messenians, he invaded their Country, and taking Thermus, gave his Soldiers leave to plunder the Villages, in revenge for what the Ætolians had done at Dins in Macedonia, rifled and burnt the Temple, for which he is grievously reprehended by Polybins. After this returning on shipboard, Leontins and Megaleas in their cups so abused Aratus, as to throw stones at him, for which the former escaping, the later was imprisoned and fined twenty Talents at a Council of War. Philip then failed to Corinth, whence fending meffengers to the affociated Cities to meet him at Tegea, he marched thither in two dayers, and getting some Forces together he invaded the Lacedamonians, and wasted their territories far and wide, put to flight Lycurgus who came out of the City against him, and then returned again unto Corinth. Whilst he prepared to attempt some notable thing upon Phocis; Leoneins, Megalens, and Prolomy, moved the Soldiers to fedition, which though he knew very well, yet diffembled he it at present, but Leontins sent for Apelles from Chalcis, who there had very naughtily behaved himfelf, and now returning was not entertained by the King after the usual manner, nor admitted to the Council. Megaless hereat being affrighted fled, leaving Leontius behind him ingaged for the twenty Talents, whose Soldiers Philip sent with Taurion into Triphylof him and of him and his complices lia as upon fervice, and then threw him in prison for the payment of the money, and not long after (the Soldiers malapertly interceding for him, that discovered. he should not be tried till their return, otherwise they should take it as a great affront) he put him to death. Then came he to Patra, where he had appointed the Deputies of the Cities to meet him about a Peace with the Etolians, which the Rhodians and Chians had by Ambassadors moved both parties to. Here letters of Megaless were brought to him, wherein he stirred up the Æiolians to proceed in the War, for that he would be in great straights for provisions, whereupon he judging Apelles to have been the chief cause of those evils, sent him in custody to Corinth, and ordered Alexander to go to Thebes and pursue Megaleas. He hearing this killed himself, and Apelles

> 28. The Ætolians hearing of these stirs in Philip's Court, and thinking thereby some great sedition would be raised, put off their meeting at Rhium about the peace, which he was not at all forry for, but exhorted the aflociates rather to bend their minds towards thoughts of War. Then, coming to Demetrias, there was condemned Piolomy, Apelles his Companion, by the Plolomy pur to Macedoians, and put to death; then, for that Winter was now begun, having fent his Army before, he himself followed into Macedonia. The next year he got Bylazora the chiefest Town of Paonia into his hands, and Thebes Pehiotick alfo, which the Etolians holding, much molested Theffaly : but receiving news that Scerdilaida being revolted, made great waste of all things about Malea, he returned into Peloponnesus at the time of the celebration of the Nemean Games. Here he received letters that Hannibal had overthrown the Romans at the Lake of Thrasymene, and Demetrius Pharius, who had waged War with the People of Rome, for the Illyrians, advised him to Philip having make Peace with the Etolians, and undertaking the affaires of Illricum raft things in passe thence into Italy, and think of no lesse than arriving at the Monardeligo, pnr- chy of the World. Being elevated with this fancy, he perswaded the Achaans tethan end to to agreement, and then sending Taurion and Araius to the Evolians, who defired a Treaty, at their request he went also himself down to them, and made

Peace on this condition, that all parties should enjoy what now they held. Agelans of Naupaltus perswaded the Greeks to imbrace amity, lest cutting A. M. 3789. one anothers through thus, they might be devoured by the Carthaginians or Romans. So all the Cities returned to their ancient wayes and customs, and this Social War ended after it had continued four years, in the fixth of the reign Ptolom, Philop. of Philip, the first of the 141 Olympiad. A. M. 3789.

29. Philip applied himself to the recovery of the Cities which had revolted from him, and then thought of nothing more than feeling the affairs of Polyb. lib. 5. Illyricum, necessary for the promoting of his defigns, especially the invafion of Italy, upon which his mind was fo ferled, as fleeping and waking his fancy ran wholly upon it, being spurred on by Demesrias Pharius, not so much for any great affection born to him, as for the others private interest, who thought hereby to recover the Island Pharus, which once he injuyed; and out of harred to the Romans, who having overthrown him in War, about this time sent to demand him of Philip, to whom he had fled. After he Livius 1, 22. had recovered the Cities, and fent his Army to the Winter quarters, he bethought him that there would be need of thips for the carrying on of his project; not for fighting with the Romans, but conveying of his men, fo that he caused 100 swift Barkesto be built, and in the Spring exercising his Soldiers a little in rowing, away he goes through Euripus near to Cephalenia, hearkening continually after the Roman Fleet. But the report of it's coming, after a short time put his men into such a pannick fear, though he was now going towards Apollonia, he racked about, and in great diforder after a day and a nights fail came back again to Cephalenia. For all this he was

Book III.

He sendeth to not discouraged from his enterprise, but understanding how Hannibal prospered in Italy, thought good to make him his friend, and thereby get an en-Hannibal in Italy. trance in thither. So this year being the 4th of the 2d Punick War, he sent Ambaffadors to him.

30. The Ambassadors landing near to the Temple of Juno Lacinia, went Idem lib.23. through Apulia towards Capua where Hannibal then lay; but in their way fell into the Roman Guards, by which they were brought to M. Valerius Lavinus the Prator, then lying about Numeria. Being thus entangled, Xenophanes, one bolder and wifer than the rest, told the Praior they were come from Philip to make a League and Alliance with the People of Rome; at which he rejoycing, that after the revolting of their Aslociates in Italy so great a Prince should defire their friendship, entertained him and his fellows very lovingly, and fent them away with some to conduct them, so that coming into Campania they prefently got to Hannibal. The Alliance was made on their Alliance, these terms, that Philip with as great a Fleet as possible (200 (hips he thought he could procure) should passe into Italy, waste the Maritime parts thereof, and help to carry on the War both by Sea and Land : that Italy being Conquered should all fall to Hannibal, and the Carthaginians, with all the spoil; and then they should passe into Greece, and there make War upon what Princes or States Philip pleased, who should enjoy whatever places could be got, either in the Continent or Islands, he being willing to content himself with these conditions for a beginning. Things being thus concluded, the Ambassadors were dispatched away, and with them some sent from Hannibal, who shipping themselves again where they landed before, were discovered by the Romans, who lay upon the Coasts of Calabria, and taken. Xenophanes, having had fuch good fortune before, with his skill attempted the same thing again, by the Romans, but the habit and language of the Carthaginians discovered them, and, the League being found about them, all was brought to light, and confessed; and then they were fent to Grachus the Conful to Cuma, and by him to the Se-31. The Pathers entred into ferious debate about it, being much troubled to find, that though they were scarce able to undergo the Carthaginian War, they should be ingaged in another with the Macedonian; yet notwithstanding they were not difmayed, but considered how they might make work for Philip at home; thereby to divert him from Italy. Having therefore imprisoned the Ambassadors, and fold their followers, they gave order for fifty thips fitly furnished to hover about Italy, and if the Kings attempts should appear answerable to the Ambassage, Marcus Valerius the Prator was then to invade Macedonia. Whilest these things were in hand, one of the ships which being taken accompanied the Ambassadors to Rome, escaped, and acquainted Philip how things had passed, who then not knowing what was done or concluded betwixt Hannibal and himself, sent Messengers, who disparched the bufinesse with better successe, but the Summer was too far spent for him to do any thing this year. These high thoughts and designs he now had in his head did so puff him up, that from an excellent Prince as he was at the first, he turned tyrannical as men judged, so that he began to wax harsh against the Ciries of Greece, being fet on by Demetrins Pharens, who advised him to get Peloponnesus into his own power, and for that purpose to seize on the two horns of that beaft, (as he accounted them) the Caftle of Corinth, and also Polybins ex that of the Meffenians, who being now at odds amongst themselves, he la-lib,7, except.3 boured to increase their differences; and for that Arains was displeased at it, and laboured to difwade him, he cast him out of favour. The year after he had entred into League with Hannibal, finding it yet not convenient to make for Italy, he took Oricus a Town of Illyricum, in order to the befreging of Apollonia, both which had joyned themselves in society with the Romans fifteen years before. But when Lavinus the Prator heard of it, leaving the Coast of Brundusium to the care of P. Valerius, he hasted to Oricus, and presently recovered it, and afterwards sent a party under the Conduct of Navius Crispus, which getting into Apollonia, afterwards fell upon the Macedonians lying so securely in their Camp, that about 1000 men entred the A. M. 3791. Trenches before it was perceived. Hereupon followed fuch a Pannick fear, 01.141. aua,3. as no body endeavoured to repulse the Enemy, and 3000 were flain and taken V. C. 540.

534

Others fent with better fuccesse.

He is beaten at Appollonia, and driven home.

Antioch Mag. here, the King getting out of his bed, fled half naked to the ships, which Levinus being aware of, secured the mouth of the River, so that he was forced to Piol. Philop.9. fly with a poor and unarmed Army by Land into Macedonia.

22. About this time, being angry with Arain, for being agrieved at his ill Identile. usage of the Messenians, he now procured him to be poysoned by the help excent, 9. of laurion his Lieurenant in Peloponnefus. At the first the thing was not known, it being a flow working poyfon, but Arains himself was not ignorant of it, yet shewed such calmnesse of mind as he acquainted none with it, but Cephalo his nearest attendant, who observing him to spit bloud upon the Wall, he onely faid, This reward O Cephalo have we for our friendship to Philip; but after his death he was honoured by all the Acheans as an Hero, Phi-fu' mitted unto him. But the fame year M. Valerius Lavinus withdrew the > lip about this time casting his thoughts upon Illyricum, got Lyssus a strong Town thereof, and Acrolyssus its Castle into his power, having divided his Idem ibid. Army into two parts, one whereof he hid on the Land-fide, and drew the except, 10,

Povloneth Aratus.

> Defendants towards the Sea with the other, fo as they in ambush entred the Castle without opposition (otherwise impregnable) after which he got the Livius lib. 26. Town, though with much trouble, and then most of the Cities out of fear

Roman Prætor makerh him

Ætolians from their fociety and alliance with him, by shewing them the civility of the Romans towards their friends, and especially by putting them in hopes to recover Acarmania again into their power, having Scopus the Prator and Dorimachus to back him in this perswasion. In the League also were to be included the Eleans and Lacedamonians, Attalus King of Afia the lesse, Pleuratus of Thrace, and Scerdilaidas of Illyricum, if they pleased. Lavinus took presently Zacynthus an Island near to Ælolia, having a Citie in it of the same name, Oeniada also and Nassus, Towns of Acarnania, all which he gave to the Æ:olians, and then judging he had made work enough for Philip to keep him at home, that he should not think of the invasion of Italy, or of Hannibal, or the Carthaginians, he departed to Corcyra. 23. He was Wintring at Pella, when the news first came to him, therefore Identified as he had determined to passe into Greece in the Spring, and first to invade, and as it were the Key into their Countrey. After this he hafted into Theffalie, where leaving Perfeus with a party to restrain the Etolians, he thence marched towards Thrace against the Madi, which were wont to make inroads into Macedonia when the King was absent in the Wars; from them he took Aruck terror into almost all the other Greeks; wherefore the Achaans, Bootians, Eubwans, Epirotes, and Acarnanians implored his help, for all which he provided as well as he might, and fent a party to defend Preparethus the Island, at which he heard that Attalus coming into Europe, arrived, being chosen by the Etolians their Commander in Chief. Scopas the Etolians hearing he was gone into Thrace, invaded Acarnania, the Inhabitants whereof fending away their Wives, Children, and Aged into Epirus, vowed never to return except as Conquerors, rather than to be again enflaved under the Ætolians. This the Enemy hearing, was fomething amated at their refolution, and then knowing of Philip his coming, returned home, and he when he our to meet him, he overthrew them in two several ingagements, after which they shutting up themselves in the Town, he drew down his Army to Pha-lara a Maritime Citie of Theffaly, whither Ambassadors came from Ptolomy, the Rhedians, Chians, and Athenians, to compose the difference betwixt awe the Illyrians, he now made incursions thither, after that into Pelagonia, and then took a Citie of the Dardanians in the Borders of Macedonia, being Jampharnia, and attempted other places. But the Etolians now aiming at, Polybius and expecting great things, because of their conjunction with their Romans, libito, heard they had so done, returned also unto Pella. The year after he suc- Identifican coured the Achaans fore molested by Machanidas Tyrant of Sparta, and the Esolians, & went against Lamia, a Citie of the Esolians, who coming him, and the Liolians, though not so much out of love to these, as for fear that Philip and his Kingdom should grow too great, and become burdensom to the liberty of Greece. The Treaty was rut off to the meeting of the States general of the Achaums, and a Truce made in the mean time for thirty

536

34. It was also began with this design, to keep Attalus, or the Romans, The Molious from coming into Grace; but the Æ olians observing the Term of the Truce "griuse peace, almost tobe expired, and hearing that Analm was come to Egina, and the Roman Navy to Naupaclus, hindred the conclusion; first complaining of some things done during the Truce, and then plainly refusing to agree, except the Acheans would reftore Pylus to the Meffenians, and except the Romans, A. hamanians, Sees dilaidas, and P. euratus were included in the peace. Philip holding it an unworthy thing that those who had the worst of it in the War should give Laws to the other, broke up the meeting, and leavying 4000 men for a defence to the Ackans, went to Arges. In the mean while P. Sulpicius coming with the Roman Fleet from Naupaltus, landed betwixt Corinth and Sieven, and wasted the Countrey; but Philip lighting upon his men drove them to their ships, and then going to Dyma, cast out thence the Garrison of the Modian, called thicher by the Eleans. Their Territories he also wasted (Cretiadas the General of the Acheans having united his Forces with his) Philip again and then went against the Citie it self. It hapned that Sulpicius was secret-worked by the ly got in thicher with 4000 men, which Aruck a terror into the besiegers as Romans at Elis. 10001 as they espied the Roman colours, and Philip would fain have drawn off his men; but a skirmish being begun he was forced to charge the Roman Cohort with his horse. His own horse being shot under him, a sharp conflict A. M. 3796. followed about his perfon now on foot, but being overpowered, he was refcued 01,142, and 4. by his followers, and mounting another fled away. Then pirched he his V.c. 341.

Tenrs five miles from Elis, and the next day marching to Pyrgus a Castle not Piolom, Philadol. 115, there took a multitude of Countrey people, which with their Cattel 109,14. had fled thither for protection; but as he was dividing the plunder, a Messenger came out of Macedonia, and informed him, that a certain man of the Æropians had taken Lychnidus, and was raising the Dardanians; wherefore leaving 2500 men under the Government of Menippus and Polyphas, for a Guard to the Acheans, away he marched into Theffaly, where he heard the Dardanians had invaded his Kingdom, and that he was reported to be flain. After his departure Sulpicius went and wintred at Agina with Aualus, and the Acheans fought profperoufly against their Enemies.

His acts in Grecce.

35. The year after, P. Sulpicius Galba the Proconful and Attalus depart- 1201111 lb.28. ing from Agina with their Navies joyned together (which made up fifty fayl) came into Eubwa, and there took Oreus through the treachery of Plator the Governour. Philip now being at Demetrias, great complaints came to him of the Atolians, who being very high, troubled grievously the Associates; the Acheans moreover being molefled again by Machanidas Tyrant of Lacedemon, and defiring aid, he difmiffed the Messengers with promise to provide for the fafety of all as near as he could, and appointed fires to be made on the tops of the Mountains, with a Watch-Tower, to give him warning if the Enemy invaded the Sea-Coasts. The fires upon the coming of the Navy to Orens were by the cunning of Plater made too late; but upon the fign given he hasted with his Army (having bearen off the Ætolians who opposed him at the Straights of Thermopyla) and came to Elatea a Town in Phocis. Attalus at this time, & the Proconul having attempted Chalcis to no purpose, came to Opus, which being taken, the King's Soldiers were to have the plunder of it, as the Romans had before of Oreus. Here he staying too long to gather money, was almost surprised by Philip, and hasting to his thips, had not got all his men aboard before he fell upon him; then departing to Orens, he there received news that Prusias King of Bibinia had invaded his Kingdom, fo that he prefently returned home, and Sulpicius to Azina. Philip chiding the Opuntians for yielding fo foon, went, and took Thronium inhabited by them of Thebes Pthiotick, who being outed thence by him 8 years before, as we faid, the Ætolians had given them this Town to dwell in. After this returning to Elatia (where the Ambassadors of Prolomy and the Rhodians stayed his coming to move him again about the peace) and hearing that Machanidas had determined to fet upon the Eleans, he refolved to prevent him. Machanidas hearing of his coming, retreated prefently to Sparta, and then went he to Egium to the general Council of the Achaans, to whom he restored Heraa and Triphylia; and Aliphera to the Megalopolitans. He made some depredations upon the Liolian, then returned to Oreus, and so to Demetrius, where he gave order for making of ships; (things being quiet thereafter the departure of Aualm) and fo into his own Kingdom against the Dardanians. 36. The two years following, little or nothing was done by the Romans most consided) were forc'd to make a Peace with him on his own terms. The Atolians Scarce was it concluded, when Publius Sempronius the Proconful was fent to succeed Sulpicius (who carelessly managed his affaires) with 10000 Foor. make a peace 1000 Horse, and 25 Gallies, who coming to Dyrrhachium raised the Parthini, and set upon Damallum. Coming a little after to Apollonia, Philip having received the news of his arrival, marched down thither, and would have given him battel, but the Proconful refuting it, and he not daring to attempt the Town, as also because he was now inclinable also to Peace, he returned again into his own Kingdom. Not long after the Epirotes bearing alfo the same mind, sent to him, desiring he would think of Peace, which they despaired not of, so he and Sempranius would but meet together. He condescended to go down into Epirus, and then came to an interview with the

Proconful at Phanice, together with Aminander King of the Athamanians,

and the Deputies of the Epirotes and Acarnanians, where it was agreed that the Parthini, the Cities Dimalum, Bargulum, and Eugenium, (hould fall to the share of the Romans, and the Atintana (because they had defired it in Greece, fo that the Leolians being destitute of their aid (in which they Iden lib, 29.

A general peace made

wayes.

bewirchim, from the Senate at Rome) to Philip: in the confederacy were included on the Kings part, Prusias King of Bithinia, the Acheans, Baotians, Thesialonians, Acarnanian, and Epirotes, an on the Roman, the Inhabitants of · Hium, King Attalus, Plearatus, the Eleans, Meffenians, and Athonians, with Nabis Tyrant of Sparta, and successor of Machanidas, flain in battel by Philopomenes, who now had begun to defend his Country from the Lace- Palyhius 1. 21. demonians and others. A Truce was made for two moneths, to have the except. c. 7. consent of the People of Rome, who now having turned the War into Africk upon the Carthaginians, were glad to free themselves from all other troubles. and therefore the Peace was confirmed by the fuffrages of all the Tribes.

37. But Philip's mind was so inured to action, that he could not but make Plut arch in himself work; for perceiving Philopomenes (now Prator the second time of Philopomene. the Achains) to be in great respect for his military skil and valour, he sent to murder him at Megalopolis, which being discovered, he deservedly incurred the displeasure of all Greece. He kept some correspondence (together with Antiochus the Great) with Ptolomy Philopator, when living; but after his odium several death, they two consulted together to deprive his young son of his Kingdom, and might well have done it (especially seeing the Egyptian Court was much vexed by the difcord of the great ones) had they not both been diverted And Having by the Romans, and punished justly, as Polybius observeth. And though he Lib. s. except. other enemies had been reconciled to the Ætolians, and used them as his friends and al- 20.6 lies, yet now without any pretence did he withdraw Lysimachia from their fociety, and joyned it to himself, after that Chalcedon; and to gratifie his Son in Law Prulias of Bithinia, enflaved the City of the Ciani, though the Ætolians had fent them a Captain who commanded in chief, which cruelty 1bid, c, 2, so incensed the Rhodiaus, as ever after they became his Enemies, and joyned with Attalus King of Asia against him. Very stoutly did he deal with these his adversaries, never being discouraged by any bad successe. He had the worst of it in a bittel at Sea near Chius, but driving Attalus on Land, and taking his ship (though he had never lost so many men in any battel whatever before)

before) he ascribed the Victory to himself. For all this War in which he was imployed by two powerful adversaries, yet feared he not to undertake an- A, M, 3805, other with the People of Rome, which now a few moneths after the end of V. C. 554. He ingageth the second Punick was decreed against him, about fourteen years after his Ant. M. 24. against the entring into confederacy with Hannibal, of his own reign the 23, and the Piol. Epid. Epid. Epid. Komans. first of the 145 Olympiad. A. M. 3805.

28. For though there had been a peace made, yet it was conceived he had Vide Livium broken it by his molesting the Lielians, and other affociates, and of late by lib. 21.

fending aid to Annibal in Africk, and the Carthaginians : The Athenians by their Ambassadors also called upon the Senate for help, whose Territories he had wasted, and forced them up into the City. The occasion of the War of the War on betwixt him and them was from the Acarnanians; for two young men of that Nation coming to Athens, chanced to go into the Temple of Ceres with the other company at the Feast, being not initiated, and for that reason were put to death, as having committed an unpardonable offence, though ignorantly they did it; now this the Athamanians took so to heart, as they procured Philip to make War upon them. At the same time were come to Rome Ambassadors also from Attalus, and the Rhodians, complaining that the Cities of Asia were also molested by him; so that now having little to do after the ending of the second Punick War, the Senate unanimously made a Decree, by virtue whereof Marcus Levinus the Viceprator was fent into Macedonia with 38 ships brought out of Sicilie by Cn. Ottavim: Afterwards came news further that he was about to take Athens, and then it being proposed to the People, the War (through the perswasion of Publim Sulpitius * the Consul.

* Galba.

Philip's fruit-

leffe Expedition against

to whom it fell by lot) was decreed against him. He had not besieged that City himself, but, sending down Philocles one of his Captains thither, went and subdued the Chersonesus of Thrace. Onely the Inhabitants of Abydus flood out against him, and that with such resolution, as following the example of the Saguntines in Spain, they fought it out to the last, and made an end of themselves, after he had denied to receive them upon any other terms than Polyb. cum. vielding to mercy. Yet Attalus and the Rhodians might have relieved them lib. 16, had they not loitered.

39. Sulpicius the Conful coming to Apollonia, upon the defire of the Athe- Living ilid, nians, sent C. Claudius Cento with twenty ships out of the Fleet which lay at Corcyra, furnished with Soldiers, to relieve their City. He hearing that Chalcis was badly looked to, though fortified with a Garrison of the Macedonians, went thither, took it with ease, then plundering it set on fire, and returned to the Piraus, or Haven of Athens. Philip was now comedown to Demetrias, where hearing this news he passed over Euripus on a bridge, and through Baotia hasted to Athens, thinking to surprise the Town; but the Inhabitants having got notice of his coming, flood upon their guard, and then he perceiving his craft failed him, betook himself to force; but this being to no purpose the Romans coming in, and the Soldiers of Attalus from Ægsna) wasting all about the Town, and not sparing so much as the Sepulchers, le went to Eleufine thinking there to get the Temple and Castle into his power; but the guards being strong, and the Navy coming to help from the Pirens, he marched thence to Megara, and fo to Corinih. Hearing now that the Acheans were met at Argos, to consult how to resist Nabis Tyrant of Sparta, he went down thither, and came upon them unawares, and promifed he would make War upon him, on condition they would but find him Soldiers to keep Ocens, Chalcin, and Corinth. His design was to ingage them in the War against the Romans, which they very well understood, and therefore Cycliades the Prator answered, that it was not lawful to propose any other matter than that for which they were affembled, and so a

40. Nothing yet was done by the Roman Conful of himfelf, but encamping if on the River Apfus between Apollonia and Dyrrhachium, he fent L. Apustius his Lieutenant with a party to harrase the Enemies Country,

Decree being made for raising an Army against Nabis, hee broke up the who performed what he went about, taking divers Towns of Macedonia and then returned with much booty. I. Philip being come home, made all provision possible for the War, and knowing the relitersnesse of the Atoliand, for fear they might fide with the Romans, (which yet they had not done) tent his Ambassadors to the general meeting of them called the Panatolium. whither came also L. Furius Purpureo, fent from the Conful, and others from the Athenians. The Macedonian being fifth heard, advised them to re-He courteth main in their fociety with him; the Athenians inveyed bitterly against Philip. as having broken the Laws of humanity and religion, in violating their Sepulchers, and Temple; then Purpures sheweth how the Romans had undertaken the War for them; though they formerly made Peace without them. and now how good an occasion was offered them of being restored into their friendship and society, except they would rather perish with Philip. This inclined all their minds towards the Romans; but Democritus the Prator thought the businesse was to be put off to the next Council. But not long after Philip fought twice with the Conful, and that foun prosperously, as he had like to have been taken himself, and then they imbraced the society of the Romans, and invading Macedonia, took and burnt Cercinium, aften which eth them joyn going into Perrhabia, Philip for upon them at unawares, and killing many, forced the rest to flie for their safety under the conduct of Aminander into their own Country. This year the Roman Navy joyning to that of Attalus and the Rhodians, took the Mand Andrus, and Orens, the City we have ofren spoken of , in Eubera.

But his bad fucceffe against the Conful mak-

41. Philip taking all care possible for the managing of his affaires, the Livius 1. 32. next Spring fent down his Auxiliaries and others through Epirus into Channa, to feize upon the Straights: near Antigonia, and he himfelf following after with the ftrength of this Army, fortified the Vallio betwixt the Mountains. through which the River Aons runneth; Athenagoras his Lieutenant he commanded to look to the Mountain Afnaus, and he himself pirched his Tents upon the hill . Eropus. To Sulpicius the Conful succeeded P. Villius Tap. Tappulus the pulus, who coming live did nothing at all, for leading towards the Enemys Conful doth he with a few went to view the Moors, through which his nearest way lay to him, and confulcing many dayes whether he should passe that way, on take the same Sulpicius went into Macedonia, before he could determine, news came to him, that his Successor was already come to Corcyra. This was

T. Onintins Flamininus, created Conful ere he was thirty years old, who falling this Province came fooner than ufual, bringing over with him 8000

Foots' and Soo Horse. Being arrived at the Camp, after some confultation, he determined to fet upon Philip's Army in the place where it yet layin but nothing,

Fluminings suc-how to do it was hard to be resolved, and forty dayes were spent in this deliberationa which time Philip was content to make an opportunity to look after Peace; and attempt the procurement of it through the Epirotes; "They met at the River Aous (or Appus) but the Conful demanded things feemfruiteffe trea. ingrio hard to the other, that he asked him if he would impose more hard conditions/upon onevconquered? and so withdrew himself from the confeto the world to the content of the c

The next day followed some light Skirmishess neither part receiving either much good ordammage, but as they continued in this condition, came a certain Shepherd, fent by Charons Prince of the Epirores, undertoking to lead the Romans through the Mountains an enfie way, and bring them upon the Briemies back. I The Conful glad of this opportunity, fent a party withhim, and then gave an Alarm with the whole Army to the Camp, which And is bearen the Macedonians received willingly enough, and both Armies being greedy of fighting, they marched out of their Trenches cooreceive the battel a but then those on their backs setting up la shour, strucks them with such terror, that fome of them ran away, others by reason of the difficulty of the place for fight were compassed in, and 2000 sain. The King sled amain till he came five miles off, and then rallying his men upon an hill, with a great Company went into The fally. Where walting divers Towns to deprive the Enemy in Theffaly.

of it was finished already. The Kings Ambassadors beginning a long Oration, were interrupted at the first, and asked whether their Master would be willing to leave the three Cities; they answered they had no Commission to answer any thing to that point and so being chidden by the Fathers they made an end, and the affairs of Greece were again left to the management of Quintine.

To no effect.

iters of Greece.

45. Philip feeing how things went, wrote to Philocles to deliver up Argos Livius ut (4to Nationale Tyrant of Sparsa, on condition that if he prospered he should pla. again restore it to him; but he presently after his getting into the Town, sent word to Quincins, who giving him a meeting, defired he would make peace with the Acheans, and fend aid against the King; the later of which he promised to perform, and as for the peace granted a Truce for four moneths. Philip faortly after came down again into Theffaly (it being no policy at all Polybius exto expect the Enemy in his own Kingdom) which Quintins understanding areptablist, marched thither, where wandring after each other, they both at length in a thick mist came near to some Hills, from the likenesse of the heads of Dogs, called Conoscophala. Here both their foreguards fixing came to the discovery of each other, and from the skirmishing, and ingagement of them, to a fet Is overthrown battel, though the King at first did no: intend it. The victory seemed at the A. A. 3808. beginning to incline towards the Macedonians in one Wing; but the other of. 141,400,4, being overpowered, they both at length were overthrown by the skill and va- V. c. 157. lour of the Romans, 8000 perishing, and 9000 being taken prisoners : Of the Antioth, Mag. Romans 700 were flain. Philip, when he faw how things went, fled towards Ptolom, Epi-Tempe; at the entry of which he flayed for such as had escaped, and then phania 7. passed through that Countrey into Macedonia. The Romans coming to plunder the Enemie's Camp, found the Æsolians got thicher before them, at which they fore repined, and grumbled at their General, as if he exposed them to danger, and granted the Prey to others. Flamininus was fore difpleased to see the greedineste of the Atolians after Prey; and as this gave occasion to that hatred, which afterwards manifested it felf, so it made him the more willing to agree with the Enemy, that he might not leave them Ma-

46. Philip fent prefently to the Roman General to defire another Treaty Idem execut; about a peace, who receiving them in a Council of Officers, without calling Legation. 6.

Aminander King of the Athamanians to conduct him on his way; then took he Phaleria (where were in Garrison 2000 Macedonians) which he plundred and burnt, at which also others being affrighted yielded themselves, and Thilip not daring to oppose, but keeping within Tempe, fent relief upon occasion to such places as wanted. At Rhaga the Conful found such opposition The Conful as he raised his siege, but thence departing took in divers Cities of Phocia, and taketh in febelieged Elaces, during which things the Navy under the conduct of LiQuinweral places tins his brother, in Conjunction with Assalus and the Rhedians, took swo of the most considerable Towns of Eubea, and then prepared to venture for Corineh; but by the Conful's advice, they first fent to the Achams to fee if they might draw them from Philip to their own party. 43. Ariffanus or Ariffineens (as he is called by Polybius) their Prator, laboured to perswade them by all means to imbrace the society of the Remans, at which the Dymans and Megalopolitans out of distaste went out of of Provisions, he thence passed into Macedonia. The Consul following him into 7 heffely, laboured to get the good will of the Epirotes, and called to him

the Council, as unwilling thus to betray Philip, and the rest unanimously en-The Acheans tered into Alliance with Attalns and the Rhodians, and for that they could joyn with the not do as thuch with the Romans without confent of the People at Rome, put Roman party. it off onely till they might fend their Ambassadors thicher, and Decreed at the present to dispatch away three to Lucius Quintius, and their Army also to Corimh before which he now lay. The Town was flourly defended by the Inhabitants, and Androfthenes the Governour for the King, till fuch time as Phi ocles came with 1 500 fresh men to their reliof, after which it seemed best both to Assalus and Quintins to raise their siege, and then Philocles had Argos betrayed to him. The Conful in this mean time got Elaca, and then taking up his Winter quarters, news came that the Opantians were at odds amongst themselves, some calling the Atolians, and some the Romans, defirous to give up their Citie to them. The stronger and richer part called the Conful, but the Castle was still held by the Macidonians, who could not be got out by any fair words or foul, and when it should have been sormed came an Herauld from Philip, defiring a time and place might be fer for a meeting to treat again of peace, which being grained, they met in the Bay near Nice at the day appointed, where Philip Would not come afhore for fear as he pretended of the Etolians. Much talk there was on both fides, Polyhimeters. the treaty being put off from one day to another; but it being required of $116.17. the King to quit all Greece, he refused to do it, having a great defire to keep

He fendeth to Rome

Another

Treaty.

Corinth, Chalcus and Demetrias ; and then at his request he had leave given him to fend Ambassadors to the Senate, and a Truce was made for two monerhs. 44. The Greeks fent their Ambassadors also, and all came to Rome, when the debate was about the Provinces of the new Confuls, whether one of them should have Macedonia, according to the custom, or both stay, and carry on the War against the Gaules then depending; for the Tribunes of the people opposed the custom, alleging that the reason was why Wars were so lengthned, because there was every year a new General according to the succession of the Consult. This being referred to the Senate, it was thought fit to continue the Command to Quintins, and then had all the Amballadors audience. The Greeks inveighed fore against Philip, and carnestly laboured that he should not be allowed to hold Chalcie, Cerinth , and Demetrias , for otherwise Greece could have no thoughts of liberty. They alleged it to his own faying , that these three were the Festers of Greece, and that not without reason; for if he held Corinth, Peloponnesins could have no breathing time; if Chalcis, the Locrians, Bassians, and Phoeians durft not mutter; and if Demetrim, the Theffalians, and Magnetes should not be able as much as to take of liberty: seeing therefore be pretended to be willing to quit all other places, this was but a shift for the present, seeing if he was Master of these places he might recover what he had before; therefore they defired he might either relinquishethem, or charethe War might be carried on , feeing the greatest part the Leolians, used them very respectfully, and presently granted a Truce for fifteen dayes. This feeming strange to the Etolians, they presently concluded he was bribed to it by Philip, not accounting better of others than according to their own covetous humour; but he being displetfed with them, not onely for the matter of the plunder, but also for that they gave out fleighting words of the Roses valour (attributing the good successe to themfelves) hearing alfo that Anticobus King of Afin was confline towards Enrope, and so fearing Philip might joyn with him, and then a new Conful coming might take the glory of concluding the War away from himself, he refolved to make an end of the difference, and appointed a day and place to meet an to which he furminated the Allies. Being met together he willed them to declare their minds concerning the peace, on what terms they Would have it mide. Aminander very modestly defired Provision might be made for him; alle he was like to undergo the malice of Philip; who would be able presently to crush him. The Erolians were point blank against the peace, faying, all would prove fruitleffe, except the Madedonian were duced his Kingdom, and that Quineins, except he did it, would neither answer the expectations of Greece, nor of those that sent him; to which he replied, that it was not the custom of the people at Robernterly to undo at once those with whom they warred, and that the liberty of Greece Would better be provided for by the standing of the Macadonian Kingdom, so weakned as it was like to be, than by the destruction of it; seeing then it would be obnoxious to the invalion of the Thracians and Ganis. The day after arrived Philip himself, and the new, coming into a full Council there, very wifely allayed the heate of all parties against him , offering to ratifie the former demands of the Romans, and for the rest to submit himself to the pleasure of Obtaineth a the Senate. Therefore four moneths Truce was granted to him, according Truce , and to his defire, and paying to Quintius 400 Talents in ready money, and fending again giving up Demetrius his Son, and others for Holtages, he had leave to fend to Rome about the conclusion; but with this caution, that if the bufinesse should not succeed, he was to have the Hostages and Money returned back unto him. 47. Both Senate and People admitted of peace, though Marcellus the Idem extens new Conful laboured against it, out of defire to be fent into Macedonia, Legation 1. Philip Was injoyned, befides the fetting of all Greece at liberty, before the ce. 6 9.

to Rome.

Book

Which ad-

for impro-

veth.

vantage Per-

Procureth peace.

400

lebration of the Ifthmian Games sito restore all Captives and Renegadoes to give up all his covered Gallies except 5. and one with 16 Oares on a fide, to pay 1000 Talenis, balf at present, and the other half in the space of 10 years. at fo many payments. Into Greece were fent 10 men of the Chief, with whom Flaminium was joyned in Commission, to compose affairs, and restore liberty to the several states thereof, which exceedingly affected all with joy; except the Etolians, who carped at the Decree, and affirmed that Greece had onely changed it Lords; feeing the Romans had Corinth, Demetrias, and Chalcis. When the Commissioners came to fit, some controversie indeed arose. about these Towns; for they having it in expresse charge to set all; others at liberty, these were left, to their discretion because of Antiochus, who, as all men thought, had intentions to arrempt formerhing upon Europe : therefore Flamininus perswaded them to give up Carinth into the hands of the Achaans, and keep that Caftle, Demetria and Chalets in their own power. Then going to the folemnity of the Ishmian Games he there pronounced liberty, in that great audience, unto all Greece, which so affected the hearers, as with admiration of the thing they were fcarce themselves. 48. During the War between the Romans and Antiochus , which shortly Living like after followed, Philip behaved himself suirably chough to the expectation of the Conquerours : afterwards confidering , and comparing his prefent condition with his former, he grew fomething imparient, and especially amongst other things, this vexed nim, that power of animadverting upon those Macedonians who had revolted in the War, was taken from him; for after that Antiochus was overcome, and the War with the Etolians was now in hand, Acilias the Conful taking Heracles, and Philip belieging Laming when he was in a fair way of taking of it , he was commanded to depart from it that four might be furrendred to the other. Acilius to patifit him, gave him leave

His diffarista- to make Wat upon Athamania, and to recover the Gities which the Atelians had taken from the The Talsans; fo that he prefently drove out Aminander from Athamania, recovered divers Cities, amongst which was Demetrial, and possessed himself of the Country of the Magneters and some Cities in

Thrace also. This pacified him for the present ryet did he not let fall his indignation, but in time of peace made all provision possible for another War, increasing this Revenues not onely by Customs, but by renewing the works of the Mines, and digging others, as also taking care for increasing the number of his people now exhaulted. Whilest he thus imployed himself, there wanted not an occasion to inflame his mind anew a for the The Malians and Michamanians Cent to Rome to complain bhihim; Eumener also about the Cities of Thraced The Senare morthering willing no judge the marrer in his plance, lant three Commissioners into Greece, to hear and determine it, who futing, and hearing all parties as Arbitrators, were fomething provoked by fome words be untered, affirming athacas yet the Sun of all the dayes be had to line was not feet, and all being heard, they Decreed he should withdraw his Quards from all, the Greek Cities, and that the Kingdom of Manadonia thould be terminated by its arrient limits. As for the Cities of Thrace, much being alleged pro and con , betwine him and Eumener ; they kept the middle way, referving the decision of that solithe Senate, and ordered in the mean sime that his Garison Soldiers should be drawwont of them in The Serigge relotved he should quir them, and all the Maritime Coasts of Thrace; fo that now being sufficiently incensed, he wanted but convenient Forces to make him revolt.

49. Being commanded to quit Enus and Maronea, with all the Sea Coasts of Thrace, he procured the principal of the Maronites who were strongly bent against him, to be murdred in the night, and then the Romans complaining of it as an unworthy deed, he denied it, and when Onomastus and Cassander the instruments of the fact were required to be sent to Rome, the later he gave way for to go, but then (it's thought) procured him to be poyloned in the way, lest he should tell tales; and as yet his affairs not being ripe for a revolt, he fent Demetrius his younger fon to Rome, to purge himfelf, and deprecate the displeasure of the Senate. Underhand he sollicited the inhabitants upon the River Ister to break into Italy. Demetrius had got heretofore so much good-will at Rome, as coming to have audience in the Senate, though he was abashed at that presence, and the heavy loads of impurations laid upon his Father by the Ambassadors of his Enemies, Yet were his Father's He is displea- faults passed over at this time for his take, and so much fignified to Philip by fed at the fa-O. Marcius, fent into Macedonia to fee whether he had done all that was your of the injoyned him. Then did he quit all the Cities of Thrace inhabited by the Romans to-Greeks, and performed all other things which the Romans required, that he wards his younger fon might not give any suspicion, but get leisure to provide for the intended War. Demetrius With Demetrius his fon he was not well pleased, for that the Senate making no account of himfelf, had given him the credit of deferving onely favour;

but especially Perseus his elder son conceived great indignation and malice against him, not onely for the credit he had at Rome, but being jealous he might deprive him thereby of his Father's Kingdom, Indeed the Macedonians looking upon Demetrius as one to whom they were obliged for faving them harmlesse from the Romans, designed the succession to him, whom also they held legitimate, but not Perfeus, whose mother was no better than his Father's Concubine. 50. Perfeus growing more and more sensible of the favour his brother was in both with the Romans and Macedonians, bent his mind to bring him into the jealousie and hatred of his Father, and thereby to work his destructifor his cldest on. His visit in way of merriment and jollity to him he represents as an opportunity taken to make him away, whereby the young man is called for by his angry Father, and is forced with tears to make an apology, to which credit is hardly enough given, suspicions and jeajousies getting ground. At length Per seus accuseth him of having dealt with them at Rome underhand about the Kingdom and place of his Father, who fends two thicher to enquire of it, but fuch as were Perfess his creatures and pareners in the plot. Philip having a mind to go up to the top of the Mountain Hamus, for to have a view and prospect of the Country round about, rook with him his eldest, and sendeth his youngest into Macedonia to look unto it, with whom he fent one Didas Governour of Paonia with a small guard. He being also one of Perseus his Complices, he gave him fin charge to infinuate into him, and thereby get out his most inward intentions, which he easily did, the poor young man being resolved to flie to the Romans for shelter, and defirous to use his help therein. This is prefently made known to Perfess, and by him with improvement to Philip, who having wearied himself and Soldiers to little purpose, and being troubled with this report, returneth home, casts Herodorus, Demetries his chiefest friend, into prison, and causeth him also to be narrowly looked to. Some moneths remained the King thus exceedingly troubled and anxious in himself, till the Ambassadors returning from Rome, put an end within

51. These men being returned, seigned grievous accusations against Demetrius and amongst the rest brought counterfeited letters as from Quinting, wherein he And compass begspardon of the King, if the young man had dealt with him in any kind there death by out of his defire to the Kingdom, but promifeth he will do nothing against any falle accusa- one that belongs to him, for that he would not be accounted for the time to come the author of any evil purpose, Credit being given hereunto, Herodorus

a short time to his resolutions.

is racked to death, confessing nothing, and Demetrius being again accused by his brother of intended flight, is destined to die, though for fear of giving any offence to the Romans, and discovering his intentions against them, it's resolved to be done cunningly. Being sent to Afraum a Town of Paonia, and thence called to Heracles, he is there first poyloned by Dides, crying out A. M. 3824. against the cruelty of his Father, the paricide of his brother, and wicked. Ol. 149.40.4 nesses of Didas. Being tormented with the working of the Poyson, two V.c. 173. Instructions were let into the room, who stifled him with the tapestry, and so 6. the innocent young man was murdered. His Father within a year or two fell Ptolom, Evith into a fad melancholy for the losse of him, which being perceived by one An- 22, thomas the fon of Echecrates, and Nephew alfo to Antigonus who was Phi-discovered,

The device is lip's Father, he having been alwaies a faithful friend to the King, labored to discover to him the whole device, and brought to him one Xyenne, who was privy to the whole design. He laid open the series of all things to him. Hereupon Philocles one of the Ambassadors that were fent to Rome being present, was put to death; Apelles the other, hearing the businesse was come out, fled into lealy, Perfess onely kept him out of fight, but his Father intending to frustrate his expectations of the Kingdom, which he so wickedly fought after, declared Antigonus his heir and successor, saying, he had rather his Kingdom should be destroyed, than ever come into the hands of Perfeus. Not long after being spent with extream grief and melancholy, and having commended Antigonus to the States of Macedonia, and uttered Whereat Phi many a bitter curse against Perseus, he died at Amphipolis, after he had reigned 44 years. A. M. 3826, the second of the 150 Olympiad, 146 years after

52. Had Philip lived alittle longer, Antigonus had got possession of the Kingdom by his means; but things being not now ripe, he lost it by the pro- A. M. 2816.

the death of Alexander the Great.

tip laboureth to difinherit Perfeus and dicth of Melancholy.

Yet Perfeus

curement of the Kings Phylician, who when he saw there was no hopes of ol. 150, at 1, life, fent and acquainted Perfeus with it, and kept close his death till his V.C. 575 arrival, so that then having opportunity to oppresse his Enemies not once Science Philip, thinking of it, he obtained the Kingdom. Being a little ferled therein, he 9. Philem. caused Antiochus to be flain, and then sent to Rome to renew the League Kingdom, and made with his Father, and to defire that he might be owned as King, doing refolveth to this onely to secure himself for the present, and intending as soon as his affairs would permit, to make use of the preparation his Father had made for another War; as it afterwards proved. His Father a little before his death War with the had prevailed with the Baftarna, who lived near the River Istor, to leave their ancient feat, and come and live in the Country of the Dardanians, which he intended to give unto them, that there leaving there wives and children, they might together with the Scordifel (who being some of those Galls that invaded Thrace, had seated themselves at the meeting of Danubius and Sabus, and so called themselves) invade Italy. They re-entred Thrace again with quietnesse, but after Philip's death falling out with the Inhabitants, and purfuing them to the Mountains, they were fet upon with such a tempest as seized on the Galls at Delphi, and being pressed also by the Thracians, onely 20000 got into Dardania, the rest of the multitude returning back beyond Danu-> of them by night, and others were sent by them into Macedonia. $3. About this time some of the Dolopians refusing to obey him, and willing to submit their cause to the Roman Senate, he went down, and by force brought all their Country into his power; he laboured then to curry favour with feveral Cities of Achaia and Theffaly in his passage, and either fent or wrote to several others in Greece, desiring them that an end might be put to the ancient grudges betwire his Father and them; the Achaans especially. The Roman Senate upon the report of the firs in Dardania, fent three to fee how matters went, but he refused to see them; it being alleged sometimes bius. Those that arrived in Dardania now did Perfens fir up against the In- Livins 46. 41.

habitants as much as possible, which being distasteful to the Romans, their Ambassadors also returning from Carthage, reported to the Senare that he held intelligence with them there; for his Ambassadors had private audience that he was absent, and otherwhiles that he was sick; but it clearly appeared to them that he was providing for the War, and so much the more, for that the Atolians were now fo feditious, as though their commissions gave them power to take up the differences amongst them, yet could they not prevail by their authority. Indeed now he was better provided to make War than the Romans to refift, having 20000 Foot, with 5000 Horse, in a readinesse, and provifions too for ten years. Thrace was at Peace with him, and though he was fo infamous for his cruelty, not onely in respect of his brother's death, but also the killing of Apelles, whom he used as an instaument in that businesse, and also for making away his wife, and upon other accounts, yet either out of reverence to the Court of Macedonia, or by reason of their emulation against the Romans, were both the Greeks and Afracicks generally more favourable to him than to Eumenes the King of Pergamus, though of a clean contrary disposition. Eumenes himself came to Rome to complain against him; to

Hisbad cari- answer to whose accusations he sent Ambassadors, and with them the Rhoage towards dians, who inclined to his fide, and as Eumenes returned home, he most Eumenes mak- basely sent some to murder him, whom though that King escaped as to his eth him the life, yet was he fore wounded in the straight passage to the Temple at Delphi: somer be dea This as it lost Perseus much with his friends, so it made him be the sooner Enemy, declared an Enemy by the Romans. 54. It was thought good that some forces should be raised to be in a readiness. and that certain Commissioners should be sent into Greece to retain the Idem lib, 42, States in their fidelity, with Soldiers also to put into such places as wanted, 43, 44. He perceiving their resolutions, began to repent himself, and procured a truce, that he might fend Ambassadors to Rome, the Commissioners giving way to it.

for that they knew him in a good posture for War, and themselves unprovided as yet; but the Senate for all this would not grant him Peace, his faults being so aggravated against him, that the War was denounced. P. Licinius Crassus the Cousal being sent against him, he had the better of it in an ingagement; but yet his heart failed him, fo contrary to his former humour, as that then he sent and defired Peace, offering to perform all his Father was tied to; but had answer by the flout Romans, that on no other terms could it he granted, except he absolutely referre himself and Kingdom to the courtesie of the Senate, and cast all into their hands. After this he fent to Genthius

King of the Illyrians, to draw him to his party, having taken divers Towns

He defirech Peace which will not now be granted.

His confter-

nation of

from him, and might have done himfelf good thereby, had he not been beforted; for that Prince was inclinable enough to him, onely he faid, he wanted money, which though he had enough by him, yet neglected he to fend. He laboured also to draw into his aid Corys King of Thrace, and subdued again the Dardanians, but Quem vult Jupiter perdere, dementat prius, Q. Marcius Philippus coming against him, by reason of the difficulty of the A. M. 3836 wayes, and want of provisions, might easily have been utterly defeated; but 01, 152, an, 4; he cried out he was conquered, without fighting ran away, left the Straights V. C. $85. open for his Enemy, fent to Theffalonica to burn his ships, to Pella to cast Ant. Epiphahis treasures into the Sea, and then being angry with the messengers, the Piol. Philom. one for that he had not obeyed him, the other for that he had, he put them 13. both to death, and recovering most of his treasure, by those that dived, out of the water, onely fatisfied himfelf for this madnesse, by recovering Dius, which had been taken by the Enemy.

counted it to prefage the ruine of their Kingdom, which made the Romans

(to whom it was foretold on purpose) more eagerly to begin the fight. Cato fon to M. Cato, and fon in Law to the Conful, behaved himself so fourly, as

cc. L. Paulus Amilius the Conful was at length fent against him, who found Livius ibid. fome difficulty at first to come at him, having incamped himself near the Sea under the mountain Olympus; but Scipio Nasica getting over a Rock led the way, and then Per feus retired, and pitched his tents near to Pydna. The Conful was warie of ingaging with him (who now had an Army of 30000 Foot, and 4000 Horse) his own men being tired, but the night before the fight the Moon being eclypfed, so terrified the Macedonians, that they ac-

He is overthrown,

Plutarch in this encouraged the rest, and thereby he was the means to gain the victory. Of the Macedonians were flain 20000, and 6000 taken; of the Conquerours but 100 lost their lives. Perfess fled to Amphipolis, and finding there no relief, fayled to Samothrace, where hoping to be secure in that sanctuary, Cn. Oftav. is the Admiral being fent after him, promifed by the voice of a Crier fafety and freedom to all that would come in, whereby he was forfaken of almost all his followers, & Ion of The falonica gave up his young children into the hands of the Romans. He thought now of escaping to Crese; but, being left thus, gave up himself, and eldelt fon to Ottavins, when he had reigned 11 years; and after being lead in Triumph by the Conful was cast into prison at Alba, where for seven dayes he lay in a most sad condition, till through the Yieldeth him-importunity of Amilius it was changed into a better. Two years he thus felf, and dieth continued, and then through defire of life and liberty, encouraging himfelf in in custody af-new and vain hopes, ended his dayes, some say through the barbarousnesse of ter two years. his Keepers, who would not fuffer him to take any rest, but others, by course of nature in free custody, having his funeral discharged at the publick cost. Thus ended this Macedonian Kingdom, being changed into a free State through the seeming bounty of the Conquerours, A. M. 3837. the first of the 153 Olympiad, 156 years after the death of Alexander the Great.

CHAP. V.

The Asian and Syrian Kingdom.

From the death of Seleucus, to the reducing of Syria into the form of a Roman Province by Pompey, containing the space of 220 years.

I. Four or five years after the death of Cassander, it hapned that Antie- Plutaes, in Echus the eldest son of Selencus sell in love with Stratenice, daughter to Dimitie. Demetrius (which woman we faid before that Seleucus married, after her fa- Valerius Marither was overthrown, and beaten out of Afia) and for that he was afhamed Appliant in to reveal his affection, pined away, and resolved to starve himself, had not swisce.

with his Father's wife hath her granted to him.

his disease been discovered by Erasistratus the Physician, by the changing of Antiochus the his countenance when the came in or out, and by other tokens. Selencus, fon of selencus who was ready to redeem his fons life with his own bloud, presently gave falling in love him her to wife, though he had a Child by her; and that the bufinesse might feem to proceed of himself, calling his Army together, he declared it to be his pleasure to make them two King and Queen of all the upper Countreys, having married them together; and that he thought his fon, who had hitherto been obedient to him in all other things, would also herein be ruled by him; but if his wite should distaste so unusual a thing, he desired his friends to shew and perswade her, that whatsoever the King should think fit, and the affairs of State required, that the ought to account of as just, and fitting. After this he took Demetrius her father, and imprisoned him in the Chersonesus of Syria, where he died, after three years as was before said, and within a year after his death fought his last (and the last of Alexander's Companions) battel A. M. 3713. with Lysimachus, in which he being Conquerour, and his Enemy flain, left Ol. 121,400.4. Affa wholy to his fon , having a defire to go into Macedonia (where he had V. C. 461. never been fince he came over with Alexander) and end his dayes in his Na- Piol, Lati 31. tive Countrey. But as he was journeying towards Lysimachia, he was traiterously slain by Ptolomy Ceraunus whom he had lovingly entertained. A.M. 3722. 23 years after he had taken the title of King, being aged 72. and 42 after the death of Alexander, From his Conquests he was called Nicanor and Nicator, and is reported to have had the print of an Anchor on his Thigh, Vide Jaffin. and his posterity also after him, as a note of their Original. 2. An-

2. Antiochus succeeded his father, and was sirnamed Soter from repel- Appianin syling the Gauls, which in his time at the invitation of Mithridates King of viacis. Bithynia had seized on part of Asia. Having with many battels recovered Memnon ex-(though not all) his fathers Kingdom from divers, which now begun feveral-cerpt, cap. 16. ly to pluck the parts of fo great a body, he fent over a firong party under the Command of Patrocles beyond Taurus, who took to himself Hermogenes for his Lieutenant. He intended amongst other places to fall upon Heraclea a Citie of Pontus; but the Inhabitants coming out, and pacifying him, he made a League with them, and thence through Phrygia invaded Bithynia, A.M. 2722. where in an ambush laid for him he was cut off, though he fought stoutly 01,124,000.3. with his whole Army, after which Zipates the King built a Citie upon the V.C. 472. Hill Lyperus, which being called after his own name became famous, and Ptol. Philad. 3. not long after he dying, left his Kingdom to Nicomedes his eldeft fon. Against him Antiochus being about to undertake an Expedition, he craved help of those of Heraclea, promising them to require them with the like favour in their necessity, which they took as an occasion to fall off again, and break the League made with Hermogenes; and partly by force, and partly by purchase recovered divers places taken from them, and attempting to do fo by Amefirm, which one Eumenes held, he chose rather, out of anger, to deliver up the Town to Ariobarzanes the fon of M.thridates, than to fell it to them. Not long after Antiochus and Antigonus Gonatas being at difference, and preparing for the War on both fides, Nicomedes joyned himself with Antigonus, against whom therefore the other thought first to try his strength. Mithridates frengthning himself, procured 13 Gallies from Heraclea, which ad-

Succeedeth his father.

His Wars.

DOOK III'

other for some time, they departed at length without a fight. Anigenus Geniss maketh

Re repelleth the Galls, and the name of Seter,

3. Antigonus Gonatas being resolved to venture for Macedonia (where his father Demetrius Poliorcetes once reigned) though he had once already a League with been overthrown by Ptolomy Ceraunus, who now held that Kingdom, made a League with Antiochus. This Prince might be the more willing to imbrace it, by reason that the Gaul's were now come into Asia, brought by Nicomedet of Bishynia to help him against Zybeas (or Zipatus) the younger, who held from him (whether his brother or no is uncertain) the Maritime part of that Countrey. After they had helped him to recover Bithynia, they harrased all ding to his own Fleet, he went against that of Antiochus, but facing one an-

the Countreys far and wide, and though they were but 20000. and of them but half fighting men, yet struck they such a Terrout into all Nations on this overthrow.

The Original

fide Taurus, as most, though they had never seen them, submitted unto them. But Antiochus, as we have it from Appian, repelled them from his Territories, and thence, for faving the Countrey harmlesse, had the name of Soter or Saviour, having before fent as aid into Greece 500 men against their Coun- Paulan, in trey-men, under the conduct of Telefarchus the Syrian. After this having Phocicis. married his daughter Apame to Magas King of Cyrene, and brother to Prolomy Phi'adelphus, he was perswaded by his son-in-law to break the League which his father Seleucus had made with Ptolomy, and invade Egypt; but as Idem in Attihe was about to do this, and was gathering forces for it, Ptolomy fent feveral cis, parties of Soldiers into all the Countreys over which he reigned, whereof fome acting the parts of Robbers, and others of Enemies, diverted him from his purpole, The last ingagement he was in that we read of, was with Enmenes, the first King of Pergamus, near Sardia, from whom he received an Strabolib.13.

4. For there was one Philesarns an Eunuch born at Tios in Paphlagonia, Straboibid & of the King and belonging to Lysimachus who mide him Keeper of his Treasure placed at Pergamus, which he built very strong upon the Hill. He continued very faithfull to him, till such time as Arsinoe caused him to murder Agathocles Pausan, in Athis eldest fon, at which he being troubled, and thereupon she accusing him to ticis, her husband, he revolted from him, and fending to Seleucus offered himfelf, and the money to him : then in the troubles betwixt them two fo cun-

Aaaa 2

ningly behaved himfelf, as he kept poffession, and alwayes fawning upon, and obliging the next, and most potent Prince, remained Master of the place and cond of the 120 Olympiad.

revolt.

Sclencus fir-

named Calli-

of his fifter

Berenice.

Treasure for twenty years: For Selenous being murdered by Ptolomy Ceraunus, he redeemed the body with a great sum of Gold, and sent the ashes thereof to this Antiochus Soter his fon. This Philoterus had two brothers, Eumenes and Attalus, the former of which had a fon of his own name, who fucceeded his deceased Uncle, and having in his possession the places lying about Pergamus, overthrew Antiochus (who now it feemeth counted him an incroaching neighbour) as we faid before. Antiochus alfo built a Citie in Sr-ria, which he called by his wives name A pamea, and after that another of the same name called after his mother, who was the daughter of Artabazus;

7. Rejoycing that he fared so well by his shipwrack, he now made War upon Ptolomy, but being overthrown fled to Antioch in great fear, being as deflitute as before, though he found not fuch relief. For, writing to his He invadesh younger brother Amiochus, he craved his help, offering him all Afa within

He invaced the Mountain Taurus for a reward, who (though he was but yet fourteen thence is cast years old) being greedy of reigning imbraced this occasion, and then behaved into great not himfelf as an helper or brother, but like a robber, intending to get the whole Kingdom. He shewed incredible boldnesse in invading and fnarching, whence he had the Sirname of Hierax or Golhanck. Ptotomy hearing of his aiding his brother, lest he should have two to deal with at once, made Peace with Selencus for ten years; and then Antiochus hiting the Gunls, with them made War upon his brother in the other's flead, in which he had the better of it, and they supposing Seleneus to be slain in the battel (that cutting off all the Royal race they might be Lords of Afia) turned their his freedom with Gold, and enter into fociety with his Mercenaries. The two brothers being thus at odds, and every one gaping after Asia, Eumenes of Bithmia puts in amongst the rest, and overthrowing the Gauls, and after them Antiochus, got a great part of it into his possession. Now also Arsaces hearing of the diffresse of Selencus, perfected the revolt of the Parthians;

for, invading that Country with a band of robbers, he flew the Governour

Andragorus, and invaded the Principality, and not long after seizing on the Kingdom of the Hyrcanians, so strengthened himself thereby, that after fome years he overthrew Selencus, and established his Kingdom. Hence the Parthians accounting ever after the day of this Victory as the day of their liberry, constantly observed it, and Arfaces being no leffe memorable to them than Cyrus to the Persians , Alexander to the Macedonians, or Romains to the Romans; out of honour to him they called all their Kings by his name. This beginning of Ar (acei fell out in the first of the 135 Olympind, of the City 510, the second of Selenens, and the third of Piolomy

8. Now understanding that Eumenes had got the greatest part of Afia into Identib. 39, brother rebel- force against him that hired them; so that Antiochus was glad to purchase herein imitating his father. At length having killed one for, and nominated another his Successor, he died, after he had reigned 19 years, A. M. 3742. the fer-

5. Antiochus his fon succeeded him , sirnamed Theos most prophanely Appliagings. by the Milesians, because he rid them of Timarchus their Tyrant. From him viais.

the Parthians the Parthians first revolted, who being (as * Justin out of Trogus tells us) *Lib, 41. Exiles out of Southin (in the language of which Country Parihus fignifieth fuch an one) were very obscure under the Government of the Medes and Persians, and being Conquered by Alexander, when none of his Captains after his death would accept of the Soveraignty over them, fell to the lot of Saiagenor a stranger, but a friend to the Macedonians. They followed first Eumenes in the Civil Wars; after his death Anigonus, and then submitted themselves to Selencus and his Successors, till now they took occasion to revolt at the infligation of Arfaces. His brother Tiridates, Argathocles the Strabelling. Governour of these parts endeavouring filthily to abuse was slain, and then the Macedonians were thence expelled. At the same time Theodorns the Governour of the 1000 Battrian Cities revolted also, which the people of the East using for a pattern, in like manner fell off from Antiochus. He waged stern Provin- many Wars with Ptolomy Philadelphus, till such time as both being weary they contracted an Alliance, Ptolomy giving his daughter Berenice to the other, who had two fons already, Seleucus and Antiochus, by Laodice his former wife. Herein that Prophecie of Daniel is taken to be fulfilled, which faith, that in the end of years they shall joyn themselves together; for the Kings daughter of the South shall come to the King of the North, to make an agreement. But, as it followeth, the thall not retain the power of the Arm, neither shall be stand nor his Arm, &c. For, Philadelphus dying shortly after, Antiochus took again his former wife Laodice, who being fenfible of the in- Appianin Sy-jury, and fearing her husbands inconstancy, poysoned him, after he had reigned viacis.

15 years. 6. Landice his wife kept his death close, till such time as she had secured Idem ibid. the Kingdom to Selenons her eldest son, sirnamed for his victories (though of Justin 110.27. none but one we read) Callinious, and from his beard Pogon. The next thing the went about was to make away Berenice, who understanding that nicus and Posome were sent to kill her, shut up her self in Daphne, a Town near Antioch, and when the was befieged, news flying about the Cities of Afia, they commiserated her condition, and out of respect of her Fathers and Grandfithers Dignity, fent men to her relief. But above all, her brother Ptolomy A. M. 3759.

Energeses being affrighted at her danger, hastened out of his Kingdom with 01,133,4m3. his whole power. Yet ere any relief could come she was taken by treachery V.C. 508.

(promise of safety being made to her) and quickly slain; at which base and Ptol. Eurogi, h. unworthy act the Cities conceiving great indignation, provided a great Fleet, and to revenge her death, gave up themselves to Ptolomy, who invading Syria geth the death flew Landice, feized upon Calefyria, with Selencia, got into his hands Syria, Cilicia, and the upper Provinces beyond Euphrates, and almost all Afia, even as far as Battria. Without doubt he had Conquered all Selencus his Kingdom, had he not been forced by a Domestick Sedition to return, after whose departure Selencus having prepared a great Fleet for the reducing of those Cities which revolted from him, lost it in a great Tempest, at the which they were so far from rejoycing, that pitying him for this shipwrack, they voluntarily returned to obedience. 7. Rchis power, and both the brothers had even loft their Principalities, yet could they not agree, but instead of oppoling the forein and common Enemies, fought the destruction of each other, by renewing the War. In the next bir-

Antiochus

Hicrax his

Affaces perfeding his revolt cfta-blifheth his

Parthian.

Kingdom,

tel Antiochus was overthrown, and flying many dayes, and not knowing how The two bro to bestow himself, at length being wearied, he went to Artamenes King of Energetes. A. M. 3761.

Cappadocia his Father in Law, by whom at first being received very civilly, he the War and afterwards understood there was a plot laid against him, and fled thence. Whereupon not knowing where to be fecure, he betook himself to Protomy, judging he might rather trust to him than his brother, being (as well he might be) mindful of what he would have done to him, or had deferved of him. Prolomy commanded him to be narrowly looked to, but by the help of a certain whore with whom he had been too familiar, he deceived his Keepers and got away. Yet as he was flying he was flain by thieves. Selencus also almost at the same time, being outed of his Kingdom, and thrown by an horse, ended his life, after he had reigned about twenty years. A. M. 3779, the third of the 138 Olympiad, 98 years after the death of Alexander. 9. He left two fons, Selencus and Antiochus, of which the former fucceeded according to his birthright, in the seventh year of Antigonus Doson nus. King of Macedonia, and was Sirnamed Ceraunus. Eumenes King of Pergamus, who had got so much of Asia into his power now being dead of Drunkenneffe, Attalus his younger brother's fon succeeded him, and had got all on this fide Taurns into his power, which being underflood by Selencus Ceraunus, he thought it concernd him to look about him, and with Atheus (whose Father Andromachus was brother to Laodice his wife) passed over Polybius lib 4. Taurus with an Army against him: but then was possoned in Phryera by the Appin in Sytreachery of Apaturius a Galatian and Nicanor after he had caused viscis. treachery of Apaturius a Galatian, and Nicanor, after he had reigned scarce three years. Achams to revenge his death presently slew the conspirators, and then ordering the Army with great wisdom and courage, recovered all on this fide the Mountain Taurns, which had been loft; infomuch that A. M. 3779, the People admiring him would have accepted of him as King, if he would 01, 138. a. 3. have taken this opportunity; but he refused it, and kept the Soveraignty for Prolom, Exer-Antiochus brother to Seleucus, who afterwards was called the Great. He get a 21.

550

rebelled

Antiochus the in his brothers time lived a private life in the upper Provinces, and now was called from Babybon by the Army in Syria, to take upon him the Government, being about fifteen years old; after which he entrusted Achans with all that Region he had lately recovered, made Molon Governour of Media, and his brother Alexander of the Country of Perfis. 10. He fell into great troubles immediately upon his first entrance upon the Kingdom; for Molon and his brother confidering his youth, and hoping Polyb, 616, 5.

that Achaus would joyn with them in their enterprize, especially out of fear and hatred of one Hermias, who now ruled all at Court, conspired together to withdraw all the upper Provinces from their allegiance. This Hermin a Carian by birth, had been left by Selencus to look to his Kingdom when he took his Expedition over Taurus, and then being fet in so high a place, began to envy the power of all others, grew proud and cruel, his malice above all others being against Epigenes, who had been Selencus his General; for than he faw him tobe a wife and prudent man, and the Army much at his devotion. A Council being called to consult about the rebellion, Fpigenes advised that the King should go in person to suppress it; for thereby the rebels would either be terrified and defift, or the Country at his presence would be moved to crosse their designs, and deliver them up; but Hermias interruprealett im-mediatly into ting him, imputed this to a defire that the King should miscarry, that theregreat troubles by he might feize upon his estate, and prevailed that two others should be

by the means sent against Molo, and the King go against Ptolomy Philopator (who now thinking himself secure in the youth of Antiochus, and Philip of Macedonia, had given himself up to all luxurie) hoping thereby to have an easie War of it, for that he was of a cowardly disposition, and hoped by exposing the young King to dangers and hazards, to escape the punishment due to him, and maintain that power he already enjoyed. Antiochus being very young, was very earnest to get Calefyria, and Hermias to prick him still forward, framed a letter from Acham, wherein he tells he is desired by Ptolomy to take the Diadem and assume the title of King to himself, promising to send him ships, money, and all things necessary for that enterprise.

11. Having maried first Laodice daughter of Mithridates King of Cap-Who procure padocia, he prepared for his Expedition, when news came that Molon went on with his defign, and how the Captains sent against him, out of fear had march against secured themselves in Garrisons. Hereupon he bent his mind to go himself, but Hermias being tenacious of his purpole, again diverted him, telling him, though Malon it was fitter for Subjects to fight against such, and Kings against their equals, and so sending one Xinatas an Achean against Molon, again turned his mind now obnoxcious to him for want of years. Then marched they to Laodicea, and thence through the Defert to the Valley called Marfya, lying between the Mountains of Libanus and Antilibanus, where about the Straights he A. M. 3783. took in divers Towns; but the principal Fort held out and put him to a stand, Ol. 139. 43. which made him the more defirous to go now against Molon; For Xinatas, V.C. 512 who was fent against him with full power, growing arrogant and carelesse, had prof. Philast rashly ventured over the River Tieris. and then Males making a ic has prof. Philast rashly ventured over the River Tigris, and then Molon making as if hee fled, came upon him in the night, and cut him off with most of his men, and those that escaped the Sword taking the River, scarce any got to the other fide. After this, Molon pursuing his Victory took Selencia, all the upper Provinces, the Principality of Babylon, those parts lying upon the red Sea, all about Tigris as far as Europus , and Mesopotamia as far as Dura; onely the Castle at Susa stood out, the Town being taken; Antiochus at this report called a Council to consult what was to be done, where Epigenes exposulating that his former advise was not followed, moved the same again; but was taken up as before by Hermias, with foul language, who defired the Heis necessi- King he would not think of leaving Catefyria; but all being for going used to go 2- against Molon, it was concluded, and he was glad to comply for his own eainst Molon. rurn.

Part of the Empire of the Macedonians.

12. The Army before it stirred mutinied for pay, and then Hermias taking advantage at the Kings necessity, offered to lay down money, on condition Enigones might be removed from his presence, which having obtained, he procured the min to be murdered. The Army marched and came to Antioch in Mygdonia at the Winter folftice, where staying 40 dayes till the extremity of the cold was over, after 40 dayes it came to Liba, Molon then lying at hand about Babylon. Here a Council of War being called to confult which way was to be taken, that they might not fail of provisions; Hermiss was for going along by Tigris, that it, and two other Rivers, Lyons and Kapres, they might have for a defence; but Zenxis, though fearful to speak because of him. shewed the danger of that advice, because it would be a great competie, and after fix dayes travel through a Defert, they should come to place called The Kings Dirch, which if the Enemy got before them, they should in no wife be able to passe, and be reduced into great straights for want of Victuals; but on the contrary, if they passed over Tigris, there was no doubt but the Inhabitants of the Country called Apolloniatis would return to obedience, obeying Molon at present onely out of necessity; further, in that plentiful Country they should have plenty of victuals, and (what was most considerable) Molon would be hindred from recreating into Media. and thereby being ftraightned, after that the place where he yet remained was emptied of provisions, would be forced to fight, or if he durst not do that, then his Soldiers would revolt to the King. This counsel being taken, all things fell out accordingly; for Molon fearing his puffage into Media might be flopped, little trufting those parts in which he then was, determined to get. if he could, to the hilly Country of Apolloniais, but it hapned that the Scouts of both parties mer there, and skirmishing for some time, afterwards retreated to their several Bodies, and so gave occasion to a total ingagement the day following. 12. Molon confidering how dangerous it was to bring his Soldiers out in open face against their King, thought it the best way to chuse out the most frong and valiant, and fet upon his Camp in the night. Going about to do this, ten young men went over to the King and told him the defign of the rebels, fo that Molon was glad to return, and put his other Army left behind him into fuch an Alarm, for that they were ignorant of the enterprise, that much ado he had to quiet them. The King being provided to fight, drew out his men by break of day, and placed them in a baralia; Molon could but do Ables and his it in great disorder and confusion, by reason of that consternation which fell upon his men in the night. In the fight which presently followed, the right wing of his Army flood fast to him, and fought very earnestly, but the left as foon as it came in fight all revolted, which he understanding, now compassed in with Enemies, and confidering the torments he was likely to undergo if taken alive, killed himself, and so did all his companions in the conspiracy, but his body being found was nailed, for an example, to a croffe in the highest parts of Media. After this Victory Antiochus settled the affaires of these Countries, dealing more mercifully with his Subjects than was defired by Hermias, and then resolved to invade the Territories of the Barbarians lying upon his borders, to terrifie them from affilting his rebels for the time to come; which Hermias difliked for the danger of the War, his mind still running upon Calefyria, but news being brought that a young fon was born to the King, he was content he should expose himself to this danger, hoping that in case he should miscary he must be made Guardian and Protector of the infant, but he was ignorant that his just reward hung over his head. For one Artabuzanes, his Country being invaded, being unfit for refisfance because of old age, mide Peace with Antiochus, submitting to what soever he demanded, and at the same time Apollophanes the Physician to the King, and his great favourite, perceiving Hermias not able to bear that high condition to which he was advanced, any longer, being follicitous for his Masters safety. And Hermins and much more for his own, fo wrought the King (inclinable enough to it beput to death. fore) as being called to walk abroad one morning more early than usual, before his return he was made away.

14. Antiochus his mind was now turned towards Achaus, who though at the first he had born himself very modestly, being elevated with successe. and thinking that the King in his expedition against Areabazanes might boffibly miscarry, or if he did nor, yet hoping that he being at so great a distance, he might have opportunity enough to break into Syria, and have help to feize upon the Kingdom, marched with his whole Army from Lydia, and coming to Laodicea in Phrygia, then fet the Diadem upon his head, and first

meth the

Acheus traitook the Title of King upon him. He continued his march till he drew near teroufly affuto Lycaonia; but there the Soldiers mutined, refusing to fight against their na-Title of King, tural King, so that seeing this, he strove to perswade them that he had no intention to invade Syria, and diverted his course to Pisidia, which harasing. and inriching the Army with boory thereby, he returned home again. The King not being ignorant of any of this, first exposulated it with him, and fending him threatning messages, put off the rest for this time, and fet himself with all his might to prepare for the War against Ptolomy. Consulting then what way to invade Syria, he was perswaded first of all to attempt Solencia

Yet Autiochus (held by the Prolomies ever fince the invafion of Energetes, to revenge the death of his fister Berenice) being the Chief Seat almost of the whole Emmaketh War pire, from whence would arise much trouble being thus in the Enemies hands. upon Prolomy and very commodious by its fituation for carrying on the War both by Land for Celefyria, and Sea. He first then corrupted some of the Officers of the Garrison within, who promifed, that if he could but take part of the Suburbs, they would procure the whole Town to be yielded. This being done, the Conspirators And getteth came to the Governour, and moved him to yield, as from the necessity of the nco Seleucia, thing, who being flruck at this confernation, as it appeared, of the Soldiers, furrendred presently the Town upon Composition. 15. Whilest he was employed about this Town, Letters came to him from one A.M.3786. Theodorus, defiring him with all speed to come into Syria, fignifying that he 01,140,491,2,

Would betray it all into his power; for he being an Atolian born, had done Ant. M.; the Kings of Egypt special service, but was so well requited for it as he was Ptol. Philose. brought into danger of life, and therefore at what time Antiochus went tris 4. against Molon looking upon Ptolomy as a despicable Creature, and distrutting his Courtiers, he had feized upon Ptolomais and Tyre, and follicited him to With feveral come down. Now therefore Antiochus putting off the businesse of Achaus other places. till another time, marched down to Marsa, the same Valley and Straights as before, where hearing Theodotus was befieged in Ptolemais, he went, and relieved him, and then having that and Tyre delivered up unto him, and beating the Enemy out of the Straights, he had then determined to march towards Pelusium, but understanding that Ptolomy's Army was come thirher, and all opposition possible making for hindering his passage, he went on in taking in the Towns thereabouts, divers whereof presently submitted, and others stood it out. Ptolomy himself being given wholy up to fluggishnesse, though thus betrayed, took no order about his affairs; All the burthen of them lay upon Agathocles and Sosibius, then the greatest Officers of State, who being able men, sent up and down to raise Forces, and make all speedy preparations for the War, though to divert Antiochus they fent Ambassadors to him to tream of peace (as defiring onely to go that way to work) and procured Embassies from the Rhodians, Byzantians, Atolians, and them of Cyzions, to mediate betwixt them, during which they gained time, and deceived the Enemy, carrying all things to close as his Ambassadors could understand nothing of ring which time he willed them to fend to him to Seleucia, giving hopes to Is by the pra- make up the difference, but contrary to his intentions: though now he was in a Rices of A- minner constrained to return into his own Kingdom, for that Acham plotted chain recalled, against him, and held intelligence with Ptolomy.

their Provisions. A Truce was granted by Antiochus for four moneths, du-

15. The Commissioners coming to debate the particulars according to on him and their instructions, Antiochus laboured to overcome them with his Arguments for the justnesse of his cause, as well as with his Weapons, pleading he had done Prolomy no injury in making that invasion, for that he had but recovered his right, alleging much the Conquests of those parts by Antigonus Cocies, and the possession of them by Selencus, and that Ptolomy the first Waged not War with Amigonus for his own particular, but to help Seleucus to the Sovereignty of that Province, but above all he preffed the common agreement of all the Kings, made at that time when Ansighnus was overthrown, wherein by Lysimachus and Cassander, all Syria was decreed to Selencus. On the contrary, Ptolomy's Commissioners aggravated the height of the injury offered to him, by the unworthinesse of cloting with the treasonable practices of Theodorus, and affirmed, that Ptolomy the fon of Lagus intended the Dominion of Syria to himself, and joyned with Selencas on no other terms, than that indeed all Asia should be his, but Syria fall to his own share. Such like objections and replies as these were made often to no purpose, but that which put the greatest stop to the Treaty, was the comprehending of The softwer of Achaus in the League, which Piolomy Rickled hard for, and the other as im-malay's Com. patiently heard, crying out of the unworthinesse of the thing, that he should minioners, protect, or make any mention of Rebels. Winter being thus spun out with and treat these discourses, and Spring drawing on, Antiochus intending to set upon the n eas with Enemy both by Land Sea, drew together his Forces, to the taking in of what remained unconquered of Syria; and Nicolaus on the other part, as the Egyptian General, with Perigenes the Admiral, made all possible provision for 17. Antiochus going to Marathus, there entered into Confederacy with the Aradians; then entring Syria through Theu-profopos came to Berytus, in his passage taking in Botris, and burning Trieres and Calamus. The Mountain Libanns ftraightning much the passage betwire it and the Sea, and almost tain Libanis Hraightning much the pathage betweet it and the Sea, and almost stream making it impassible, Nicolaus with a party also placed himself in the straights, and shere not doubting but to stop Antiochus there; but he dividing his Forces, and having his Fleet constantly near him, caused it first to ingage with the Egyptian, in which fight both fides came off on equal terms, but Theodottis beating back the Enemy upon the Mountain, got over, and then cleared the passage below for the King. He after this came near Siden with his Army, but judging it to no purpose to set upon the Town very strong with men, and full of Provifions, he gave order to Diognetus his Admiral to go with the Fleet to Tyre, and marched to Philoseria fituate upon the Sea of Tiberias, which he took, together with * Seythopolis. Now he conceived great hopes of the perfecting his Minist Bells. Work, being come into a Countrey plentifull of Provisions, so that placing Garrisons in these two Cities he took in Arabyrum by a Stratagem, making like Ms., as if he fled before the Inhabitants, but having men lying in wait who arose the grounds against the ned before the inhabitants, but having men lying in wait who arose the grounds against them, and then the whole Army with such violence, as put them into fulfilms, a great fear, and they vielded up the place. After this, Karaus, one of Ptolomies Chiefest of Officers revolted to him. Hippolochus the Thessalian brought over with him 400 horse, and the Arabians moved by his successe joyned themselves to him. Shortly after he took in Galais and Gadara beyoud expectation, because of the strength thereof; but the Inhabitants terrified at his preparations yielded themselves: then hearing that a great number of Enemies had met at Rabath-ben Amon, or Rabatana, a Citie in Arabia, and thence mide incursions into the Territories of his friends, he marched thither, and striving by force in vain to be Master of the place, at length he effected it by stopping the course of water, for want of which it was then furrendred. Then leaving a strong Garrison here, and sending Hippolochus and Karaus to Govern the Coasts of Samaria, he went to Ptolemais, and there Winin the took up his Winter quarters.

is. Ptolomy to give him a stop, prepared against the Spring a great Arwith the my, and then marched from Alexandria with 70000 foot, 5000 horse, and 73 Elephants, and came to Pelusium. Antiochus hearing this, gathered his

16. The

DOOK III

Forces.

Deffreth

Forces together, amounting to 72000 foot, 6000 horse, and 102 Elephants. Prolomy proceeding on his journey came to Gaza, and thence near to Ruphia (the first Citie of Syria, except Rhinocerus, as one cometh from E. gypt) and Antiochus passing by that place shortly after pitched his Tents ar first within ten furlongs of the Enemy, and the next day, partly for the commodiousnesse of the ground, and partly to embolden his soldiers, approached within five furlongs of them. Being fo near, feveral skirmishes fell our amongst those which on both sides issued forth for provisions, and Theory dotus the Æ:olian, after a most bold adventure taking but two in his Company, for that he had been in Ptolomy's Court, and knew his manner of life, more obscure place, yet wounded he two which waited there, and killing outright Andreas his principal Phylician, escaped back in safety to his own Camp; having onely failed of his purpose for want of informing himself when the King was wont to take his rest. For five dayes continued these two Princes in this posture, and then both resolved to try the matter in a set batrel.

19. Ptolomy first drew out his men, and then presently Antiochus ranged his went out in the dusk of the evening, and not being known got into the Kinos

Tent where he used to give audience, and though he missed of him being in a

A pitch't bat-

in battel aray against him. Each of the Armies had two wings, wherein the two Kings met each other guarded with Elephants, betwixt which the fight was begun, after Antiochus had caused the charge to be sounded; their manner being first with their Trunks to thrust each other, and strive for the ground, and then after that for the one by force to remove the other's Trunk, and The manner to fall upon him like a Bull, and gore his fides. Few of Ptolomies beafts of the fighting would fight at all, for that being Africans, they could neither endure of Elephants. the finell nor noise of those of India, so that the ranks being disordered by them, his left Wing was quite broken by the charge of the Enemy, and put to flight. Echecrates, who commanded in the right, flayed first for the ingigement of the former, then feeing that his Elephants would not fight, gave order to Phinidas Commander of the Mercenary Greeks to invade his opposites, and he himself also wheeling about to be out of the danger of the beafts, fell upon the Flanks and Rear of the Enemie's horfe; fo that both together they made them all being Arabians and Medes to give ground, and put all the Wing to flight, thus being even with Antiochus, Then came the bodies themselves to ingage: Antiochus was busie in the pursuite of that Wing wherein he fought: but Ptolomy coming to his Army much encouraged the Soldiers, and dishearened his adversaries, who being charged by Andromachus and Sosibius, the Syrians for some time maintained their ground, but the rest scarce fighting one stroak shifted for themselves. Antiochus being yet unskilfull and young, was still sollowing the chace, (thinking because he had the better of it in his Wing, that therefore his whole Army overcame) till admonished by some one about him, he returned, and feeing things to contrary to his expectation, endeavoured to break in with his Guard, to the place where his Army flood, Antiochus bea-but finding all his men fled, retired also unto Raphia, being perswaded that he had done as became him, however, by reason of the Cowardlinesse A M, 2788.

of others the work had milcarried. On his part were flain little leffe than 01.140.004 10000 Foot, about 300 Horse, and 4000 taken prisoners; three of his V. (1537. Elephants were flain outright, and two afterwards died of their wounds, Amiothi May Ptolomy loft 1500 foot, and 700 horse, 16 Elephants were killed, and the rest Ptol Philo. taken for the most part. 20. Antiochus had intended after the rallying of his men to have fortified himself without Raphia; but most of them being got into the Town, he defired leave to bury his dead, and then returned into his own Kingdom. Ptolomy presently received all Calefyria again into his power, the Inhabitants accommodating themselves to his present condition (as indeed bearing alwaies great reverence to his family) and striving who should first yield themselves. Antiochus coming to Antioch, presently dispatched Antipater his brother's fon, and Theodosus Ferviolius in an Ambassage to him, fearing exceedingly he should be prosecuted with War, distrusting his Subjects because of his adverse forcune, and suspecting Achaus might make ase of this opportunity peace and cally obtain- against him. But Ptolomy thought of nothing leffe than molesting him, being overloyed that he had above all expectation recovered Calefyria, and defiring exceedingly to be quiet, out of his fluggish disposition, and other vices familiar to him; wherefore at first receiving the Ambassadors with threatning language, and complaints of the injuries received from their Mafter, he presently granted a Truce for a year, and then sent Sosibius to confirm the League , wanting onely courage and resolution to spoil Antiochus of his

*Part of the Empire of the Macedonians.

21. Antiochus spent all the Winter in preparations, and in Spring march- Idem except.

ed over the Mountain Taurus against Achaus, whom he besieged in the Ci- 116.7. ty Sardis. Above a year he lay before it, having onely fome times light He beliegeth skirmishes with the defendants, till Lagoras a Creman, a man of great experience, observing that the strongest Cities are many timestaken at such places as are by reason of their strength least looked to, and perceiving a piece of the wall, beyond which they used to throw carion and fifth into a pit, to be destitute of any watch, by the sitting of fouls upon it, which came to feed on the carkeifes, he took unto him Theodotus the Atolian, and Dionyfius, with fome Soldiers, and they made a shift to get over and open the gates; the King to divert the Enemy making as if he would give the onfet at another place, and so the Town was taken. Athans and Aribazus the Governous got into the Castle, and then were straightly besieged again, till such time as Sofibius the chief Minister of State in Leype, pitying the condition of the former, made means for his deliverance, which by the treachery of the in-Arument wrought his destruction. There was at that time in the Agyptian

For whose lafety Sofibius

Court one Bolis a Cretian, fecond to no one Taptain, as he was reputed, for Idem except. prudence, extraordinary boldnesse, and Military skill; with him Sosibius dealt, having obliged him by his favours, and affured him that nothing could he perform more acceptable to the King his Master, than some way or other to work the deliverance of Acham. He asking some time to consider of it, within two or three dayes took the businesse upon him, which to effect he had as he faid a good opportunity, for that Cambylus the Commander of the Gretians ferving under Antiochus was not onely known to him, but his kiniman, and had the charge of a Fort behind the Castle, which, because it could not bee fortified with works, was kept by a continual Guard of Soldiers.

22. Being supplied with money largely by Sosibins, and loaded with promiles, away he failed for Rhodes to Nicomachus, and thence for Ephefus to Melancoma, his acquaintance, and friends of Acheus, with whom dealing about his businesse, he sent one Arianus to Cambylus to let him know that he was fent from Alexandria to raise Forces, and that he must needs speak with him, defiring he would appoint time and place for their meeting, without the privity of any. Having obtained this, and bethinking with himself what to do, he gave him a letter concerning which like Cresians they had a Cretian conference, as Polybius termeth it. For not respecting the safety of the befieged, or their faith given to those that employed them, but agreeing to divide the ten Talents already given in advance by Sosibius, they resolved to acquaint Antiochus with the matter, and undertake upon promise of money in hand, and a good reward afterwards, to deliver Achaus into his power. This being with great earnestnesse promised, Bolis prevails with Nicomachus and Melancoma, wholly ignorant of his treacherous intent, to write letters in cipher to Achaeu, which he fent by Arianus, for whom passage was procured into the Castle by means of Cambylus. Achaus being extractly advised by his two friends to trust Bolis and Cambylus, and withal considering the difficulty for him to escape; hoping if he got out to passe presently into Syria whill Antiochus was yet at Sardis, and then to get all the parts about Antioch into his power, yielded to put himself into the hands of Bolis, who

Bbbb 2

of justice.

Antiochus

maketh an Expedition

LHAP. V. Part of the Empire of the Macedonians.

557

was sent presently by Melancomas with great entreaties and promises if he could accomplish the businesse. Belie went to Cambylus at night, and staving with him the next day to confult of the businesse how it should be managed. after he had been with Antiochus, and was much incouraged by him, he went up for Achaus into the Callle. 22. Receiving Bolis with great respect, and after all his fifting of him perceiving nothing disagreeable to seriousnesse, he much rejoyced; but bethinking himself how weighty a thing it was, and what a hazard he was like to run, he trembled again at the thought of it, and at first resolved to send fome before to Melancomas; but at length out he went of the Castle, and according to former agreement, Rolis coming behind him by a whiftle gave a

But he is be- fign to those in ambush, and held him by the clothes till he was raken. Being traied by the brought into Antiochus his Tent, who fat late at night with a few attendants to see the iffue of the project; the King was amazed, and could not forbear into the hands weeping to see him, fo eminent a man, lye bound before him upon the ground in so sad a condition; but a Council of War being called, after several wayes of punishment proposed, at last it was agreed, that he should have his outward members and limbs cut off, after that his head, and that being fowed A. M. 1791. into an Affes bladder, his body should be nailed to a crosse, which was executed accordingly. This end had he who was fon to Andromaehus the bro- Ant, Mar, Mar, 10. ther of Landice wife to Salencus, who had maried Landice daughter to Mi- Piol, Philmo. thridates, and had held all Asia on this fide Taurus, having recovered it by his own industry and valour; a man he was exceeding wife, and of great experience, yet left (as Polybins observerh for us) a double warning to posterity, not to trust any rashly, and not to be pussed up with prosperity, or be fecure of any thing incident to mankind, to which we may add another, viz, that none presume to rebel against their Soveraigns, for punishment will overtake them. His death being known within, as they all first agreed in making lamentations for him, so shortly after they fell at odds, being divided into two factions, of which the one fluck to his wife, and the other to Ariobazus the Governour; so that having suspicion of each other, both parties yielded themselves and the place to Antiochus.

74. A year or two after, Antiochus undertook an Expedition into the Palith lib to East to reduce Media and Parthia which had revolted, and he passing through except, by both, thereupon caused Arfaces to withdraw himself into Hyrcania, which Appianias, he confidering, and judging that he would not have forfaken this Couctry if visit.

he had been able to have defended it, resolved to follow him, so that with great difficulty he passed over the hills, and entred also into that Region, where we find that he took some Towns; but what further he did against Ar-faces, or upon what terms he returned, if Polybins his history had been kept entire, we might have known. After this he quieted the upper Asia, and into the East, coming into Bastria for a good while endeavoured to drive out thence Enthydemus the King thereof, whom he defeated, and behaved himself most stout- Polishius exly, whence he got great credit for his valour. At length Euthydemus com- cept, lib, 11, plaining that he was injurious in oppoling him thus who had not revolted from him, but cut off the posterity of those that had, beseeching him also not to envy him the name of King, especially considering that by this diffention neither of their affaires could be secure, for that a number of the Scythian Nomades hovered at the borders, and were like to overrun the Country, Antiochus, who being tired with the tediousnesse of the War, had sought occasion to make a Peace, not unwillingly now heard the overtures of it, especially after that Enthydemus sent his son Demetrius to him, with whom he was so taken for his person and parts, as thinking him worthy of a Kingdom, he first promised him one of his daughters, and then yielded that his Father should take the title of King. Then the conditions of the league being written down, and fwornto, and taking with him all the Elephants that Enthydemus had, he marched over Cancasus, and renewed the confederacy with Sophagafenns the Indian King; then taking with him more Elephants (of which he had now 150) and leaving Androst henes of Cyzicus to bring the treasure promised him, he came to Arachosia, and so through Drangiana in-Thefruits of to Carmania, where he was forced to Winter, having received this fruit by this Expedition, that befides the Countries recovered, and the maritime Cities and Dynasties on this fide Taurus added to his Dominions, he struck fuch an awe into his Subjects, as kept them more in order, and he was thought to be esteemed as well by the People of Europe as those of Asia, worthy to 25. Not long after this, Prolomy Philopater dying and leaving a young A. M. 3803. fon behind him but four years old, Philip of Macedonia and he (as we be- 0!. 144. a.3. fore hinted) made a wicked League for the outing him of his Kingdom, and V.C. 552. dividing it amongst them, wherefore he striking again at Calespria and Pha. Ast. Mag. 22.

nicia, got fudaa into his power, which as fosephus relleth us, was tossed *Antiquis.1.12.
herewise these two Crowns as a ship wish the mayor. betwitt thefe two Crowns as a ship with the waves. For Scopas the Ato- 6.3. tian recovered it again out of his hands for young Epiphanes, and yet again Livius 1. 33.

not long after loft it with Calefyrie, being overthrown by Amiochus (near the fountains or heads of Jordan) at the City Panaas, with whom the Jows then presently joyned, but the Inhabitants of Gazastanding still out for Prothe joynetin with Philip a- lomy, their City was taken and razed. In the mean time whilst Scopas was with Pourly against Protony, recovering the Cities of Syria, Antiochus himself was busie in invading the gutth Judaa. Kingdom of Assalus, who then being employed with the Romans in the Maand preferrly cedonian War against Philip, had left it naked of defence both by Land and Sea, but upon his complaint to the Roman Senate they fent to Antiochus to tell him, that feeing Accalus was employed by them against Philip the common Falling upon Enemy, he would do a thing very acceptable unto them to abstain form his Tentories the Territories, adding withall, that it was convenient for all the Kings which were A. M. 3807.

the friends and allies of the People of Rome to be at peace amongst them-0.145, am. 3, boy. felves ; with the authority of which meffage he was fo moved, as he drew out V. c. 556 his Army again from the borders. But this respect to the Romans continued Ant. 64. 26. not many years, he entering upon such courses as gave them offence, and pro-26. For having reduced all Collegizia into his power, and wintered at An-Idemibid. tioch, the next Spring fending before this two fons Ardyes and Muhridates with the Army, and command to stay for him at Sardis, he himself followed with the Fleet to attempt the several maritime Towns of Cilicia and Caria, which were under Piolomy, and also to help Philip both at Sea and Land, firth occasi- who now was busie in the War with the Romans. Divers places by fair and foul means together he took in; yet Coracefium Rood out, and whilst he lay before it came Ambastadors from the Rhodians to denounce War against him, in case he came within Nephelis the Promontory of Cilicia, not out of any harred to him, as they laid, but left joyning with Philip he should hinder the Romans now active for the liberty of Greece. Though he heard this with much disdain, yet thought he it wisdom to give them good words for the prefent, and please them in this particular, but they, after all danger was over from Philip (who this Summer was beaten at Cynoscephale) not tying themselves with him to the former condition, sent aid to the Cities their associates, and preferved several in their liberty. He took at length Coracessum, and after it feveral others, and amongst the rest Ephefus, where wintering, he endeavoured to reduce also the Cities of Asia, under the obedience they paied to his Ancestors, and thinking it not difficult to be done by any of them, except two, viz. Smyrna in Eolis, and Lampfacus upon the Hellespont, he fent Forces to beliege them both. 27. Now the Romans, with all others, doubted not but his Army was for Europe, after his affaires had succeeded in Asia, and they had the more cause to be jealous of him, for that Hannibal their old and sworn Enemy gon realous had now been with him; therefore in the fetting of the Greek Cities at liber- Livius 1. 33. ty (after the overthrovy of Philip King of Macedonia) the Senate had left it to the Commissioners appointed for that work, to deal as they should think fit with Chalcit, Demetrias, and Corinth, the keys of the Country, and whether out of a defire of the glory of fetting all the Greeks at liberty, or with them.

Astiochus the Great and

the Romans

DO OX III

Aniochus in taken from him 3) to Ariarathes King of Coppadocia another nimed Antending a war siechis; and a third he offered to Eumenes of Pergamus, but he being acquainted with his defign to make War upon the Romans, and by this affinity to oblige him to his party, conceiving it also his interest rather to stick A. M. 3813. to them whom he had some ground to think would prove victorious; he 01.147. and 1. waved his offer. In Spring he set upon the Pifida, a people inhabiting about V. C. 562. Suga, being defirous first to bring all Afra to his beck, & at the same time came Antroch, Mag Ambassadors from Rome to discover his designs and preparations, and either to Ptol. Epiphan. take off the edge of Hannibals hatred, or at least by their entercourse with him 12. to render him suspected to the King. Visiting Eumenes first, as they had it in charge, they were egged on by him to the war. Sulpinius one of them falling fick, was forced to flay at Pergamns, but Villins hearing how Antiochus was employed, went to Ephefus where Hannibal then lay, & according to his infructions often met and discoursed with him. Thence he travelled to Apamea, where the King met him; but news coming that Antiochus his fon (whom he had lately fent into Syria) was dead, it broke off the Treaty; so that Villius loath to be unseasonable returned to Pergamus, and the King breaking off the War, to Ephefus, where holding fecret confultation with one Minio, he gave way that the Ambassadors should be called thither. When they had there arrived, they were referred to Minio, and both fides arguing for themselves as formerly, came to the same conclusion, and the Romans having fearcely obtained that they came for , returned

559

30. The Ambassadors being departed, Antiochus then sell into another Livius & Apferious debate about the War, to which Hannibal being now suspected was pian ut priss, not called, till acquainting him how, when a Child, his father had made him fwear at the Altar never to be a friend to the people of Rome, all jealoulies were removed. About the same time came Theas, and others from the Atolians (who being falln out with the Romans about plunder, after the overthrow of Philip at Cynoscephale, had ever fince greatly grudged, and now flirred up the several Princes against them) offering him the Command of their Forces, and exhorting him to passe over into Greece, where things were ripe enough for the War, and not expect the coming down of his Army from the

The Molians Inland Countreys. They having gotten Demetries (a Town of prime note) firhim up to into their hands by a wile, in confidence of an opportunity thence arifing, he came over with an Army of 10000 foot, 500 horfe, and fix Elephants, after which going to the general meeting, he was by a publick Decree received as General, and then fending to fummon Chalcis, had the Gates opened to him, and so easily became Master of all Euben. In the midst of Winter holding Living lib. 36. another Council, he thought fit the Theffalonians should be, by all means, drawn in to joyn with them; but Hannibal preffed above all things that Pbi- A. M. 3814. Up and the Macedonians might be dealt with; for then as he faid, the Thef- Oling, and, 2.

fatians, and other Gracians (feeing themselves invaded by the Romans) V.V. 563. would easily return to their accustomed dury : he advised further, that the Anisob, Mag. Forces with all speed should be sent for out of Asia; and this onely was obferved. Antiochus returning to Chalcia, fell in Love with an obscure, 13.

jollity, his Army for Company falling into idlenesse and all excesse, 31. Hithertothe Romans had rather severally, every man by himself, designed him an Enemy, than made any preparations against him. Italy was Decreed this year to both the Confuls; onely one of them, if need should require, was The preparat to be in readinesse to march to any other place, and Audius Serramus one.

Girle, daughter to Cleopiolemus his Hoft, with whom prevailing at length obligue Girle to marry her, he spent all the remaining of the Winter in feating and he paffeth

over into

Marrieth an

at Chalcis.

Romans refolved on.

Grecce.

of the Prators, was ordered with his Fleet to go into Greece, and attend the affairs of the Confederates; and with him four Commissioners, men picked out, who by their authority might perswade much. Moreover Marcus Bebins was commanded to draw down the Legions towards Tarenum and Brundustum, that thence, if need should be, they might passe over into Macedonia. But upon Antiochus his croffing the Hellespont, Eumenes King of Perga-to awe and affright him, they decreed, that all such Cities, as well in A sia as Europe, should be freed. The ten Commissioners sitting now in Greece Appian in Sy. about these affairs; they of Smyrna and Lampsacus (whom he had besieged) riacis fene to them for relief, and Antiochus himself thinking fit not ed anticipate Polybius Except his opportunities, sent chither also his Ambassadors, to whom the Commis- Legat, 9. fioners lay'd open the pleasure of the Senate, and in case he contain not him- & Lil, 17. felf and Forces in A jia, threaten him with War: and withall promife that fome of their number should come to him. Yet he in the beginning of Spring comes over into Europe, got a great patt of the Chersonesius into his power, and then marching to Lylmachia, there found the Commissioners, who preffing him to the things formerly mentioned, he demanded by what right the Romans questioned with him about Afia, seeing he medled with nothing done in Italy and added, that the Greek Cities should obtain their liberty, not by their commands, but his bounty. Now it was moved that those of Smyrna and Lamplacin might be heard; which being obtained, and the Delegates using their liberty of speech, he out of indignation, that he should be forced to plead with them before those Judges, interrupted them, faying, the Rhodians (and not the Romans) should have the hearing of the cause; and so the Treaty ended without any conclusion or agreement 28. A rumour was spred abroad, during this Treaty, that Ptolomy the Living of the at all.

The Alian and Syrian Kingum

King of Egypt was dead, which much affested both parties, yet strove they to hide it from each other : Lucius Cornelius one of the ten, who was also ordered to endeavour the reconcilation of the two Kings, demanded a little time to go into Agypt; and Antiochus being reftlesse, out of an itching desire to get that Country into his hands, sailed with his Fleet back to Ephefus: whence sending again his Ambassadors to treat with T. Plamininus tipon a falfe chief of the Commissioners (on purpose to hold them a little in hand till he death he re- could bring about his defign) came to Patara, where he heard that Ptolomy folyeth to in was alive. Now he changed his purpose of invading Agypt; but withall refolved for Cyprus, to attempt that Island; but such a tempest fell upon him, that he almost lost his whole Fleet. Nor long after, Hannibal being driven from home (by the malice of flich) as incenfed the Romans against him, whill he onely endeavoured the Publick good) returned to Antiochus, who though before he did but fluctuate in his resolutions for the War, yet was now Hamibal's ad- confirmed by him so in his purpose, that henceforth he thought not so much of it, as of the reward of the Victory. Hannibal denied that the Romans could be overcome any where but in Italy, and defired but 100 Gallies, Living like. 16000 Foot, and 1000 Horse, with which he would first go to Carthage, Applicant pink, hoping to draw his Countrymen to revolt, and though that should not succeed, yet would he seize upon some part of Italy. The King closing with his propositions at this time, he went not himself, but sent a certain Tyrian to Carthage, who under pretence of trading fhould break the ice; but he being suspected by Hannibal's adversaries, was glad to shift for himself, and notice thereof was presently given to the Romans. In the mean time Antiochus fent three Ambassadors to Rome, who under colour of procuring a right understanding, should feel how the Senate stood affected. They expostulating the matter, that their Mafter should be forced to quit the Cities of Afia, and for sake his antient right in Thrace, were referred to the Commissioners in Greece for answer; to whom repairing, Flamminus and his Collegue, urged that the King should either leave Europe, or the Romans have power to protect their friends in Afia, and make as many more there as they could. The Ambaffadors answer, they neither can, nor will conclude any thing to the prejudice of their Master's crown, and so the Peace was not nearer than

Italy,

29. Antiochus his resolution being set therefore for the Warre, that he Living lib 36 might prevent any thing that would divert or call him back, he resolved to Applan ibid. make alliances with his neighbours. To Ptolomy he maried his Daughter Cleopatra (giving with her in portion all Calefyria, which before he had mus fent his brother Astalus to acquaint the Senate therewith, and that the Atolians were preparing to joyn with him; whereupon Babins was then ordered, with all his Forces, to passe over into Epirus, and hover about Apollonia. The next year came over M. Acilius Glabrio the Conful, with 10000 foot, 2000 horse, and fifteen Elephants; who taking in divers places held by Antiochus his Garrisons, marched towards the Bay of Malea, took Thaumacha, and wasted the Territories of Hygaia. Antiockus something herewith awakened, fent to the Etolians to have all their Forces in readineffle, and then came down with lesse then 10000 foot, and 500 horse; but fewer of the Atolians came together than usual, and his own Army, expected out of Asia, loitered, so that wanting it, and forsaken of his Confederates, he fortified himself in the Straights of Theomopyla, and sent the Atolians (whereof there were but 4000) to keep Heraclea and Hypaia. Upon the approach of the Conful, bethinking himfelf of the Mountains, which he knew had been formerly passed by some of Xerxes his Army, and fearing the Romans should come over upon his back, he procured some Liolians to secure the passages. But Glabrio hearing of it, fent M. Porcius Cato (then a Colonel in the Army) and L. Valerius Flaceus to beat them off, which being done by the former, he got over, and approaching the Enemies Camp, they at the first Overthroweth fight supposed them to be friends; but then again understanding their er-

acts in Alia.

the Straights rour, cast away their Arms and fled. But being closely pursued 500 of them of Thermopyla. onely escaped, though but fifty of the Romans were missing. 32. Antiochus flying to Chalcis, passed thence with his new married wife unto Ephefus, after whose departure the Gates of Chalcie were presently opened to the Conful, who having taken in Phocis and Baotis in his passage thicker, all Eubaa presently returned to obedience. Then fell he upon the Atolians, whom (though not long before they had fent to the King for aid, yet) now he forced to yield, and after he had used their Ambassadors something roughly, and threatned to chaftize them to purpose; through the intercession of T. Flamininus, gave them liberty to send their Ambassadors to Rome. Antiochus now lay at Ephefus altogether secure of the Romans ; but Hannibal told him, he rather wondred they were not there already, than doubted at all of their coming, and procured the Forces to be fent for out of the upper Provinces; and with those ships which were ready the King sayled into the Chersonesus of Thrace, fortifying it, and placed ftronger Garrisons in Sestus and Abydus, where the Romans were to passe over the Hellespone into Asia. At this time Livini Salmator being fent from Rome to succeed Attilius in the Government of the Fleer, came with it to Delus, which Anticchus hearing, hasted from Thrace to fight him before the Rhodes and Eu-

He is defeated menes should joyn with him; but they coming in in good time, his Fleer was at Sca.

worsted, and chased as far as Ephelus. 33. After this defeat he fet himfelf with all his might to repair his Na- Livius lib 31. vy, and left his son Seleucus in Lolis to look to the Maritime Coasts. Livius the Roman Admiral coming into the Hellespone, took Sestus, and had done the same by Abydus, had not Polyxenidas a Fugitive of Rhodes, destroyed by Treachery all the Fleet belonging to that Island; whereupon he raised his siege and departed. Selencus fell upon the Territories of Pergamus, and then besieged the Citie it self (Attalus being unable to graple with him in the field) with whom also at length Antiochus himself joyned, till hearing that the Roman and Rhodian Fleets were coming to relieve the place; and, worse than this, that Lucius Scipio the Consul (together with his brother the African) was already in his march as far as Macedonia, and preparing now to passe the Hellespont against him, he sent to Amylius Rhegillus who had succeeded Livius in the Fleet, to treat of a peace. He calling Eumenes from Pergamus, and the Officers of the Rhodians to confult, these were content to Treat, but Eumenes being averse to it, and urging that nothing could be concluded of, before the coming of the Conful, an answer to that effect was returned to the King, who leaving his fon still before Pergamus, harrased the Territories of the Roman Confederates, and taking divers places, returned to Sardis. Selencus was prefently beaten off, and forced to raise his siege, by tooo foot, and 100 horse, sent to relieve the place by the unnibal wor- Achaans, and Hannibal returning with thips from Syria, was met by the Rhodians, who put him to flight, and caused him to be blocked up in Pam-

34. Antiochus from Sardie sent to Prusian King of Bithinia, to joyn A. M. 3815. in Confederacy with him against the Romans; but he (though he formerly 01.147. ann 3. hung in suspense, yet) of late was fully drawn to their party by the Letters V.C. $64. of the Scipio's, and an Ambassage sent from Rome for the same purpose. Prod. Epiphan. Failing therefore in this enterprize, he went to Ephefus to his Navy, where 14. (concluding that no other way could be hinder the Conful's paffing the Hellespons than by being strongest ar Sea) he resolved to try another battel, and to fet upon the Maritime Town near to Ephofus, that the Romans coming in to succour their friends, Polyxenidas his Admiral might have an opportunity to work some notable feat. But he ingaging with 90 Gallies against Eumenes and the Rhodians, who made up a Fleet together of about 83. being overmatched both in the valour of his men, and the nimblenesse of his Ves-And Polyseni- fels, he lott 42 of his Navy (13 of which, together with the men, were taken) ladificated. having broken but two of the Romans, and by meer chance carryed a Rhodian away with him to Ephefus. The King now terrified at the meffage of this third overthrow, madly drew out his Garrison from Lysimachia (which might have given a stop to the passage of the Consul) lest it should be cut off; and railing his fiege from before Colophonia, departed to Sardis, whence he sent into Cappadocia, to Ariarathes his son-in-law, for aid, and all over else where he could bethink himself, he raised forces, neglecting in the mean time his true opportunities. For, the Scipio's in the mean while came Polybius Legal. to Lysimachia, where they were received with such plenty of all things, as if 23.

the Chersonesus of 7 brace to the Hellespont, where all things being in rea-

Provision had been made for the Roman Army, and thence marched through

dinesse through the care of Eumenes, they passed over without any disturbance into Afia. Helendeth to 35. Antiochus being so besorted as to ly sill, and suffer the Conful the Conful quietly to come over, was now exceedingly discouraged, and sent out of about a peace, hand to him, and his brother, to treat of peace; with order also to deal in private with the African about it, whose authority he knew would sway his brother to either fide indifferently. The Ambaffador being arrived at the Roman Camp, deferred the delivering of his message till the African's coming, who was yet behind; but after his arrival, and audience given, had these conditions set him: To pay all the expences of the War, of which Antiochus had been the cause, and not onely quit the Cities in Rolls and Ionia, but all Asia on this side the Mountain Taurus. Being no whit satisfied with the proposals, he made no further overtures to the Conful; but, according to his instructions, offered to his brother (in case he would procure a peace on the terms proposed by his Master) the restitution of his fon who had been taken prisoner, as much money as he would ask, and more than that, to be partaker of what the Kingdom it felf would amount to. The African answered, that the discharging of his son would exceedingly oblige him, and as for the rest, had he kept Lysimachia in his hands, fortified the passage into the Chersonesus of Thrace; or at least had he opposed them at the Hellespont, and then offered these conditions, much might have been done for him. As things now flood, he advised to confider into what estate he had brought himself, by all means to decline the War, and refuse no conditions offered to him. But he thought no harsher terms could be imposed upon one already Conquered, and therefore ca-leighing the fling off all thoughts of peace, made what Provision he could possible for a

36. The Conful being defirous to do fomething before Winter (which hepepareth now drew on) resolved, if possible, to fight him, though, his brother the Ahi battel. frican falling fick, had departed to Elea, to whom Amiochus now to comfort

562

CHAP, IV.

os firnamed

Philopater

fucceederh

gainst his religion and Country.

Selencus is him, restored his son without any ransom; which happing as a Cordial to him in that condition, he advised him in way of requital (being able to do no more at present) that he should not ingage in fight with his brother, before his return to the Camp. Being much moved with his authority, he declined an ingagement to his utmost endeavour, but the Conful still dogging him from place to place, and being ready to storm his Camp, for fear of urterly discouraging his men, he was forced to draw them out. (4) Some say he had 70000 Foot, and about 12000 Horse (though others (6) mention but sures. 70000 in all) with 54 Elephants. The Conful brought into the field but (b) Appian in 20000, whereof two, being Macedonians, were left to keep the baggage; Syriain. and fixteen African beafts placed in the rear for a referve, lest (being worsted by the Indians) they should break their ranks. The battel was fought near Magnelia a Town fituate at the Foot of the Hill Sipplus. It hapned then that such a mist fell as blinded so the Kings Army, that both the wings thereof could not be feen to one standing still in the same place; and their weapons were also spoiled with the wer. His chariots armed with fithes which he had placed in the front, proved his ruine; for the Horses being gored with arrows (according to the direction of Eumenes) brake down all behind them. and so disordered the rancks, that the Auxiliaries fled; which occasion the Romans taking, pressed hard upwards, and discomfitted the whole left wing. In the right he had better fortune; for he put both Horse and Foot to flight, and drove them to their Camp; but M. Emilius Lopidus who was left there for the security of it, met them, and forced them to face about and to charge the pursuing Enemy, so that he and Attalus (the brother of Eumenes, who came in in good time with 200 Horse) renewed the battel with fuch earnestnesse, that now the King (who ere while gave the charge) betook wherein he himself to his heels. The Roman Cavalrie, in the pursue, did great execuis overthrown rion, and the rather, because of the multitude of Chariors, and Camels, which blocked up the way; infomuch as 54000 were flain, and 1400 taken. Of the Romans fell but three hundred forty nine.

37. Antiochus, with a few about him, fled to Sardis, and thence to Apamea, making Zeno Governour of the former, and Timon of Lydia; but they were despised by the Soldiers and Townsmen that held the Castle, who gave up the places to the Conful; which was followed as an example by divers Cities of Alia. The Conful being once arrived at Sardis (with his brother now upon his recovery) the King presently sent and defired safe conduct for some Commissioners to treat of Peace. This being granted, Zeuxis who had formerly governed Lydia, and Antipater the Kings brothers son, shorely after arrived, defiring their Master might know upon what terms to purchase the friendship of the People of Rome. Publins Scipio the African, in the name of the rest, answered, that the Romans used not to insult over their conquered Enemies, and therefore nothing should be required of him Living & Apmore than formerly; fave onely to pay 15000 Talents of Eubaa to defray yian ut pius. the charges of the War, by certain portions; 400 to Eumenes (together with Pelyb. Little fuch Corn as was due to him, by virtue of an agreement made with bis Fa- 25. ther) to give up Hannibal. Those the Etolian, and other incendiaries, and lastly, to deliver for the performance of these conditions twenty Hostages. And both well These proposals being accepted of, Ambassadors were out of hand dispatchnigh the same ed to Rome, to pray the confirmation of the Peace, which accordingly was terms as for-ratified both by Senare and People; and for that Eumenes and the Ambassamerly were dors of Rhodes, differed about some Cities in Asia, it was ordered by the fet him. Fathers, that the People inhabiting on this fide Taurus, which before obeyed Antiochus, should now be subject to Eumenes, except Caria and Lydia, as far as Maander; and these should be delivered up to the Rhodians. As for the Greek Cities, they which were formerly tributaries to Attalus, should so remain under Eumenes his Successor; but such as had been under the jurisdiction of Antiochus, should be left to their own Laws: and ten Commissioners were sent to compose all differences risen betwixt the several Ciries and States.

28. Antiochus, unwilling to give up Hannibal, gave him notice of what was required, that he might This for himself. The Province of Alia Justin lib. 32. being taken from him, he taid the Conquerours dealt bountifully with him Vaterius Max. therein; for now feeing his Kingdom was contained within moderate bounds, Julia ind. he was onely discharged from too great a burthen of Government. Two or Strabo lib. 16. three years after, he got another Army together, and having declared his & Except, Difon Selencus his Successor, made a progresse into the upper Provinces; where odori. (either for that he really wanted money to pay the Tribure imposed on him. or took that occasion to pretend poverty) hearing the Temple of Impirer Belus in Elymais to be exceeding rich, he went with his Forces by night and spoiled it of a vaste treasure, making a show as if War had been made upon him by the Inhabitants thereabouts, who getting knowledge of it, came upon him, and without the help of any other, destroyed him and his whole Army, This is the end which, by the consent of Historians, hapned to him; though one there be * that tellethus, how after he was overcome and banished be . * Aurelius Vi. yond the Mountain Taurus, he was slain by his companions, whom he had to de wirts

He is flain in beaten in a drunken fit. He died when he had reigned 36 years, A. M. 3818. illustribus c. 4. in the second of the 148 Olympiad, 185 before the Era of Christ: Elymais. M. Emilius Lepidus, and C. Flaminius being Confuls. 39. Seleucus his fon fucceeded him (whom he formerly declared his Suc-His fon Seleuceffor as was faid) in the 35 year of Philip King of Macedonia. This Seleneus Sirnamed Philopater, was no stirring man, and might have an excuse for it, being so weakned by that blow his Father received from the Romans, A. M. 3818.

Once he got together a confiderable force of men, and prepared to paffe over V.6. 567. Taurus to the aid of Pharnaces King of Pontus (who now waged War with Selentidarum Ariarathes of Cappadocia, and Eumenes of Pergamus) but bethinking him- 126. felf that it was not lawful to do it, by virtue of the League which the Peo. Piol. Epiphanis ple of Rome had made with his Father, he gave over his enterprize. He re-dppian ibid. verenced much at first the Temple of Hierusalem, allowing out of his own Except, Diodor. revenues the charges of the publick Sacrifices; but afterwards his bounty was per Valefium, almost turned into rapacity by the means of Simon a Benjamite. This man Maccab, 3, being Captain of the Temple, and in contention with Onias the High Prieft, when he could not have the better of him, rold Apollonius Governour of Calefyria and Phanicia, that in the treasury there were great sums of mony, which the Priests having no need of it might well enough be taken out into the Kings Coffers. Apollonius acquainting the King with this, he fent Heliodo-

Theliteache- rus his Treasurer to selze upon the money, to whom Onion declared that it nyof Simon a belonged to widdows and orphans, that the fum of it amounted but to 400 talents of Silver, and 200 of Gold, and that such was the holinesse of the place, that it must not be violated. Heliodorus not being persyvaded by this, entered the Temple, and was smitten by an Angel dead for the present, but being reflored by the prayers of Onion, returned to the King, declaring the holinesse of the place, and power of God. Simon after this calumniated Onias, as if he, who had well deferved of his Nation, had been the cause. of this evil, and being backed by Apollonius, in his fury proceeded to flaughters, fo that Onias was forc'd to go to Seleucus, and, as fome have ir, got him banished, though it seems not incredible that the King was dead ere he came to him, being fluin by the treachery of Heliodorus after he had reigned

40. He left a fon behind him named Demetrius, whom he fent, being but young, to Rome, an Hostage in the room of Antiochus his younger brother: for that he was tied by the agreement made with his Father, to change the Hostages at the pleasure of the Romans. But when he died Antiochus wis in his way home come as far as Athens. Eumenes therefore and Attalus, that they might bind him to them, being now a little offended at, and jea- Appian in Sylous of the Romans, drove out Heliodorus, who affected the Kingdom, and riacis. placed him in possession of it. He was called by the Syrians Epiphanes or Except. Diodor. Illustrious, because strangers usurping the Kingdom, he appeared the vindia siculi per Vacator of the Dominion of his Ancestors, though others accounted him rather lessum. cator of the Dominion of his Ancestors, though others accounted him rather

Cccc 2

Antiochus his brother fucceedeth him, Sirnamed Eniphanes.

564

Epimanes or Mad, because of his fanatick practices, and by the Angel he was termed a vile per fon. Being possessed of the Kingdom, he would slip privately out, with two other in his company, and wander about the City, keep company and drink with the meanest persons, coming on a sodain upon them with his cup and mufick. Laying off his robe he put on a gown, and according to the cultome of the Roman Candidates (who flood for Offices) took the People be the hand, defiring their voices for the Edileship or Tribuneship of the People. Having then obtained the Magistracy by the Suffrages of ol. 151, at 1 the People after the Roman manner, he fare and gave Judgment out of an V.C. 198 ivory chair with such diligence, as the wifest wondered what he meant, some Ptolom, phiattributing it to simplicity, some to imprudence, and others to madnesse lometerns. 41. In Syria he was not acknowledged at first by those who savoured Pto- Hieronga, in lomy; but afterwards obtained it by a counterfeit elemency, and then having Dan. cap. 11. entered into League with Eumenes, fetled himself Brongly enough. In the Applanting, beginning of his reign Jason the brother of Omas the third, the High-priest of the Tews, purchased the Priesthood of him for 260 Talents of Silver, and another rent of 80 Talents; and not fatisfying himself with wronging his brother, promifed 1 50 more for a licence to fet up in Jerusalem a place of ex- 2 Marcal, 4. ercise for the training up of youth after the fashion of the Heathen, where-Jajon the Jew by an inject was made, as unto idolatrie, and prophanenesse, so unto that having bought bloodshed and cruelty which ensued from the wickednesse of this Prince, his

the Highinstruments and successors. For three years onely kept he this Office, Priefthood our of his bro- being then served in his own kind. For, sending Menelane the brother of ther's hands, that Simon whom we before mentioned, to the King, to carry the money is ferved in promifed, and follicit his affaires, he circumvented him after the fame manthe fame ner he had done his brother, promifing for the Priethood, over and above manner by what he paied, 300 Talents; fo that he had his defire, and Jason was forced Micnelaus. to flie into the Country of the Ammonites. Antiochus being seized of Ca-lesyria. Prolomy Philopater, who pretended it belonged to him, being pasfed over to his father as his mothers portion, fought to recover it out of his hands, whereupon he marched down to Egypt, which, having overthrown Autiochus feiz, his Enemies in battel betwixt Pelusium and the mountain Casin, he easily esh on Agyst got into his power, pretending friendship to the young King for all this, and a provident care for his affaires. Menelans taking occasion at his absence. took divers Golden Vessels out of the Temple at Ferusalem, some of which he gave away, and others he fold to Tyre, and other places, for which being accused of Sacrilege by Onias the lawful High-priest, he procured him to be murdered. Going on in such mischiefs he was accused to the King; but bri-

Again.

bing Piolomy the son of Dorymenes, got off, and procured the death of his accusers. At this time Antiochus went down the second time with a great 2 Marcab. 5 power into Ægypt, which he recovered again (the King thereof flying before him) and getting the fortified Towns into his hands, there staied, till the fons of the Jews procured his return to their destruction. 42. A falle rumour being spread abroad of his death, Tason having got 1000 men at his heels, fer upon Jerusalem, and getting the City into his hands, forced Menelaus into the Castle, and then made slaughters, as if he had not been amongst his Countrymen and kindred, but foreiners and Enemies, Tafon rageth against his

yer obtained he not the Priesthood, but was forced to betake himself back into the Country of the Ammonites, where being accused to Aretas King of the Arabians, he fled from place to place like a Vagabond, hated of all men as Countrymen, a forfaker of the Laws, and as the publick Enemy of his Country, and died at length at Lacedamon, Antiochus hearing in Agypt that they at Hierufalem rejoyced at the report of his death, and suspecting because of these Antiochus his ftirs of Jason, that Judaa was about to rebel, in a great rage departed thence, cruelty and and came and took the City by force, and giving no quarter for three dayes prophanenels space, put 80000 to the Sword, and afterwards fold as many. Yet not conagainst Jews tenting himself with this, he prophanely entered the Temple, Menelans that Traitor to his Country being his guide, and rifling it of the holy Veffels, killed swine upon the Astar, and with the broath of the flesh of them sprinkled the place; then taking away with him 1800 Talents, he got him back to Joseph Anig. Anisob, leaving behind him to afflict fliff the People at Jerufalem Philip a lib. 13. Phrygian, and Andronicus in Samaria; and besides them Menelaus more grievous co, and despightful against, his fellow Citizens, than the other. Two years also after this, he sene Apollonius a cruel man with an Army of 22000, commanding him to kill all that were arrived at ripeneile of age, and fell the women and children for flaves. He coming to Jerusalem, kept himself still until the Sabbaih, and then taking the opportunity of the folemnity of the day, set upon those imployed therein, then running through the City slew a great multitude, plundering it and fetting it on fire, pulled down the houses and walls round about, and led away many women and children into captivity, whilft Antiothus his Mafter was busic again in his attempts upon

43. For Peolomy being stirred up by Aulains the Eunneh to attempt Except Diodoagain the recovery of Caleffria, to prevent that, he went down into Ægypt, vi per Val. where putting him again to flight, he might have destroyed all his men, but riding to and fro himself to forbid it, he thereby procured such love, as he Hegeneth all presently got into his hands Pelusium, and not long after all Egypt, except Hegueth all Alexandria. Ptolomy after this fent his Ambassadors to him, with those of days into his her Acheans, Ashedians, and others, to excuse the matter, and lay all the blame upon the Eunnich; but getting no good thereby, after he had spent fome time carelefly without any further provision for his affaires, he departed to his younger brother to Alexandria, whom the Citizens there had made Julin lib. 24. King after his overthrow. The Alexandrians at first received him, and made him Polybius Legat. King after his overthrow. I necessary may at that received ministration again, 84. partaker with his brother, but afterwards for some diffaste banished him again, 84. Livius I. 44, partaker with his prother, but atterward, so thinking it best to accomplish his tours at which Antiochus took an opportunity, as thinking it best to accomplish his 643. designs, by pretending to protect and reduce him into his Kingdom; wherefore he engaged at Pelufium with Ptolomy the younger in a naval fight, and getting the betrer, on a fodain laid a bridge over the Nils and befreged Alexandria. Prolomy and Cleopatra his fifter being in this danger, fent Am- A. M. 3835. baffadots to Rome to crave aid; but he attempting once the walls, and ex- 01, 152 an. 3. periencing the strength of the places, having fent his Ambassadors also to V. c. 184. Rome after the other, raifed his fiege. About this time came the Ambassadors of Antioth. Epithe Rhodians to him to intercede, whom he put off, faying, that his intent phan of was onely to re-estabish the elder Piolemy, which if the Alexandrians Philomet, to. would admit of, all things with his confent might be composed. Presently after this, scaving at Memphis Ptolomy the elder, for whose sake he pretended to wage this War, and giving up the reft of Egypt to him, he only left a strong Garrison at Pelusium, and so departed into Syria, concluding with himself, that keeping this in his power, the key of the Country, he might fafely suffer the two brothers to try out the quarrel; for the Conquerour being wearied beforehand, would eafily be brought under by him. 44. The Ambassadors of Prolomy obtained their desire, the Romans be- Idem ibid. ing jealous of the increasing power of Antiochiu. For, C. Popillius Lana, Phyl. Ligat. with two others, were fent with order first to go to Antiochui, after that to 89 Prolomy, and to denounce unto them, that except they gave over the War, him that was the hinderer of the Peace they would not account as their friend or allie. Whilst they were on their way, Ptolomy the elder bethinking himfelf what little cause he had to trust Annochus, sent to his brother, and through the mediation of Cleopatra was reconciled to him, and reigned with him, the Alexandrians being willing to receive him, because their City was much straightened for provisions, by reason of the Warre. Antiochus hearing this, contrary to his former pretences, was grievoully fretted, and then more eagerly than ever preparing for the War against them both, sent a Fleet against Cyprus, where Prolomie's Porces were worsted, and in the beginning of Spring marched down for Egypt. In Calefyria the Ambaffadors of Philometer met him, and gave him thanks in their Mafter's name, for that by his means he had obtained the Kingdom, deficing he would continue

Book III.

Retreateth.

He returneth tinue his friend, and protect what he had helped him to, and rather say what he would have done, than by force to attempt it as an Enemy; but he replied, he would neither withdraw his Fleet nor Army, except he had all Cyprus, Pelufium, and all the ground lying upon that Mouth of the Nile given up unto him, and he fet a day whereon at furthest he would have an answer to these conditions. Popillim and his Companions hearing of his de- Livius ilid fign (Perfess of Macedonia being now overthrown) made hafte to get to Polish Less. him before he reached Alexandria, and staying sometime at Rhodes, they 90. him before he reached Alexandria, and traying iometime at Amues, sucy Valoius Mai-came to him, when he was but four miles off from the Citie, upon the fight mus lib 6.44.4. of whom he reached out his hand to Popilins; but he being a severe man, Appliant reached him the Tables, wherein was written the Decree of the Senate, which prints.

commanded him to abstain from War, bidding him first to read them. Having perused them, he said he would consider with his friends what was to be done, and then give an answer, but Popilius after a certain insolent fashion, made a Circle round about him with his rod, and commanded him to answer before he went out of it; at which the King being amazed, after a little pause, said he would do whatsoever the people of Rome commanded : But is taken off by the Roand so within a short time prefixed, grievously unwilling, and forrowing, but mans from judging it fit for the present to yield to the time, he drew out his Forces from further at-Egypt and Cypius. tempts, As: After this he published an Edict, commanding all throughout his Do- 1 Marcaba minions to observe one and the same religion, and relinquishing their own & 2 Macab and former Rices, to conform themselves to the religion of the Greeks under 6. pain of death, fending divers Overfeers who should compel each people to the observation of his. Order. Into Judes he sent an old man of Athens, for their religion.

with order to defile the Temple, and name it the Temple of Jupiter Olympins, as that at Gerizim the Temple of Jupiter Hospitalis; he commanded the facrifices to be left off, the Sabbath he prohibited, he commanded them to defile the Sanctuary, build up Altars, Groves, and Chapels to Idols, to facrifice Swine, and other unclean bealts, not to Circumcife their fons, but to forget the Law: Moreover, an order was fent unto the Neighbouring Cities, that they should force the. Jews to partake of their facrifices, and kill those which would not come over to their Rites, so that many by fear obeyed, the Temple was polluted by the dalliances of the Gentiles, the abomination of defolation, viz. the abominable idol of Jupiter Olympius was fet up therein, the Scriptures burnt, and a Decree published, that with whomsoever they should be found, or whosoever should approve them, should be put death. Many yet were they that flood out, contemned the Kings Edict, and defiled not themselves, so that being inraged he caused divers to be brought before him to force them by Torments, but they flood out couragiously, and enduring the pains sealed the truth with their bloud; amongst whom are very notable the Mother and her feven Sons, from the eldest of them called Maccabeans. The rage of this perfecution coming to Modin, a Town fituate near to Diospolis found some opposition; for there Manathias a Priest eminent in degree, especially for his five sons, not onely refused to facrifize, but killed a Jew at the Altar that was fo doing, and after that the Kings Officer who was fent to compel the people. Then exhorting all that were zealous for their Law to follow him, he fled with his fons into the Moun-

Mattathias

46. Many went out after him, and lived with their Wives, Children, and maketh oppo- Cattel, in Dens and Caves, which coming to the knowledge of Philip the Governour of Terusalem, the Garrison Soldiers were presently drawn out to purfue them, fo that falling on them on the Sabbath, and they not at all refifting for the observance thereof, they cast in fire, and burnt them to the number of 1000 persons. Mattathias, and they that were with him hearing this, resolved for the time to come to repulse the Enemy on the Sabbath, and then the Asidaans, a fort of religious men joyning with him, with such as dayly fled out of the Countrey, he made up a little Army, and therewith profecuted the wicked ones, and drove them to fly to the Nations about, pulraged, mustered all his Army, to which he gave a years pay, and commanded ging Antiothey should be ready at all occasions.

48. He purposed to march against Maccabaus, but seeing his Treasury 1 Maccab 3, exhausted by the pay of the Army (for this the Jens now being revolted, he thereby lost his 300 Talents of annual Tribute, and much also which he was Who intend- wont to receive from other places, which being unwilling to quit their own religions as well the other, were in combustions) and fearing he should not ing to go ahave to fatisfie for his gifts, wherein he took a pride to exceed all his ance-gainst him, yet changeth cestors, he resolved to make a progresse into Persia, and the upper Counhis mind and treys, to garher the Tributes thereof, and fill his Coffers. But before his degiveth order parture, making Lysias his Kinsman Governour of the Regions betwixt Euto Lyfias to destroy the Teme.

Which inra-

Maccaba

led down the Altars, and Circumcifed fuch Children as they found in the Coasts of /frael ; then after he had been Captain of this wandting Company the space of a year, he died, leaving his son Simon for a Counsellour, and Jude firnamed Maccabam for a Captain to them. This Mattathia was the 1 Maccab 3. fon of John, and Grand-fon to Simeon, firnamed Asmonaus. * Jacobus Cap- * Ad A. M. pellus thinketh that this Simeon was Simon the fecond, son of Onias the fecond, 8332. and Grand-son to Simon the sirth, simamed Just. But Schinlerus thinketh * Martias this Simeon to have been the fon of Hasmonaus. From the words of Jo- vius luisve fephus it should seem that Mattathias was the Great-grand-son of Asmonaus, * Evuinos fo called, or Hafmon, from whom his posterity were named Hasmonaans, a Assaula Bauld userh the word Hasmonian to everally destable land and rate. * David useth the word Hasmanim to expresse Ambassadors, Princes, or * Poll. 88.32. Great-men. It is also observed that the Jens in Isaly call the Cardinals Hafmannim or Hasmonaans.

47. Judas being affifted by his brethren, and his fathers followers, fell upon the Enemy, burnt divers of their Towns, and seized upon the Commo-And Judas his dious places, coming usually upon them in the night, so as he forced many of them to quit the Land; Apollonius the Governour of Samaria coming against him, he overthrew, and flew him, and getting his sward ever after used it in the Wars, and after him he overthrew also Seron, who governed Cale-Syria. Amipehus in this mean while lying about Amioch, made there Magnificent Games and Shows, imploying the money he had got in Egypt, and out of the polyb Legat, the grudge he had conceived for his stop at Alexandria, and the bent of his mind which was sufficiently alienated from the Romans. But hearing of the fuccesse of Marcabaus, and the losse of his Forces, he was exceedlingly in-

Temples he had rifled, to that end and purpose, and entertaining his Gness in 101.0 109. a vile and servile kind of observance. This being ended, an Ambassador from Rome arrived at his Court, fent on purpose to spy out his designs. Whom he received with such courtefie, as over doing in that point, he easily concealed phrases and Egypt, to whose care he also committed his young son, he gave to him half his forces, and this in charge, to blot out the Nation of the Jews utterly, and to give their Countrey to strangers to inhabit. Philip the Gover- 2 Maccab. 8. nour of Jernsalem seeing to what an height Maccabaus was grown, wrote to Prolomy the fon of Dorymones the Governour of Calefria and Cilicia, who presently dispatched Nicanor one of his chiefest friends, and the son of Hasendeth se- Patroclus with 20000 men, joyning Gorgias to him, a man of great expewal Captains rience; and not long after he himself was sent by Lysias with more aid, so that all three rogether made an Army of 40000 foot and 7000 horse. Antiochus at this time was behind hand in his Tribute to the Romans 2000 Talenes, therefore Nicanor resolved to raise this money out of Jewish slaves, and fent about for Chapmen for them, promiting 90 persons for a Talent; so that 1000 Merchants came together with ready money into his Camp; more forces also from Syria and the Countrey of the Philiftins came

49. Judas having kept a fast at Morpah (because the Heathen now held I Maccab. 4. Jerufalem, and the Temple was defiled) for his good fucceffe against so great an Army, having himself but 6. or 7000 men, gave all the fearfull, those that had built houses, married Wives, or planted Vineyards leave to depart, according to the Law of Moses; then marched down to Emmans where the Enemy was incamped. That night Gorgias thinking to oppresse the Jews, at unawares, came to their Tents with a party of 5000 foot and 1000 horse; but Tudas having notice thereof, turned it to his own advantage, refolving to go and fall upon Nicanor in the absence of the other, whom he knew to be the more experienced Captain. Gorgias finding the Camp empty, thought the owners had fled for fear of him into the Mountains, and fought for them there, but they being got to Nicanor ingaged with him in the morning, and routed his whole Army, laying above ooo dead upon the place; fo that he and his men perceiving prefently what was done by the smoke of their Camp now fet on fire, fled amain, and the Tems coming to plunder the field found great Treasure, of which part being fer aside for the infirm, defeated.

And Lyfias himfelf.

Astiochus in the mean

reth in the treys.

Widows, and Orphans, the rest the Soldiers divided amongst them. After this, Judas overthrew Timotheus and Bachides, both of the Kings party, killing above 20000 men, so that then they recovered many strong holds, at which Lyfias was exceedingly troubled, things falling out fo contrary to his expectations, & the next year invaded Tudaa with an army of 60000 choice foot, and 5000 horse, but being met by Fudas with 10000 men, he was received with fuch resolution that with the losse of 5000 he was glad to retreat to Antioch intending greater preparations for his next expedition. Judas returning to a Maccab, to. Hierufalem cleanfed the Temple, & offered factifice upon a new Altar, after the Heathen had held it just three years; then kept they a feast for eight dayes, and ordered it to be observed to posterity, which in the Gospel is called the Feast of the Dedication. 50. Antiochus in the mean while waged War against Artaxias King of Appian in Arminia, and that with fuch fuccesse, as cutting off many of his men, he took syriacis, him prisoner. Afterwards hearing that the Citie Elyman in Persia was exceeding rich, and therein a Temple (of Venus, or Diana, both being afferted) time profpewherein were laid up very rich Arms left by Alexander the Great, he being greedy of this prey attempted to rifle them both, but the Inhabitants taking upper Coun-

Arms, repelled, and caused him shamefully to retreat. Being come to Ecbarane, he there heard of the overthrow of Nicanor and Timotheus, and then journeying towards Babylon in the Borders of Perlia, of the defeat given to that great Army of Lyfias, the throwing down the Idol of Tupiter Olympius, 2 Maccab, 9. and the fortification of the Sanctuary, whereupon he fell into a great rage, resolved to revenge himself upon the Tems for his shamefull retreat, and commanded his Chariot driver to make speed, saying, he would make Jerusalem

And in his return hearing the common burying place of them when he should come thither. Scarce of the misear- had he made an end of threatning, when he was suddenly struck with exceeding torment in his bowels, which yet reduced him not to any good conflicuand the reft tion of mind, he still breathing fury and revenge against the Tems, and crybreathes revenge, but is ing out to make halte, but the Chariot being driven very fast, he was shaken prefently out of it, and by the fall so sore bruised, that he was constrained to betake ftruck with a himself to his Litter, and then Worms crawled out of his body, the flesh foul disease.

whereof rotted, and fell from him yet alive. None could endure to carry him for the stench thereof, which also offended his Army, wherefore being forced to flay his journey for Oxbyton, he flayed at Taba, a Town in Persia. Before his death he confessed this to have falln upon him for the injuries offered to the Tows, acknowledged the Soveraignty of God, and his own pride, A. M. 3841. vowed if God would restore him, to grant immunities to his people, to adorn 01.144.0001. his Temple, to turn Jew himself, and to travel through the habitable world selencida to declare his strength and power. And when he perceived his end to draw 149 near, he wrote most kind Letters to the Jews, desiring them to stand faithfull Plot. Philame. to him, and his fou after him, then constituting Philip, who had been 17.

brought up with him, the Protettor and Guardian of his fon, till he should come to age, he died, after he had reigned 12 years, A. M. 3841. after the beginning of Selencus the 149, the first of the 154 Olympiad. 51. Antiochus his fon, a Child of nine years old fucceeded him, firnamed rings.

And dicth.

Eupator by the Syrians for his fathers virtue. Him Lyfias goverved, who had rings.

Antiochus Esternio him un to father Philiphia Life. brought him up; so that Philip his designed Guardian by his father sled into pator. Egypt, and Prolomy the fon of Dorymenes, for that being convinced how the 2 Maccab. 10.

Tems were wronged, he went about to compose the difference with them, was forced to drink poylon. Demetrius the fon of Seleucus Philopater, Polyb. Legal. whom we before said to have been sent Hostage to Rome, hearing there of his 109, Uncles death, defired of the Senare that he might be restored to his Fathers Kingdom, fo long unjuftly detained from him, affirming he effeemed of Rome Selencus Phias his own Country, in which he had been brought up; of the fons of Senathe right heir, tors as his brethren, and themselves as so many Fathers; but they judging it defireth of the more for their interest that the Kingdom of Syria should be under a child than Remains to re- one of mans efface (fuch as he was, being now 23 years old) refolved it should be secured to Antiochus, and presently ordered three Commissioners of policy re- to be sent thither to settle the affaires thereof, according to instructions received from themselves, which might now be done easily enough, the King himfelf being so young, and his Courtiers thinking they were well enough dealt withall, to Demetrins was not reffored; but especially they gave them in charge to burn all the ships they should find there, not allowed to Antiochus by the League, and hough the legs of all the Elephants, and diminish the Kings strength as much as possible. These things being executed, provoked one Leptines fo far as he flew Cn. Ollavius the chief Commissioner (and who first brought the Consulship into his family, out of which Augustu Casar issued) whom Lyssas, though he was suspected to incense the People against the Romans, honourably buried, and disputched quickly Ambassadors to Rome in the King's name to disclaim any consciousnesse to the fact, 52. Gorgins being Governour of the parts about Judan, formented a conti- 2 Maccab. 10.

nual War with the Jens, and with him joyned the Idumaans, who received all runnagates, and gave them entettainment. Against those therefore, Judas Maccabaus marched, took divers places, and put 20000 to the Sword, after which turning upon the Ammonites, he overthrew them in diversing agements, and taking Jazer with the Territories thereto belonging, returned again into Judea. Timotheus the General of the Ammoniss hereat inraged, War with the and gathering many men out of Afia, came as if he would devour Judea, but Judas with his having humbled themselves, and called upon the name of God, gave him battel, in which 20500 Foot, and 600 of his Horse being flin, he fled to Gazara, a strong Garrison kept by his brother, but that be-together with the other. After this the Nations about Galaad and Galile

afflicting fore the Jews, Maccabeus divided his Army into three parts, one of which (viz., 3000 men) he delivered to his brother Simon to relieve them I Maccab. 4. of Galile, the second to Joseph the son of Zechariah, to defend Judaa, giving it in charge not to fight with any Enemy till his return, with the other he marched himfelf to the fuccour of them in Galaad, Simon fought many bat-tels with the Enemy, and killed many of them, brought his Countrymen into Judan with great gladnesse, and Judas had the like successe, taking many Towns, and putting many thousands to the Sword; but those that were left at home defiring also upon the report hereof to atchieve some military glory, marched to Jamnia, whence Go gias iffuing out, put them to flight, and following the chase as far as the borders of Judaa, killed about 2000 53. Lyflas the King's Protettor and chief Minister of State, was displeased at the report of Judas's successe, and taking 80000 Foot with all the Horse 2 Maccab. 11. along with him, resolved to make Jerusalem an habitation for the. Greeks, the Temple to pay tribute, and the Priesthood thereof to set to fale every year. He came and befieged Bubsura nighto Jerusalem; but Maccabans then meeting with him killed 11000 of his Foot, with 1600 Horse-men, and forced him with the rest (many of them wounded and disarmed) to shife for themselves. Considering this defeat, and that God sought for the Jews, he fent to them to treat of Peace, and according to his promife brought the King to yield to such reasonable conditions as were offered by Maccaban; but it was quickly broken by Timethens, and other Captains, that governed the places adjoyning to Judaa, at which time they of Joppe also drawing

Lyiu again

Gorgias fo-

mentech a fedes is vi-

ing taken, he was pulled out of a cave where he had hid himself; and flain,

200 Tems

away by the

morions of Philip.

200 Jews chaftly on shipboard, drowned them in the sea. Fudas hearing this, went and burned all the Vessels in the Haven at Foppe, and understanding that the inhabitants of Jamnia had also intended such a thing against his Country-men, he did as much for them; then marching against Timotheus, the Arabian Nomades fee upon him, being 5000 Foor, and 500 Horse, but

And the sey- were so entertained, as yielding themselves, with a promise of giving up their thian Nomades, Carrel, and being at his beck for the time to come, they obtained Peace. After this he stormed the City Caspis (wherein was such a flaughter made of the Inhabitants, that a Lake thereto adjoyning feemed to be full of blood) and then proceeding 750 furlongs came to the Tenr called Tubieni inhabiting the Land of Tob (concerning which mention is made in the Book of Judges) whence Timothems was departed, but had left a strong Garrison, which being Chap, II.

taken by Dofithens and Sofiparer two of Fudus his Officers, they put to the fword above 1 0000 men. 54. Timotheus gathered together from the Nations round about him and the Arabians 120000 Foot, and 2500 Horse, wherewith, putting up the wo- 1 Miccas, 6 men and children into a strong Fort called Carnion, he came and pitched his 2 Much, 11, Tenrs against Raphon beyond the brook; but his great multitude was so sur-prized with fear upon the approaching of Fudas, that every man shifted for himself, and what by their running upon one anothers swords, and the pursute which Maccabaus followed on with much earnestnesse, 30000 of them were As also Timo- flain, and he himself fell into the hands of Dofitheus and Sofipaier, from whom he obtained his liberty, upon promife of dismissing such of their Countrymen as he had taken. Judas then proceeding took Carnion, wherein 25000 were put to the fword, after which he gathered all the Fews out of Galand to bring them into Inden, and for that the City Ephron, through which they must needs passe, denied them entrance, they rook it by force, and destroying the Inhabitants, went through and came up to Fernfalem to the · mothers

fubdued.

X 1

Feast of Pensecost. The Feast being ended, he taking 3000 Foot, and 400 Horse along with him, went and fought with Gorgias, whom one Dofithous of Bucenor his Company had once taken, but holding him by the cloak, a certain Thracian came and cut off his shoulder, so that the prisoner escaped. After the Victory the Fews coming to arip and bury fuch of their own party as had fallen that day, found under their coats certain things dedicated to the idols of Jamnia, fothat it appearing that this being forbidden them by the Law was the cause of their death, they betook themselves by Prayer to God, increating that it might not be charged upon them all. After this Judas subdued the Edomites, and the Philiftines, their idols he burnt, and overthrew The Edomites their altars, and then returning into Judea, for that he found the King's and Philiftines Garrifon Soldiers which yet kept the Castle to straighten and infest the Ifraeliver about the Sanctuary, with all the People, he befieged them close, but 1 March 6.

fome of them with certain Jewish fugitives getting out, went straight to Antidebus, and perswaded him with all expedicion to come and give a check to the growing power of the Jews. 55. Antiochus gathering rogether all his friends and Captains, and a great Ibid. & Army (concerning the number of which the two Books of Maccabes differ) in 2 March, 13. a great rage marched thither, intending to deal worse with them than his father had done before him, and to him Menelaus joyned himself, hoping by his means Aniochus be- to regain the Priesthood. Passing through Idumen He came and sate down fiegeth Beth- before Rethfurn, where Judas by night with a choice party fell upon his Camp, and piercing as far as his own Tent flew 4000 men, and the prime Elephant, with those upon him, and giving an Alarm to the whole Army at break of the day, safely retreated, whereupon the King marched towards him the next day, and coming to an engagement loft 600 men more; but the Tews feeing themselves overpowered, retreated. Then returned he to the fiege, which Judus fore molefled, cutting off many of his men, and relieving the

Which belieged with provisions, who being not provided within themselves, because this was the Sabbattent year, yielded up the Town upon composition. thoobus having herein placed a Garrison marched up to Ferusalem, and there Terufalem,

made all provision possible for gaining it, all manner of engines being raised for the calling of fire and stones; which the besieged resisted as well as they might by others of their own, but as for provisions, were in no better condition than they of Berblura had been, which gave opportunity enough to the King; but before he could perfect his work, came newsthat Philip, whom his Father had ordained to be his guardian, being returned out of Egypt, was coming with the Forces which Epiphanes had left in Persia and Media to recover his right usurped by Lysias. Hereupon both he and his Captains were presently perswaded by Lysias (because their provisions began to fail, the place was ftrong, and the affaires of the Kingdom required it) to make Peace with the besieged upon such terms as they required.

56. Going to the Temple he offered facrifice, and shewed civility and refor Comig to the Temper to onclose Actions the firength thereof, caufed the wall round about to be demolished, contrary to his oath. Then Oi, 154. 40, 2. returning to Prolemais, the Inhabitants being great Enemies to the Jews, Sciencidarum Rickled hard to break the League, but Lyfias by his defence quiered their 150. minds, and confirmed the Peace. The King halting thence towards Anti- Antiochi och, Lyfas accused Menelans the High-priest to him, as an incendiary, and Englands the that had been the cause of the War. Cosher being the same and England Phihe that had been the cause of the War, so that being thrown into a Tower long, 18. full of ashes, he there miserably ended his life, and in his room was substitution was substitution. tuted one Alcimus of Aron's line, but not of the family of the Priefts, Joseph. through Lyfas his direction, which On as the fon of the last Onias the Priest Ania, lib, 12. understanding, went into Agypt, where infinuating himself into Ptolomy cap. 15.

Philometor and Cleopaira, he obtained a Temple like that at Jerusalem to be built in the Province of Heliopolis, and himfelf to be made Priest thereof. Antiochus coming to Alexandria, found Philip Master thereof, but sec-A Temple built to God ting upon it he took it by force, and taking him therein put him to death, a Heliopolis by and so quickly quieted these stirs, being reserved with his Guardian, though ment of Onice but a little time, for others more dangerous. His Ambassadors now, which Lysian had sent about the death of Octavius, had been at Rome, where labouring to clear him of the fact, they were fent back without answer, whereat Demetrius the son of Seleneus being much startled, began to cast again in his head how to obtain his freedom, and the Kingdom, according to his title, which was fo clear and evident. 57. Consulting with Polybins the Achean and Historian, whether he Polybins Legat. should not once more move the Senate in the businesse, he advised him nor 114. to dash himself twice against the same Rock, but attempt something of 1 Maccab, 7.60 himself worthy of a Kingdom, hinting thereby what he would have him to 2 Maccab. 14. do. But he being tuled by one Apollonius his intimate friend, but a young unexperienced man, requested the Fathers again, that at least he might not be constrained to stay there as an Hostage, seeing they had secured the Kingdom of his Cousin Antiochus. They yet remained of the same opinion, and resolved as formerly, so that then he consulted how to escape, first with Diodorus a cunning man, who was come from Syria, and had belonged to him, and then with Polybius, who procured Menethyllus the Egyptian Ambassador to hire a Carthaginian ship just then failing for Tyre; so that

Diodorns being sent before to feel the People's mind, and seek for advantages, he taking a few friends along with him supped at a friends house, whither, for fear he should stay too long, Polybins sent him a secret hint, not to let flip this opportunity; whereupon making as though he was fick, he arose from the table, and came that night to Offia upon the mouth of Tyber. Menethyllus going before told the Matter of the thip, that he had received Demetrius the orders from his Prince to reside still at Rome; but that he would send some tight heir orders from his Prince to reside still at Rome; but that he would send some dispets from young men of approved sidelity to him, to acquaint him with the affaires of A. M. 3843. his negotiation: So Demetrius and his followers going on shipboard, away 01, 154, an. 3. they failed by break of day. At Rome nothing was known of his escape till V. C. 592. they failed by break of day. At Kome nothing was known of his eleape till the fourth day. On the fifth the Senare met about it; yet did not make any seleucidarum provision for the pursuing of him, thinking it to be too late; but a few dayes Piolom, Philo. after, they fent three Commissioners into Greece, who viewing the affaires met, 19, there, were commanded thence to passe into Asia, and amongst other things have an eye to what he should attempt.

Dddd 2

58. Landing in Lycia, he thence wrote to the Senate, that he had no intentions to disturb his Cousin Antiochus, but onely revenge upon Lysias the Dione death of Ottavius; then getting into his hands Tripolis, a Town of Phanicia, Toleth, libro as sent by the Senate to possesse the Kingdom, none gain faid him; so that cap. 16. he scized also upon Sparnee. Thence, having gotten some forces together, Julin lib34, he marched towards Ansioch, out of which Ansiochus, with Lysias his Lib. Maced, at Governour (for that they thought he was sent by the Romans, and therefore feared to oppose him) coming out to meet him in a friendly manner, was pre-tently made away, after he had reigned about two years. Demerrius having thus obtained the Kingdom, displaced Heraclides, whom Epiphanes his Uncle

573

Kingdom, and had made Treasurer at Babylon, and his brother Timarchus, whom he had alkilleth selen- fo placed Governour there; for that he had badly behaved himself in his Office, whence from the Babylonians he got the firname of Soter, the next after Antiochas the fon of Selencus Nicator, as * Appear observeth. The Ro- * In Smith. man Commissioners being now come to Ariarathes into Cappadocia, he sent Polybin Lita, Menocharis thither to them, to deal with them about his confirmation in the 120 or 123 Kingdom; offered also to Ariaraghes the Widow of Perseus of Macedonia, and his fifter to vvife; but he refused her for fear of giving offence to the Romans. After the return of Menocharis and his report, thinking it his main interest to oblige these men, he cast off all other things, and labouring to please them, fent first to them into Pamphylia, then to Rhodes, offering to do any He courteth be owned as King.

the Commifthing whereby to purchase his being acknowledged King by the Romans, and fioners of Rome Tiberius one of the Commissioners stood him in great stead for the obtaining of this his defire. He shortly after sent Menocharis, and others in Ambassage to Rome, and with them Leptines the murderer of Ollavius (who offered A. M. 1846. himself to be sent) and a Crown of Gold in token of his thankfulnesse for Olisans his good usage all the time of his being an Hostage. The Senate long delibe- V. C. 592. rating upon the businesse, resolved at length not to receive Leptines, lest they Sciencialist. should seem to be satisfied for the publick affront; but rather lay the blame Demet, Solot, upon all Syria, and referve to themselves an occasion of revenge, when, and as Ptol. Philon. often as they should see convenient : as for Demetrius himself, they bestowed 20. their friendship upon him, with this condition, if he would give sufficient caution to be thenceforth as much in their power as formerly.

59. Alcimus, who had procured from Eupator to be made High-Prieft, Maccaba, and now was not received nor owned by the people, because that in the dayes 2 Mac. 14. of Epiphanes he had defiled himself, came to Demetrius with other Apoflaces, and fuch like as himfelf, and accused his Countrey-men, especially the Hasmoneans (i.e. Judas and his brethren) that they had cut off, and banished Buchides fent his friends; whereupon he fent one Bachides a trufty friend with great forby him against ces into Judea, confirming the Priesthood to Alcimus, whom he sent back with him. All their design, being arrived there, was to get Judas into their hands; divers Scribes going out to them to follicit for peace, being confident because the Priest was of the seed of Aaron, he most wickedly, and contrary to his Oath given, flew fixty of them in one day; then Bachides going from Hierusalem, sent about, and caused divers that had fled from him, and many of the people whom being flain he cast into a great pit, and so committing the Countrey to Alcimus (to the defence of which he left him some Leaveth Alforces) he returned unto his King. After his departure, Alcimus firiving to confirm himself in the Priesthood, made great havock of the people, to rewith some for- strain which, Judas went throughout the Countrey, and compelled his party to shut themselves up within their holds, and growing stronger, he restrained their invalions, fo that Alcimus being afraid of him goes once more unto the King, carrying along with him a Crown of Gold, a Palm, and of the boughs which were used solemnly in the Temple; and seeing he could not have any more accesse to the holy Altar, taking a fit opportunity when he was asked of the affairs of his Countrey, accused the Asidaans, and especially Judan as feditions, of depriving him of the Priesthood (the honour as he said of his Ancestors) and plainly affirmed that as long as Maccabens lived the Kings affairs could not be fecure. This being feconded by fome ill-willers to the Jews, Demesrius was inflamed, and fending for Nicanor one of his chiefelt Who accusing Princes, and a bitter Enemy to the Ifraelises, made him Captain over Judea, and fent him forth with a Command to flay Judas, to scatter them that were with him, and make Alcimus High Priest of the great Temagainst him.

60. When he was come thirher, and understood the courage and resolution of Tudas, his brethren and companions, for the defence of their Countrey, he feared to try the chance of War, and fent to make peace with the people, who having agreed unto the Covenants, the two Captains came together to consult about the League. Nicanor was so taken with Indas as he continued with him, loved him in his heart, and perswaded him to marry, and beget Children; and so remained constant in his affection to him, till with the pleasure of the King, he waited for a convenient opportunity to accomplifinit. Behaving himself thenceforth more roughly to him, the other suspected something by the great change of his carriage, and therefore gather-

Nicono at first Alcimus perceiving it, and understanding the Covenants which were made betwixt them, took a third journey to the King, told him that Nicanor had taken strange matters in hand, and appointed Judas, a Traitor to the Realm, to be his Successor. Demetrius being hereat displeased, by Letters checked him for these things, and commanded him in all haste to fend Maccabaus bound unto Annoch, which grievously troubled him, that he, who had done no hurt, should be thus used, but conceving it necessary for him to comply

Then complained of by Alcimus feeketh his defluction.

CRAP, IV.

ing a few of his men, withdrew himself from him, but he followed him with a ftrong power to Hiernfalem, and drawing him out to talk with him, had prepared some to seize on him; yet he having notice hereof got away, and would fee him no more. Seeing his delign to be discovered, he went and fought with him near Capharsalama, in which he lost about 5000 of his men, and the rest fled into the Citie of David. After this he came up to Mount Sion, and some of the Priests with the Elders of the people went forth of the fanctuary to falute him peaceably, and shew him the burnt-offering that was offered for the King; but he jeering hereat, demanded Indas to be delivered unto him, and they affirming with an Oath that they knew not where he was, he stretching out his hand against the Temple, swore that except Judas and his forces were delivered up, he would when he should return in peace, set the sanctuary Hublasphe on fire, demolish the Altar, and build there a stately Temple to Bacchus. The muuthreats. Priests hearing this went in, and standing before the Altar, with tears begged of God that he would frustrate the mans intentions, and be avenged upon him and his Host for his blasphemous words.

61. Hearing that Judas was gone from Jerusalem into Samaria, he went 1 Maccab.7. and pitched his Tents in Beibboron, where new supplies from Syria came to 6 2. 15. him, the Enemy being in Hadasa 30 furlones off, with no more than 3000 men. He would fain have fought on the Sabbath day, which the Jews, who were constrained to follow, friendly dehorting him from, with great blaspemy uttered against God, he refused to hear them, demanding if there were a living Lord in heaven, who commanded that seventh day to be kept, and saying, he himself was mighty upon earth to command them to Arm themselves, and Heinflain in to perform the Kings businesse. But coming to the ingagement, he himself was flain first, which when his Army saw, they cast away their Arms and sled, and the Ifraelises following the chace flew 30000. fothat not one of the Army was left remaining. Coming to the plunder of the field they cut off Nicanor's head and hands, and carried them to Jernfalem, where they were hung up before the Temple, his tongue being cut in pieces, and cast unto the Fouls. Then they decreed, that the 13th day of the 12th moneth Adar (as the Syrians call it) the day before Mardochius his day, should be observed every year, as the Author of the second book of Maccabees tells us, who with this flory finisheth his work, being the Epiteme of the five books of 34- 1 Maccab.8. Jon, a Jew of Cyrene. After Nicanor's death, Judan was quiet for some time, & 9.

The end of the fecond book of Mac-

Book III

and then Fudas hearing of the power of the Romans, and their compassion of the diffressed, and how much Demetrius stood in awe of them, sent Enpolemusthe fon of John, and Jason the son of Eleazer on an Ambassage to Bachides and the Senare, that entring into fociety with them, the People might be freed Alcimus fent from the voke of Demetrin and the Greeks. But Demetrins hearing of the into Judea a- mischance of Nicanor and his Forces, sent Bachides and Alcimus again into gainst Judas. Judaa with the greater part of his forces, who coming to Ferufalem to seek for Indas, marched thence with 20000 Foot, and 2000 Horse against him, who had but 3000 men in all. With these few he setting upon Bachides, all of them for fook him but 800, with which yet he fo charged him, as fighting from morning till night, he put to flight the right wing in which he stood, but they of the left perceiving this, followed him behind as he gave the charge, and compassing him in, slew him, all his men then shifting forthemselves. This happed A. M. 3844. of the Greeks or Seleucide the 152, in the fecond of Demetrius Soier, and after he led the People, from his Fathers death, 62. A great famine then raging, almost all the Country submitted to Ba- 1 Maccab, 9.

Maccabeus is

chides, that they might the more commodiously get bread, and he made such wicked persons Governours, as bringing to him the friends of Judas, he mocked them, and revenged himself upon them. But such of them as remained, and could do it, affembled themselves together, and chose Tonathan (Sirnamed Apphus) their Captain in the room of Fudas his brother, which Backides hearing fought to kill him, but he understanding thereof, fled into the Defert Thecoa, having fent his brother John (Sirnamed Gaddis) with a party to the Nabarhaan Arabi, to defire they might leave their baggage amongst them. He going down with it, was met in the way by the children of lambri from

Tonathan his brother chofen Captain in his room,

Medaba, who killing him and those with him, seized upon the prey; but no great joy had they of their booty; for Jonathan and his brother Samon hearing that they were about to make a great mariage, and bring the bride from Medaba with great pomp, being the Daughter of one of the noblest Princes of Canaan, they went, and hiding themselves under the covert of the Mountain, when the Bridgroom and his friends came forth with Timbrels A. M. 3845. and instruments of Musick, rose up out of the ambush, slew many of them, V. 6. 194. and took the spoil; so having revenged the death of their brother, they re- Selencid 152 rurned again unto Tordan. When Bachides heard this, he marched down, Demetr. St. and came thither with a great Army upon the Sabbath Day, and Jonathan be- 3. Plolom. ing befer behind and before with the Enemy, and on each fide with the River Philemat, 21, and Marishes, encouraged yet his men to fight, and lifting up his hand struck at Bachides. But he declined the blow; then feeing himself too weak for the Enemy he leaped into the River after he had flain 1000 of them, and fwom over with his men to the further fide. Bachides would not adventure to follow, but returning to Terufalem, built up the strong Forts throughout the Land, and placed therein frong Garrisons, that thence making excurfions, he might endammage the Jews. He fortified the Cities Bethlura and Gazara, with the Castle at Fernsalem, where he placed Soldiers with prov fions, and taking the fons of the chief of the Country for Hostages, he secured them in the later.

63. The Ambassadors sent by Maccabam to the Romans were well received, and entered into a League and fociety with the Romans, which being written in Tables of braffe, contained an ingagement mutually to fuccour and relieve each other. The Senate also wrote to Demetrins, charging him no more to hurt or indammage the Tews, being their confederates, under the Romans to pain of being profecuted with War both at Land and Sea. Not long after hurt the Jews. Alcimuthe High-priest commanded the wall in the Temple, which severed the Court of the People from that of the Gentiles, to be pulled down, which had been built by Zorobabel, and the Prophets, whose monuments he began to I Mattal. 3.

pull down and destroy; but at the same time he was so smitten that he could Acimus his ill not open his mouth, being taken with a Palsie, so as he could not speak nor give order concerning his house, and died with great torment. When Bachides flow that he was dead, he returned unto the King. Two years then did the Land continue quiet, but at the end thereof, certain wicked perfons fent for Ranhidus to return, relling him he might eafily apprehend Jonathan and all his Company in one night, at which message he arose with great histe, and fent letters privily to his adherents to take them, but they having notice of it, took fifty of these men, which had been the greatest sticklers, and slew them, Then Towathan departing into the Wilderneffe, built up the walls of Bethbufin, and fortified it, which Buchides having notice of went down thither, and closely befieged it ; but such was his entertainment from the befieged (who getting out killed his men, and burnt his engines,) that having Jain before the place a long time to no purpose, and seeing his journy to be frustrate, he eased his stomach against those that had been the cause of his Expedition, and parting to death many of them, refolved to retreat into his own Country. Jonathan having notice of this, fent to him to treat of Peace, and exchange the prisoners, which he gladly accepted of, and made an oath never more to by the Empire of the iviacedonians.

Bachides fiveareth neyer more to molest the fors, ditturb him. Returning then home he never brake it; fo that the Warre being removed, Jonathan dwelt at Machmas (or Michmash) in the Tribe of Benjamin, began to govern the People, and destroy the ungodly out of 64. Aritrathes (the fifth of that name) King of Cappadocia, maried (as except, Diowe faid before) Antiochis the daughter of Antiochus the Great. She having vi Siculi & no children by him at the first, introduced two suppositious boyes, Ariarathes Polyb. and Orophernes, he knowing nothing hereof; but a little after growing fruitful, the brought forth two daughters, and a fon called Mithridates, and then acquainting her husband with what the had formerly done, procured the two Counterfeits to be fent, the one to Rome, and the other into Ionia, left they flould diffurb the true one in his fuccession, who, being named Ariarather, and brought up in the fashions and customs of the Greeks, obtained the Kingdom after his Fathers death. Orophernes afterwards refolving to venture for it, came to Demetrius, complaining he was injuriously deprived outletter one of the Kingdom by his younger brother, and craved his affiftance for the redispositions or the Anggom by ms younger prother, and craved his assistance for the re-bood getterh covery of it. He being offended at Ariaraths for the refusing the mariage of consideraby his faster the widdow of Perseus, bargained with Orephernes for 1000 Talents. and expelled Ariar athes from Cappadocia, though he was helped by Eumenes King of Pergamus. Orophernes having this invaded the Kingdom, behaved himself not like one who intended to secure it to himself in the love of his People, but raging against them with pillages and fluighters, and corrupring himself with the luxurie of Ionia (where he had been brought up) pulled upon him the harred of all his Subjects, which he perceiving, made onely as an occasion further to profecute his wicked and unseasonable defigns. Ariarathes went straight to Rome to crave aid; and the Ambassadors both of Demerius and the other, followed to excuse what was done, and re-criminate him, which those of Orophernes performed to dexterously, that no body being present that could confute their lies, they seemed to gain credit, and driarnihes because he had been the consederate of the Romans, was flored by Attalies.

ordered to reign together with his brother. This was all he got at Rome; but Maphenes the shortly after Arrains the brother and successor of Eumenes expelled Orophernes and Demurius quite out of Cappadocia, and restored him to the entire possession of his Kingdom. 65. Not long after, Demonrius casting in his head how to inlarge his Domini- Except. Polybis ons, offered Arch m, the Governour of Cyprus for Ptolomy Philometor, per Valefium. 500 Talents to betray the Island into his hands; which the man consented to, but being discovered and sentenced, prevented the execution by hanging himself. Being thus frustrated in this design, he thenceforth giving himself up to idlenesse, having built a Castle fortified with 4 Towers not far from Ansioch, wherein he paffeth away the time without any attendance of State affaires, out of the fight of his Subjects. Hereby he contracted fuch hatred, that the Ansiothians revolted from him, and made choice of Oropher-nes, then living in exile at his Court, who so badly required him for his for-molomie's

daughter.

fon of Deme-

Alexander Bar Kings, but was followed by divers naughty persons to accuse him; Yet Alexander Bar Kings, but was followed by divers naughty persons to accuse him;

mer kindnesse, as to conspire with them to rob him of his Kingdom and life. He getting knowledge of this, spared his life, lest be should free Ariarathes from the fear of a competitor, and caused him to be kept securely at Seleucia: but the Antiochians not at all terrified from their attempt, went on in their rebellion, to which Attalus of Asia, Ariarathes of Cappadocia, One Balas and Ptolomy lending their helping hand, they suborned a young man of the fuhorned by basest condition (by one (a) called Prompalus, by others (b) Balas, and Several Princes for the fon (c) Balles) giving him the name of Alexander, and reporting him to be of Epiphanes, fon of Antiochus Epiphanes, to recover as it were his Fathers Kingdom by (b) Strabelle force. This youth, together with Landice Amiochus his daughter, did (d) He- 16 ractides (whom Demetrius cast out, as we said, of the Office of Treasurer & Joseph at Babylon) cary to Rome, where he brought him into the Senate, and cau- (d) Politics fed him to defire that he might be helped in the recovery of the Kingdom, at Ligat, 140. least that he might not be hindred in his indeavour that way: then he seconding him inveighed against Demetrius, and heaped up the praises and merits of Antischus so far, as though to all sober minded men his impudence was distaste. ful as well as his person, yet he so bewitched the generality of the Fathers, that a Decree was made, whereby power was given to them to return, and aid ordered them for the recovery of the Kingdom (being the children of their late friend and allie) as they had required.

66. Heraclides having obtained this act of the Senate, presently hired 1 Macca to Souldiers, and getting many eminent men to joyn with him, went to Ephefus, where he made all possible preparation for the War. Not long after Alexander got Ptolemais a City of Phanicia, being betrayed to him by the Garrison Soldiers, which Demetrius hearing, gathered together his Forces to go and fight with him, but confidering the uncertainty of the chance of War. fenç away his two fons Demetrius and Antiochus unto Cnidus to be out of the Juliam pine. danger, and be referred to revenge his death or deprivation if need should rights. require. He sent also to Tonashan the Captain of the Tows, to renew Peace with him, giving him power to raife forces against Alexander, and commanding the Hostages kept in the Castle at Jerusalem to be restored to him. which he using as a good opportunity, began to build Terusalem anew, and repair the walls, but Alexander having notice of Demetrius his message, and the promifes made by him, fent to him in like manner, and amongst many privileges and immunicies granted to the Nation, appointed him to be the High-prieft, sending him Purple and a Crown of Gold. So, in the sefor the King- venth moneth of the 160 year of the Seleucida, Jonathan put on the holy robe, in the ninth after the death of his brother Tudas (the Priesthood having been vacant seven years from the death of Aleimus) being the first of the A. M 3812. Hafmone ans that arrived at this dignity, and of the prieftly family, but not V. C. 601. of the Pontificial, to which Onias (who now was in Egypt) was next Selencial 160. heir. Demetrius hearing of the agreement his Enemy had made with the penter, Sol. 18. Tems, was fore troubled thereat, and labouted again by incredible promifes Ptol. Philm. to allure them to his own party; but they having had experience formerly 28. how his affections flood towards them, refused to entertain his overtures, Balas gathering his forces together, not onely those that revolted to him in Syria, but his Auxiliaries also sent from Fonathan, Arrarathes, Attalus, and especially from Piolomy Philometor, gave battel to Demetrius, whose left wing put those to flight which fought against it, but the right having the contrary fortune was forced to run, which yet he would not do, though in it, but fighting manfully, light with his Horse into a bog, where he fought soutly on And Demetri- his feet, till at last he was slain with wany wounds, after he had reigned

dom of Syria

in bartel

loucide the 161. 67. Alexander Balas obtained the Kingdom, and shortly after his posses. Maccab 10. fion of it, remembring how much he was beholding to Prolomy Philometor for it, sent to him for his Daughter to wife, which he willingly affenting to, brought her to Ptolemais, and maried her to him with royal magnificence. Thither came down Jonathan from Jerusalem, bringing presents for both the us being, flain twelve years. A. M. 3854, the second of the 157 Olympiad, of the Se-

And Peolomy

Alexander

Kingdom,

69. Demetrius then according to his right obtained his Father's Kingdom, Appian in Syand for that he had subdued this counterfeitor of his family had (the next after mais, Selencus the founder of the race) the Syrname of Nicanor or Nicasor I Maccab. 11. About this time Fonathan besieged the Castle at Ferusalem, and did all he Scent, could with his Engines to reduce it; but this being by some illwillers made known to Demetrius, he wrote to him, in anger, to raise the siege, and appear before him at Ptolemais, which he obeyed to far as to go to him; and partly by his prefents and otherwayes fo appealed him was rejecting his accufers, he confirmed to him the Priesthood, and upon promise of 300 Talents granted him immunity from tribute, with the Principality of three other places. After this, seeing his Realm to be quiet on every side, Dometrius

Peolomy, who though he received it with much joy, yet having in the fight received a great hurt in the head, upon the fearthing of the wound he died also the third day after. Such end had the strange fortune of this counterfeir

Alexander, after he had reigned about five years.

ander was so far from liftning to any tales, that he caused him to be clothed the Kingdom in purple, to fit near him, and by proclamation commanded all his accusers to forbear, at which they being discouraged, went their wayes. After this Joseph lib. 13. Alexander giving up himself to idlenesse, & luxurie, and minding nothing else, eap. 8, & the affaires of the State were wholly managed by one Ammonius, who mide Livius lib. 50. flaughter of all his friends, and amongst the rest slew Landice the Daughter of & Justin, 135. Epiphanes. Which being heard by Demetrius the eldest Son of Demetrius Soter, he hired Soldiers in Crose, and came into Cilicia, at which the other being affrighted, hasted to Antioch to secure his estate before his coming, where he made Hieran, and Diodotts (or Tryphon) governours. With Demetrius joyned Apollonius the Governour of Calefyria, who being ordered to fight against the Jews, who still stood true to Alexander, with great pride rusalem against him with 10000 men. In his way he took Toppe, which Apollonins understanding marched to Ashdod, and left an Ambush in the way to intrap him, but he getting clear of the Ambush, put all his forces to flight, A.M. 3857. whereof many men fled into the Temple of the idol Dagon, which he fet on Ol. 158, an. 1. fire, and what by this means and by the fword perished about 8000 men. V. C. 606. This coming to the ears of Alexander, he honoured Jonathan more than Sciencid, 165, ever: he fent him a button of Gold, wont to be given to the Kings kinfmen, Ptolom, Philo-and gave him Accaron a City of the Philishins with it's Territories as an met. 33. and gave him Accaron a City of the Philissins with it's Territories as an inheritance. 68. Ptolomy Philometor with great forces both by Land and Sea, came 1 Maccab, 11.

provoked Jonathan to fight with him, and he accordingly marched from Je-fent and made an agreement with Demerrins, promiting him to take away his daughter from Balas and give her to him, together with the recovery of his

them to receive Demetrius, promising them that this should make amends Ploony affift- farhers Kingdom. The Antiochians flew Ammonius, and let Ptolomie into abhim in re-their City, who there put two Diadems upon his head; but prefently brought out of Æeypr, under presence of aiding his son in Law, but indeed with an intention to seize upon Syria, and accordingly all the Cities being comman- Joseph. & Juded to receive him honourably, he placed therein Garrisons of his own. He Junut supra. got into his hands all the maritime Cities as far as Selencia upon Ocontes, and then being clear our of conceit with Alexander (for that he demanding Ammonius who had plotted his destruction, he would not deliver him up) he for the injury formerly offered his Father, and then the Soldiers revolted also. Alexander being now in Cilicia confulted with the Oracle of Apollo Sardo-Diod. Sicul. nieus, from which he had answer, that he should look to himself in that place apud Photium. which had brought forth a double formed spectacle, which feemed to point A. M. 2868. out the City Abas in Arabia, where a certain woman named Herais, being Scheucidarum maried to one Samias turned to a man; and where he was flain not long after. For invading Syria with fire and fword, Ptolomy with Demetrius his new fon in Law met and overthrew him at the River Oenopara, and then he flying to Abas, his head was cut off by Zabd the Prince of the place, and fent to disbanded all his old Soldiers, retaining onely fome Cretians and other Islanders, which so inraged them, being wont by the former Kings to be kept in pay, as an incouragement to them for future fervice, that they thenceforth became his Enemies, and shewed it upon occasion which he also himself presented them, being wholly ruled by one Lasthenes, who had helped him in the recovery of the Kingdom. By this man's advice, thinking himfelf fecure enough of his estate, he cruelly raged against such as had been against him, and plunged himself into bad courses; which (together with the alienation of the minds of the Soldiers) one Diodotus an Apamean, and one of Alexander Balas his Captains, confidering, went to Elmalchueles the Arabian, with whom Antiochus the young fon of that Alexander by Cleopatra against Deme was brought up, and acquainting him how things stood, at length obtained trius by Dio- to have the boy delivered to him, to be restored to his Father's Kingdom. Demetrius feeing his foldiers alienated from him, defired of Fonathan a funplie, with great promises of respect and succour. He sent him 3000 men, A. M. 3860, plie, with great promifes of respect and succour. Fresent min 3000 men, ol. 138 me, which stood him in good stead, for he going about to disarm the Antiochians, Ol. 138 me, of 69,1 they flatly refused it, and rifing, came many thousands to the Court to make Selvaid, 188

> they fet the City on fire, whereupon the inhabitants were glad to submit. 70. Diodotus, or Tryphon, took Antiochus the young fon of Balas, brought 1 Maciab, 11, him out of Arabia into Syria, and there crowned him, giving him the fir- Joseph I. 13, name of Theus. Hereupon all the disbanded Soldiers came over to him, fo that Tryphon made open War against Demegrius, and overthrowing him in battel forced him to flie to Selencia. Then fent Antiochus to Ionathan messen- Applatus fegers with presents, and great promises, to draw him to his party, which he but, easily did, because Demetrius had falsified his word, and proved very ingrateful towardshim, who now therefore gathering his men together, reduced the Country beyond lordan as far as Damascus, and overthrew a party which there met him, killing to the number of 3000 men, after which he fent an Mattab, 11, > an end of him, but these Jews so repelled them, as slaying a great number Ptol. Philips.

Ambassage to the Romans, to renew the alliance made with them by Indas, & 13. Tryphon having brought his design thus far on, as to break the power of Demetrius, and having to that end defired the friendship of Fonathan, yet now defired his ruine above all things, as standing in his way for the accomplishment of his intended treason. He resolved to seize upon the Kingdom himself; ding to fee up but fearing lonathan might stand fast to the interest of his young King, and for himself, oppose him, came down to Beth san to see if he could apprehend him. Thither came Ionathan down with 40000 men to meet him, who entertained him with exceeding great respect, and advised him to dismisse all his Ar-all cut off, he himself being kept prisoner. Then Tryphon invaded Indea with a great Army, which to oppose, Simon the brother of Ionathan was chosen General in his flead by the People; fo that he feeing the Isms prepared for refistance, feigned as if Ionathan was onely detained for 100 Talents of Silver which he was in arrear, which if they were fent, together with his two fons for Hostages, he promised he should be released. Simon shough he distrust-Circumvent- ed him, yet left it should be said that he neglected any thing for his brothers venteth and fafety, fent his nephews with the money, which having received, he neverthan.

Then killeth Antiochus his new made King. Seeketh friends in vain.

theless flew Ionathan, and then returned into Syria. 71. He presently after made away young Antiochus, for giving out he Macco. 13. was troubled with the stone, under pretence of cutting him for it, he caused Strabe lin. 16. the Physicians to kill him. Then after he had gotten the Kingdom, he la- Livius lib. 55 boured to confirm himself therein by the approbation of his most powerful Neighbours, fending to Rome an Ambasiador not empty-handed, but the Senate taking the present (a Golden image of Victory of great value) instead of his name, ingraved that of his young King whom he had murdered. For all this he proceeded with great resolution, coyned money with his own effigies and name, having taken that of Tryphon upon him. Simon being my, and with a few go along with him to Ptolemais, which he promifed to put into his hands. He consenting to this, sent all his men back but 1000, which taking along with him, upon their entrance into the Town they were displiged, and accounting his acts to be but as Robberies, sent a Crown of A.M.3863. Gold to make his peace again with Demetrine, who confidering the re- 01.159, ann.3. Gold to make his peace again with Lemetrine, who connidering the refpect the Romans had shewed his Nation, promifed to bury all things in V. C. 612.

Oblivion, and confirmed the immunities formerly granted; so that the yoke Selected, 171. of the Gentiles now being removed, the people began to date their inftru- 5. ments according to the years of their High-Priefts. The year after he had Simonis 2. the Castle of Jerusalem surrendred to him, the Defendants being almost all confumed with famine, which he cleanfing and fortifying anew, together with the Hill of the Temple, dwelt then in lerufalem, and after he had been High-Priest about three years, by a publick instrument of the Priests, Nobles, and 1 Mateab. 14. the people (after a recapitulation of his merits and services to his Nation, amongst which an Ambassage lately sent to Rome, and there well received, was a great inducement) he was made their Prince and High-Priest perpesually, sill God should raise up the true Prophet, and all Ornaments and Preregatives of Majesty were given to him. This being made in brasse, was fastened to the Wall that compassed the sanctuary, in an open place, and a not fearing but if he once were Master of these Provinces, with ease to drive

Fart of the Empire of the Macedonians.

The lews chuse Simon for their Prince.

> the River Indus as far as Euphrates , and done no leffe things than Arfaces & 15. if he would but come up. He being tickled at this Message, made haste thither, Tryphon out of Syria; and being received with great alactity, and strengthned with the Auxiliaries of the Perfians, Battrians, and Elymeans, he overthrew the Parthians in several battels, but at length being circumvented by the cunning of one of their Princes (fent, under colour of treating of peace, Demetrius gaken by the Parthian:

to entrap him) having loft his Army, he fell into their hands, and then being carried for a flughing flock up and down the revolted Countreys, was caft into prison. Arfaces having so soon recovered all, raged not against the Revolters, but carried it towards his people with humility and respect, and not long after fending Demetrius into Hyrcania, there maintained him with royal equipage, and not onely so, but gave him his daughter in marriage, with promite also to restore him to his Kingdom. But whilest Demetrius lived thus in exile, Tryphon's Soldiers being weary of his conditions revol- 10feph. lib.13. ted to Cleopatra his wife, which then lived in Selencia with her Children, cap.12. and now taking it in great difdain that he had matried Rhodoguna the Parthian's daughter, fent to his brother Antiochus (the second son of Demetrim Soter, whose sirname he also obtained from the Fews) offering him marriage, and the Kingdom. He willingly accepting of the offer, took the the proting name of King upon him, fent into Judes to Simon, offering him great priwith him in Alliance, and returning Into Syria presently mare 73. All the Army except a few revolted to Antiochus firnamed Sidetes, or Hunter, so that Tryphon seeing himself thus for saken fled to Dora, a Maritime Town of Phanicia, whither he was straight pursued & blocked up both by Sea

And diporter, and Land; yet got he out on thipboard, and betook himself to Orthofias, another Sea-Town of the same Tract, & afterwards to Apamento his own Countrey-men, where some way or other (for 'tis uncertain how) he was slain. Whilst A. M. 3867. Antiochus lay before Dora, Simon by virtue of their Alliance sent him out of Oliso. ana, 3. Judes a party of 2000 choice men, with filver and gold, and much furniture V.C. 616. for the War; yet he would not receive them, but brake the League, and fend-ing Athenobius to him, complained of his holding Joppe, Gazara, and the Ptol. Physonis Caltle at Jerusalem, his destroying the borders, and having the Government Simonic 6. of divers places of his Kingdom, requiring him either to deliver up the Cities with the Tributes of such places as were without the borders of Judea,

Eeee 2

Copy thereof was faid up in the Treasury, that Simon and his sons might 72. But the Cities all over revolting from Demetrius, who, we faid, Iustin lib. 36. as driven to Seleucia, that he might shake off suspirion of lazinesse, he re loseph, ut suwas driven to Seleucia, that he might shake off sufficion of lazinesse, he reproduction of lazinesse, he re production of lazinesse, he re producti himself. The Macedonians and Greeks not well bearing the pride of their Except, Dienew Masters, the Parthians, sent to him often, with promise to revolt to him dori Siculi.

I Maccab.15.

upon good

belieged.

Astiochue Si-

detes is flain

by the Par-rerms for the

by Astiochus agaiust the Fews, is defeated by John the fon of Simau.

any other, but had recovered his own by right of War; but as for Foppe and Gazara which had done great harm to his people, he offered to pay him 100 Talents, at which the King was so displeased, that following at that time Cendebeus fent Tryphon to Orthofias, he left Cendebaus to overfee the Sea-Coaffs, with order to build up Cedron, whence he might make War upon the Tens. He coming to Iamnia made inroads upon Judaa, and built up that Town according to order, which John the fon of Simon then lying at Gazara understanding. gave notice thereof to his father, who now being decrepit, committed the War to him and his brother Judas. He taking with him 20000 foot, and a party of horse, marched straight down against Cendebaus, and then placing his horse in the midst of the foor, that it might protect, and be protected against the Cavalry of the Enemy, which was exceeding strong, he overthrew him, and putting the whole Army to the rout, some betook themselves into the Fort newly built, and others flying away, he pursued them as far as the Towers of Azonus, which having fer on fire, and flain 2000 men, he retreated fafe into Judea.

or else to pay 500 Talents for the Cities, and the harm he had done, and for the Tributes of the places other 500, upon pain of being profecuted with War. To these things Simon answered, that he held no Towns belonging to

74. This successe of John sufficiently moved Antiochus to punish Simon, but it was done to his hand by one who of all others might leaft have done it. There was one Ptolomy the fon of Abubus, fon-in-law to Simon, and by him fet over the Province of Fericho. He entertaining his father-in-law as he went his Circuit about the Countrey, to take care for the Government thereof , flew him treacheroufly after a feast, together with his two sons Matta-Simon and his this and Judas, when he had governed the people 8 years. His design was, two fons mur- being rich, to obtain the Principality of that Countrey where he lived, and therefore he presently certified Antiochus of his feat, desiring an Army of him, wherewith he might subdue the Ciries of Indaa. He also sent certain cut-throats to murder Iohn, Simons son, wrote to the Collonels of the Army to draw them over to him, and fent others to feize upon Ierufalem and the Antiochus befiegeth Jeru-

dered by his

fon-in-law.

Temple; But Iohn having timely notice of his treachery, prevented his death by that of the Messengers, and was made High-Priest in the room of his father : and here the Author of the first books of Maccabees concludes his work, having therein delivered the history of 40 years. Antiochus taking the op- Josephus Antiochus portunity of Simons death, came into Indea, which wasting round about, he lib. 13. cq. 16. drove up Iohn (firnamed Hyrcanus) into Ierufalem, to which he laid close siege, his Army being divided into seven parts. The besieged, being exceedingly helped from the strength of the Walls, stood out manfully, so that he raifed an hundred Turrets, from which he endeavoured to scale the Walls, and compassed in the Town with a double Trench, that none might escape, but they still defending themselves, sometimes sallied out, and did him harm. Hyrcanus seeing a great and uselesse multitude in the Citie, which consumed the victuals, put out the more infirm out of the Walls, whence being hindred from going any further by the fiege, they wandred about the Walls almost famished, till at the feast of Tabernacles, out of pity, they were again admitted.

75. At this feast of Tabernacles, Hyrcanus fent out to Antiochus to defire a Truce for seven dayes, because of the celebration thereof. He not onely granted this, but fenr in also Bulls with gilded horns, golden, and filver Cups, with all forts of spices, and beasts for sacrifice, and made a feast to the Army, by which the other taking notice of his great humanity (whence he was sirnamed Pins, as also, uncertain for what other reason, Sidetes) withall, confidering that the Sabbasical year being now at an end, and the people being hindred from fowing, a famine was likely to infue, he fent out to him, defiring that the Iews might be suffered to live according to their own Laws. Many about the King advised him utterly to destroy the Citle, to blot out the very name of the Iems from under heaven, at least to dissolve their Laws, and change their course of life, so diverse from, and disagreeable to other rejected this dountel, and approving of the piery of the Jews, commanded But departeth them to deliver up sheir Arms, pull down their walls, pay Tribute for Joppe and other Towns without Judges, and receive a Garrison, upon which condi- A. M. 3870. tions he offered them peace. They yielded to all but the last, because they 01.161, and 3. would not converfe with the Gentiles, yet in Lieu of it chose to give Hostiges V.C. 619. would not converte with the Gentiles, yet in Lieu of it choice to give finitings (among to others Hyrcanus his own brother) and pay 500 Talents, whereof Selevid 178. among to the same was removed, and they were freed from 12. any further incumbrance. Hyrcanus opening the sepulcher of David, who Joh. Hyrcan, 1. had been the richest of Kings, took out thence 3000 Talents, wherewith filling his Coffers, he first listed strangers in his Militia, and entertained Anio-chus and his Army in Icrusalem very plentifully, 76. Antiochus Sidetes in the eighth year of his reign, three years after his Iustin. lib.38. departure from Ierufalem, undertook an expedition against Phrantes the Appianin Sy-Parthian, to fetch back his brother Demetrius fill kept there in free custody, racio & Liwho had twice attempted an escape, but being retaken still, was sent back to vius lib.59. his wife and children, not so much out of any pity or respect of alliance, as because that King having an itching defire of getting Syria also into his power, preferred him to use against his brother, as time and opportunity should ferve. Antiochus with a great (but extraordinarily effeminate) Army marched into Media, where many Eastern Princes met him, with all their hearts giving up themselves and Countreys to him, and cursing of the pride of the Parthians, whereby he got such strength, as overthrowing the Enemy in three feveral battels, he reduced him within the bounds of his own Countrey.

But what he thus suddenly gor, he almost as quickly lost again; for upon the Nations ; but he being moved by a principle of magnanimity and bounty, approach of Winter, quartering his Soldiers abroad in the Countrey, the people were so oppressed, what by the exaction of provisions, and their insolence, that they again revolted to the Parthian, and upon agreement, at one and the same time, set upon them as they were severally disposed of in their quarters. Antibehus hearing this, with that party which lay with him came in to relieve the next to him, and there met with Phraates himself, against whom he fought most courageously, till being forfaken of his men he was slain, or esse killed himself. Phraaies had a little before this, to divert him from Parthia, sent back his brother Demetrius with a Guard of Parthians to seize upon Syria; but now repenting him of that, fent fome to purfue him, and bring him back; but he fearing such a thing, had by his speed prevented it. V. C. 626. Phrases finding a daughter of his, which her Uncle Amiochus had taken along Seleucid 185. with him in his expedition, fell so in Love with her, as he married her out of Prot. Phys. 19. nd.

77. Demetrius then recovered all the Kingdom of Syrin, though not long Justin. ibid. likely to hold it, by reason of that malice he contracted both from Soldiers and People. Hyrcanm the High Priest and chief Magistrate of the Jews Losephus Anti-taking this occasion, leads down an Army to the Cities of Syria, supposing quit. lib. 13. indeed as it was, that he should find them unmanned took Medeba in the cap. 17. fixth moneth, then Samega and Sicima the Metropolis of the Samaritans, and fo to no King after Antiochus Sideres were the Jews Subject, but shook off the yoak of the Syrian Kingdom. The Paribian King intended to make Inflintib. 42. war upon him, but was hindred by the Soyebians, whom having fent for to aid him against Antiochus, because they came something too late, he denied them their pay, for which they harraffed his borders, and he opposing them with the Greeks, whom he had raken before in the War, and cruelly used, was betrayed by them, and so slain with the rest of his Army. Demetrius Identib. 39. being ablent in Ægypt, the Antiochians fifff, then other Cities revolted, not Tofophia ne enduring his pride as they pretended, which he had increased by his durance print. in Parihia, fo that he was forced to return; but they fent to Prolony Physican, deliting him to fend them some one of the posterity of Selencus to reign over them. He fent them a young man, an Egyptian, the fon of one Prosarchus a Merchant. A fable was invented of his being adopted by Antiechus Balde, whereupon his name being Zabinas (or Zabinass) he was

Demetrius ha- firnamed Alexander, and the Syrians being willing to have any rather than ving recover- Demetrius, readily received him. Being come into Syria, it happened that ed the Kingdom, is outed the reliques of Anischus Sidetes were sent at the same time into Syria, which being received very solemnly by all the Cities, he also counterfeited a true of it by mourner, and got himfelf thereby much favour from his new Subjects, not his rebellious Subjects, discovering his tears to be feigned. Not long after he fought with Demetrius and Zatinas a near to Damasem, and overthrew him, who then fled to Cleopaira his wife counterfeit, and is flain at to Pielomais; but being excluded by her and his fons, with a few fervants he went to Tyre, hoping to fave himself there by the religion of the Temple, and was slain by the procurement of his wife, or Zabinas, after his return from Parthia, in the 189 year of the Seleucide, A. M. 2881, the first of the

164. Olympiad. 78. Alexander Zabinas then a counterfeit succeeded Demetrius, by the Appliante the favour of the People, though he left two fons by Cleopaira, Solencus and An- pra & Hochus firnamed Grypus from his hooked nofe. The former of these raking a Josephus. Diadem upon him, at the years end his mother flew him with a dart by her own hands, because he did it without permission, fearing perhaps he might revenge his Fathers death, or being caried out with that height of spirit wherewith the ordered (and ruined) all things. Alexander entered into a Leigue and alliance with Hyrcanus of Judaa. Three of his greatest Cap- Except Dis-

tains revolted from him, and seized upon Laodicea, but he reduced and yet is Siculi, pardoned them, being of a mild and pleasing deportment, whereby he got the affections of all men. But him he alienated from him whom it most concernd him still to oblige, viz. Ptolomy, who of late had fet him up. He despised Piolomy now, growing insolent, as being able to stand on his own legs, which the other taking in great disdain, that a creature whom he had raised out of the dust should so require him, laboured faster to pull him down than ever he had done for his advancement. He reconciled himself to his 6fter Cleopatra, and for that Antiochus whom she had by Demetrius was yet alive (unto whom having bestowed the title of King she ruled all her self) he fent him great aid, and his daughter Tryphana for a wife, which the Peo-Autiochus Gry- ple seeing, began to revolt apace from Alexander. At length they ingaged in ous fon to Dea battel, in which Alexander was overthrown, who then fled to Antioch, metrius dewhere wanting money to pay his Soldiers, he took out of the Temple of Jufeateth and willeth Alex- piter an image of Victory of massie Gold, jesting it out, that Jupiner had ander Balas the lent him Victory. But a little after attempting to remove fecretly and take usurping away Jupiter's image it felf of an infinite weight, he was discovered, and forced to run away by the multitude, after which being oppressed with a grievous Tempest, and forfaken by his followers, he was taken by thieves, and by them brought to Antiochus Grypus was killed (though forne give other accounts of his death) after he had reigned four years.

79. His mother was fore grieved at his Victory, thinking her dignity was lessend by it, having an ambitious desire of reigning her self, with which she was fo far driven, as to offer him a cup of poylon, as he once came in from the exercise, which he having knowledge of beforehand exercise, which he having knowledge of beforehand, refused as it were in civility, defired her to do it her felf, and then urging her to it, at length producing witnesse of her wicked intent, told her there was no way to clear her felf but by drinking that which the had prepared for her fon; fo that being forced to do it, her wickednesse fell upon her own head. Being thus rid of his unnatural mother, he reigned securely eight years, but then Antiochus his half brother, the fon of Antiochus Sidetes (begor on his mother, and from Cyzicus the place where we was brought up under Craterius the Eunuch, called Cyzicenus) began to be his emulator for the Kingdom, whom he then going about to poylon, provoked him to a more speedy attempt of what he had but before defigned. At this time it hapned that Cleopatra the fifter and wife of Piolomy Lathurus, being divorced from him by the means of that notable woman her mother, came into Syria, and maried with this Cyzicenus, and for that the would not feem utterly to come without a dowry, broughtover to him the Army of Cypras, whereby thinking himself sufficient-

Is frengthned against his brother, he joyned battel with him, but was forced to retire unto Anioch. Cleopara continuing here was belieged by Grypus and taken; and then Trypbana his wife and her lifter required her to be delivered into her hands, that the might put her to death as her enemy and emulator, and though he refused it utterly, as being against the custom of Warriours to rage against the weaker Sex, especially when allied in blood so near as she was, and protected by the religion of the Temple to which she fled ; yet she being more hereat enflamed, as judging his answer to proceed from love rather than pity, sent some Soldiers in, who murdered her imbracing the And expelled image of the Goddeffe. This was not left long unrevenged, for Cyzicenus out of Syia. renewing the War, and giving battel again to his brother, now by the turning of the chance of War overthrew him, and taking Tryphana, with her blood appealed the ghost of his wife, and expelling Grypus out of Syria feized on the Kingdom.

80. Antiochus Grypus fled to Afpendium, whence he got the firname of except. Diodo-Aspendius; but the next year returning, ordered the matter so with his bro- is siculi,

The two bro- ther, that the Kingdom being divided, he made him be contented with Cale- Josephus libas. thes reign to- spria. Both of them after this gave up themselves to nothing but idlenesse cap. 17, 4 18. and luxurie, onely preying upon each other as their opportunities ferved them, which difference of theirs mightily conduced to the fetlement of the affairs of the Jaws. Cynicenus getting of Prolomy Lathurus 6000 men, went to relieve Samaria, which Hyrcanus belieged, by walting his territories, but to no purpose. Afterwards it hapned that Lathurus being expelled Agypt by his mother, and she fearing that by the help of Cyzicenus he might recover his Kingdom, she sent great supplies to Grypus, with Selenes for a wife Justin ut prins, (whom the had taken from her fon before his expulsion) to provoke him thereby against his brother, whence succeeded those civil Wars betwixt them, concerning which we have onely the title left unto us in the Epitome of the 68 Book of Livie, who related the flory. Grypus died first, being slain by the treachery of one Haracleon, after he had lived 45 years, and reigned 26, wherof 15 were in conjunction with his brother. He left five fons, Foleph, ut suwhereof Selencus his eldest and successor made War upon his uncle Cyzicenus pra cap. 21. for the Kingdom, and overthrew him in battel, after which the Horse of Cyzicenus ran away with him into his Camp, wherein, when he was about to be taken, he killed himself, after he had reigned eighteen years. Sciencus after this, obtained Antioch, and the Kingdom, but against him arose Antiochus Porphy, apud Great files a- firnamed Eufebes, or Pins, the fon of Cycleenus, who having avoided his maghtheir snares by the help of a certain Courtizan that extremely loved him, went to Aradus, where taking a Diadem, he gathered forces, and in one battel clearly overthrew him. Seleucus then fled into Cilicia, where being received by the Mopfiestians (as they are called) when he began to exact money of them, had fire set to the house wherein he lay, and was burned quick with

81. Two twin brothers of Selencus, Antiochus and Philip, caried down Idem ibid. forces to Mopluestia, which having taken, in revenge for their brothers death, levelled it with the ground; but Antiochus Pius coming presently Josephus ibid. upon them overthrew them in fight. Antiochus taking the River Orontes in his flight was drowned. Philip escaping caried the title of King, and ga- Appian in Sythering again confiderable forces, Arugled hard with Antiochus for the whole viacis. Realm, till such time as Ptolomy Lathurus calling from Cuidus his fourth brother Demetrius, made himself King at Damascus, so that they joyning their forces rogether, they both opposed Amiochus, who though he manfully refifted, yet was put to the worft, and glad at last to flie into Parthia; whence yet returning after two years he re-obtained Syria. Philip being thus deprived of that Kingdom, fell into contest with his other two brothers, Demetrius Eucarus and Antiochus firnamed Dionyfus for the Kingdom of Damafcus, and being driven into Berea, was there besieged by Demetrius. Straton Joseph. Anithe Governour of Berea being Philip's friend calls in Zius the Arabian Cap- quit, lib, 13. tain, and Mithridates Sinax, who coming with a great power overthrew cap. 22, & 23.

Demetrius.

by Antiochus Cyzicenus his half brother and cousin german.

Is emulated

counterfeit,

Demetrins, raised his siege, and taking him prisoner sent him into Parthia, where he was honourably treated till his death, and Philip marching to Antioch again, as it's faid, obrained the Kingdom of Systa, or (as is most probable) part of it. Antiochus Diony [ns the younger brother getting Dama [cus into his hands, made War against the Arabians, and was slain in a battel with their King Aresas, who then was chosen King by the inhabitants of Damascus, and thereby obtained the Kingdom of Calesyria. The histories which onely give us hints of these things are so consounded, as no certain thing concerning the ends of Antiochus Pius or Philip can be affigned; yet this we find, that the Syrians taking occasion at these diffentions and Wars of the Selencide amongst themselves, began to think of forein aides, and cast their minds upon forein Kings. At length they all agreed to make choice of Ti-

Tieranes getteth Syria,

ing it,

granes King of Armenia, who being called in, held Syria for the space of 18 years, and by his dealing with them, made them know they had had no reason to rebel against their natural and rightful Princes. 82. Antiochus Pius being outed thus by Tigranes of all Syria, from Eu- Appian in Spiphrates to the Sea, and also of part of Cilicia, lay hid in another corner of thirdatics it, which neither the Armenian nor Roman as yet touched; and his wife Julin lib to Selene with her two sons reigned (as it's termed) in Phanicia, with some Joseph, lib, 12 part of the lower Syria, till being besieged in Selencia a City of Mesopota- cap. ult. mia, or Prolomais, the was therein taken by Tigranes and killed, for that the endeavoured to recover Syria, as justly the might, out of his hands. For fourteen years Tigranes governed the Country by one Magadates, till fuch time as fiding with his Father in Law Mubridates the Great of Pontus, Applian in Suit against the Romans, and overthrown by them, he was forced to recall him acis.

with his Army. Antiochus the fon of Antiochus Pius, firnamed Afiaticus, taking this opportunity, infinuated himfelf into the Principality, the Syrians Antischus Asia- being not unwilling, out of respect to the dignity of his family; and Lucullus the Roman General (whose work it was to drive Tigranes out of his new acquired possessions) envying him not the inheritance of his Ancestors. Four years he kept it, till such time as Pompey the Great having finished the War against Tigranes, reduced it into the form of a Roman Province, Annian in Mithough he challenged it as his inheritance; But it being easie to deal with him thirdation & as he lifted, who was utterly unarmed, he put it off, by affirming it to be Julinibid.

unreasonable, that after the Romans had been at all the cost and pains to conquer Tigranes, the reward should fall unto another, and with faying that he would not leave it to him, lest he being unable to protect it, it should Is untimely bee rendered obnoxious to the depredations of the Jews and Arabians. fpoiled of it by Pompey. Thus Antiochus having never ill deserved of the Romans, was commanded to content himself within Comagena, whence his posterity never stirred, and the Kingdom of Spria fell. A. M. 3942, the second of the 179 Olympiad, A. M. 3541. fixty one years before the Ara of Christ, in the 250 of the Selencida, the Ol. 179. M.L. 270 after the battel at Isin, after which it fell under the power of V. C. 691.

Alexander the Great, M. Inllus Cicero, and C. Antonius Nepos being

CHAP.

CHAP. VI.

The Ægyptian Kingdom.

with a sure amplife, by the iviacedonians.

From the death of Ptolomy the fon of Lagus, to the death of Cleopatra, and the reducing of Agypt into the form of a Roman Province, containing the space of 254 years.

Prolomy the fon of Lagus had several sons by Eurydice his wife, the daughter of Antipater, and by Berenice, which woman was sent down by Anti-Pausan in Ate pater, onely to accompany her, with whom yet he fell fo in Love, as matrying ticis. her, he paffionately affected her alwayes, and a year or two before his death Juliu lib. 16. made one of her fons, called afterwards Prolomy Philadelphus, his Copartner in the Kingdom, and more than that, served him sometimes as one of his attendants, faying, it was more excellent than a Kingdom to be the fon of a King. His eldelt fon by Eurydice feeing this, thought it was no staying for him in Ægypt, but fled to Selencus, by whom being honourably entertained, with some hopes of being setled in Egypt after his fathers death, he fo badly requited him, as he treacherously slew him, as we before shewed. Philadelphus, after his fathers death made away two of his brothers, the one as conspiring against his life, and rhe other as suspected to raise a Rebelfion in Cyprus. In power and riches he surpassed his father. Being learned himself above the common raite of Princes, he sought to promote knowledge, by rewarding the most eminent and industrious (of which flourished many in his time) and founding that his famous Library at Alexandria, confilting of 200000 Volumes. Demetrius Phalerens that noble Philosopher, and sometime Prince of Athens, being he that was imployed in the Collection, perswaded him to send to Eleanar the High-Priest of the (a) Jews (a) Vide circato desire their Law, and that he might be the casilier induced to send it, res Judgerum by the Counsel of Aristess (who wrote the story) he purchased the liberty of Josephum corby the Countel of Aristean (who wrote the irory) he purchased the inderty or resemble that Apinem cost him more then 460 Talents. He sent also extraordinary rich gifts to libatine Temple; and the High-Priest chusing out 72 men most eminent for log. birth, learning, and experience, dispatched them into Agypt with the Law Josephus Aniq. The Translated by them into Greek. Being nobly entertained, and feasted lib. 12. cap. 2. dipers deposition of the Island Pharot Aistens de 70 right over against Alexandria, which in 72 dayes with admirable agreement Interthey are faid to have finished, after which the King having exceedingly admired the wisdom of the Law-giver, and commanded the book carefully to be kept, dismissed them with great Rewards to themselves, and Presents to him

2. He got the firname of Philadelphus, not for any love shewed to his bro- Pausan, in Atthers (two of whom he put to death) but to his fifter Arfines, whom after an tick. incessions (though Ægyptian) fashion he married, having Children before by another Arsinoe daughter to Lysimachus; by his sister he never had any, the dying before the was delivered. Demerrius Phalereus laboured to diffwade his father from leaving him his successor, and counselled him to beflow the Kingdom on some of Eurydice's sons, for which he was now cast out of favour, and died by the biring of an Asp, which he put to his hand. He had a brother by his mothers side named Magus, whose father Lacrius in vita was one Philip a Macedonian, but of base Original. Him his mother had Domenii. procured to be made Governour of Cyrene, the Inhabitants of which he Piulan, ibid, now raised, and caused them to revolt from him, and marched with an Army towards Ægypt; and Ptolomy securing all the passages, went out to encounter him. But news coming in the way that the Marmarida, a people of the a Conftella-

Ffff

fors.

graple with both, made a Truce with him for ten years. Whilest he was abroad in Afia, his wife Berenice, daughter to his Uncle Magas, and hetrothed to him, as we faid before, vowed to confectate her hair to the gods.

in case he returned safe, and accordingly cutting it off, laid it up in a certain Chapel, whereupon Conon the Mathematician, who flourished at this time, out of flattery to them both, feigned it to be taken up into heaven, and invented that constellation which yet is known by the name of it. In his time a Phanix is reported the third time after the dayes of Sefoftris, and the next afterwards in the reign of Tiberius; Paulus Fabins, and L. Vitellius being nesse, thereby neglecting his affairs, whence he obtained the name of Try-whereas he had opportunity enough after the battel to have outed his Enemy of Syria, yet being overjoyed that he had recovered Calefyria onely, he fent Sofibius to confirm the peace. In his return out of Syria he went to Terusalem, and would needs see the inward holy places of the Temple, but was smitten so with a blind horror, that he fell, and could scarcely be recovered to himself, but departing home raged against the Jews at Alexandria.

Then with great earnestnesse returning to his a little intermitted jollities

he doted so upon Agaihoclea his Concubine, that he killed his fifter and wife Eurydice, and forgetting all credit and Majesty, spent the nights in fil-thinesse, and the dayes in feasing. These things at first privately acted within the Court Walls, presently shamed not at the publick view; the impu-

Magas his brother obtaineth Cy-

Lybian Nomades had rebelled, Magas retreated in all halte back to Cyrene. and Ptolomy then intending to follow him, was hindred by the Galls in his Army, whom he having hired amongst others, he found to have plotted to feize upon Egypt: but he brought them all to the number of 4000 through the Nile to a defert Island, where with famine, and other wayes, they were made away. Magas after this having married Apames the daughter of Antiochus Sour, perswaded him to break the League betwixt him and his brother, and invade Egypt, which he prepared to do; but Ptolomy fent feveral parties abroad into Seria, and found him to much work at home, that he could have no time to look abroad, and Magas before his death having a Julin libas defire to be friends with his brother, betrothed his daughter to his fon. Betwixt this Ptolomy, and the next Antiochus firnamed Theos were continual Wars, till both being weary thereof entered into an Alliance, Prolomy giving him in marriage his daughter Beremce, which proved but an occasion of greater trouble, and the destruction of the Bride, though he lived not to see it. For he, notwithstanding all his learning, gave himself up to luxury, and fondly dreaming he should live alwayes, and that by him alone was found out immortality, presently died, after he had reigned 38 years alone, and one Atherne is (with some odd moneths) rogether with his father, A. M. 3758. and the 2d of 12. cap. 17. the 133th Olympiad. 2. Prolomy his fon by Arfinos, the daughter of Lysimachus, succeeded him Justin libre in the 16th year of Antiochus Theos, and was firnamed Energetes. As foon as he came to the Kingdom, he had work enough made him in Syria; for there Antiochus, who had put away his former wife (upon the marriage of Appianins). Berenice his sister) now overcome with Love, took her, and her Children, viacin. again into his Court, whereupon the fearing yet his ficklenesse, and another disgrace, to prevent it, procured him to be poysoned, and conveyed his King- Hieronmia dom to Seleucus Callinicus her eldest fon. Boronice the committed to two Daniel. of the Chief of Antioch to be made away, but the Lady, when the heard that fome were fenr to kill her, shut up her self in Daphna, where being befieged, the Cities of Asia, moved with the remembrance of the Dignity of her fagetes his Wars mily, fent her aid, and Ptolomy her brother marched in all hafte possible to dewith Antiochus liver her, but ere she could be relieved she was circumvented by those that Theos. with an Oath promised her security, and slain together with her young son. Out of difdain at this unworthy act the Cities revolted to Ptolomy, who entring Syria killed Laodica, passed to Babylon, and got almost all Asia into Tosebus const.

his hands, at which time he visited Jerusalem also, where he offered many apion libs. facrifices of praise to God, and dedicated gifts suitable to so great a victory. The Kingdom of Syria had become a Province to that of Egypt, in all probability at this time, had he not been recalled by domestick croubles, which being very urgent, he left Cilicia to the Governance of Amiochus his great favourite, to Xanthippus another of his Captains the Provinces beyond Euphrases, and so plundring Selencus his Kingdom of 40000 Talents of filver, he carried down also many costly Vessels and Images of Idols to the number of 2500. amongst which were those which Cambyses had after his overthrow of Amasis, and Psammiticus, conveyed out of Egypt: And therefore the Egyptians, because after so many years he had restored to them their gods, honoured him with the firname of Euergetes.

4. Seleucus provided a Fleet for the recovery of the places revolted, but Justin ut politic. before he could come to use it, lost it all by a Tempest, which yet proved the greatest gain; for the Cities out of commiseration of his estate, and as if he had already sufficiently smarted for his paricide, returned again to their obedience. Being exceedingly encouraged, and animated herewith (as richer by his losse) he then made War upon Prolomy; but as if he had been born for a laughing flock to forcune, and not recovered the Kingdom for himfelf, he was overthrown again in battel, and as destitute of followers, as after the shipwrack, fled to Antioch, when applying a remedy worse than the disease, he sent to his brother Amiochas (from his ravenous disposition sirnamed Hierax) for aid; and so Ptolomy fearing himself not to be able to dence of the Strumpet containing it felf in no bounds, being increased by the favour of her brother Agathocles, one of as filthy a life as her felf, and the Conjunction of her mother Euanthe, who spent high, and presumed much on the score of her Children's great grace with the King. Henceforth these women not contenting themselves with the King, possessed the Kingdom alfo, and shamed not to appear in publick in great equipage to be reverenced. As for Agathocles, he reigned, and not Ptolomy, by the direction and advice of his two Affiftants, Mother and Sifter, disposing of Offices and Commands in the Army at his pleafure.

SOOK III!

6. Yet, had Prolomy the strange fortune to overcome all difficul- Polybinsibid cies he met with. Cleamenes the Spartan entertained, as we faid , lovingly & Plutarch, in by his father, with promise to endeavour his restitution, now finding things to Cleomen. make for it at home, by the death of Antigonus, and the Conjunction of the

Ætolians with them of Sparta against the Achaens, earnestly defired to be dispatched away; but he minding nothing but his pleasures, and buried in fortishinesse, regarded him not at all. Sofibius indeed considered of the Ffff 2

after them of Amasis to have flown (being a bird facred to the Sun) accompanied with a great number of other birds, admiring her new face, to the Citie Heliopolis, as Tacitus tells us, who reports that the same thing hapned Annal, lib.6.

Confuls. To this Ptolomy fled Cleomenes the King of Sparca after his overthrow received from Antigonus Doson of Macedonia, and the Achaans, Polyb. lib. s. de who honorably receiving him, and prizing him very much for his worth, was Plutarch in vimuch ashamed that he had suffered such a man to be deseated, and promised ta cleomen. to re-establish him; but he died before he could bring it about, after he had reigned 24 years, in the 139th Olympiad, within which Polybius * observes both Antigonus Doson, and Selencus Cerannus, King of Ma- + Substitute cedonia, to have left the World; and their Kingdoms to their Successible

5. His fon fucceeded him, being firnamed Philopater, ironically, if we believe Tultin, who out of Trogus accuseth him of making away both father Lib.29.6 30.

and mother. Certainly if we look at his general carriage and disposition, he was likely enough to do it, giving up himself to all luxury and effeminate-phon. Finding his brother Magas by his mothers means to be very great with A. M. 3781. the Army, he made them both away by the means of Sosibins, who was his 01,139, and, 2, greatest Counsellour, and manager of his publick businesse. His lazinesse, V. C. 532.

and neglect, encouraged Antiochus the Great to make War upon him for Ca- Antioch. M.2. lesyria, in which, though he got the better, yet can it not be ascribed to any Polybius lib.s. thing of his, he thinking of nothing leffe than preparation for refiftance, and thing, & called his friends to advise about it; but upon mature deliberation concluded it not wisdom to dismiss him provided of men and arms, lest finding all clear abroad, his Enemies being now dead, or quier, he, who knew fufficiently the state and condition of Egypt under such a Prince, might attempt somecleaments King thing rather beneficial for himself, than safe for it. Hereupon its resolved he shall be retained still, and after some time an occasion was found to confine him. For one Nicagoras a Me fenian, who ought him an injury, coming to Town, he not at all confidering to whom he spake, jeered the King to him for his filthy manner of life; which he being glad of, as having an opportunity against him, acquainted Sofibius with his words, and they two plot together that Nicagoras at his departure should leave a Letter directed to the other, wherein he should accuse Cleomenes of an intention to make sirs in Egypt, except he were fent away according to the promise of Energetes. This being laid to his charge by Sosibins, and soundly aggravated to the King, he was secured in free custody, having a large house, but kept with a Guard , affigned to him; whereupon growing desperate, one day when Piolomy was gone out of Town, he made his Keepers drunk, and with his followers brake out into the streets, and called the people to liberty. But none stirring, being all assonished at the greatnesse of the Enterprize, they made for the Castle, which finding to be strongly defended, he and all with him, after a Laconian fashion, as Polybins termethit, killed themselves. This was the end of this famous man, who being indued with a fingular dexterity and promptnesse of wit, had a genious suitable to great and weighty matters, and was fitted by gifts of nature as well as experiences, for the Offices either of a great Commander, or a Prince. 7. Though Cleomenes his fodain and unexpected attempt made no fuch impression upon the City, as that any insurrections ensued thereupon; (and indeed the luxurie of the Court had infected it and the whole Land with the same distemper) yet the minds of the People being something scowred by the Wars with Antiochus from this rust, and elevated upon their successe against him, after the battel at Raphia, and the recovery of Calefyria, they be- Polith at Disk.

gan to flight their lawful King, and then arose to such an height, as they clearly revolted, intending to fet up against him a Captain of their own making, which shortly after they did, and waged War with him; though in what manner, or with what end, we know not, further than thus, that, as it feemeth, he had the better of it, for he retained his dignity and power. About this time 60000 Jems are said to have been slain in Legpt, who seeing they Eusteins in amounted to fuch a number, we may have ground enough to think that they they amounted to fuch a number, we may have ground enough to think that they 3. Macch. took part with the People, and that his cruelty towards them enfued as a re- ufferius dank venge hereupon, though others there be that judge the contrary, and deliver Vet. Tell. 14. it as a thing not to be doubted of. This is certain, that about this time he $10. grievously persecuted those of that Nation which lived at Alexandria, abufing them first with libels, and seeking to withdraw them from their Religion. Those that refused to turn, were either put to death, or being deprived of all dignity and liberty, were branded with the image of an Ivy leaf as the badge of The Jews per- Bacchin; and because they were suspected to withdraw others from their obedience to the King, all the Fews throughout the Land were in forty dayes space gathered together, to be destroyed by 500 Elephants, to which was gi- A. M. 3189 ven wine mingled with much frankincence to inrage them. But in the morn- Ol. 141.4.1 ing when Polomy should have come out to the fight, a sluggish fit is said to have V. c. 538. decained him until dinner, and on the next day fuch a forgetfulness to have Prof. Philips. feized on him, as he thought them mad which mentioned the thing to him; and then on the third, when the beafts were ready to be let loofe, two terrible Angels appeared, which struck King and People with extraordinary horror, and drove the Elephants upon those who came to be spectators of the cruelty. Hereupon enfued fuch a change of the Kings mind, as he dismissed the Jews, after he had feasted them seven dayes, and giving them leave to kill the Apostates, acknowledged God to be their protector. At length he died (leaving a childe of five years old, and begotten of his fifter, behind him) after he had reigned about eighteen years, A. M. 3801, in the first of the 144 Olympiad. 8. His fon a child of five years succeeded him, being declared King by Justin lib. 30 him before his death, in the 20 year of Antiochus the Great, King of Syria, and was firnamed afterwards Epiphanes. The death of Philopator was for a Polyb. lib. 15 long time kept close, by Agaihocles and his party, till his mother and fifter had rifled the Court, and he had found our such a way as he thought most effectual for the establishmens of himsels in that power he already enjoyed. His fon Ptolo- Then brought he out the King to the Macedonians, and with great expression His for Ptolomy Epiphanes ons of forrow for the death of his Father, tells them the childe was by him achild of five delivered into the arms of Agathoclea his fifter, inveighs bitterly against one year succeed. Thepolemus (who being a true Patriot was an eye-fore to him) as if he inten-the former outrages committed by him and his, being more freshly renewed by some other attempts of cruelty whilst things still hung in this condition, fo inraged the multitude, that from all the quarters of the City flocking to the Courr, they would not be fatisfied, till having the young King first delivered to them, they broke open the dores, and getting him, his lifter, mo- v. c. 550. ther, and other of his creatures into their hands, they put them to death, Ant. Mag. 20. mangling their bodies afterwards; it being natural to that People to be cruel if once in choler. After this, such as had an hand in the murder of Euridice the Queen were knocked in the head by her women. The infamy of the Nation being thus in some measure expiated by the slaughter of these misereants, Aristomenes an Acarnanian was made Protector of the King, his Realms and Dominions, who though for his own interest he beforetime temporized with Againocles, yet now managed the affaires of his Prince with much honesty and wisdom. And indeed such there was need he should be at this time, when the King, being obnoxious by reason of his years to injury and wrong, was fruck at by two the greatest Princes then living, viz. Antiochus King of Sy-Asiathus and ria, and Philip King of Macedonia, who pretending fair things to his Faded to feize upon the Kingdom, labouring to impose upon the belief of the Soldiers, and secure himself by their strength; but no man gave any credit to whatever he faid, fo intirely was he hated by all. The remembrance of Philip gape af-ther, and nothing towards him but kindnesse, now sought to devour him, and make a prey of his Kingdom; Philip by laying hold upon Ægypt and Caria; and Antiochus on Calefyria and Phanicia. The onely remedy was to Iden lib. 3. fend to Rome to complain, and defire aid; and an Ambassage was quickly dispatched away for that purpose, 9. The Ambassage was no whit displeasing to the Romans, who sought an occasion against Philip, for his entering into alliance with Hannibal, and Justin lib. 30, were feldom backward to medle in the affaires of other Nations, especially now 31. feating none of them after the overthrow of the Caribaginians. Ambasiadors were fent then to the Kings, to require them to abstain from Egypt, and M.Le. pidus thither to be Governor and Protector of the young King, whose Father, at his death, left him to the tuition of the People of Rome; over and above that it was now defired of his friends. But ere the Ambassadors could reach to him, Amiochus had got Phomicia, and other Cities belonging to Ptolong into his power, and then despiting their errand, went on in his conquests. Josephus Anig. Scops the Etolian a year or two after fent into Calefria with a great Ar- 16, 12.c. 3. my, reduced many Ciries thereof, with Judan, to Ptolomie's obedience, & Hieronymus but again quickly lost all, being overthrown by Aniios bus at the head of the River Jordan near to Panea, whence he fled to Tyre, where the King befieged him with 10000 men; and though Aropus and Menocles, two famous Captains were fent out of Ægypt to relieve him, yet was he forced for want of provision to yield the Town, and march thence without his Arms. Antiochus then in pursue of this Victory, besides what he did in Calesgria, Withdrew divers places in Cilicia and Caria from Peolomy, concerning whom also a rumour being spread that he was dead, he made halks to seize upon Cyprin. What Ciries he had got in Afia, the Remans diversaimes by Ambassadors demanded to be put into their hands, which being refuted by him, this, en Pistorny.

Book III

with his ambition, and other things, ministred occasion of a Warre betwixt them (as is shewed before) and that turned to the commodity of Prolony. For he being unwilling to have any Enemies at his back, fought to enter into affinity with several Kings; and amongst the rest gave to him in mariage his daughter Cleopatra, and with her in dowy all Calefyria and Judea; having this also in his eye, by means of her to get some footing in Egypt, though he his damber was miltaken. For Prolomy his Officers understanding his cunning well enough, behaved themselves more warily; and Cleopatra together with the man maried his interest, and acted accordingly. 10. Scopas the Atolian, Ptolomie his General in Calefyria, returning to Alexandria after this overthrow, fell into discontent, and thence to plot a- Poly, lib, 17. gainst the King and State. Yet though he had many Soldiers at his command, had he no heart to stir, and though having a sufficient opportunity in the minority of the King, he still delayed to execute his designs, till he was prevented. For Arsstomenes having discovered what he was about, just when he was plotting with his affociates, fent for him to the Council, whither being constrained to come, he was accused by the King first now fitting in Coun-reward.

The Ægyptian Kingdom

Atolian plot - cil, then by Polycrates the Governour of Cyprus, and lastly by Aristomenes, who laboured to prove him guilty of what was alleged, for that he was the King and found in consultation with his friends, and refused to come unto the King when fent for; and he confirmed the charge from the testimony of divers eminent Gracians, and the Ambassadors of the Atolians, who were then fent about a Peace. His answers were no whit fatisfactory; so that being condemned not onely by all the Council, but such forein ministers as were present, and being secured that night, was together with his complices the next day taken away by poyfon, being a man fo extraordinarily covetous above all others, that having broke down the walls (as Polybins terms it) of the Kingdom, he had exhausted it with rapines. With him fell Dicearchus one of his companions, who being tortured to death, thereby (as the Historian tells us) made satisfaction to all Greece, against which he was made Admiral of the Fleet by Philip of Macedonia, when he wickedly fer upon the Islands Cyclades, and also to the gods, into whom as well as men he thought to strike a terror, for casting anchor in the Haven, he there erected two altars, one to Impiery, and another to Iniquity, on which he facrifized to them as gods. This conspiracy being thus suppressed, such Atolians as would, had leave to depart with all they had, and then the Country betook themfelves to prepare for the folemnity, conftantly observed when any one was all Manual College Wing persons described the control of the contro faluted King, termed Anacleteria; for though he was as yet fomething too V.C. 518, young, yet they thought that when it was known he was his own Mafter, and Ant. Mag. 18. at his own disposal, his Kingdom would be more quier, and his affairs be Prolom Est-

11. He caried himself exceedingly well for some time, and with great Except Diadcommendation, but afterwards was undone by flatterers, and so far corrup- vi situiti. ted, as he poyfoned Aristomenes, whom he had before constantly observed as a Father, and who had deserved well of him and the Commonwealth. After this he degenerated more and more, whence he contracted such hatred of his Subjects, as he well nigh had lost his Kingdom thereby. Towards his later end, having some high designs in his head, he sent Demetrius an Ambassador to the Achaems, to renew friendship and alliance with them, who gladly accepting of his offer, fent back to him Lycortas Father to Polybius the

Ptolemy contrafteth amity with the Achaans,

Historian, Theodoridas and Rhofineles to confirm it by oath on their part, and to receive the like assurance from him, which they obtained with a grear present of money and arms. Some fix years after he fent other Ambassadors to them, now having well nigh fallen out with the Romans, offering them ten thips of fifty oares, fufficiently manned and furnished for War, which as of concernment, amounting almost to ten Talents, they accepted of most gladly, and dispatched back to him Lycortas again with Polybins his son (though he was too young by the Laws for fuch an employment) with Araum the fon of famous Araus the Sicyonian, to give him thanks for the former present.

and fetch the ships into Peloponne fus; but he was dead ere they could get out of their own Country. For plotting now against Sciencus Philopator, who had succeeded Antiochus his Father in the Kingdom of Syria, and preparing an Army against him, when one of his Captains asked him where he would Hieronym, in get money sufficient for such an enterprize, he answered, that his friends Danel, were riches to him, which being told abroad amongst the People, his Officers fearing he would fleece them to supply himself, took him away by poylon, Is poyfoned. after he had lived 27 years, and reigned 24 thereof. A. M. 3825, and the first of the 1 50 Olympiad.

12. He left two fons and one daughter, all very young, of which the eldest fon succeeded him, being firnamed Philometer, in the eighth year of Selenens Philopasor King of Syria. After his Anacleteria, his mother Cleo- Idem. ibid. pairs the daughter of Antiochus the Great being lately dead, through the perswassion of Eulains the Eunuch, and Lenaus his principal Counsellours,

Prepareth for he begin to calt his thoughts upon Calefyria, which being given to his mother as a portion, was unjustly kept from him as he conceived, by his uncle Antiochns Epiphanes, who now had succeeded his elder brother in the Kingdom of Syria. Antiochus hearing of their preparations for the War at Alexadria, came down into Egypt to prevent them, and overthrew the King several

But his uncle times as harh been faid, and got the whole Country, except that City, into his Polyh Legat. out in unit.

Anischus Epi- power; after which Piolomy deliberating with Comanus and Cineas what Was 81, 82. have preven to be done, it was refolved, that a Council of the most expert Captains should be erected; by the advice whereof all things should be managed. The setting in this first resolve of this Council was, that such Gracian Ambassadors as were prefent, should be sent to Antiochus about an agreement, with whom Ptolomy joyned of his own two others. The first day after their arrival, they were enterrained very nobly, and on the next had audience, wherein they laid all the blame upon Eulains the Eunuch, and urging the youth and kindred of the King to him, laboured to pacifie him. He after he had affented to them in these things, and spoken more to the same purpose, laboured with much earnestnesse to demonstrate, that Calesyria belonged to the Crown of Syria, alleging it to have belonged to Antigonus the first founder of that Kingdom and produced the conveiances of it to Seleneus after the death of the other, from the Macedonian Kings. Moreover calling to their remembrance, that Amiochus his Father Ind lately obtained it again by right of conquest, he flarly denied that ever he passed it over as a portion with his daughter, to the late King of Egypt, and to having discoursed on this subject to the satisfaction of all his hearers, he then departed to Naucratis, where friendly treating the Inhabitants, and giving a largefle to fuch Greek as dwelt there, he thence departed for Alexandria, deferring to give any answer to those that had been fent to him, till such time as Arifides and Thoris were returned, saying, he would have all the publick ministers of Greece to be conscious to, and witneffes of, all his intentions.

13. But no fatisfactory answer (if any) was given, or any thing done for Porphy, in Philometer by Antiochus, fo that being thus outed of his Kingdom after 12 Greeis Eufeb. years reign, and giving up himself for all that to nothing but sluggishnesse and luxurie, the Alexandrians took upon them to make his younger brother King, firnaming him Energetes, (though the badnesse of his minners made them afterwards change it into Cacergotos) being also called Phy Con from his Athenauslibia. extraordinary fat paunch. Philometer was forced at length to betake him- cap 17. felf to the Alexandrians too, who receiving him, made him parcaker with thing physical the Mickagarian too, who receiving him, made him partaker with made his brother in the Kingdom, but shortly after again expelled him; which thing Antiochus made use of, and under pretence of restoring him continued the War, and overthrowing young Ptolomy in a Sea-fight, befieged Alexaninia; Polyb Legat. but seeing that to be to no purpose, arose and departed into Syria, leaving 83, & 84. Philometer at Memphis, to whom he restored all Egypt, except Pelusium, which he kept as the key of the Country in his own hands, not doubting but when one of the brothers had ruined the other, to comes, and with eafe enough devoure the Conquerour. But though his two Nephews were other- Living 1, 45.

wife fortish enough, yet in this they shewed prudence, to disappoint him, for A.M. 384-2 the elder ferioully considering how little he ought to trust him, fent to Cleo- 01.153, ann. r. the elder ferioully confidering now little ne origin to that his fifter, who feconding him to her brother, both by advice and en-The two bro- treaty, procured a peace to be made with confent of both their friends, the Piol. Philomas. thers agree, and are faved which troubled them, by reason of the War as well when they were at liberty harmlesse from as besieged. This drew off the Vizard from Antiochus, who, whereas he by the Romans, ought to have rejoyced, if he really intended the refliction of Philometor, fretted exceedingly hereat, and nothing would ferve him, but needs he must come down again into Egypt, and had laid siege to Alexandria the fecond time, had not the Roman Ambassadors terrified him from his purCHAP. VI.

Temple in E-

pose (as we shewed in its more proper place) and forced him to quit both Egypt and Cyprus. 14. The Roman Ambassadors took some pains by their Authority to Idem ibid. make them two friends, not being throughly reconciled before, and so they continued for fix years peaceably together. But then differences betwirt them Porphysius it arose so high, that the Senate at Rome wrote to their Ambassadors, sent into prins. Syria after the death of Antiochus Epiphanes, by all means to reconcile them, of which mediation we yet hear of no fruit at all, for presently the polybins Lux. younger expelled his elder brother. Philometor being thus spoyled of his 107. Kingdom, with a very few attendants, and in a pitifull habit, came to Rome Valuis Mar, for help, making his Inn the house of an Alexandrian Painter; which Like, (4). when the Senate understood, they sent for him, and made as formal an ex- Exemp. cuse as possible, that they had neither sent a Quastor to meet him (after the fashion of the receiving persons of his quality) nor entertained him at the publick charge, which hapned not by any neglect on their part, but by reafon of his sudden and secret arrival. Then was he conducted from the Court to the publick House of entertainment, and defired, that laying off his unseemly habit, he would move for audience, and a Qaestor was appointed to make him presents every day. At length, according to his desire, Canuceius and Quin- Polybins Lys. tus were fent back with him to Alexandria, who restored him to the King- 112. dom, and made the two brothers affent to a division of it, whereby Philometor was to hold Egype and Cyprus, and Energetes poffeffe Cyrene, the Covenant being most solemnly confirmed. But Euergetes not being at all satisfied not his confent freely at all, but out of necessity of yielding to the times; plainting, they wherefore he defired of the Senate that Cyprus might be also adjudged to allo give him him, with the addition of which his part would yet be far inferiour to his brothers. Menethyllus being sent after him by Philometor, replied, that he ought not onely Cyrene, but his life also to his brother, so great hatred had he contracted from their subjects, that with the wonder of all, and beyond his hopes was that Kingdom bestowed on him, and urged the agreement most religiously made and confirmed, with faith given on both sides. But Ptolomy denying stiffy all this, the Senate, for that it seemed to them that the parting of the Kingdom was not yet fully concluded, and especially thinking it to be for their interest that the division should be equal, assented to his request, and ordered T. Torquaius, and Cn. Merula to go with him, and put Cyprus into his hands. For the Romans understanding now fully the strength of Egypt, and confidering what it might afpire to if united, wisely made use of this difference, and gratified the two brothers one after the other in their ambitious (but imprudent) desires. ious (but imprudent) defires.

Philometor being expelled by his rebellious brother is restored by in his part, hasted to Rome to reverse the agreement, alleging that he gave the Romans, & Energetes or relief.

15. Departing out of Italy into Greece, he there hired a ftrong band of 111,16.17. men, intending to fayl with them for Cyprus; but the Roman Commissioners calling to mind the Decree of the Senate, which was, that they should reduce him without force, perswaded him again to dismisse them, and passe over to Cyrene, and they in the mean time going to Alexandria, would endeavour to perswade his brother to comply with the Senate, and bringing him along with them meet him in the Confines of both Kingdoms. He accordingly went to Crese, where hiring 9000 Soldiers, he passed over to Libyna, where he expected to hear from Alexandria; but the Romans there treating with his brother about a reconciliation, and the yielding of Cyprus up to him, fomething he affented to , and put off others, on purpose drawing out the time in length. Fourty dayes with extraordinary entertainment he detained them at Alexandria, during which time news came to Energe es that the Cyremans had revolted from him, who understanding well the mind of his brother from his present carriage, and seeing nothing suitable to royalty in Euergetes, acting, all things after a Tyrannical manner, could not bring themfelves to fubmit any longer to his Government. Hearing this, he fayled to Catabathmus, thence to make for Cyrene, in which place he found the Straights kept against him, but sending some about to come upon the Defendants on their backs, set upon them also himself, and so cleared the passage, but coming to Cyrene, and ingaging with the Natives, was worsted by them. Whether he recruited himself again, and recovered his Sovereignty here or no, we have nothing from History to speak expresly; but not long after he was in a capacity to attempt Cyprus (being encouraged by the Senates renouncing their friendship with his brother upon his account) where he was also overthrown by his brother, and then befieged, and taken in the Citie Lapithus. Yet did Philometer spare him, what for his innate elemency and brotherly affection, and for fear of the Romans; and not onely fo, but made a Covenant with him when Conquered, wherein he restored him Creene, and for Cyprus certain Cities with a quantity of Corn yearly, and promited him his daughter in marriage, worse than this being not accounted incest in that Countrey.

16. Not long did they accord, for Euergeies, some two or three years af- Polyb. Legat, ter, being incouraged by his former successe, made another journey to Rome, 132. where in the Senate he made another loud complaint against his brother, accuting him of plotting against his life, for a witnesse of which design he shewed skars upon his body, and aggravating the thing with all his might, endeavoured to move the minds of all to compassion. Two Ambassadors were present from Philometor to answer to whatsoever he should accuse him of, but all mens cars were fo filled with the others accusation, that no place would be found for their defence; fo that they were instantly commanded to be gone, and five Commissioners were appointed (furnished all with Gallies) to go, and bring him into possession of Cyprus; their Associates alfo, both in Greece and Afia, being written to, and leave given to as many as would to affift him in the recovery of it. What was done as to the re- folyour Ancovery of it, through defect of History, we are ignorant, though some grounds tiquit, lib.13.

we have to think he did not obtain the Island, and no more do we hear of cap.6. Ous the Jew him till his brothers death. In the dayes of this Philometor, Onias the fon of Onias the third, High-Priest of the Jews, seeing the Priesthood to be alienated from his family into that of the Hasmoneans, living in Egypt, and having well deserved of the King in his Wars, that he might eternize his memory, petitioned him for leave to build a Temple in the Province of Heliopolis, after the fashion of that at Ferufalem, fignifying that thereby would be better provided for the quiet of his Kingdom, the Tems badly agreeing be better provided for the quiet writery of their places of worthip in that chap 19. Countrey, and misapplying the Prophecy of Isaiah, concerning the spiritual A.M. 3853. Priesthood, and reign of Christ, to this his ambitions and unlawfull design. 01.157, and 1. His Petition was granted, and in that Countrey built he a Temple refembling V. C. 602. the true, and lawfull one, 180 furlongs diffant from Memphis; onely he put Demet. Soteris? the true, and lawrunt one, 150 minong, among them. The partition of the partition of the partition of the profession of the profession of the partition of the profession of the partition of the light about like to the Sun-beams.

17. In the time of this Philometer, the Jews and Samaritans inhabiting Josephus ibid. Alexandria fell out about their way of Worship, they contending earnessly Diffention be- that the Temple of Jerusalem , those that that at Gerizim was founded most wint the Jews according to the prescript of Moses, and so earnest was the dispute, that and samari- both parties appealed to him and his Council for a decision of the controversie, who being to judge according to evidence produced out of the Law, was to put to death those pleaders which could not make good their cause. For the Tews appeared Andronicus the fon of Meffalani, for the Samaritans Sabbens, and Theodofins, who being heard by Prolomy in a full Affembly, all were fo well fatisfied in the proofs brought by Andronicus, as the King gave fentence on his fide, and condemned Sabbam and Theodosius. Philometer Justinlihas. about this time was deeply ingaged in the affairs of Syria; for, Demetrius Soler having molefled him much with War, together with Aitalus King of Asia, and Ariarashes of Cappadocia, all these agreed to suborn a young man of base condition, who counterfeiting himself the son of Antiochus Epiphanes, spoiled Demetrius both of his Kingdom and life. This Alexander (as he is called) being especially beholden to Piolomy for this change of his condition, defired of him his daughter in marriage; which he readily agreed 1 Maccab, 10. to , and brought her (named Cleopatra) to him to Ptolemais , wherethe & II. nuptials were folemnized with great state. Afterwards Alexander giving up himself to cruelty and luxury, Demerrins, the son of Demetrins Soier, Joseph, Asia, having hired Soldiers in Crete, attempted the recovery of his fathers Kingdom. 116.13. 149.8. Ptolomy with great forces both by Land and Sea, came then into Syria, under pretence of helping his fon-in-law; but getting a great part of the Countrey into his hands, as far as the River Oromes , and the Citie Seleucia , he had other intentions, having conceived great prejudice in his mind against Alexander, the special occasion of which was, that whereas one Ammonius, a great Officer of his had conspired against his life at Ptolemais, he refused to ing against 4- give him up to him upon his demand. Wherefore, though he went to Anlexander King tioch, and there fet two Diadems on his head, the one for Syria, and the of Syria, whom other for Egypt, yet perswaded he the Antiochians to receive Demetrins for he had former- their King, and taking away his daughter from Alexander, gave her to him; Alexander was overthrown, after which he fled into Arabia (as we faid) and there was made away. But in the fight it hapned that his Horse being af- A, M, 3819. frighted at the noise of an Elephant, threw him, which the Enemies per-0.1.188.4843, ceiving came upon him, and gave him such a wound in his head, that for V. C. 600. four dayes he lay sencelesse, and though coming to himself, on the next, he was mightily pleased at the fight of the head of Alexander Balas, which was sent him; yet proved it not such a Cordial, but the third day after, as his Physicians were busie in dreffing his own he died, after he had reigned 34 years, libse.

Gggg

Livius Ent.

A. M. 2850, in the third of the 158 Olympiad. 18. After his death the order of succession was first changed in this King- Julia lik 38. dom. For whereas hitherto the fon had continually followed his father, and Valorius Mir. now Cleopatra his wife with the help of the Princes, endeavoured to have it so, lib. 9. (2). I. in his fon and hers ; yet his brother Euergetes the fecond, or Phylon, Exter, Exten, 6 then reigning in Cyrene, withstood her purpose, and forced her, for to put an end to the controversie, to marry him. Coming to Alexandria, he first caused the favourers of the Child to be slain, and then the boy himself in the arms of his mother on their Wedding day, and amidst the solemnities; according to which beginning he proceeded, being nothing milder towards those that had sent for him. For, giving liberty to the outlandish Soldiers to kill, and rifle, he filled all places with flaughters; many being ac- Except. Diecused, as though they had plotted against him, were made away with cruel don's kulk.

torments, others under some pretence or other banished, and their goods confiscate. Having a son born of this his fister, he named him Memphisis, after the place of his birth, but whilest he was keeping his birth-day, that he might also feed his cruel humour, he put to death divers Cyrenzans, who brought him into Egypt, for taxing him somewhat liberally for his too much familiarity with Irene his Concubine. As his cruelty, fo also his lust knew no bounds; for ravishing first his wives daughter, and his own Niece, both by Father and Mother, he put away his wife and married her; whereat Val. Max. 1814 the Inhabitants of Alexandria being affrighted, for fear of death quit their habitations, so that he being left alone as a King of houses, and not of men, by Proclamation called, and gave leave to frangers to inbabit them. It hapned that at such time as they flocked thirher came alfo P. Scipio Africanus the younger , Sp. Mummius, and L. Metellus, fent Cicero in fomfrom Rome to visit the Kingdoms and States of the East, and compose their vio Scipionis. from Rome to vilit the Augustian States of the Bait, and compose their differences. Scipio being landed, and having his face covered, the People Ol. 162, an. 3. flocked about him, and defired him to uncover himfelf, which he granting, V. C. 524. they out of the great pleasure conceived at the fight of such a person, gave a Ptol. Phys. 17. shout. Physcon himself coming out to meet them, was exceedingly ridicu- Joh. Hyrcani.6. lous to them, being a man otherwise sufficiently deformed, of a low stature, and such corpulence, as his belly resembled rather that of a beast than a man. He provided magnificent entertainment, but they despising his dainties (as corrupting the manners of men) ate very sparingly, onely minded that they Except. Diedcame about, and travelled into the Country, where viewing the feveral pla- on. ces thereof, confidering the populousnesse, frength, and convenience of their fituation, they concluded Egypt a convenient seat for the greatest Empire, if it had but Lords that knew how to make use of it, and so departed to Cyprus, and thence into Syria. 19. After some time he became so odious to the new inhibitants also for Justin in prins, his cruelty, that they fet fire to his Palace, and he was driven with his wife Livius Epit. and fon to get away to Cyprus, after which they restored the Kingdom to 116. 59. Cleopatra his sister, whom he had put away. Hereupon he raised an Army, Val. Max. 1.9.

and made War upon her and them, and fearing that they might fend for his eldelt son from Cyrene, and make him King, to prevent that, he murdered him; which being known, they cast down his statues and images. He taking this to be done as well in favour of his fifter Cleopatra, as in despight of himfelf, to be revenged sufficiently on her, commanded their son Memphices a comely and towardly childe to be killed in his prefence, and then his head, A.M. 3876. hands, and feet to be cut off, and being fent to Alexandria to be prefented her, V. C. 624. as the was feathing at the celebration of her own birth day. This fruck not Ptol. Phylican, onely her but all the City into exceeding horror and amazement, and the fad 18. speciacle was shewed to the People, to let them know what they might ex. 30h. Hyrani 7. pect from such a King. He notwithstanding all this, yet went on in his own way; for considering how he was hated by his People, that he might reign more securely, as he thought in their weaknesse, he caused a place of publick meeting full of youth to be fet on fire, and destroyed all therein either with fire or fword. Cleopatra having put an end to mourning for her fon, and Julin Lib. 39. feeing her self pressed with War by her brother, sent to Demetrius Nicator Vide Hegy of King of Syria, and her son in Law, for aid, offering him the Kingdom for sound apad of his pains in securing it. He gladly accepting the offer, came down, and we have the state of the state his pains in securing it. He gladly accepting the offer, came down, and waged War with Physcon for some time, but his People revolting from him at home, was forced to return, fothat the being then in a manner deflitute, was glad to follow him into Syria. Physcon then reentering, and being seized anew of the Kingdom, the Antiochians knowing his prejudice against Deme-Heluborneth trins, fent to him for one of the posterity of Selencus to reign over them, whereupon he suborned a young man and son of a Merchant, to mend the matter giving out, that Alexander Balas was his Father. The counterfeit by his help outed Demetrius of his Kingdom; but then not being able to bear fo high a condition, for which he was never bred, grew proud, and despited high a condition, for which he was never ored, grew proud, and deipnied him. Therefore to be revenged on him, being now reconciled to his fifter, Porphy. apud he pulled him down again, by fending aid, and his daughter for a wifeto An-Lufeb.

Not long after Physican died, after he of. 165 an. 4.

20. He left three fons and as many daughters behind him. One of his Idem. & Pakfons being base born, and called Ptolomy Apion, he left King of Cyrene by san in Atticis. his will; as for Egypt he left that to his wife, and to either of her fons which the should chuse, judging that the State of Egypt would be better ferled than the Kingdom of Syria, when the mother making choice of one fon, an to his should make the other her Enemy. She thinking that her youngest named Alexander would be more pliable and observant of her, laboured with the People to accept of him for their King; but they not at all yielding to this, had reigned (from his brothers death) 29 years. A. M. 3888, and the last V. C. 637.

Gggg 3

Ptolomy Phyfcon unjustly obtaining the Kingdom his cruelty.

ceived a dicth.

wound and

DO OX III

the was forced to call home the elder, Lathurus (or Lathyrus) from Cyprus. whither the had procured his father to banish him; but before the gave him Who first ta- the Kingdom she took away his beloved wife Cleopatra, and commanded him to mary his younger fifler Selene. Cleapatra being thus divorced by her moone son and ther, rather than forsaken of her husband, maried to Antiochus Cyzicenus in Syria (as we before faid) and caried away with her the Army in Cyprus for a portion. The Queen mother, that the might be the more awful to Lathurus her fon, in the second year of their reign made Alexander King of Cyprus, and fent him thither, and then at the end of other fix, took away from him, his wife Selene, though the had brought him two fons; and again to complear her malice, stirred up the People against him. For taking such of her Bunuchs as were most faithful to her, she brought them wounded into the publick, accuting him of having endeavoured to make her away, and of to uting those that we re true to their trust in her defence : at which the Alexandrians being fore moved, came so upon him, as he narrowly escaped with his life, and then fent they for Alexander from Cypras, and made him King. 21. Lathurus made but an exchange with his brother, as it fell out, mak- Joseph Antio. ing himself Master of Cyprus, whither yet his mother followed him with her lib. 13, 6, 10, hatre , and War the effect thereof. Here he lay not idle, for Alexander 11. Januars at this time King of the Tems besieging Prolemain, the inhabitants thereof fent to him for aid, and though they repented them of the bargain made with him, and fent to stop his journy, yet he came on, and at his approach the stege was raised. Then invaded he Indaa, and overthrowing Jan-Lathurus inva. neus in a great and bloody battel, harafed the Country. Cleopatra his mother was strateled at this his power and prosperity, and resolved he was to be brought down, elie her affaires were but in a tottering condition; therefore fending a good part of her treasure with her Nephews and testiment to the doth Judea but his mother marchcth against and spoilerh all his projeds.

Island Cous, She came her self into Phaucia, besieged Proelmais, and perfecuted him into Calefyria. He having some hopes to get Egyps into his hands in her absence, marched in all haste down thither; but being disappointed, and pursued by a party sent by her, he was forced to return and winter at Gaza. She in the mean time took Ptolemais, whither Januaus came to her, with whom a little after the renewed the League at Seythopolis, and then he prospering much in Calesyria , Lathurus was forced to return to Cyprus, and his mother feeing that, departed also into Egypt, During these Wars betwirt the mother and son, it hapned, that he was once taken by her Gene- Juffin mile and parties ral, but dismissed again, whereat she was so intaged, as she put to death her ibid. Commander. Her son Alexanger being afraid, that at length her cruelry might extend to him also, withdrew himself from her, preserring a secure though obscure estate, before a dangerous reign. She notwithstanding went on in her way, not neglecting her affaires, and fearing her elder fon might be helped by Antiochus Cyzicenus, feht great supplies to Grypus his half brother and rival, with Selene for a wife, taken formerly from Lathurm, and by messengers prevailed with Alexander to return. Divers years then they lived and reigned together, but at length the really plotted his destruction, and being caught in the manner, was according to her deferts (though perhaps not his duty) put to death, after the had domineered over him, and expelled his brother eighteen years.

She is killed by Alexander her fon.

22. Alexander being known to the People to have killed his mother, such quality the a Sedition was thence moved, as glad he was to flie for his life; and thence they recalled his elder brother Lathurus from Cyprus, and restored him his Who being Kingdom for many years after his expulsion, being now (if we may believe thereupon ex- Tustin) so satisfied with his present condition, as of himselfe, hee pelical Lating-rus is reflored, Would never have made War upon his mother, nor thereby fought to recover out of his brothers hands what he had formerly injoyed. About this time his base brother Apion of Cyrene died, and lest the People of Rome his heir, which thereupon left the Country to it's own freedom; but after ten heir, which thereupon left the Country to it's own freedom; but after ten Lious Epital years was it fore shaken, and almost rent in pieces by Wars and Tyranny, lib. 70. which fell on it being destitute of a Royal Monarch. Lucullus going thither commofed the differences, and fetled the Commonwealth as he thought, which after other ten years came to be reduced out of necessity to a Roman Province. From Cyrène Lucullus returned through Egypr, and in his passage being fet upon by Pyrats, Iost almost all his Vessels; yet escaped he safe to Plutarch in Alexandria, the Kings Fleet being fent out to meet him, where Lathurus Luculo, enterrained him with great magnificence, lodged him in his own Court Heentertain- (which favour had never before been bestowed on any stranger) and presented eth Lucullus the Roman.

him with gifts to the value of 80 Talents. But he onely received what was necessary, and neither visiting Memphis, nor seeing any of the rarities of Egypt, being called away by his occasions, returned through Cyprus unto Sylla, whose Lieutenant then he was in the War against Methridates King of Pontus. After this the Inhabitants of Thebes revolted from him, but in the third year he reduced them again to obedience, which is not to be understood Paufin, in Alof Thebes in Bastia, seeing he had nothing there to do, but of the City so tile, called in his own Country. Not long after he died, 37 years (wanting some moneths) after the death of his Father Phy (con, A. M. 3925, and the first of the 175 Olympiad.

23. It's difficult to affign certainly who fucceeded him. (a) Some fay Cle- (a) Porphy: in opatra his daughter, and wife to his brother Alexander; others, that Gracis Enfeb. Alexander's son being received into familiarity with Sylla the Roman Ditta- (b) Apian de tor, was by him placed in the Kingdom, then defliture of iffue male. They may be reconciled, by that which is further affirmed by the former, viz. that Lemiried Cleopatra then Queen. Apian faith, that being seized on the

Alexander the Kingdom, the Alexandrians not enduring his infolence, on the nineteenth day drew him out of the Court and killed him; but Porphyrie reporteth him to have flain her nineteen dayes after he had maried her. Certainly though his reign be accounted no longer, and that of Auletes to begin here, yet cannot be rejected that which is produced to the contrary. For , Suetonius reportetin, that Julius Cafar in his younger dayes having ingratiated himself In Julio c. 11.

with the People, attempted by their Tribunes that Egypt might be affigued him as a Province, having gotten an opportunity of extraor dinary command, for that the Alexandrians had expelled their King, on whom the Senate had bestowed the title of friend and allie. This can in no wise be meant of Auletes, for when he was expelled and came to Rome, Cafar was then above fuch a condition, having spent some years in the Wars of Gall. And that King of Egypt mentioned by Cieero to have died at Tyre, and reported to 18 Olat. 14. 60

have lest the People of Rome his heir in his Consulfhip, can be meant of 2a Agraria. none but of this Alexander the Second, who being expelled rebelliously by his Subjects, lived and died there in exile; fo that we must necessarily assign him (counting from the death of Lathurus to the Confulship of Cicero) about fifteen years; during which time of his life, he is to be supposed to have reigned longer than onely fo many dayes, contrary to the vulgar 25. Alexander being expelled by the Alexandrians, they immediately Andetes suc- fet up in his room, the fon of Lathurus, sirnamed Dionysius and Antetes, becodeth Alex- cause he was too much addicted to the rites of Bacchus, and dancing to the found of Cymbals and Pipes. He was base born, as appeareth by the Prologue to the 39 book of Trogus, and so was also his brother the King of Cyprus, if that be true which Pausanias speaketh of his Fathers having no legitimate iffue, except one daughter. After some years, they that set him up pulled him down; for his brother of Cyprus being most unjustly spoiled of his Kingdofn by the Romans, through the milice of Clodius Tribune of the People, they preffed him fore, either to demand Cyprus of the Romans, or renounce their friendship. Being unwilling to do this, and by reason of his great exactions which hee made for paying of his debts (contracted by his purchase of the Roman alliance) he incurred their hatred, and whereas he Platarehie could neither quiet the tumults by fair means not foul, was glad to withdraw Catone Minore. himself out of the way, and went to Rome. At Rhodes he met with Caro, who was fent by Chodius out of the way, under colour of doing him honour, ed, lib. 39.

and becaketh himfelf to Kome.

Is compelled to reduce Cyprus into the form of a Roman Province, who advised him toby hisrebelli- return, and be reconciled to his subjects, rather than leaving his former ous Subjects, happy condition to expose himself to danger, and the avarice of the Roman Officers, which Egypt it felf could not be able to fatisfie. Being by the Counsel of his grave and wife man reduced as into his wits, he was minded to follow his advice; but was prefently again turned by his friends, and A. M. 2948. to follow his advice; but was presently again turned by his hieros, and of 180 only hasted to the Cirie, where he had time and cause enough to repent V.C. 697.

> 25. Being come to Rome, he created the Senate much trouble, being Strabo lib. 17. commended to it by Pompey, whom some reported to have been the cause of his leaving Egypt, more than any injury offered him by his subjects, that Plutarch'in fo he might afford matter for new Wars. He defired he might be reduced Pompeio: into his Kingdom by Cornelius Lentulus the Conful, to whom Cilicia was decreed for a Province; and upon the reporting of the matter, an order Epift, lib.1, was made: Lentulus to stop Pompey's mouth, procuring him to have the spile. I. charge of Provisions (in that time of dearth) throughout the Empire. The Strabo & Die Alexandrians in the mean while ignorant of his voyage into Italie, and Pophyrius is thinking he had some wayes miscarried, set over the Kingdom Berenice his Gracis Entitii. legitimate daughter, together with Tryphana her elder fifter (called also Cleopatra the elder) and fent into Syria to Antiochus Afiaticus to come and reign with the women, and afterwards, he dying, to Philip Euergetes the son of Antiochus Grypus by Tryphana, daughter to Lathurus late King of Egypt, but he was also hindred by Gabinius, then late Roman President in Syria. But hearing at length how things went at Rome, they fent 100 of their Countrey-men thither, to make their defence, and recriminate their lawfull King, which he understanding, procured most of the Messengers to be made away in their journey, and the rest coming to the Citie, he either took away, or deterred, or else perswaded them to hold their peace. The Senate hearing of this was grievously moved, and the rather, because that divers publick Ministers of others their Confederates had been made away with the rest; as also for that it appeared, that there was much corruption amongst themselves. They sent therefore for Dion the Chief of the Embassie, but Ptolomy his money had fuch influence upon him, that he appeared not, and not long after was also disparched out of the way. Pompey harboured the King all this time in his own house, being yet desirous to restore him himfelf as Cicero fignifieth to Lentulus then the Pro-conful of Cilicia, who still waited also for the employment. At length Sibylla's books being confulted, were reported to forwarn the people of Rome never to reduce him by force, and therefore to that purpose another decree was made in the Senate. A great debate then enfued how the thing should be done, some proposing one way, and some another, till at length Auletes perceiving it was neither likely to be effected by Pompey nor Lentulus, despaired of his return, and getting him Where getinto Alia, expected at Ephelus in the Temple of Diana, a better advanting no relicf tage for the recovery of his right out of the hands of the imperious he departeth to Ephefus.

26. And he had not been long there, when a convenient opportunity Dio lib.39. presented it self. For Gabinius the President of Syria having grievously afflicted his Province by oppression, not thinking that sufficient, but hearing Toseph, de bills the Parthians to be exceeding rich, fet his resolution strongly to invade them. Judaico lib. 1.1 When he had passed the River Euphrates, Ptolomy came to him with Let- cap.6. ters from Pompey, and offered him 10000 Talents (besides a great sum of Appian in Pamoney to the Soldiers, part whereof they should have in hand) to restore thicks.

Hireth Gabi- him. Most of the Officers were against the thing, and Gabinens himself somenais to reflore thing fluck at it, but being flirred up to it by Antonius (who then Commandhim. ed the horse under him) and especially bewitched by the money, notwithstanding it was not lawfull for a President to stir out of his Province, nor undertake Wars at his pleasure, and the people at Rome out of respect to the Verses of Sibylla had forbidden Auleres to be restored (at least such a way) of his despising the Oracle (as then he accounted it) of so great a Hyrcani 1.

BOOK III.

vet he onely made the difficulty of the thing a means, to inhance the price of it, and omitting the Parthian War, undertook that against the Egyptians. Berenice had about this time called one Selencus out of Syria, who valunted Dio & Strabo himself of the blood royal of that Nation, and made him partaker of the nt support Kingdom, marrying her felf unto him; but finding him to be of a fordid, and base condition, made him away after a little while. Then an husband of a royal stock being enquired out for her, Archelaus the son of Archelaus (General to Mithridates the great King of Pontas) and who had been made by Pompey Priest of the Tomani, counterfeiting himself the son of the King, procured by his friends to be received on the fame terms with the other, and reigned with her fix moneths.

27. But Gabinius leaving Syria to the tuition of a Child, his fon, marched Plutarch, ia for Egypt through Palestine, and coming to the fandy defart, fent Amonius Antonio, Die Co before with the horse to secure the Straights at the entry of the Countrey; Strabo ut fuwhich he not onely bravely performed, but took also Pelufium, thereby gain- pra. ing entrance for the whole Army, which presently put to flight the Egyptians. Archelaus himself was now taken; but Gabinius considering that per- 01.181.ann.2. haps Prolomy would be unwilling to give him so much money as he expected, V. (. 699. if with fo small ado he should compleat the work; being also soundly bribed Hyrani o. by Archelaus, he difmissed him under pretence of an escape. A little after, Cn. Pompeio by Archelans, he dimitted nimunder pretence or an escape. A fittle after, the Egyptians (more earnest alwayes in rebellions than Wars) were utterly Mag. 2.

Oh. Licinio discomfited, Archelaus was slain, and all Egypt recovered, and restored to crasso 2. Cost. Auteres, who prefently put to death his daughter, and the richest of the Nobility, as they deferved, standing then in great need of money. Gabinius leaving a Guard behind him for Piolomy's security (which stayed at Alexandria, married, and begot Children, giving up themselves to the luxury of the place) went back into Syria, and thence to Rome, where his great gifts meeting with the corruption of the times, onely purchased him his life, being fined for his bribery, and disobedient carriage. As for Auletes we hear no more of A. M. 3954. him, fince that he died 4 years after his reflicution. In the year of the World 01.182. am. 2.

V. C. 703.

28. He left two fons, and as many daughters behind him, of which the ceftir comment. eldest of either Sex he ordered should succeed him by his last Will and debello civili. Testament; which he conjured the people of Rome, (under whose tuition "bb3; he left his Children) by all the gods, and the Leagues he had made with Dio lib. 42. them, should be observed; and one of the Tables of which were brought to Eutropius lib. 6. Rome to be laid up in the Treasury; but this being hindred by publick bufinesse, it was left with Pompey, who was also appointed Guardian to the His eldeft fon Young King in this his nonage. After three years the boy, or rather Pothinus (not Photinus, as he is corruptly called in Cafar's Commentaries) the Eunuch daughter fucwho managed his affairs, expelled Cleopatra his lifter, and fellow both in marriage and the Kingdom; fo that the was forced to withdraw into Syria, there to make provision for her re-establishment by force. Not long it Appian de belle was ere she returned, having furnished her self; which her brother being civil lib. 2.

Panpey flying to him for fuccour is flain.

he is driven

Dieth.

aware of, went, and pitched his Tents near the Mountain Cafins, at the Cafar, lib. 3. Pelufian mouth of the Nile; where lying incamped, Pompey being then Plutarch, in beaton by Cafar at the battel at Pharfalum, fled to him for defence and Pompeio & safeguard, chusing rather to venture upon Egypt than any other place, both for its nearnesse and strength, and hoping upon the account of his Guardianship to be lovingly received. The King then a very boy (about 13 years old) gave no answer to his message; but those most potent about him confulting of it, were perswaded by Theodotus his School-master to receive him, but then, that they might curry favour with Cafar, to make him away; fo that A. M. 3957. being received with small civility into a little boat, he was slain ere he got to 01.183. ann. t. the other fide, as is more largely expressed in the Roman story. His head V. C. 706. was referved as a prefent for Cafar, who coming to Alexandria, though at Hycami 16.

the first he was very welcom, and got much respect for his frequenting the c. Julio ce-publick readings of Philosophers, was explained the debrooming the face 2. publick readings of Philosophers, yet exacting the debt owing by Auleres, P. Servilio and not abstaining from the Treasure of the Temples for the payment of his Isanio cost.

Eunuch.

Leneth the King go.

Army, he thereby incurred the great displeasure of the Towns-men, all things being made worse by Pothinus, who to his utmost ability incensed the saperflicious multitude. Cafar also accounting it to belong to himself as Conful, and shortly after, as Dittaior, to compose the differences of the Confederates of the people of Rome, took upon him to judge the cause of the King and his fifter, which bred fuch disturbance, as thereupon ensued a troublesom

29. There were fecret plots laid for his life, which he being aware off, Plutarch, in was glad to spend whole nights in feasing to prevent them, and gave way to Dio & Cafare.

Cleopatra to come to him, who knowing he was no hater of women, had the prise. cefar going about to reconcile brother and fi-

fent to him to complain, and defire a conference. At the fight of her he became her very flave, and turned from being her Judge to her Advocate, which thing fo inraged the King, perceiving her now to be got into the Palace, that he rushed out to the people, crying he was betrayed, and pulling his Diadem tter, a war is thence raised from his head, cast it on the ground. A great stir arising hereupon, he was by Pollinus the caught by Cafars Soldiers, and brought back into the house, which the multitude thereat intaged now befreged, and Cafar with promife to do whatfoever they would, scarce appeared the tumult; his men being unprovided for refishance, having not expected any such occasion from those they accounted their friends. Then taking Piolomy and Cleopatra along with him, he read over A. M. 3958, their fathers Will in publick audience, which subjecting them to the tuition of Q. Follocates the people of Rome (whose Supream and absolute Magistrate he then was) Publis Valida in execution of the faid Will he gave to them two as husband and wife the Kingdom of Egypt, and to their younger brother and fifter that of Cyprus, not leaving any thing to himself, but willing rather to add formething of his own; such a fear at this time had seized on him. The people hereby was quieted for a time, untill Pothinus, fearing he might be called to account for what had already passed, kindled a new slame to divert it. He first objected, as well he might, what an unworthy thing it was that the King should be called to answer, and then added, there was reason to suspect, that whatsoever Cafar might pretend, yet at length he would put all into the hands of Cleopaira. He fent to Achillas General of all the Forces then lying at Pelnfium, alluring him by great promifes in the Kings name, to draw down the Army privily to Alexandria; and he, being not backward to cloze with him, marched down with 20000 foot, and 2000 horse, Cafar had not ftrength enough to go out and meet him, and therefore contained himself in the Citie, yet commanded his men to be in readinesse, and kept the King with him; whose name he knew to be of great force amongst his people, and that thereby this undertaking might appear rather to be the enterprize of a few d'sfolute, and factious persons, than any thing backed by his consent, or War-

The Alexandrian War.

30. Achillas (a) despising the number of Cafar's Soldiers, after he had (a) Identition entred the Citie, thought presently to have broken in upon him, but he prevented this by blocking up the wayes, and fortifying his house. Then followed a sharp contention at the Haven, the Alexandrians endeavouring to become Masters of the Fleet, and thereby to cut off all Provisions and supplies from coming to him; but he made a shift to burn all the Gallies, from which the fire feizing upon the houses adjoyning, consumed to ashes that famous (b) Library Collected by the care and diligence of the former (b) Plutanti Kings. After this exploit so happily performed, he placed a Garrison in in Casanta (c) Pharm (an Island over against Alexandria (ennobled by a famous Tower can is of the same name) but three quarters of a mile distant from the Citie) and (c) casual after a few skirmishes, sent about into Syria, Cilicia, and other places for aid. prins. Arfinee the Kings younger fifter got out to Achillas, and joyntly with him managed the War; yet with fuch contention for the Chief command, as proved onely beneficial to the Soldiers, whom both by gifts fought to oblige; for the contest at length arrived at such (d) height, that lying in wait (d) Historian for the life of each other , he was flain by the help of one Ganymedes , who belle dieses having helped her in her escape, was now preferred to be their General. diino.

Achillas the Pothinga all this while was not backward, but out of the Court fent meffengers to Achillas, to incourage him in his work, which being discovered cost flain, and Pohim his life, and caused the King to be more nearly looked to. Ganymedes at thinus put to death by Cahis entrance upon the Generalship, stopped up the chanels which brought fresh-water into that part of the City where Cafar lay, and with engines conveied falt from the Sea into the room of it, thinking thereby to discourage the Enemy, and force him out of his hold; but Cafar (though his Soldiers were at first daunted at it) prevented the delign by finking of wells, which abundantly supplied their necessities, to the wonder of the Egyptians, who had no fuch invention. By this time a legion shipped by Dominus Calvinus, with provisions and arms from Syria, landed on the African shoar, a little above Alexaniria; which Cafar understanding, went with his Fleet unmanned to fetch them in , and the Enemie having notice of it, drew out also against him. He receiving the men aboard, hid no mind to ingage, because it grew towards night; but a Rhodian Gally, not keeping up with the rest of cefor defeatthe Fleet, was fet upon, whereby he was constrained to go in to the rescue, eth the Alex-

white a fee, and so carried himself, that day-light onely was wanting to his complearing the Victory, by utterly destroying the whole Navy of the Alexan-21. They notwithstanding this defeat, in which, and other wayes, of late, Idem ibid.

they had loft no fewer than 110 Vessels (yet being encouraged thereto by Ganimedes) fer themselves to the rigging of another Fleet, which being in a readinesse, Cafar brought his about the Island Pharos, and set it in order against them. Both sides being ready to ingage, yet a narrow passage lying betwixt them, each expected till the other should enter first, as then having a better advantage, until the Rhodians defired of Cafar leave to enter the Streight. This once granted and done, they were presently set upon, and then relieved, till a total engagement ensued, in which the Acaptians were worsted (not a ship of Casar's receiving any hurt) and in their flight took in in Pharos, where they were received by their friends, and kept off the Romans for some time, but a length were forced to quit the Island with great loffe. This being joyned to the main by two bridges, one of them in like manner was forfaken by the Towns-men; , but the Romans attempting to gain the other, through the rashnesse of some in their company, were beaten off, and forced tumultuously to betake themselves to their ships. Cefar himself in the hurry was glad to leap into the Sea, and the Enemy following, to dive civili lib. a. under water, and take breath now and then as he could; till (having fivom He cafterh himself into almost a quarter of a mile) he was taken up into a ship. He lost 400 of his Legionary Soldiers in this skirmith, as many thip-men and rowers, yet nei-

would be nothing the Gronger, and if he should become the head of their party, the War would be more honourable, he gravely admonished him to ast nothing contrary to the interest of his People, or his confederacy with Rome, and then gave him leave to depart, though he pretended an unwillingnesse to leave him, and notably counterfeired fincere friendship with seigned ther he nor his Army were discouraged at all, but were rather incited to redeem their losse by some other exploit, which the Alexandrians taking notice of, fent to him, defiring he would difmiffe their King, whom now they professed they were ready to obey; and it he should command them to be friends with him, they would presently yield. He knew there was neither any trufting of him nor them; but confidering that if he difmiffed him, they

32. Though he being returned was very earnest for carying on the War, Hinius ibid. yet they feeing themselves nothing amended by the accession of his name or presence (which the Romans despised) and that they profited nothing by Josephus presence (which the Komani desputed), and that they promet mounting by aniquit l. 14, any of their attempts, were greatly discouraged, yet understanding this great aniquit l. 14. fupplies of men and provisions were coming to Cafar, they refolved once cap. 14.00 15. more to take the Sea, and cut them off: And they did much hurt to those cap. 7. that came by water, till he fent out his Fleet under the command of Tiberius Nero, and restrained them. But by Land came Mithridates of Pergamus cafar.

Hhhh

CHAP. VI.

brother,

Cometh to

who follow-

eth her into

from Stria, accompanied with Anipater the Governour of Judga, and Fa-Aid fent to ther to Herod the Great, bringing down with him a great power of menand pierced as far as Pelusium, which also was taken, with great pains and industry by affault. Thence marching down for Alexandria he rook in the Country in his way, the Fews inhabiting those parts (though at first they made refiftunce, vet) being brought over by Amiparer upon the producing of the letters of Hyrcanis the High-Prieft. When Piblomy heard this, and that he had nigh already reached Delia, a place nor far diffant from Alexandria; knowing he must needs passe the River, he sent out a party to oppose him there, which he received prudently after the Roman fashion, being intrenched in his Camp, and eafily sustained it's violence; till seeing them very disorderly, and with great boldnesse to affail his fortifications, he issued out, and killing a great number, had utterly defeated the reft, but that by their knowledge of the Country, and by the Vessels which had transported them. they fecured themselves. Whereupon rallying again they once more charged him, and a fight enflued in that place called The Gamp of the Jews, in which engagement the wing commanded by Mithridates himfelt, was forely oppressed, and had been rotally overthrown; but that Antipater (who led the other) came in in good time to the rescue, put to flight the Egyptians. and took their Camp; which Mithridates confessed by letters to Casar. acknowleging Antipater to have been the author, both of his fafety, and the Victory. But now by this time was Prolomy himfelf coming against Mithridater, and Cafar also to fetch him off.

The Argyptian Kingaon

33. Both went by Sea, but Cafar first got to him, and took him in With his victorious Army. Prolomy and Cafar encamped then feven miles afunder, the former in an high and most fortified place by nature, having a narrow River with exceeding high and precipitous banks betwixt him and the Enemy. which though the Alexandrians defended, yet Cafat's then got over (the Horse by passing the Foard, and the Foot by laying over a bridge made of long trees) to that Cafar fat down, not far from the Kings Camp. The next day he formed a Castle in a Village near adjoyning, the defendants whereof flying amain to the Camp, his men had well nigh entred with them; but coming to hand-firokes, were beaten back, being severally laid at, both from the fortifications and the ships. But Cafar espying a very high place. Which by reason of it's natural strength was little looked to by the Alexandrians, fer certain Companies to get up there; which being performed, and a great Cafar ftormcry raifed on purpose round about, the Romans brake in, in several places, and made great flaughter. Most of the defendants fled upon the irruption. and in great heaps leaped down into the trenches, wherein they first being overwhelmed, the rest with great ease got over, amongst which was the fel funk, and he thereby was drowned, after he had reigned well nigh four

Romans are said to have been flain. Cafar in confidence and pursute of this

King; but coming to take boat, so many pressed in after him, that the Ves- A. M. 3598.

years. Together with him fell in this War (though most after another Orosausis, 6.

fashion) 20000 men, 12000 were taken with 70 long ships, and 500 of the cap. 16.

Ptolomy is diowned.

· Ægyptian Camp.

Cefar taketh Alexandria.

Victory, with the Horse marched presently to the City, where he found now not any refistance, the Citizens entertaining him in a suppliant posture, whom he comforted and forgive. 34. Having thus made an end of the War, he laied not Egypt to the Ro- Dio Ilb. 41. man Empire, but gave it to Cleopaira, joyning to her in mariage (to colour the businesse) her younger brother as yet but eleven years old; but indeed Appian de bilsubjecting all things to her will and power, with whom he was so familiar, as, lo civili 1,2 out of love to her, he staied in Egypt nine moneths, and had done it longer, or elfe had caken her with him to Rome, had he not been called thence by the Plutathia urgent affaires of Syria; and not long after the brought him a fon, whom cafare. by his permission she named Cafario. At his departure he removed Arsione Suctionin 92out of the Kingdom, lest any disturbance should arise upon her account, in. and left three Legions behind him for the fectitity of these two Princes, who being difrespected by their own People for their respect to him, as yet were nor confirmed in their feats.

35. As for the Government, Cleopartra, reigned, and acted alone withour the control of any, permitting her brother to enjoy the ritle with his life as

ver. Not long after Cafar's departure, the eldelt fon of Pompey his Enemy coming to Alexandria, the is (a) reported to have been as familiar and (a) Plutarch common with him; yet upon Cafar's invitation (b) went with her brother in Antonio. ro Rome, where they were admitted as friends and allies: for her a lodging (b) Sucton ut was provided in his own house, and having built a Temple to Venus Gene- Prins.

trix (which he had vowed before the battel at Phar (alia) he therein placed (c) her effigies beside the Goddesse. In the fourth year, her brother growing (c) Appian chopatra poy- towards a man, the (d) poyfoned him, to be at her own liberty. After Tutrue Cafar was killed in the Senate house, the stood ever firm to those that (d) Fosebus. profecuted the conspiratours : to (e) Dolobella, at his request of aid, she cap 4. fent four Legions; and had a fleet ready to put out had the weather served. (c) A pian de To Cassius, who with menacing language demanded supplies, the plainty refused bello civili 1.3, to fend any; for that he had an hand in Cafar's death, his threats only inciting 4. her to go and meet Offavius Cafar and Antony, who were then making an Expedition against him and his fellow Brusus, the heads of their faction. He A. M. 3962. pedition against him and its remove prime, and remains a time of hips to 01. 84, and, a getting knowledge of her intentions, fent a firong party with 60 fhips to 01. 84, and, a getting knowledge of her intentions, fent a frong party with 60 fhips to 01. 84, and, a getting knowledge of the interactions, acts a tempest seized on her Fleer, Hyrean 22.

that her defign was broken, and having received great losse, and now fallen M. Emilio fick, the was forced to return into Agypt. Antony after the overthrow Lepido 2. of Brueus and Cassius, being left in Asia to settle the affaires thereof, this L. Munatio ther the repaired to him in a strange antick fashion, and he, who, when he Planco cost: formerly ferved under Gabinius in Agypt, had cast a wanton eye upon her, was now so smitch, (though 40 years old) that he also became enslaved to plutage in her in his affections. She ruled him and all his affaires, and procured him our prins.

Appian lib. 5. of hand, to cause her fister Arsione to be made away; who being formerly led in triumph by Tulius Cafar after the Alexandrian War, with the pity of all men, had for her brother and fifters sake been then dismiffed. 36. Antony had no power but to follow her into Ægypt, where they Plutarch & fpent their time in nothing but extraordinary vanity and dalliance. After his Appian in prints, reconciliation to Cafar, and the making up of the breach betwixt them, by his marying of Oltavia, Cleopatra fearing that this new wife might draw his affections from her felf, pretended to be almost mad in love with him, praetifing upon her body in fuch fort, that being reduced into a Confumption. the feemed not to be able to live in his absence; whereupon he gave over his intention of invading Parthia for that time, and returned to Alexandria. Not long after the begged of him that part of Judea which bare Balm, and many other places and Countries, which he bestowed upon her, to the great A. M. 3968. diffafte of the People of Rome, who took it in high diffain, as well that fuch V.C. 717, vast possessions should be given her, as that now he had divers children by her, Herodis 3. two of which, beeing twins, were named Sun and Moon. Shortly after, M. Vepfanio the accompanied him as far as Euphratas, then making an Expedition into Agrippa. The accompanied nim as rat as Empuriors, then intended in Expedicion into Landio Gal-Armenia, and taking Judga in her way homeward, that part thereof, which L. Candio Gal-Antony had given her, together with Arabia, the fer out to farm unto He-Josephus Anrod, whom also, either out of her filthy affection to him (which she pre- iq.l. 15.6.5. tended) or for some other end (having formerly wished for an advantage againsthim, to get his Kingdom) she follicited to the breach of the chastity of them both; but he instead of giving her satisfaction, consulted with his friends how to kill her, and then being again terrified from that, to do her honour, waited on her home as far as Pelusium. Antony having prospered in Armenia returned, and entred Alexandria in triumph, leading with him Arparagraphic returned, and children, whom he earnestly laboured Plutarch & with to make them fall down before her, as suppliants, but to no purpose. Dio its supra. Then spent they their time in seasting, he divided almost half of the Roman Empire betwixt her and her children; the rook upon her the name of Ifis. and he of Ofiris, and Father Bacchus, having his temples crowned with Ivy, and wearing buskins; being drawn in that garb, after the fashion of Bacchus, in a charior through the streets of the City.

Their loofe practices. "

Hhhh 2

37. These

27. These foolish and loose practices brought great inconveniences upon Sueton in Offic. them. For Cafar Ottavius and he fell presently of recriminating each other, vio & Die and Anthony not long after had the confidence to fend to Rome, to defire 116,49,50, 1 from the Senare a confirmation of his donations to her and her children; which gave such offence, that his friends were forced to flie out of the City: Plutarch in whereupon he sent thicker again some to thrust Oftavia (his wife, and Cafar's Antonio, fifter) out of his house, and took upon him to make War upon both People and Senate. Cafar hereat inraged, found out a way to incense the People against him, by opening his will deposited in the hands of the Vestal Nuns. wherein he had laboured to make Cafario the lawfull fon of the Dittator, named for Heirs his Children begotten on Chopatra, and commanded that notwithstanding he might die at Rome, yet his body should be sent to her to Alexandria. These things found to be true, gained credit to others which were but reported; as that in case he should get the better, he would bestow gypt. When Cafar then was ready for the War, it was decreed against her, War at Rome and he was deprived of all his Offices, which alone was thought enough at this is decreed against it.

604

time, lest once declared an Enemy to the State, the other with him should have been included in the same capacity, of whom divers, being men of great influence, might have been driven through desperation, to act more vigoroufly for him: Hereby it was thought he would be sufficiently intangled, resolving not to forfake her on any terms whatfoever, and vulgarly accounted to he bewitched by her. And to little lesse could these things practized by He is bewitch- him amount to. He called her Queen, Lady, and Mistresse, gave her Roed as it were mans for her Guard (who had her name ingraven on their Targets.) He went abroad, celebrated Games, fate in Judgement, and fometimes rode by her. with her, and when she pleased to be drawn in her Chariot, ran by her fide amongst the Lackies. She was so confident the should be Mistresse at length of the Mistresse of the World, that if she would swear most religiously, it should be by that Law or Sentence, which she was about to pronounce in the Capitol. 38. For all this ado, yet in the preparation for the War, Anthony mi- Plinius Name

Rome it felf upon the Queen, and translate the Seat of the Empire into E-

strusted her, and that so far, as to have his meat tasted for fear of poyson, val. Histor. She taking notice of it, poyloned a Cup of drink, and giving him it, when hear logg. he was about to fet it to his mouth, interposed her hand, convincing him

Yet suspected thereby how easie a matter it was for her to do that of which she was suspected to have an intention, and then fending for a Malefactour out of prison, and giving him the liquor, he died immediately. This made him bold and confident of her, and further enflaved his affections, infomuch that that the ruled him in the management of the War. For Canidius, whom the had Plutarth at 1 bribed to get leave for her to continue with him, changing afterwards his priar, mind, or (at least his language) and advising him to send her back into

She maketh him ingage at Attium,

Egypt, and to go into Thrace or Macedonia, and there to decide the con- Die lib. co. troversie in a pircht battel, she prevailed against him not onely to stay, but made Anthony ingage at Attiam in a Sea-fight, yet providing rather Where he his for flight than victory. Ere it could jultly be discerned which party would carry it, the being impatient of delay, with her Golden Prow and Purple A. M. 1974 fayls, giving a fign to her Leyptians, betook her felf to flight, which An- Ol. 187, and thony feeing, made haste after her as fast as possible, and being received on V.C. 723. board, neither faw, nor was feen by her; but fate him down in a fad and Herodis 9. thoughtfull posture, holding his head betwirt his hands; and for three or fare 3. four dayes to continued, till arriving at Tanaras (a Promontory of Lace- M. Valorie mia) the women there that were intimate with her brought them together. Meffala of !! He passing over into Africk, she returned into Egypt, counterfeiting a triumph with her thip curioufly adorned, and melodious finging, that the might be received of her Subjects, the chiefest of which presently she put to death, whom the knew formerly to have born no good will rowards her, and now to be elevated upon the report of the defeat received at Allium. Confiscating their estates, and rifling religious houses, she heaped together a great Maffe

Book II

Maile of Treasure, raising forces therewith with all expedition, and that the might draw into Confederacy the King of Media, the fent him the head of Arravasdes (or Arrabacus) the Armonian, his Emulator. Then, attempting a matter of greatest difficulty, the conveyed thips over the Isthmus, or Neck of Land (which parting the Azypian (or Mediterranean) from the Red-Sea divideth Afia from Africk) into the Arabian Bay, intending to fly servitude, and seek out some forein seat, wherein to spend the remainder of her dayes. But Anthony returning to her, who as yet had heard nothing of the losse of his Land-Army, they incouraged themselves, and she changed her purpose. Her ships were burnt by the Inhabitants of Ara-614 Peraa, at the procurement of Q. Didius the President of Sy-

39. But Anthony having notice that his Army had revolted to Cafar, Plutarch in withdrew himfelf in a fad and Melancholick posture from the fight of all men Antonio & Dio into the Island Pharos, and then again within a while, having disburthened lib.51. himself of grief, returned to the Court, where they indulged their genius more than ever, those that were willing to die with them giving in their names, and passing away their time together in nothing but feasting and sollity. She gathered together divers forts of poylons, which she tried upon which the observed without any convulsion to cast the party into an heavy

Capital Offenders and Brutes, approving above all the biting of an Afp,

She ver laboureth to curry favour with Cafar.

She convey-eth ships into

Bay to feck

our her fortune, but is diverted by

Many willing to die give

and they frend their time in jolli-

their names.

flupefaction, with a moderate swear upon the face, and so to kill with an easie kind of languishment. Before Cafar came down into Egypt against them, they fent several times to him. She asked the Kingdom for her Children, and without Anthony his knowledge fent him a Scepter, a Crown of Gold, and a royal Throne, giving up her Kingdom to him, as it were, with those, to gain respect. He received them as a good Omen, and returned to her openly threatning language; yet underhand promifed her impunity, and the entire possession of her Kingdom, if she would make away Anthony, And fearing lest the might be brought to undertake some desperate design, he fent one Thyrsian his Freed-man, and a cunning fellow to her, to make her believe he was in Love with her, hoping that then, besides the saving of the Treasure, which she had threatned to burn, she having a great ambition to be loved by all great persons, would not slick at killing Anthony. She desiring indeed that it might be fo, & remembring how his Uncle, in time past, and fince that Anthony had been bewirched by her, eafily fooled her felf into a fond belief thereof, and promifed her ambition, not onely pardon, and Egypt, but the Roman Empire it felf. Anthony feeing her kind to the Meffenger above measure, suspected something, and soundly lishing him, sent him back to his Mafter; and then she to wipe off his jealousie most solemnly celebrated his birth day (though fuitably to her prefent condition she neglected her own) and fought all manner of wayes how to humour him. Yet did she and caufeth betray Pelusium into Cafars hands, and when he drew down towards Alexandria secretly forbad the Towns-men to go out against him, though openly the Fleet and the exhorted them to refishance. And when Anthony had provided a Fleet, the caused it wholely to revolt, and in like manner the horse, which Anthony plainly feeing, after the overthrow of his foot, returned into the Citie, crying, out that he was betrayed by her into their hands, against whom, for her fake he had taken Arms.

40. She being afraid of him, went to her Monument, as intending to kill her felf, under pretence of being afraid of Cafar, and fent a Meffenger to him to tell him the was dead. He giving credit to it, defired Eros his fervant to kill him; but he preventing it with his own death; he wounded dalany killeth himself in the belly; but the stroak not being such an one as could prefently dispatch him, he intreated his friends to do it, who refusing, and running out of the room, a tumult enfued, and she perceiving what was done, fent for him up into her Monument. He understanding the was alive, arose, thinking he might also possibly live; but the blood issuing out in great abundance, he despired of it, and was born by his attendants to the door of the

She betray-

Horfe to revolt to him.

Iv defireth to lead her in Triumph, and doth all he can to de. ceive her.

606

goar blood helping himself as it were, and stretching out his hands to her, and her women, who haled him up thus to the top. When he was got up she laid him on a bed, tore her flesh, wiped off his bloud with her face, calling him Lord, Hulband, and General, after which he presently expired. Cafar now defired to get her into his power by strong hand, having an extraordinary ambition to grace his Triumph with her, and not willing to promife any cafar carnest thing, and be counted a deceiver by falsifying his word. She continued still in the Monument, hoping at least to purchase her Kingdom by the Treasure the had yet in her power, and refused to come down, talking with the Mesfengers from above. But presently some got in to her, removed all things out of the way wherewith the might hurt her felf, and then bringing her into the Palace, detracted nothing from her former state, thereby to delude her with vain hope. Cafar now without any trouble entred Alexandria with Arius the Philosopher on his right hand, who formerly had read the Sciences to him; he permitted her to bury Antony as the pleased, which after the had done, being spent with forrow, and her breast all exulcerated with stroaks, the thereby contracted a Feaver, and glad of that pretence to abstain from all fustenance, and so end her dayes, she consulted also with Olympus her Phyfician how to reduce her felf into a Confumption. But Calar smelling it out, so terrified her about her Children, that she was content to de-building, whence he was drawn up with Cords in a lamentable plight, all in

AT. Shortly after, he coming to comfort her, the cast her felf down at his Platanth & feet, indeavouring with all the art she had to inveigle his affections, which Dio at Supil. though he perceived, yet fixing his eyes on the ground, he onely faid, Be of good chear Woman, thou shalt have no harm, she being sollicitous, not for Vide Suttonia life, but love, and a Kingdom. Then gave the in an Inventory of her Goods Ottavio. and Treasure, at which Seleucus one of her Officers was so Malapert, as to Florumlib, 4. accuse her of suppressing something, whereupon she slew in his face, and soundly buffered him, Cafar finiting, and gently reprehending her for it. But capie. the asked him whether it was not an hard case for her, whom he had deigned Entropiamily. to vifit, to be accused by one of her own slaves, if she had reserved any thing, not for her felf, but wherewithall to present his wife and fifter, that they might render him the more favourable to her. Hereat he exceedingly rejoyced, hoping the had a great defire to live, and promifed her great matters, vainly supposing he therein deceived her. But she having notice by Dolobella, a young Gentleman amongst his followers, and one that bare her great good will, that after three dayes, the and her Children were to go for Italy, first obtained leave of him to celebrate the obsequies of Antony, which having performed with lamentations, and great shew of affection, she commanded a Bath to be prepared, and fitting down to mear, sumptuously Dined. After Dinner she gave a Letter to her Keeper to carry to Cafar (wherein she desired she might be buried by Antony) sealed, that he thinking the contents to be of consequence, might the more easily be removed. out of the way. He being gone, with the help of her two women, the made fast the doors, most gorgeously apparelled her felf, as upon some solemn' day, with her royal Ornaments, and then put an Asp (which she had procuted to be brought in fecretly amongst Figs, Grapes, and Flowers) to her left Arm, with the biting of which, the fell prefently as into a fleep, and fo died. Cafar having read the Letter presently perceived what was done, and indeavoured with all speed to recall her to life, though in vain, grieving fore that he was frustrated of a glorious Triumph, yet pitying and admiring A. M. 2075. the person, whom he caused to be royally interred with Aniony, accord- 01.187.000.3 ing to her defire, and afterwards dealt very nobly with their Children. A- V. C. 724. dorned the was with all the endowments of nature above her Sex. Being Herodis 10. learned her felf, the was a great Lover and Promoter of knowledge; which the testified in erecting another Library, in the room of that which had been fave 4. burnt, supplied with books from Pergamus at the procurement of Antony. Crasse cost. She lived 39 years, reigned 22. (counted from her fathers death) fourteen

But the having notice of his intentions dieth by the biting of an Asp.

whereof

whereof the fpent with Antony. And with her perifted her Kingdom, now reduced into the form of a Roman Province, and the Macedonian Empire was quite extinot, 300 years after the death of Darius, and the Monarchy of Alfanandin, by whom it arole; 293 after Piolomy the fon of Lague had obrained Egpp; in the third of the 187 Olympiad, the year of the World 3975, and 28 before the birth of Chrift. Octavias Cafar the 4th time, and Mr. Livenius Chaffus being Confuls.

Contemporaries with the Empire of the Macedonians.

CHAP. VII.

The fudean Kingdom or Principality of the Asmonæans.

From the departure of Antiochus Sidetes from Jerusalem to the reign of Herod an alien, being by birth an Idumæan. conteining the space of 98 years.

1. A Free Annochus had raifed his fiege and departed from Ferufalem, as was A. M. 3870. A faid before, he undertook an Expedition against the Parthians, wherein he was flain. John the fon of Simon who then was chief both Priest and Magistrate of the Jews accompanied him some way with a band of Auxiliaries, and got the firname of Hyreanus from the overthrow of the Hyreani- A. M. 3877.

ans, asit's thought, and returned with great credit into his own Countrey, John funamed After Antiochus his death, he led down an Army into Syria, thinking, as indeed it fell out, that the Cities were left without defence, whereof he rook several, Medaba, Samaga, Sicima, and Gerizim, wherethe Curbaans had several, Medaba, Samaga, Sicima, and Gerizim, wherethe Cutheans had A. M. 3878, built a Temple resembling that at Jerusalem. In this Expedition he also 01. 163, an. 2. subdued laumen, the Inhabitants whereof he put to their choice, whether V. C. 627.

they would be circumcifed or quit their habitations. They chofe the former, Sciencid, 186. and now began to be reckoned amongst the Jews, submitting to all their Ptol. Physican. rites and ceremonies. After this he sent to Rome, desiring that the confederacy made with the Sente might be renewed; that Toppa, Gazara, Joh. Hyreani 9. with other Cities and places taken from the Jews by Antiochus, contrary to their Decree, might be reftored, that it might not be lawful for the King of Syria to passe through their Country with his Armies, that whatsoever Antiochus had attempted against them in War contrary to their will might be made frustrare, and that the Senate would please to send their Ambassadors to procure those things, and to cause satisfaction to be given for the havock made of the Country. The Fathers renewed the confederacy with them, according to their defire, promifed to take order they should be no more wronged, and difmissed the Ambassadors with money to bear their charges, and letters commen lacory to those through whose Countryes they should passe. The many changes which then presently hapned in the Syrian Kingdom so diverted the feveral Princes from medling with the Jews, that they were glad of their friendship, atid his proved a sufficient opportunity for Hyrcanus to establish his affaires. For they destroying one another with War, he securely injoyed the revenues of the Countrey, and got together a great miffe of money; forhar despising them, he went and besieged Samaria, the Inhabitants of which he was displeased with for their injury offered to the Marif. Idem cap. 18."

Her reneweth

the League

there was no fuch schism: but when this doctrine of the Hasideans came feni, though the King of Syria's Subjects, yet his friends and allies. 2. He cast a trench about it, and committed the siege to the care of his Iden ibid & two fons Anugonus and Aristobulus, who forely oppressed the detendants, de billo Judai. hindering all importation of Victuals, to that they were constrained, to beg co lib. 1, c 2. aid of Antiochus Cyzicanus then reigning in Syria, He came, but was over- & 3. thrown by Ariftabulus his Soldiers, and being purfued by the brothers as far as . Scythopolis, hardly escaped, and the fiege was renewed. The belieged reduced to their former necessities, sent once more to Cyzicenus, who then obtaining about 6000 men of Piolomy Lathurus (then expelled his Kingdom by his mother) made an inroad into Hyrcanus his Dominions, and made havock of all things, thereby hoping to conftain him to raife the fiege. But hiving lost many of his men intercepted by the Erlethy he himtelf went to Tripolis, and gave over the Wat to Collimander and Epicrates, two of his Captains, allimander being more venturous than wife was prefently flain, and his fellow was corrupted to betray Scythopolis and other Towns to Hyrcanus, who then after a years lying before Samaria took it, razed it, and brought the water-courses through the Place', by the flith of which all appearance of a Taketh it. Town wastaken away. After this, inviting the Pharifees on a time (whose Scholar he had been.) to a feath, he laboured to approve his fincerity to them, and defired, if any of them knew any fault in him? to tell him plainly of it.

All approved of his manners but one Eleazarus, a feditious and bad man, who told him, that if would be accounted good, he must devest himself of the Priesthood, and be content with the Principality, for that he had heard say, that his mother was a captive in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes. \ This being utre-ly falle; Hyrcanus was grievoully offended and to were the Pharifees; but Tonathan a Sadusee of the contrary feet, and one in great grace with Grudges be him, took thence occasion to tell him that this affront came from all the twist him and Pharifees together, and that he should perceive it by the punishment they the Phaisfees, would inflict upon him, if their opinion was demanded. They being mercifully inclined, thought it sufficient he should be imprisoned and beaten for no greater an offence : at which Hyrcanus was fore diffileased, as then thinking they had raifed that scandal of him. Wherefore being more incensed by Fonathan, he revolted to the Saducees, abrogated the conflitutions of the

Pharifees, and punished their followers, whence it came to paffe, that neither he nor his fons were much beloved by the People. A sedition also arose hereupon, but he quieted all, and having governed the People 31 years died, being honoured with three especial dignicies, of the chief. Government, High-

Priesthood, and also Prophecy, as Jonathan tells us, who relateth, that he for etold his two eldelt fons thould neither of them long enjoy his Principality. A. M. 3899, the last of the 160 Olympiad, about 104. years beforethe birth of Christ. 3. Mention being here made of Pharifees, it is requifite to speak someof the several thing of this sect and others amongst the Jews, according to the nature of Jewish Sects. this work, Josephus first maketh mention of them in the ninth Chapter of his thirteenth Book of Antiquities, afterwards more diligently and largely * handling them. There is no question but these sects sprang up after the re- * Lib. 18.41 turn of the few from the Rebylonish captivity. It's probable that the diffe- & debilit.

rence amongst them arose after the building of the second Temple, about their worship and offerings. Some thought they were onely to live by the prescript of the Law, neither above nor below it. Others believed they were not onely to act according to the bare letter of the Scriptures, but also according to such senses and consequences as might be made out from it, and accordingly they offered over and above what the Law required in the fervice of the Temple, even what they conceived was due according to their riches or other respects. Those that stood to the letter of the Law were called conful file. or other refrects. Those that stood to the letter of the Law were called Karam: Those that besides the precepts of the Law did works of superum in Block erogation, and voluntary service without any compulsion, were named HassTribets filling. dim, that is Santti or Holy, and (after they grew into a body) Hafidaans, vum Mijulin As long as this voluntary and supererogatory service was free and spontaneous, 1.1. c.3.

to be digested into precepts, and the precepts of supererogation into writings and Canons, many doubts, disputes, and controversies, daily arose, whence two dogmatical Sects had their original. One which onely allowed Druftum lib, de of the Law it felt, and Another that imbraced also the glotles and interpre- tribus sellie cations of ir. From the latter, being that of the Hasidaans, sprung up some Judaorum, who called themselves Pernschim or Separate, as those, who by reason Jacobum Capof their holinesse were not onely distinct and separated from the vulgar, Pelium ad but also from other Hasidmans, for that they taught that those constitutions & Simsonium formerly accounted free, were to be observed out of necessity. These Pe- & A.M.3896. ruschim in Syriack Pheruschim, came by Greek writers to be called Pharisai. Now as out of the Hasideans arose the Pharifees, so from amongst the Karraim the Saducees, so named from Sadoc, Antigonus the master of this Sadoc, and scholar to Simeon the Just, amongst other heads of doctrin had taught, that they ought not to be like fervants, who ferved their Mafters on this condition to receive their wages, meaning that we ought to serve God out of love, and not for our own gain or advantage. But Sadoc, or Saduc, & Baithus interpreted this godly faying into a wicked sence, teaching, that there was no reward after this life; and therefore denied the future state, and framed their herefie. The third feet was that of the Effer or Effeni, who as it's probable sprang from the Pharifees, though when it began be uncertain. Philo Judens thinketh they were fo called from their holinesse Essonia, as though Osidos, though more probable from Hafi the Syriack, whence the Greek OsiGmay be derived. The Hebrew fignifieth such as live apart from noise, which agreeth much with those Esseni, who like the Pythagoraans kept silence, and lived in deferts or Villages by themselves, far from others. They had skill in physick, and thence some would derive their name from the Hebrew Ala, which fignifieth to heal. This Sect was later than that of the Pharifees, and fome think it arose at this time when Hyrcanus turned Saduce, and persecuted the Sect of the Pharifees; for then might many of the Pharifees to shun persecution depart into the Wildernesse and desert places, and afterwards be called Effei or Effeni, who were held more ftrict than the Pharifees

4. But, (to return to our matter) John firnamed Hyrcanus left five fons, whereof Aristobulus the eldest (firnamed Philellen for his love to, and familiarity with the Greeks) succeeded him, and first changed his Principality into a Kingdom, ferting a Diadem on his head, 481 years after the return of hillwhat the the Jews from the captivity of Babylon. His second brother he loved exceedingly, so as he made him his partner in the Kingdom; but shut up the rest the Principa. in prison, and with them his mother, to whom his father had left the Principali-

his will he did it. For he (Antigonus by name) returning victorious from V. C. 649. the Wars, at the Feast of the Tabernacles, marched up with his Soldiers to the Temple, as intending to offer factifice for his brother then lying fick. This His cruelty gamft his mother and wethren, was presently interpreted to Aristobulus as an effect of a bad intention towards him, and a sufficient sign of affecting the Kingdom, and it was reprefented to him, as if Antigonus would prefently come down and kill him. accounting it folly when he might reign alone, to be content with a communicated honour. He having rejected tales heretofore, did not easily give credit to them now, but to provide for his own fecurity, and yet shun suspicion, he commanded some of his guard to stand in an obscure place where he was to come, and if he came armed, then to kill him, but if not, then not to move lefthim, and he fent also to him to come without any guard at all. But the Queen and the rest of the conspirators, perswaded the messenger to deliver his errand on the clean contrary way, fo that Antigonus thinking nothing, but ty, and proceeded so far in unnatural cruelty, as to starve her to death. Not A. M. 3900. ty, and proceeded to far in unmatural cruency, as to trained fact to death. 1900 long after, he caused to be made away also his beloved brother, though against 01.188, and 4. C. 649.

coming to see his brother, was there murdered. After it was done, Aristobulus prefently repented of the deed, though knowing nothing concerning the meffage, which to increased his difease, as he vomited blood for anguish with Alexan-

vading Cælc-

Hath Gaza

betrayed to.

of mind. This being carried out by one of his attendants, chanced to be spile in that place where Antigonia was slain, which being judged by them that faw it, to be done of purpose, they cried our against the thing, and made fuch a noise, that the King hearing it, forced the matter out of them; after which his Agony increased to highly (crying our, that his blood was required for that of his mothers and brothers which he had spilt, and chiding as it were his body for retaining the Soul required of him by their Ghofts) that in great rorment of conscience he presently breathed out his last, when he had scarce reigned a whole year. He profited much his Countrey by his Government, and

He dieth within a years making War upon Iturea, laid a great part of it to his own Dominions, and frighted the Inhabitants by threatning banishment to them, into an imbracement of Circumcifion, and the other Jewish Rites.

5. He being dead, his wife Salome (called by the Greeks Alexandra) Fostphus Anja fer his brothers at liberty, of which Fannaus (or Alexander) was made King, lib.13, 140,10 excelling his brothers, as in age so also in modelly. His father is said to have hared him, and fent him out of his fight to be educated in Galile presently after his birth, because being follicitous for his two eldest sons, and desiring of God to know his Successor, his likenesse was represented to him in his fleep. Being seized of the Kingdom, he put to death one of his brothers that conspired against him, but the other who was contented with a private life he much honoured. Having setled his affairs at home, he went and A1M 3001 brother fuccoedeth him. befieged Ptolemais, which with Gaza onely of the Sea-Towns remained unconquered, besides the Tower of Straton (since called Casarea) and Dora, which Zorlus the Tyrant had got into his hands. At this time the two brothers

Antiochus Grypus (called by Tofephus Philometor) and Antiochus Cyzicenus in Syria, attending nothing but the destruction of each other, the Defendants had little hope of any succour from either of them, onely Zoslus, who gaped after the Citie himself, gave them a little relief. There remaining no help to be hoped for, but either from Egypt, or Cyprus (whither Lathurus had been expelled by his mother Cleopaira) they fent to him, defiring he would rescue them out of the hands of Alexander, giving him hopes, that he should not onely have them, but the Inhabitants of Gaza also on his side, and that Zoilus, the Sidonians and others would come and help him. He being puffed up with these promises made what haste he could, but Demanetus one of their Cirizens perswaded them for reasons formerly recited to refuse his help, notwithstanding which he came on, and pitching his Tents near the Citie, see-Besieging Pto-ing he had no Message from them, began to be discouraged. But Zoilus and the Gazeans came shortly to him, and desired his help against Alexander, who wasted their Territories, whereupon the siege was raised before Prole-fiege is raifed by Ptolomy mais, and Alexander departed home, where he attempted to overturn by Lathurus. policy the design of Ptolomy. He sent privily to Cleopatra, exciting her a- A. M. 2006. gainst him, but openly counterfeiting himself his Friend and Ally, pro- 01, 170, 1871 mised him 300 Talents of silver to take off Zoilus the Tyrant, and lay his Ter- V. (. 654.

ritories to his Dominions. At first he willingly imbraced his friendship and Seleucid 213. took Zoilus, but then finding he had fent underhand to his mother, renounced Alexand, 5. took Zoilus, but then finding ne had lent underhand to his mother, renounced it again, and went and befieged Ptolemais, which had thut the Gates on him, L. Valois File. where leaving part of his Army to continue the fiege, he departed thence to co coff. invade Judea. Alexander also understanding his purpose, raised an Army of 50000 (some say 80000) and went to meet him. 6. He took Affichis a Town in Galile, ferting upon it at unawares on the Idem 181d. 6.

Sabbath, and then attempted to do the like by Sephoris, a place not far di- cap. 21. stant from the other; but was received with such resolution, as he lost many of his men, and arose from thence to go to meet Alexander, whom having found to have reached the River Jordan, he pitched his Tents on this

Who invadeth Judea, fide over against him. Alexander suffered him quietly to passe the River, and overthroweth Afoolishly supposing that the victory would be more easie if the Enemy had it on his back, and fo could not run away. For fome time the victory was battel. doubtfull, or feemed to incline to Alexanders party, till his Soldiers being beaten back by a referve of fresh men, and having none to succour them were pur to flight, and the Enemy gave the chace as long as he could hold a sword for wearinesse, so that 30000 (some have affirmed 50000) were slain in this battel. Prolomy ranging up and down the Countrey, fell at length into some Villages, which seeing full of Women and Children, he commanded his Soldiers to kill them promifcuoufly, and cutting off their limbs to cast them into hot Caldrons, that a report going that his Army are mans flesh, the Enemy might thereby be discouraged. But Cleopaira hearing that her son Bur is driven thus prospered in his undertakings, thought her self concerned therein, espe-

back by his cially he being fo near her, and therefore the came against him with Forces own mother. both by Land and Sea, over which the placed Checeias and Ananias, both Tews. Her son thinking he had her at advantage, being now out of Egypt, hasted thither, but she had left it so provided, as he could not do any thing according to his purpose, and was beaten back to Gaza by a party she fent after him. She having taken Ptolemais, Alexander thither came to her, where he was received as a person distressed by her adversary, and one who onely had tefuge in her felf. Some advited her to feize his Countrey into her hands, & not to suffer so many good Tens to be at the command and pleafure of one man: but Ananias counting it wickednesse for him to disposesse who entereth a man received into friendship, and his own Kinsman besides, of his estare, and withall thinking that thereby he should lose himself with the Fews in all places, he perswaded her to the contrary, and so she entred into a League with him at Scychopolis, a Citie of Calefyria. 7. Here yhe being freed from all danger, both from mother and fon, he Idemibid. pre ently made another expedition into Calefyria, took Gadara after he had layen ten moneths before it, and Amathin a strong Castle upon the River

Jordan, where Theodoris the fon of Zenon had laid up his Treasure, who falling suddenly upon the Jews, cut off 10000 of them, and plundred the carriages. Yer he was not at all terrified herewith from ferting upon Raphia He again inand Anthedon (called afterwards Agrippias by Herod) which he took, and perceiving Prolomy to be gone to Cyprus, and his mother into Egypt, being angry with them of Gaza, for calling him in to help them against him, he fet upon the Cirie, and wasted their grounds." In the mean time Apollodous their General brake out into his Camp by night with 12000 men, and as long as night lasted had the better of it; but as soon as it was day the Jews Uniting themselves, and encouraged after they saw Ptolomy was not come whom they expected, charged the Towns-men so fiercely as they slew 1000 men. For all this they would not yield, expecting the coming of Areiss the Arabian King; but the Citie was taken ere they could see his face , by the treachery of Lysimachia the brother of Apollodotis, whom he envying for being in so great grace with the people, murdered, and then getting a party close about him delivered up the place. Alexander upon his entry did no A. M. 3909. harm to the Inhabitants, but not long after gave Commission to his Soldiers Ol. 171.ann. 1. to kill and flay all they would, who ranging up and down with fury and flyord, V.C. 658. to kill and thay all they would, who ranging up and down with rury and twoid, as many of them loft their lives as they flew, the Defendants fighting couragiously, and fetting their houses on fire, left they should become a prey, to continuously, and fetting their houses on fire, left they should become a prey, to continuously, and fetting their houses on fire, left they should become a prey, to continuously, and fetting their houses on fire, left they should become a prey, to continuously, and fetting their houses on fire, left they should become a prey to continuously. them and some killed their Wives and Children with their own hands, ra- Anobarba ther than they should be led into Captivity. It hapned that at the same c. casso Lontime that Alexander was let in, the Senate was met, which confilling of 500 gino Coff. men, he put all to the sword, and then razing the Citie, returned to Jernfalem a year after he first fate down before Gaza.

8. He was not at all affected by his Subjects, which they clearly manifeffed Idemibid. 60 when the feast of Tibernacles came. For then as he was about to factifize De bello lib.1. they threw Orenges at him, and rail'd at him; upbraiding him with Captivity 649.3. (that I suppose of his Grand-mother ob jested before to his Father) and crying out that he was not worthy of so high an Office as the high Priest-hood. Being inraged hereat he flew about 6000 of them; made up the place about the Altar with boards to defend himfelf for the time to come from the violence of the multitude, and furnished himself with Guards hired out of Pissidia and Cilicia. Then overthrew he the Arabians, and imposed Tribute upon Iiii 2

by the Ara-

Wars with

and fawcy

Subjects.

his rebellious

bians, and hath

Contemporary with the Empire of the Macedonians,

His death.

gain the Pha

Which she

This raifeth

reigneth her

give Hostages.

Countrey of the Gerafens, where being spent with the force of the disease, he died before the Walls of that place, in the 27th year of his reign, and of his age the 49. A.M. 3927. and the third of the 173 Olympiad, some 76 years before the birth of Christ.

10. His wife Alexandra seeing his end approaching, bewailed much the condition of her felf and children, being deflitute of fuccour, and about to 01.175. an. 3. enter upon the government of a People, likely enough to be untoward to V, C, G, G, G, wards them, which bore him to much ill will. He advised her, that the Selencid, 231. might reign fecurely, first to keep close his death till that place should be management of the Kingdom. The elder of their fons was not at all made for government, but dull and heavy. She being in great grace with the People, because she ever had pretended to dislike the proceedings of her husband, made Hyrcanus the High-Priest, not so much out of respect to his birthright as his lazinesse, keeping the title of Queen and Governesse, though indeed all things were ordered at the will and pleasure of the Pharifes, whom the People were commanded toobey, and against whom all fuch constitutious as were made by Hyrcanus were taken away. Yet she took care for something her self, for she kept in pay a great number of foreiners, and fo increased her power, that she became formidable abroad, and such a terror to the neighbouring petty Governours, that the constrained them to within the Kingdom; for the Pharifees knowing no moderation in the pro-fecution of their own ambitious and envious defires, caused her to put to death those that had counselled her husband to deal cruelly with the 800 before mentioned, and they made away divers of them; till such time as those of most power and esteem being backed by Aristobulus (who complained of the too great power of his mother) came to Court, and there laid before her how unworthy it was, that they should suffer so much for their faithfulnesse to Alexander, and how joyful news it would be to Aretas the Arabian, and others, to hear that the Kingdom was deprived of fuch men, who had done good service against him. They belought her, that if their adversaries were not satisfied with what blood they had spilt already, to give them leave to depart, and provide for their own safety, or if that could not be granted, to

11. Yet no great matters were done abroad, but firs sufficient hapned gained, then going victoriously to Ferusalem to send for the chief of the His advice to Pharifees, whom both he and his Father had grievously offended, and thereby incurred the hatred of the People, and to gain their favour to shew them his body, and give them power of disposing of it at their pleasure, either as to bestow burial upon it, or cast it out without Sepulture, or otherwise to abuse ir at their pleasure; and withall, to promise them to do nothing without their counsel and advice. The Castle being taken, she ordered her affaires according to his direction, whereby she purchased the love of the Pharisees, who going out and speaking to the People, related the great things done by Alexander, fignified to them the losse of a just King, and so stirred up the de de bello ne multitude to mourning and lamentation, that hereby she procured him (even pring. as he foretold her) a more honourable burial than else he could have had, and fo sumptuous a funeral as any of his Predecessors obtained. Alexander left two fons by this his wife, Hyrcanus and Aristobulus; but to her left the should appeale them, they answered, if he would kill himself, for scarce could they pardon him being dead. Then fent they to Demetrius, firnamed Identified to Acerus, inducing him with great promises to come and aid them, so that Antiq libra joyning with him they made up an Army of 3000 horse, and 40000 foot, cap, 22. their King having 26200 men in his Army. Both at the first laboured to draw their Enemies men to revolt, Demetrius those Greeks that were in pay with Alexander , and he the Tems which had called him in , but this fucceeding on no part they both refolved to end the controversie with dint of fword. Demerries had the better of it (all Alexanders Auxiliaries being flain, though they behaved themselves most gallantly) but he was no whit better, but much worse for his victory. For the Jens taking pity of their King after this his defeat, about 6000 went over to him which fo discouraged Demetrius, that he thereupon retreated into his own Countrey. 9. They thenceforth waged War with him by themselves, but still had the worst of it, and many of them were slain. At length he forced the strongest up into a Town called Bethoma, which reducing, he took them in it, and brought them up to Jerufalem, where he caused 800 of them to be A.M. 1910

The Juggan Aing aom

the Moabites and Galadites, and levelled Amathus with the ground, Theodo-rm not once daring to ingage. But making another expedition against the Arabians, he was drawn into an ambush by Obeda their King, and being thrust amongst the Craggy and precipitous Rocks by a multitude of Camels.

he hardly escaped himself by flight to Jerusalem, his whole Army being cut begin fresh stirs, which continued fix years, during which time they fought often, but he had the better, and destroyed no lesse than fifty thousand of them.

This yet was no matter of joy to him thus to lofe the strength of his own

Kingdom a therefore he endeavoured to make up the breach, and by fair means to be reconciled to them. But being asked by him wherewith he

He is defeated off. Then were his Rebellious Subjects encouraged by this his overthrow to nailed to Crosses, and their Wives and Children to be slain in their fight, yet ol 173,444 living he beholding the Spectacle from an high place, banquetting, and dally- V.c. 619. ing with his women. He was highly provoked with that flubborn people, who Seleucid 218, not onely brought him often into extream danger of life and estate, but not contenting themselves with what they could do by their own power, without calling in of forein aid, had reduced him to that necessity, that he was glad to restore those places he had subdued in the Countrey of Moab and Galaad to the Anabian; and for animadversion upon them they nicknamed him Thracida. About 8000 men got away by night, and passed all the time he lived, in Exile, and so ever after the Kingdom continued free from feditions. Antiochus Dionyfus King of Syria intending to Idem Astinial, make an invasion of Arabia through his Kingdom, he getting knowledge of lib.13. (19.13). it, drew a Ditch from Caparfale (afterwards called Antipatris) as far as & Debillo the Sea of Toppe, to hinder him, Arengthning it with a Bulwark, and Fores lib. 1. 1494. built, here and there upon it where he expected him. But he burning these up easily got over, and then invading Arabia, was there slain in battel by Areas the King, who was made King of Calefyria, and making an inroad into Judea, overthrew Alexander at Adida, and forcing him to subscribe to his own conditions, then departed. Afterwards Alexander gathering to-distribute them into several places of strength, that there they might live quietly and meanly, with which condition they would be contented, feeing Fortune so frowned upon the favourers of Alexander. They setting these things off with all advantage possible to gain compassion, and calling on the ghoft of Alexander, Ariffobulus also foundy reprehended his mother, but withall added, that they were justly punished, for permitting the chief power to a woman, as if no posterity had been left by his Father. She not knowing what to do, defivered into their hands all her Castles, except three, in which A. M. 3934. the had hoarded up her choisest goods, and shortly after sent her younger son ol. 177. au, 2. 2021 April 2021 Mennauc. who troubled forely Damascus. but he returned V. 6. 683. against Prolomy Mennaus, who troubled forely Damasous; but he returned Seleucid, 242. without having done any thing. A report went at the same time, that Ti- Alexandre 8.

gether his Forces, went and took divers Towns with all the Valley of Antiochus (as it was called) and the Calle Gamala, and returned to Ferula-His Conquests abroad. lem at the end of three years, joyfully and honorably received then by his people for his valour; and indeed at this time the Nation, what by his own, and the diligence of his Predecessors, arrived at that height for dominion and glory abroad, that they enjoyed many Cities in Syria, Idumaa, Phanicia, and Autonit, lib. other Countreys; whereof a Catalogue of most Josephus hath left unto us, 13, 149,13; and amongst which Polls a Town of Most was destroyed, because the Inhabitants refused to receive the Jewish Rites. Alexander towards his latter end fell to drunkennesse, whereby he contracted a Quartan Ague, which held him, three years; yet recovered he his antient temper of mind, though not of body, and following on his Wars laid fiege to Ragola beyond Jordan, in the

She dieth.

Who belieg-

granes the Armenian had invaded Syria with 50000 men, and would spedily come into Judaa, which so terrified both Queen and People, that they sent Ambassadors to him then lying before Ptolemais; for Celene or Cleopatra then reigned in Syria, and had advised the Subjects to exclude him. He kindly received the Ambassadors, because come so far to tender him respect, and gave them incouraging words. And after he had taken Ptolemais, word being brought him, that Lucullus in his pursute of Mithridates the Great, King of Ponens, was entred Armenia, and wasted the Country, he being son in Law to that King, and therefore taking his part, departed home with all Expedition.

12. After this, Alexandra falling grievously sick, Aristobulus judged that now or never was there a fit opportunity for him to doe fomething, and left the Pharifees should get all into their hands, departed by night with one man in his company, and got the Castles within a short time into his power, which the had committed to their adversaries, even to the number of 22 within little more than fifteen dayes. This being known, she and all the People

Ariflobulus her Were struck with consternation, knowing that he would take the Supreme Power, and fearing they should dearly pay for what they had done to his faaffumeth the miliars. They thought good then to fecure his wife and children in the Castate of King. Ale adjoyning to the Temple at Jerusalem. He increased in followers and in power daily, taking the state of a King upon him, and got an Army from the Mountain L banus, Trachonius, and the petty Princes thereto adjoyning. The chief of the Tens therefore with Hyrcanus came to the Queen, befeeching her that some course might be entered into to prevent his attempts, who now had gotten so many convenient places. She with shortnesse of mind told them they might do whatfoever they thought meet and convenient for the Commonwealth, that they had liberty and strength enough both as to Soldiers, and money also the nervs of War; but as for her self, she could look to nothing, her body being now Tpent; and shortly after she breathed her last, having reigned nine years, and lived 73. A woman of wisdom, courage, and industry above her fex, and who in the whole course of her go- A. M. 2946. vernment could not be drawn (for the generality) from moderation, justice, 01, 197, 41, 4 and honesty. But whereas she looked more at the present than suture times, V.c. 685.

feemed to fide with the Enemies of her house, and to have made the King- Selevid, 144. dom naked of fit Rulers, after her death the effects of her mal-administration was felt by her family, which came into fuch misfortunes, as it mifcaried and fell from that power, wherein she had laboured and taken so much pains to establish it. 13. For Hyrcanus having entered upon the High-Priest bood in the third Josephus Atyear of the 177 Olympiad, Q. Hortenfins, and Q. Metellus Creticus being Confuls, his brother Aristobulus now presently made Warre upon him. funa & 6.5. A battel being fought near Jericho, most of Hyrcanus his Soldiers revolted to the other, whereby he was forced to betake himfelf into that Castle where Aristobulus his wife and children were kept, and he now made his condititions to be fuffered to live quietly a private life, remitting to his brother the Kingdom and Principality, changing effates with him, he removing into Ari-Stobulus his private house, and Aristobulus to the Court, which covenant was folemuly fworn to, and confirmed in the Temple. But not long did Ariflobulus by this agreement hold, being broken by the means of Anipaier, who being postesseth his Governour at that time of Idumea, feared the power of Aristobulus, and brother Hyrea- therefore endeavoured his destruction, both by stirring up Hyreanus and the most powerful of the Jews against him. The famousnesse of Herod son of this Antipater, causeth his original to be more enquired into. Nicolaus Damascenus to flatter the said Herod, derived his pedegree from the chief of the Tems, which returned from Babylon; but Josephus denieth that, and reports him to have been an Idumean born. * Others have delivered, that Lib. 14.63 this Antipater, or Antipas, was the fon of one Herod the Priest of Apollo's a Vide call Temple at Afcalon, which City being invaded by the Idumaan thieves, he Eccl. Hill tha was taken with other spoils out of the Temple, and whereas his father was cap. 7.

not able tor ansom him, was brought up after the manner of the Idumaans, and became very familiar with Hyrcanns the High-Priest. Josephus faith, that he was conflicted Governour of Idumaa by Alexander the King, and his wife, and then minding his own interest, entred into society with the Arabians, Gazans, and Ascalonies, having purchised their friendship Anipates fir- with great gifts. He professed to the Jews that it was unjust, that Aristobn-eth up Hyrea- Ins should be suffered to enjoy his asurped power, from which he had cast hu just right, down his elder brother, and had deprived him of the prerogative of his age. The fame things he often incultated into Hyrcanus, adding withall, that his life was in danger, except he would in good time fave himself by flight, for that the friends of his brother still consulted, how they might rid him out of the way, and establish the Kingdom upon the other.

14. He being a plain and well-meaning man, gave no great credit to these slanders; but the other ceased not for all that to invent fresh accusations of Aristobilus, as if he laid in wait for his life, and ar length hardly obtained of him to flie to Aretas King of the Arabians, because his Country was nigh to Judaa. Antipater went first to that King, to get a promise from him not to betray his suppliant into the hands of his enemies, which being obtained,

And procurhe returned to ferufalem, and thence not long after taking Hyrcanns out this postering to personners, and thouse the series kept his Court. Being to Antack king by night, by great journeys came to Petra, where Aretak kept his Court. Being to Antack king by night, by great journeys came to Petra, where Aretak kept his Court. Being very great with the Arabian, he laboured to perswade him to restore Hyrcanus, and with his importunity and gifts at length prevailed. Hyrcanus also promiting, if by his means he should recover the Kingdom, to restore to him that Country with the twelve Towns, which his Father Alexander had eaken from him. Areeas being drawn in by these promises, undertook this Expedition with 50000 men, and overthrew Aristobulus, who being first forfaken of his followers, who now fled amain to his brother, retired to 7e- Jesephus ut rufalem, where the Arabian and Hyrcanus befieged him in the Temple. Prins cap. 3.

The Feast of the Passover happing during the siege, the Priests who onely who be committed, remained with Aristobulus, that the Sacrifices might not be omitted, bargained with the beliegers for beafts to be fold them for that service, but when they had let down the money from the walls, were derided by them. But this wickednesse the Historian observeth to have been punished with great storms and tempests, which procured extraordinary scarcity of Corn. In this mean while Pompey the Great being diverted by the War with Tygranes in Idonean, 4. Armenia, sent Seaurus his Questre, as Appian calls him, into Syria, who coming straight to Damascus (taken then by Merellus and Lollius) hasted of 192. and 1. without intermission into Judes. To him both parties sent, to desire his V. C. 690 friendship and help, but though each promised as much as the other (viz.400 Selencid, 249. Talents) yet he closed with Aristobulus, being counted more free and rich, Aristob. 6, and whose request was more easier to be fulfilled, in driving away the Nabashaans, than that of the other, to take the place which he held, being fo

15. Taking the money of Aristobulus he easily raised the siege, denounceing to Aree is that he should depart, except he would be declared an Enemy But is beaten of the People of Rome; and then returned to Damascus. Aristobulus of by Scaurus, having gotten this advantage against his Enemies, followed them with a great Army, and joyning battel overthrew them at a place called Pappron, about 7000 of them being flain, and amongst the rest Cephalio the brother of Antipater. But not long after Pompey came to Damafons, and going about Colefiria, thither were fent to him Ambassadors from several parts. Aristobulus fent him an excellent present, being a golden Urn of the value of 500 Talents, which afterwards was dedicated by him amongst other things in the Capitol at Rome. Shortly after were fent some to him from both the brothers ; Both brothers Antipater from Hyrcanus, and one Nicodemus from the other, to whom he fine to Pompey answered, that coming to Damascus he would hear the cause. Thither was occuplain. fent also an Ambassage of the Fews themselves, who declared they were unwilling to live under Kings, it being the custom of their Country to yield obedience to the Prioft of their God; and that though these two were of that race of Priests, yet being desirous to change the Government into another form, they thereby intended to enflave them. Hyrcanus accused his brother of ambition and violence, in that he had gone about to deprive him of his birth-right, and the other excused himself by the necessity of the thing, left the Principality should have been transferred into another family by his heavy duluesse, which rendred him incapable of employment. To Hyrcanus bare witnesse 1000 Tems which anispaier had brought for that purpose, but to Aristobulus a Company of esteminate Gallants, ridiculous to all for their fantastick bravery. Pompey having heard them, and disapproved of Aristobulus his violence, dismissed them both kindly at present, promifing he would come to them as foon as he had inspected the affairs of the Nabathaans, bidding them to be quiet in the mean time, and using Aristo-Who fideth with Hyrcanbulus civilly, left he should stop up the passages. But hereby he won nothing upon him, for not expecting his promifes, he went to Delium, and thence betook himself into Fudes. 16. Pompey being offended with this carriage of Ariflobulus, took the Idencaps on Army which he had provided against the Nabathaans, and with other sup-plies out of Syria, and the Legions which were at his command followed him. Coming into Judea, and hearing he was in a Castle near Coreas, he fent to him to come and speak him, which he obeyed, being advised by those about him to take heed of Warring with the Romans. When he had disputed the case with his brother, he returned to the Castle, and so he did divers times, willing to please Pompey, and pretending a willingnesse to obey him in all things, but providing still for the War, fearing the Principality might be bestowed upon Hyrcanus. Pompey in conclusion required him Lib.14.14,14,7 And followto deliver up into his hands the Garrisons, and write to the Governours of eth Ariflobu-Liss into Judea, them for that purpose; which he obeyed also, but then presently departed A.M. 3942. to Jerusalem there to prepare for War. He followed him, and in the way heard how Mithridates of Pontus was killed by his fon Pharnaces. His first nights quarters he took up at Jericho, where the Trees grew, that being cut distilled with the precious Balfamum; and the next day marching towards Jerusalem, Aristobulus forethinking what he had done, came and met him, offered him money, and referred himself to his pleasure, so that omitting War he would order things in a peaceable manner. He pardoning him. fent Gabinius to Jerufalem to fetch the money ; but he being fhut out by Aristobulus his Soldiers, returned empty handed, which Pompey taking in great difdain, committed Aristobulus to custody, and went himself to the Citie. There were two factions disagreeing from each other, that of Ari- cap. 8. flobulus brake down the bridge, which went out of the Citie to the Temple, tion of the Jews, who thought it finfull to do any thing on the Sabbath-dayes. but defend themselves. The greatest Tower being battered down, the Romans broke in (Cornelius Faustus the son of Sylla first entring the breach) Temple, and and then made flaughter of 12000, the Priests even then (as they had done all the fiege) not neglecting to offer facrifices, and amongst the rest Absataketh it. lom the Uncle, and father-in-law of Aristobulus was taken, being the voungeft fon of Hyrcanus. Pompey with many followers entred into the Temple. and looked on those things, which it was unlawfull for any but the Priests to behold; yet touched nothing he faw, so great was his abstinency. The Temple was taken as Josephus tells us, in the third moneth, and the fast day, which was kept in memory of Jehoink,m's burning the Roll, in the 179 Olympiad, C. Antonius and M. Tullim Cicero being Confuls, A. M. 3942. about 62 years before the birth of Christ. Pompey restored the Priesthood to Hyrcanus, with the Government Idem ind. of the Countrey, * (forbidding him the wearing of the Diadem) because * Lib. 20.49.81 amongst several other services he had done him during the siege, he had also and therein fortified themselves, whereupon the other let in the Romans into the Citie and Palace. Then did Pompey besiege the Temple, filled up with the great toyl of his Soldiers the Ditch before it, and then with Engines brought from Tyre battered the Wall, taking occasion at the supersti-

Grong both of it felf and by defence.

Gshinius, and by Gabinius.

Contemporary with the Empire of the Macedonians. He restoreth kept the Countrey-men from taking up Arms for Aristobalus. Then pur-

the PrieRting to death the Authors of the Sedition, he made the Jews Tributaries to the hoed to Hyrpeople of Rome, the Cities they held in Calefyria he took away, and fubcaus forbidding him the Diadem, and jected them to a Governour of their own, and the whole Nation much elevated then with successe abroad, he contracted within its own bounds; Aricarrieth Ari- flobulus & his brother being the cause of all these troubles of the losing of the finding and his Countreys liberty to the Romans, who within a short time exacted above 10000 Talents of it. Pompey having left Syria to the Government of Scan-rus, with two Legions hasted to Rome, leading Arifobalus bound thither tage 10. 6 with him, with two fons, and as many daughters. One of his fons efcaped de bello lib.1. in the journey, and returned into Judaa, where he got together a conside-caps. rable power, and awed his Uncle Hyrcanns unable to refifthim, and who, when now he was about to repair the Walls of Terusalem, demolished by Pompey, was forbidden to do it by the Romans. But within a while Gabinius was fent from Rome to Govern Syria. He undertook the War against him. now having 10000 foot, and 1500 horse at his Command, but for all these he overthrew him not far from Ferufalem, killing and taking 6000 of them, and then besieged him in the Castle Alexandrium whither he had sled, Leaving here sufficient strength for carrying on the siege, he went and visited the Countrey, causing divers Cities to be re-edified, and then returning, and His fon Ari-Robulus elcamore powerfully inforcing the fiege; Alexander yielded himself, and the peth, and is defeated by Castles, which by his mothers advice to Gabinius were demolished, lest they should nourish another War. Gabinius then went to Jerusalem, and esta-

he himself al. blished Hyrcanus in the Priesthood, but cantonized the Countrey into five lo getteth a. parts, which he ordered to be governed by an Ariftocratical way. One diway from vision was to be governed by an Assembly at Forusalem, another by one at Gadara, a third at Amathus, a fourth at Jericho, and a fifth by one fitting at Saphora a Town of Samaria. The Jews very gladly imbraced this Government. But Aristobulus not long after escaped from Rome, and coming into Judea ministred occasion of further trouble. 18. Coming into his own Countrey, he prefently found-some who out of Iden ibid.

defire of innovation fided with him, amongst the which was Pitholans the lib. 14. cap. 11. Governour of Jerusalem, who revolted to him with 1000 men. He first A.M. 3949. feized upon Alexandrium, and went about to re-edifie the Walls thereof, but 01.181, 400,1. knowing that Gabinius had fent against him three of his Officers, he departed V. c. 698. toward Macharus, dismissing the unarmed multitude, and making a choice Hyreani 8. of 8000 men. The Romans following he gave them battel, in which he fought flourly, till his men being overpowered, 5000 of them were flain upon the place, almost 2000 fled to an Hill not far of, and a thousand with him, breaking through the Enemy to Macharus. There he thought to renew the War having fortified the place, but being besieged, and holding it out two dayes, he could no longer withstand, but was raken, and together with his fon Aristobulus, (who it seems got away with him) sent back to Rome, where agreed with their mother, in confideration of the delivering up of the Castles formerly mentioned, were sent back by the Senate. Then prepared Gabinius an expedition against the Paribians, but puffing over Euphrates, was hired by Ptolomy Auletes to reduce him into his Kingdom, as we faid in the foregoing Chapter. In this voyage he used Hyrcanus, and especially Anipater, who furnished him with supplies, both of men and provisions, and prevailed with the Fews, inhabiting about Pelusium, to give him passage. But during his absence Alexander the son of Aristobulus made work enough for him after his return; for having gotten together a great multitude of Jons, he resolved to cut off all the Romans which inhabited those parts. Gabinius senp Antipater before to see if he could perswade the people to be quiet, and he effected it with many; but 30000 remaining still with Alexander, he came out and gave battel to the Romans, near the Mountain Itabyrius, wherein he lost 10000 men. Gabinius victoriously thence marched to Jerusalem, where serling things according to the pleasure of Ansipater, he went against the Nabateans whom he overthrew in one battel, and and sent back he was more narrowly looked to, but his sons, because Gabinius had so

Alexander his fon ftirreeh. bet is defeat-

Hered the fon of Antivater

his notable forwardness.

THOOM III

him, pretending an escape. Then returning to Rome, he left his Province to Crassus his Successor. 19. Crassus intending an expedition against the Parebians, came through cap, 14:

dismissed Mithridates and Orsanes, two noble Paribians who had sed une o that Countrey, and spoyled the Temple not onely of those 2000 Talents which Pompey had foared, but of all the Gold found there besides, which Craffus his fa- amounted to the fum of 8000 Talents more, though Eleazar the Treasurer had given him a beam of Gold weighing 900 pounds, and he had taken an crilege and punithment. Oath therewith to be fatisfied, and abstain from the money. But going against the Parthians, he received the reward of his Sacrilege and Perjury, being flain. Cassius flying into Syria defended it from the incursions of the Enemy, and being come to Tyre visited also Judea, where at the first onset he took Tarichaas, and therein 20000 Captives, which he laid away, and flew Pitholans the favourer of Aristobulus at the defire of Antipater, who now grew very confiderable, having entred into Confederacy and Alliance with divers Princes, and especially with the Arabian, out of whose Countrey he had married a wife of noble extraction, by name Cypris, on whom he begot four fons, Phasaelus, Herod, Joseph, and Pheroras, and a daughter named Salome, which fons he also sent into Arabia, there to be kept whilest he was ingiged in the War with Ariftobulus. When Pempey was driven beyond the Ionian Sea, and Cafar had got Rome into his power, he fet Aristobulus belloutming at liberty, and with two Legions fent him back into Syria, hoping that all that capa, Countrey, and round about Fudan, might be brought under by him; but he was prevented in his journey, being poyloned by those of Pompey's party, and lay in his own Countrey for some time unburied being Embalmed, till by Antony he was fent to be buried in the Sepulchre of his Ancestors. This expedition Aristobulus tained. For Philippio his fon being his Messenger, fell in Love with one of A. M. 3957.

> this time Pompey was flain; and then Antipater betook himself to Cafar, as Hyman 16. his interest led him, and by his great industry purchased his favour. 20. Cafar vvarring with young Ptolomy in Egypt, after the death of Pom- Idem ibid. & pey, Antipater joyned with Mithridates of Pergamus, who went down lib.14.14,144. thither with supplies; for whereas being hindred from coming to Pelusium, the fifters, named Alexandra, and married her, but his passion overcoming of 182 and both reason and nature, he killed his son, and rook the Lady to himself. By V. c. 706.

he was forced to flay about Alcalon, he perswaded the Arabians to help him. brought a supply of 2000 Tems himself, and procured divers Princes in Syria, as Ptolomy of Libarius, Famblichus, and others, to fend their men. Then great services at Pelusium did he special service, being the first that broke down the vvall and entred; and whereas the Tens inhabiting the Countrey of Onias hin-

dred them from going any further, he prevailed with them not to oppose, and more than that to furnish the Army with Provisions. At the battel at can to Delta he recovered the battel almost lost by Mithridates, and afterwards A.M. 3818, behaved himself very gallantly for Cafar, having received many wounds as 01.183. and the tokens of his valour. Some have delivered that Hyrcanus himself went V. C. 707. down into Egypt, and there deserved well of Cafar, but whether it was so Hyrtani 17.

Who reward- or not he endeavoured to require them both. For, Antigonus the fon of Aeth both him riftobulus coming with a great complaint to him against them (whereas raand Hyrcanus, ther in policy he should have complained of the putting to death his father and brother through the procurement of Pompey and his faction) he declined De bellete his requests upon the reply of Antipater, confirmed Hyraguns in the Priost-pilistens. bood, offered to Antipater what Government he would desire, and made lib. 14. him Procurator of Judaa, gave him leave to rebuild the Walls of the Citie Capp. 16,17. thrown down by Pompey, and caused these grants to be registred in the Capitol, and feconded them with divers decrees, both of himfelf and the Senate in favour of him and the Jows. Antipater then bringing Cafar on his tourney as far as the borders of Syria, returned and built up the walls, and going about the Country, by threatnings and other policy, contained the People in obedience, otherwise ready to rebel. And whereas he saw Hyrcanus heavy and dull, and unfit to manage the affaires of Government, he made his fon Phasaelus (who also commanded the Army) Captain of Ferusalem, and the Country adjacent, and committed Galife to the custody of his A. M. 3959. lem, and the Country adjacent, and committed Game to the curroup of his second fon Herod, being now extream young, as not exceeding fifteen years, 01. 183, an, 3, econd fon Herod, being now extream young, as not exceeding fifteen years, V. C. 708.

as our Author telleth us, except, as is most probable, that number be mista- Hycani 18. ken for 25. 21. Hered even at the very first gave testimony of what spirit and height of courage he would be, finding out presently occasion for the exercise of is. For at that time there being one Ezechias a notable Thief, who with a great company of followers used to infest the Country of Syria, he took and slew him with many others of that rout, which thing fo endeared him to the Syrians, that his name was fung throughout the Towns and Villages, Peace being by his means restored as it were unto the Country, and the People unto their possessions; and thereby became he known to Sexum Casar the President, and kinfman to the Diltator. Phafaelus his brother was hereby much flirred up to emulation, and most courteously behaved himself to those of Jern. A. M. 3961. falem, fo that their Father was honoured by the People like a King, and yet V. C. 710. notwithstanding preserved his fidelity intire to Hyrcame. But divers of the Hyrcani 20, chief of the Tenih Nation, understanding how he flourished both upon his & Jul. Cafare 5. own account and that of his sons, inwardly fretted thereat, and the rather, M. Antonio because he made use of Hyrcanus for his own ends, as they conceived, have coss. because he made use of Hyrcanus for his own ends, as they conceived, haveing contracted friendship with the great ones, and Rome, and perswaded him to fend them money, yet getting to himself the credit and profit of the gift. But especially the forward and bold disposition of Herod affrighted them, whom they looked upon as a young and growing Tyrant, and therefore they grievously enveighed against Antipater to Hyrcanus, as one who caried away all the profit of the Kingdom, an empty name being onely left to himfelf, and laboured to bring him into fuspicion, hinting, that ete long the vizard would be taken off, and he would dearly pay for the negligence of his own affaires. This they enforced by that bold act of Herod's killing Ezechias, and the rest, in contempt of the Laws, which suffer no man, how wicked soever, to be put to death, till he first be cast by the sentence of his Judges. He is fum-Hyrcanus though flow enough to believe any thing, yet having these things moned to Feussian to an- often founding in his ears, together with the lamentations of the mothers of those that were flain, grew something moved, and summoned Hered up to fwer for killing Ezechias Jerusalem, to give an account of his actions before the Judges. 22. Herod having setled the affairs of Galile, appeared, but with a guard, as his Father had writtento him; yet with a moderate one, left taking care taem ibid, for his one fafety, he should affright Hyrcanus. Sexius Cafar hearing of it, threatningly wrote to Hyrcanus for to quit him, which he was inclinable enough unto, loving him as his own fon; and when he appeared to answer, Heappeareth, no body durst accuse him, except one Sameas bolder than the rest, who inveighed against him for the manner of his appearance, not suitable at all to humility or guilt. The meeting being incouraged by his words, had certainly condemned him, had not Hyrcanus foreseen it, and sent him out of the way on purpose, having put off the determination to the next day. Herod. retired therefore to Damascus, and afterwards visiting Sextus Cafar, and fetling his affaires, plainly gave out, that he would no more appear thought he were cited, at which they at Jerusalem fretted, and sought to perswade Hyro canus that all this tended to his ruine, and indeed he was convinced of it, yet could he do nothing, for that innate dulnesse which evermore accompanied him, though shortly after hearing that Herod having purchased of that Cafar the Government of Calefyria, he feared he would imploy his power. against him. And indeed so it hapned; for disdaining now that he had been commanded to come and plead his cause, he marched towards Jerusalem with but with a guard,

Kkkk 2

an Army, and if his Father and Brother had not met him, and shewed him the uncertainty of the event of War, and that he was rather beholding to Hyrcanus for discharging him, than had reason to be angry with him, for being as it were forced by others to fummon him up, he had made mischief And had done enough: But being prevailed with by them, he thought it was sufficient for mischief but him to have made a shew of his power, and so retreated. About this time that his father Cacilius Baffus in favour of Pompey made away Sexius Cafar, and got his Army to fubmit to him; but divers of Cefer's party came to revenue his diverced him, kinfman's death, and a War enfued about Apamea, whither Antipater, mindful of the benefits received from Cafar, fent his fons with aid unto his Captains. The Warre being drawn out in length, Marcus, (or rather

L. Statius Mureus) was sent to succeed Somens, and in the mean time Julius Appian debill L. Statius Mureus) was tent to tucceed sources, and in the mean time form of civil, ib, 3.

Cafar was fluin in the Senate house, which as it bred disturbance and trouble civil, ib, 3.

Paton, ib, 3. to the whole Roman Empire, so neither did Judes escape without it's portion cap, 69.

22. A civil War ensuing, the chief Captains on both fides runing up and Tolenbur down to provide themselves for it, Cassius one of the conspirators came into Antiquit, L. I. Spria, where raising the siege at Apamia, he drew both Murcus and Bassus c. 18, 6 19. to his own party, and then conquering the Country, levied men, and exacted & de belle it grievous contributions: But especially he afflicted Judan, laying a taxe of "9. above 700 Talents of Silver upon it. Antipater committed the railing of the money to his two fons and others, whereof Herod first of all raised that which was imposed upon Galile, and brought it, thinking it good policy to ruschase the favour of the Romans at the cost of others. Divers Cities with their Inhabitants were fold to make up the fum, amongst which were principal, Gophna, Emaus, Lydia, and Thamna; and Caffins having done this, was further to inraged, that he had flain Malichus also one of the Collectors. had not Hircanni by the means of Anipater, stopped his mouth with 100 Talents of his own money. But Antipater was badly rewarded by Malichus. for after the departure of Cassius he laid in wait for his life, thinking, that he being removed out of the way, the greater fecurity would happen to the affairs of Hyrcanus. Antipater getting knowledge of his intention, passed over Fordan, to provide himself to revenge this treachery, but he being a most crafty diffembler, so denied the matter with oaths to his two sons . that they reconciled him to their Father, who by his intercession then faved him. when Murcus the President of Syria upon the report of his attempting new matters, had refolved his death. But he preserved him to his own destruction. For his fon Herod for his good service being made Procurator of Syria by Cassius, with promise also of the Kingdom of Judea, if he got the bet- of 184, a.t. ter, Malichus then fo feared him, that he refolved to make him away, V. C. 711. which within a short time he effected, procuring him to be poyloned by Hyr- Hyresial.

lichies.

Grievous ex-actions by

Caffins.

620

and his care to his Country, before his own private or ambitious purposes. 24. His sons having knowlege of his death, Herod would have revenged Identification it out of hand, and by open force, but Phasaelus thought good rather to circumvent the murderer by some way of his own, lest a civil Warre should enfue, and therefore seemed to be satisfied with Malichus his flat denial of the thing, and fet himself about building of a monument for his Father. Hered visiting Samaria, and seeing it much out of order, laboured what he might to cherish it, and sate in Judgement, deciding the controversies of the People, and then presently came up to Ferufalem to the Feast with a Company of Soldiers at his heels. Malichus being exceedingly afraid of his coming, perswaded Hyrcanus not to permit him to enter, and he accordingly forbad him to approach so holy a solemnity with a prophane rout of strangers; but he not withstanding this, got in by night, and so affrighted Malichus that he betook him to his old trade of dissembling, weeping to him bitcerty for the death of Antipacer as his kind friend, yet in the mean time pro-

Antipate poy- canus his brother, and getting a Company of Soldiers to him, invaded the foned by Ms-Government of the City. This was the end of Antipater, a right good man, a great States-man, and one who had preserved his fidelity to his Prince, widing himself of a guard, so that for a time it was thought fit by Herods friends, nor to envince his decent, but for the flunning of suspition to treat him fairly; yes did he figuifie by leggera his Rather's death to Calling, who willed him a-Sun to revenge u, and gave order to the Tribunenthen lying at Tyre to af- Antiq ut print, they went and carled him crowns and money, and then Mered thought to be fift him in his just endeavours. Cassimanor long after having raken Laodicia, cap. 20. even with him; but he suspecting something at Tyre, our of desperation cast higher matters than ever in his bead. For his fon being kept hostage in that City, he resolved to go in, and cary him out by steatshipto Judge, and then, when Caffin should be ingaged in the War against Antony, to sollicit that Country to revolt, and get to himself the Principality, and cast out Hyrcame. But the cunning of Hered prevented him, who being aware of his project, invited him and Hyrcanus to Supper, and then fent to the Tribunes to come our to meet him, who remembring the commands of Cassius, encountering him on the shoar, slew him there. Hyecanus was so aftonished with fear at the fact, that he was not himfelf, and scarce recovering his sense, asked Hered who had flain Matiebus; to whom one of the Tribungs an-His fon Horod (Wered, the command of Coffins, at which he replyed, that Coffins had prethis ton throat revenue has been him and his Country, by cutting off him that plotted the deftru-Clion of both. Whether he spake this feriously, or approved the thing out of fear, is uncertain; but thus Hared revenged his Father's death upon Mali-

25. Cassims being gone out of Syria, there hapned a great stir at Jexusa-

lem by means of Falix, who being left there Commander, the Soldiers artempted violence upon Phasaelus, intending by his death to revenge that of 6.10. Malichus upon his brother Morod. It hapned that at that time Horod living at Damaseus with Fabins the Roman Captain, was fick, and unable to come and help his brother, but he by himself was too hard for Falix, and forced him

Falleth fick. into a Tower, whence he let him go with his life, and then expollulated much with Hyroanus, objecting ingratisade so him for taking Falix his part, and fuffering the brother of Malichus to feize upon divers Caftles; for now he held many, and Massada amongst the rest, the strongest of all. But Harod after his recovery regained them all from him, suffering him to depart quierly out of Maffada upon his desire. Antigonus the fon of Ariftabulus about this time sobribed Fabius, that he suffered him to get himself an Army, and cap, 21, Ptolomy Minnaus because of the former affinity betwirt them, made him his fon in Law, Marion alfo, who by Cassius his means had subjected Tyre, and divers places of Syria, came in to his help, having feized upon three Caffels in Gatile, but Horod also going against them, had them all surrendred by the Tyrians, whom he dismiffed very graciously, our of respect to their City, and then marched against Antigonus, whom being scarcely entred the Coasts of Judan he overthrew. Returning to Jerufalem he was received very honourably, not onely by the People, but Hyrcanns also, who had of late received him into his family, contracting him to Marianne the daughter of Alexander, the fon of Aristobulus, and his own niece by his daughter; by which wife he was made a father of three fons and two daughters, having on a former wife (and his own Country-woman) named Dores, begotten Autipasser his eldeft fon. But now within a while Cassius and Brutus were overthrown at Philippi by Cafar and Antony, of whom the former returning into Italy, the other came over into Afa, which gave occasion to new stirs in

26. Antony being come into Bithynia, Ambassadors were fent to him thi- cap. 22. Sinia gudaa ther from all Countries, and amongst the rest came fome from the chief of was the ap- the Jews, to complain of Phasaelus and Hered, who usurped, as they faid, all the power, an empty title being onely left to Hyrsanus, Herod went to defend himfelf, and so prevailed with his money, that his accusers were never heard. Antony having reached Ephesus, an Amhassie was disparched to him in the name of Hyrcanns, and the whole Nation, defiring that all Captives which Cassins had caried away out of Judea, might be fet at liberty

by his Letters published throughout the Province, which he readily granted cap. 22. out, and as he was travelling into Syria, Cleopatra met him in Cilicia, to whose allurements wholy giving up himself, at the same time came 100 of the most considerable of the Jews to complain again of the two brothers. whom Messala defended, and Hyrcanus himself stood by to assist. Their cause being heard at Daphne, Aniony demanded of Hyrcanus whether bart was fitter to Govern , who answering in commendation of Herod, he, who formerly loved the young men for their fathers fake with whom he had contracted familiarity when he ferved in Egyps under Gabinius, constituted them both Terrarchs, and committed to them the Government of the Jews. To this purpose he wrote Letters, and call fifteen of their adversaries into prifon, and had put them to death, had not Herods intercession prevailed for them; and yet were they not discouraged so as to desist. For instead of 100. a thousand returned in Ambassage, and stayed for him at Tyre, but his favour being further purchased by the two brothers, he commanded the Magistrate of that place to animadvert upon them, and affift Herod in obtaining the principality. Hered going to them as they stood before the Citie on the shore, advised them to withdraw themselves, and Hyrcanus also laid before them in Which end in how great danger they were if they should go on in their purpose: But they the promotion contemning their advice were presently fallin upon out of the Town by their own Countrey-men and the Inhabitants, and part of them being slain, and fome taken, the rest returned. And the people clamoring exceedingly against Hered, Antony was so far incensed, as he caused those whom he had before committed to custody to be slain. 27. A year or two after, Pacorus fon to the King of Parthia, and Barza- Idem de billo pharnes, one of his great Officers, seized upon Syria, at such time as Prolomy ut print equit. Mennaus dying, Lyfania his fon succeeded him. Antigonus the fon of Ari- of Aniquit. fobulus bargained with the Parthians for 1000 Talents, and 500 women, to capas. Settle him in the Kingdom of Judea, and kill Herod with his friends; and thoughhe could not perform the conditions, yet lead they down an Army to re-establish him. Pacorus came down to the Sea-Coasts, where he was excluded by the Tyrians; but they of Sidon and Ptolemais giving him entrance, he fent a party of horse under the conduct of one Pacorus the Kings Butler

his brother Phafaclus.

The Parthians Antigonus the fon of Avillebulus invade Fudaa.

into Judento make discoveries, and if it could be, to help Antigonns, with whom the Jews inhabiting Carmel joyning, he hoped by this force to feize upon a part of the Countrey called Dryma, and divers still coming in pierced to Ferusalem. The number still increasing, they attempted the Palace, but the two brothers with their friends oppoling themselves, beat them back into the Temple, and then fent some Soldiers into certain houses near adjoyning to defend them, which the people taking notice of, fet them on fire, and therein burnt them alive, being unable to shift for themselves; which injury Herod a little after revenged upon his adversaries, of whom he slew many upon a Sally. Daily skirmishes thence insued, Antigonus his party staying for the feath of Pentecofte, expecting then a great multitude of people to come up from all parts, and accordingly at the day many thousands being affembled, what with Arms, and what without, they overran all, except the Palace which still Herod and his brother Phaselus kept with a few Soldiers, with whom also issuing out into the Suburbs, having there fought most manfully, he put many thousands to flight. Shortly after, Antigonus procured Pacorus the Parthian with a few horf-men to enter Jerusalem, under pretence of compoling the difference, but indeed to establish him in the power, who being kindly met by Phasaelus, and entertained, he perswaded him to go in ambassage to Barzapharnes, thereby intending to entrap him. He suspecting nothing, went contrary to the mind of his brother, who advited him rather to destroy the perfidious Barbarians, and with him went also Hyrcanus (an unheard-of imployment for the Prince himfelf) under conduct of Pa-COT#S.

28. As foon as they came into Galile, they were met by the Governours of the Towns there, and Barzapharnes entertained them very civilly, and disuffy capti-

Hyrrans and gave them gifts, but presently sought how he might entrap them. Phaselus phyllus going was lodged with his Train near the Sea, where hearing that Antigonus had in ambassage made such a bargain with the Parthians, as is above related, began to suspect them, and then he had also intelligence, that they would be laid in wait for by night, and be privately fecured; and certainly they had been taken ere now, but that there was great expectation, that the Paribians which Pacorus had left at Form alem, should take Herod, and thereupon the thing was deferred, left coming to his ears, he should have notice of their Treachery, and thereby escape it. Shorely after, his sears were confirmed when he saw a A. M. 3965. Guard coming to fecure him, whereupon there were not wanting fome that 01.185.400.1. advised him to mount, and save himself by flight, especially one Offlins, who V.C. 714. had the secret revealed to him by Saramalla the most wealthy among the Hycani 24. had the secret revealed to him by Saramalla the most wealthy amongst the Hycam 24. Syrians, who now also voluntarily offered him ships to save himself. But he 38. refuted to forfake Hyrcanus and his brother, and going to Ba zapharnes, CA, Domitio blamed him for harbouring fuch defigns, told him, if he wanted money, he Calviso a. might have more from him than Antigonus, and how base a thing it was to lione cost. betray Ambassadors, innocent, and who had been drawn out upon the score of his own faith. The Parthian (wore there was no fuch matter, and that he troubled himself with vain suspitions, and presently got him out to Pacorus; but he being gone, straightway hands were laid on Hyrcanus, and Pha-cap. 25. folius, in vain upbraiding the Barbarians with perjury; an Eunuch also was dispatched to Jerusalem to get Herod by some means or other out of the Walls, and apprehend him. Phafelns had fent to make known his condition to him, but the Messengers were intercepted, which he having knowledge of , had a conference with the Chief of the Parthians then at Broad besieged Jarufalen, who by all means laboured to get him out of the Palace. But he suspecting them, and giving no credit at all to their words, presently heard guesh forth, for certain of his brother's Captivity, and seeing them in doubt what to do against him, refolved to shift for himself, and taking the opportunity of the evening, departed with his relations that night, unknown to the

29. He travelled towards Idumes, whither at length he came to Massada the Casses; but as his departure was sad, so his journey was as dangerous, being purfued by the Parthians, whom following behind his Train he kept off, through 1du., and was opposed also more violently by the fews, over whom yet he got a victory, and afterwards in memorial of it built a sumptuous Palace in the in Arabi a for same place. Once his mothers litter was overturned in the way, with which the being brought into danger of death, and he fearing the Enemy might overtake them, he drew out his fword to kill himfelf, and had done it, but that the next to him interpoling themselves hindred it, shewing him how it was not the part of a valiant man to forfake others, by fetting himself at liberry, as they termed it. After he came to the Borders of Judea, his brother fofeph mer him, and perswaded him to dismisse the most of his followers, because the Castle could not harbour them, which he did to the number of , 9000 and above, giving them money to bear their charges, and taking the ableft Soldiers, whom he had culled out from amongstine rest, with his relations, to the number of 800. he marched on to Massada, and there placed them, where no fore of Provisions was wanting; but he himself held on for Petra in Arabia, hoping of that King, who was such a friend of his father, to obtain help for the recovery of his brothers liberty. But the Parthians after his departure from Jerufalem plundred the Citie and Palace, and wufted the Countrey, in wich they destroyed Marifa a wealthy Town, and so reducing Antigenus into Judaa, delivered up Hyrcanus and Phaselus into his. hands, who was grievously troubled that the women had escaped, which he intended together with the money to have given to the Parthians.

30. Then fearing that Hyrcanus by the favour of the people might again be restored to the Kingdom, he either cut or bit off his ears, making him thereby uncapable of the Priesthood, which by the Law was not given, but to one of an entire body. But Phafelus knowing he was destined to death,

Poor III.

Antigonus ha- for that he could not otherwise kill himself for his bonds dashed out his ving received brains against a stone. It was reported; that being grievously wounded in his head, Antigonus caused poyson to be put into it instead of salve; and that Hyrcanus and he hearing before his death that his brother Herod had escaped, underwent it Phaselus, de-priveth the chearfully, as leaving behind him a revenger of it. And he certainly knowears, and Pha- ing nothing thereof, laboured exceedingly to prevent it, going to Malchus felus dasheth the Arabian, whom he knew to be obliged to his family, hoping of him to get money, either upon free gift or trust, and resolving to give 300 Talents out his own for his brothers Ransom, whose son also a Child of seven years old he carried with him to leave as a pledge. But the Arabian being perswaded by his great ones to retain the money owing, with the goods which Antipater had deposited with him, sent some to meet him, and command him to depart from his borders, and after he was gone repented of what he had done, and fent after him, but too late. For he was now almost got into Egypt, hearing of his brothers death in the way, where Cleopatra kindly entertained him, intending to use him in her Wars; but nothing could hinder him from hasting to Rome, though in the Winter season, and though great stirs were reported to be in Italy, whither also he came, though with great danger, for the difficulty of Navigation.

Being reje-

ment made betwixt Antony and Cafar the Triumwirs (the former having married Offavia fifter to the later) and another betwirt them two and goeth to Rome, young Pompey, who then held Sidily, which was a time convenient enough for his affairs. He made his application to Antony, of whole favour he had formerly tasted, recounting to him the whole story of the Parthians overrunning Judaa, of his brothers death, and the mifery of his family now befieged in a Castle, and how through these Tempests both at Sea and Land, he had ventured to come to him as his onely harbour and refuge; and withall was not sparing in the offering of money to him, in case he could procure him to be declared King of Judea. Pity wrought fomething with Antony (being backed with the memory of that friendship which had passed betwixt Antipater and himself) the money more, and to these being superadded an hatred of Antigonus, whom he accounted a turbulent man, and one that bore a mind full of harred towards the Romans, he much inclined to favour him. Cafar also, partly for that Anipater had done good service for his adoptive father in Egypt, and because he was willing to gratifie Antony, was ready to do him all good Offices, being also inclined to favour him out of a particular phancy he had to the man for his courage. The Senate therefore being called, first Messala, and then Atrasonins commended him to the fathers, relating his father's, and then his own merits towards the Commonwealth;

and withall they accused Antigonus, and inveighed against him as an Enemy, for that he had not onely born himself as such hererofore, but now of late in the calling in of the Parthians. Herewith the Senate being offended,

31. He came thither when not long before there had been an agree-

Antony then declared to them that it would much conduce to the carrying on of the Parthian War, which was now depending, if Hered should be King; fo that without any more to do, he was so declared by the unanimous consent Where to the Of all, and then being accompanied into the Capitol by Cafar and Amony on where to the wonder both each hand, the Confuls going before, there facrifized, and according to the of himself and custom, laying up the decree of the Senate, was feasted by Ansony. Thus obothers, he his tained he the Kingdom with the wonder of himself as well as others, through declared King the especial friendship of Antony, having ever feared that the Romans would never confent he should have that honour which was not wont to be beof Judea. flowed, but upon a royal race, and therefore he intended to have fued for it, not for himself but for Alexander, brother to Marianne his wife; and this increased the wonder, that within seven dayes he should be dispatched and difmissed out of Italy. But thus obtained he the Sovereignty of Judea, A. M. 3965. in the first of the 185 Olympiad, Domitius Calvinus the second time, and C. Afinius Pollio being Confuls, some 37 years before the birth of Chrift. 32. Du-

22. During his absence, Antigonus laid close fiege to the Castle of Mas-Jada, where he left his relations, abounding with all forts of provitions; one. Jefephus de ly warer was wanting: fo that Talent had thoughts of fluing with a service of the left of the Iv water was wanting; fo that Foleph had thoughts of flying with 200 men in. to Arabia, the King whereof he had now heard to have repented of the reiecting of his brother. But this was prevented by a shower which fell by night, as if fent on purpose from Heaven for their relief, whereupon they were so heartned, as to fally out upon the besiegers, whereof they cut off many. In the mean while Ventidius the Roman General being fent into Syria to expel the Parthians thence, after their retreat, came into Indan, pretending to help Joseph, but indeed with intentions to fleece Antigonns of a round fum of money, which he did, pitching his rents nigh to Terusalem, which being done, he drew off the greater part of his forces, and left Silo with a party behind him, left the fraud should be understood, whom Antigonus was also to pacifie till such time as the Parthians could come and help him. But in the mean time Herod landed at Ptolemais , and having got together no mean company, hasted through Galile against him. To Silo Idem Ania, and Ventidius Antony had fent expresse order by Gelline, to place him in the 1. 14. c, 27.

Kingdom. Ventidius was then busie in composing differences amongst the A. M. 3966. Cities, which the incursion of the Parthians had made: Silo was in Judaa, but corrupted by Antigonus. Yet Herod's Forces increasing, he marched towards Massada to relieve his friends, which he accomplished, having first taken Jappe in his way, norwithstanding the lying in wait against him by Antigonus, after which having taken in also the Castle Ressa, he went up to Fernsalem, accompanied by Silo's Soldiers, and many Citizens affrighted at his power. Laying fiege to the City, both he and Antigonus laboured to He beliegeth draw over the contrary parties to themselves, and though Herod could not at all move the Townsmen, yet it appeared that Silo was corrupted; for he suborned some of his Soldiers to begin a mutiny, requiring to be led into a place more plentious of provisions, which Antigonus had all cut off; but Hered took such care for the bringing in of new, that his plot was frustrated, and taking our a party of ten Companies (half Jews and half Romans) went and took Faricho, forfaken of its Inhabitants, which he left to be rifled to the Romans. Then returning, he fent down the rest of their Army into their Winter quarters, which he appointed in Idumea, Galile, and Samaria. Antigonus also obtained of Silo to have part of his men received into Lydda, thereby endeavouring to curry favour with Antony; fo that the Romans lay idle all this feafon in places abounding with all necessaries.

22. Herod was not idle, but fending his brother Fofeph into Idamea with 1000 Foot and 400 Horse, went down into Galile to reduce some places there held by Antigonius; and within a short while brought all the Country into obedience, except those menthat lurked in caves, and then dividing to his Soldiers 150 drachmes a man, placed them also in their Winter quarters, Silo a little after came to him, being cast off by Antigonus, who had ordered the Inhabitants to take all necessaries with them, and slie into the mountains, that so the Romans might be starved. Ventidius being now ingaged in Syria against the Parthians, fent to Silo to come to him when he had with Herod finished the War. But Herod having no confidence in him , dismitfed him beforehand, and went himfelf against the Thieves, who dwelling in caves with their families in craggy and inaccessible rocks, he was fain to invent certain cages, which being let down to the fides of the rocks full of armed men, either flew them or tumbled them down headlong out of their holes, or else burnt them within, and by this means he subdued them all. Then fetting Ptolomy over that Country, he marched into Samaria, but was presently forced to return, for Ptolomy being set upon by those who formerly had disturbed Galile, was slain, and then they betook themselves into the fens and inacessible places, and thence making excursions, robbed all the Coasts thereabouts; but he returning punished them, pulled down their places of strength, and fined the Cities 100 Talents. In the mean while Ventidius having flain Pacorus; and put the Parthians to flight, by Antonius his command fent Macharas to help Hered, with two Legions, and 1000 Horses but he being corrupted also by Anigents, would needs go to him as a spie against Herods will; Yet when he went could not be received, but was laid at with darts, so that repenting he had not followed Herod's advice, he went and secured himself in Emans, killing all the Tens that came in his way, withour any difference of friend or enemy, our of madnesse for what had hapned unto him. Harod being hereat enraged, refolved to go and complain to Antony, but he entreated him to stay, or if he went, however to leave Toleph with him to carry on the War against Antigonus, which later he granted, yet charging his brother not to venture all, nor contend with Macheras. Then hasted he to Samofata upon the river Euphrates, before which Antony then lay, leading Auxiliaries with him both Horse and Foot. At Antioch he met with many, that having a defign to go thither, durft not for the Barbarians, who lying in the wayes, made great flaughters of travellers, but he taking the conduct of them upon him, floutly defended them against the violence of the robbers, and with great credit for his valour fafaly arrived at the Camp of Antony.

Goeth to A4-

24. Antony to do him honour, fent out an Army to meet him, with great praises and embraces received him at the Camp, and gave him great respect, as a King of his own fetting up. Shortly after his arrival Antiochus yielded up the place, and then Antony committing the Province to Sofius, and commending to him the affairs of Herod, went away back into Egypt. In the Idea de belly mean while Joseph neglecting his brothers counsel, was slain in Judea, and ut pius cons, great innovations followed in that place and in Galile; which Herod understanding, being sent before by Sosius with two Legions, lying at Daphne the Suburbs of Antioch, marched into Galile, where he worsted the Enemy, and took the falle they fled into, whence hasting to Tericho, he there feated the chief Inhabitantes in a room, which upon his departure to his chamber presently fell down, whereupon he was accounted to be especially owned by God, who had so wonderfully preserved him. Not long after he got five Towns into his hands, wherein he put to the sword 2000 of the Garrison Soldiers, and then went against Pappus, whom Antigonus had sent into Samaria in a vain oftentation, as able to wage War in both places. Pappus gave him battel very boldly, but he overthrew him, and in revenge of his brothers death did great execution, whereby Antigonus his interest was clearly broken, and he thought of quitting the City, had the weather suffered the King to improve the Victory, and make an end of the War. At night Herod being werry, he went to wash in a chamber, where one boy onely was with him, and therein chanced to be divers armed men of the Enemy, who though they might have easily dispatched him then naked, yet were they so affrighted, as they gladly got out and faved themselves by flight. The extremity of the weather being over, he went up to Terufalem and laid fiege to it in the third year after he had been declared King at Rome, intending to use the same being to use the same manner of opposition as Pempey had made formerly against the Temple. But He besiegeth during the siege he went to Samaria, and there maried Marianne daughter to Alexander and niece of Aristobulus, formerly contracted to him. The Fernfalem.

mariage being over he returned, and Sofius cantle also through Phanicia up A. M. 1968. to Jerufalem, fo that both carryed on the fiege with an Army confifting of ol, 105. at the eleven Legions, and 6000 Horse. The defendants with great earnestnesse V. c. 719. and courage made refiftance, contermining, and fometimes fighting with the Ante thinks.

Enemy in the ground, though much straitned for provisions, it being the Safive moneths therein Anti- batical year.

is taken, and

period.

gonus, who be- 35. Force at length prevailed , joyned with skill, in both which the Roing beheaded mans excelled, fo that after five moneths twenty of the flourest Soldiers, and by Anions, then Sofius his Centurion got over, and the outward part of the Temple with ripality of the lower fide of the City were taken, and at length the other alfo, where all Asmoneans re- were full of slaughters, the Romans being entaged by the cadiousnesse of cciveth it's the Wat, and the Tambout of malice and particular grudges feeking to destroy all of the contrary Faction. Antigonus came and fell on his knees before Solius, who received him with reviling speeches, calling him Antigona, Herod had much adoe to keep the Soldiers from entering the fecret places of the Temple, and to reftrain them from flaughters, demanding of Sofius if the Romans intended to make him King of a defert, and adding, that he should think the price of all that blood which was spile to be very little, though the Dominion of all the World should come into the bargain, and at length was fain to redeem the City from further trouble by his own money, wherewith he dismissed the Romans sufficiently inriched. This disaster befel Terusalem in the Consulship of M. Agrippa, and Canidius Gallius, and the last of the 18; Olympiad, the third moneth, in the fast, and on the same day it had been taken by Pompey 27 years before. Sofius confecrating a crown of gold to God, went away with Anigonus unto Antony. But Herod fearing that Annoy carying him to Rome, he should there obtain favour with the Idemibid. & Senare, as being of the Royal race, and procure the Kingdom as shein to 1, 15, 6, 1, Senate, as being of the Royal race, and procure the Kingdom at their hands, Plutarth in An. if not for himself, yet for his children, who never had ill deserved of the tonio, & Dio People of Rome, he procured Antony to dispatch him out of the way, who lib, 59. pretending at least the unquietnesse of the Jews for his take, caused him to be beheaded at Antioch. And so the Principality of the Asmonans ceased, after it had endured free from the yoak of Syria 98 years; and Heroda man of forein and obscure birth was confirmed in the Soveraignty over Tudea by the Romans, in the Empire of whom we shall hear further of him-

DOOK III

CHAP. VIII.

The affaires of Sicilie Contemporary with the Empire of the Macedonians.

From the death of Timoleon to the Sicilian or first Punick war, containing the space of 73 years.

"He constitutions of Timoleon being Popular, and tending to the loose liberty of the Vulgar, which was destitute of lawfully successive Princes, Sicilie continued not in Peace many years, being of all other places, through want of lawful Monarchs, most subject to the ambition and tyranny of those, who, though private Citizens, through flattery and deceit enslaved their neighbours. Amongst the rest Agathocies is most eminent; none that ever in any time went before him, coming up to him, or, reaching him by The Original far in cunning and cruelty. He was the fon of one Carcinus a Potter, and Diedorus Sicubrought up by his father in that trade of life, who being banished from Rhe- luslib. 19. gium in lealy his native foil, came into Sicilie, and placed himself at Ther_ ad Olymp. 115. ma at that time subject to the Carthaginians. Before he was born, and when ann. 4. his mother was yet great with him, the Dalphick Oracle foretold, that he should be the author of great calamities to the Carthaginians, and also to all Sicilie, and for that cause he was exposed by his father, but preserved by his mother, and referved to fuch a time unknown to him, as he repenting of what he had done, gladly understood from her of his safety. Being then again received by his father, he was brought up in the trade of a Potter, and was but young when Timoleon overthrew the Carthaginians at the River Cremiffus, and made all free of Syracuse that would come thither. He was then with his father admitted into that City, and not long after his father died, but one Damas a chief Citizen being extraordinarily affected towards him for his comlinesse, gave him whereon sufficiently to live, and afterwards being created the Captain of the Agrigentines, bestowed on him the place of a

Colonel in the Army, for that he was wont formerly in musters to wear those arms which none else could bear for their bignesse. But now being advanced L1112

Colonel.

He is made a to this degree, he rendred himself more popular by his bold adventurers, and his making speeches often to the people, and Damas dying, he married his Widow, whereby he got abundance of wealth. Afterwards it happing that A.M. 3688. Wildow, which amongst other Captains was conducted by his brother Autander, and V. C. 437. he himself by decree of the people had also the Office of a Colonel. But the Ptol, Lagin. Chief command was committed to Heraclides and Sosistratus, the later of which our of envy defrauded him of the rewards of his valour, which he now abundantly shewed, whereat he was so inraged, as to accuse him and his Companions to the people of affecting the Tyranny, but they giving no credit to his words, Sofiftraim after his return feized on the Prin-

Liveth in Ita-cipality. Againocles then for some time continued in Italy, and endeayouring to get Crotone into his power, failed of his Enterprize, and withdrew himself to Tarentum.

2. He was received into pay amongst the Mercenaries, but being suspe-Eted to attempt new matters, was not long after again cashiered, after which getting together a Company of Italian Fugitives, he relieved Rheginum, then set upon by Sofistrains and Heracides, and then Sosistrains being banished Syracuse, together with his Authority, returned thither, where sometimes a private person, otherwiles an Officer, he valiantly behaved himself against the Tyrant's faction, in which the Carthaginiaus, and a great numher of the chiefest Citizens were ingaged. Having once broke into the Citie Gela, and there being overmatched by Sofistratus and the Towns-men, so that

Endangered at he and his party were all of them in danger to be cur off, he fent his Trumperters round about to the Walls, commanding them to found an Allarm, whereby it came to passe (as he intended) that the Enemy thinking the bessegers had broken in from all quarters, retired from him to repulse them, and To he fafely retreated this Sconce. This businesse of Sofistratus being over, and Acestorides the Corinthian Created General of the Syracusians, Agathocles was suspected because of his politick head, to affect the Tyranny; yer Aceaffect the Ty-forides would not take him of publickly, for railing new stirs, but commanding ranny and ba-him to depart the Citie, sent some to ly in wait, & kill him in the way; which he fulpecting, fent out a young man very like himself, with his Cloths, Horse, and Armour, and in a difguifed habit travelled through by-wayes. fo that he devolved the danger upon the head of another, and escaped. Afterwards the Exiles of Sofistrains his faction being received, and a peace made with the Carthaginians, he lived as an outlaw within the Country, but gathering together considerable forces, proved so formidable to his own Citizens, and their new Allies, that they fought to him themselves to return, and having brought him into the Temple of Ceres, there took an Oath of him not to be against the Recalled, and popular Government. Making a shew then of Patronizing Democracie, he so inveigled the people by his fair speeches and cunning pretences, that he was constituted General, and keeper of the Peace, till such time as the differences then on foot, through the restitution of the Exiles, should be composed; and then having obtained his wished for opportunity, the Army being at his beck, and under pretence of opposing some, who at Erbita had lately revolted, sufficient occasion being taken to increase his strength, he marched out as against the Rebels, and united unto him 3000 men, some whereof had formerly ferved him against the Carthaginians, and were most addicted to himfelf, and adverse both to the people in general, and the 600 who now had the power in their hands, after the Aristocracie was taken away. With these, and certain Syracusians, who being poor themselves envied the viealth of others, he firengthned himfelf, and accusing the 600 to the Soldiers as having plotted against him, procured them easily to be taken for Enemies, and > Citie, and there to kill the Malignants, and take the spoyl of them and all their party. 3. The Army marching presently to the Cirie, every part thereof was filled with flaughters, there being no difference made betwixt friend and Ene-cauling an Allarm to be founded, commanded the Army to march to the

my, but according to the riches or poverty of the persons, and many runthing out into the streets to know what the matter was, were slain as they tinder a spe- asked the question : all the Gates were shut that none might escape, so that clous pretence 4000 by this means in one day perished. Many seaped down the Walls, of which some perished in the fall, but others to the number of 6000 escaped, Massacre to be of which most fled to Agrigentum, where they were courteously received, but sufficiently cormented in this respect, that their Wives and Daughters at rich Syracufihome were abused by the Soldiers in revenge for their escape. Agashocles being glutted with a two dayes slaughter, gathered together the multitude of his Captives, of which he onely dismissed Dinocrates for his former friendship, but the rest he presently put to death or banished, and then calling the people together, grievoully inveighed against the 600. and at the Aristocratical Government, and then mentioning what he had done to purchate the liberty of his Countrey, very formally laid down his Office, knowing certainly he should be follicited to take it up again. For his Soldiers now made rich by other mens goods, would not endure that he, or his authority, should forfake them, but cried out he must take care of them, so that with much ado, as it seemed, he took upon him the Office of Chief Captain, but without a Collegue, being unwilling, as he faid, to be called to an account for others break-Office of Cap. ing the Laws, when as he acted according to them; to which the people tain General consenting, he was Created Captain General with full Authority by their suf- A. M. 3688. without a Collegue.

4. He carried it with all sweetnesse and moderation towards all them at the first, took great care for the Revenues, making of Arms, and increasing of the Fleet, and got several of the Inland Towns into his power. Having Idem ad ann. 2, feized upon a Cuffle of the Messenians, he promised to restore it for 30 Ta- Olymp. 116. lents, but after the receit of the money, not onely refused to surrender it, but also endeavoured to take Messens it self, part of the Wall being falln down, and though he failed herein of his Enterprize, yet besieged he Myla, and had the place surrendred to him, but the Carthaginians sending their Ambassadors, expossulated with him his breaking the League, and constrained him to give the Castle up again into the hands of the Messenians. The year Ad ann. 3.

after, the Exiles that lived at Agrigentum exhorting their entertainers not to fuffer him thus to go on in his Conquests, and make a prey of their Towns; for that it was better now to fet upon him before he had confirmed his

Tyranny, than when he should be grown too strong for them, and to be forced The Agrigon- to War with him against their Wills. This appearing to be but reason, the has provoked people decreed the War, and having entred into a flrict Alliance with them by the Exiles, of Gela and Messena, sent some of the Exiles to Lacedamon, thence to proreloive to make Warup cure a General, suspecting the fidelity and moderation of their own Citizens, and calling to mind the worth of Timoleon. At that time was there in that Citie one Acrotatus fon to Cleomenes the King, labouring under the envy of most of the youth, because the Lacedamonians hiving been overthrown by Antipater, who then Governed Macedonia (after the death of Alexander the Great) when such as returned from the defeat were acquitted by the people, he alone had opposed the decree. Being inraged hereat, they beat him, and laid in wair for his life, whereupon now defirous of fome forein command, he easily accepted of this imployment, and without consent of the Ephori, with a few ships sayled to A grigenium, yet did he nothing worthy, either of his family or Countrey, but proving more bloudy and ctuel than the Tyrants rhemselves, incurred the displeasure of the people. Giving himfelf up to all luxury, and therewith spending the publick revenew, he murdred Sofistrans the Chief of the Exiles having invited him to supper, for nothing but out of emulation, whereupon he was deprived of his command, and had been stoned, but that he withdrew himself into his own Countrey. After his departure a composure was made by the interposition of Amilear the Carthaginian, upon these terms, that of the Greek Cities Heraclea, Solinus , and Himera should continue under the power of the Carchaginians ; but the rest, over which the Syracusanians had the Dominion, should be left to their

Anilear the Cathaginian makerh a cace.

5. The Island being hereby cleared of the Enemy's Forces, he fecurely laid divers Towns to his Dominions, and with the accession of many places to his former strength, sufficiently confirmed himself, having over and above his Syracustans, and Conf derates, 10000 foot, and 3500 horse of Mercenaries in constant pay, and making Provision of all forts of Ammunition, for that he foresaw, that the Carthaginians disapproving of the peace made by Amil-

He breaketh

The Carthagi-

a great losse

630

car, would within a fhort while renew the War: The year after feeing himfelf Ad ann. r. sufficiently furnished, he resolved then not to expect them, but begin him- olympatr. felf; yet defiring first to clear his way, by removing whatever might hinder him from the neighbouring Cities, he first attempted Meffene whither the Exiles of Syracuse had fled; and he first prevailed with them to expel these, and then to admit him into the Town, where he killed 600 of the chiefest of them, and most adverse to his power. Thence he went to Agrigentum, think- A. M. 1682; ing to make also a prey of it; but fixty ships of the Carthaginians with Ol. 117, and Forces having lately come thither, he forbore to attempt any thing, and V.C. 443. drew his forces into the Territories of the Carthaginians, where he took in divers Castles. In the mean while Dinocrates the principal man amongst the Ptol. Lagin. Exiles fent to Carthage, defiring aid before Agathocles should reduce all Sicily into his power, and having gathered his Companions together, and raised a pretty Force, sent Nymphodorus to the Town of the Centorippini held then by Agathocles, but being promised to have it betrayed into his hands, under condition they should be left to their own liberty, He got by the night into the Town, but the Garrison having timely knowledge of it, cut him off, and all his followers which had entred, and Agathocles punished the Conspirators. But Dinocrates being called by the Inhabitants of Galaria, with 3000 foot, and 2000 horse marched thither, where Agathocles his faction being cast out, he pitched his Tents without the Town; but he sent two of his Captains against him with 5000 men, who at length put him, and his whole Army to flight, and recovering the place, animadverted upon the Revolters. Agathocles being elevated with this successe, hearing the Carthaginians were feized on an Hill, marched thither, intending to fight them with all the power he could make, but they declining an engagement, in a Triumphant manner he returned unto Sy-6. The year following, the Carthaginians shipped a great Army for Si- Adam. 2.

cily under Conduct of Amilear, a man of high Nobility; but such a Tempest seized on the Fleet, that 260 Vessels loaded with men and Provisions miscarried, which made them cover their Walls with black, as it was the custom upon some great and publick disafter. But Amilear being an industrious man, gathering together the Relicks of the shipwrack, listed more men after his arrival, and made up a compleat Army of 40000 foot, and well nigh soon horse. Agathocles perceiving himself too weak to encounter the Eby shipwrack. nemy, at present, took care how to secure his Towns and Castles from revolting, and especially Gela, near to which the Enemy then lay. To fend in a great party at once, he thought might awaken the Towns-men too much, and put them upon some attempt disadvantageous to himself, so that he got fome Soldiers in at feveral times, till they amounted to a number too frong for the other, and then going thither, accused the Inhabitants of Treachery, and took occasion to make a Massacre of 4000 of them, the goods of whom he seized, with all the silver and Gold of those that remained. Then pitched he his Tents against the Carthaginians, encamped on an Hill where the Cafile of Phalaris the Tyrant of old time was reported to be, whence it got the name of Ecnomos, i.e. wicked or unlawfull. A River ran betwixt the two Camps, concerning which a rumour having been of old time spread, that a great multirude of men should perish near unto it, this hindred both the Armies from ingaging, till such time as excursions being made on both sides, the Africans broke out of their Trenches to rescue the prey, which Agathocles foreseeing, had placed many men in ambush upon the River, who falling upon the Carthaginians, as they pursued their friends, drove them back, and with great flaughter gave the chace unto their Camps. Againocles judging this a fit featon for an ingagement, arose with his whole Army, and fell upon them in their trenches, into which he brakes and there maintained for some time a hot dispute, till the Enemy repulsed him at that place, by help especially of Slingers, natives of the Islands Baleares, who being ex-

Overthrew Agathocles.

Book III

ercifed after the fashion of that Country in slinging of stones, forced back the Syracustans, by throwing at them those of a pound weight. Yet he broke in in other places, and had almost done his work, when fresh supplies to the Enemy arrived out of Africk, which falling on him in his rear, turned the face of the day clear against him, and put his men to flight, of which great execution was done by 5000 Africans that give the chace, many also killing themselves by drinking over hashily, our of extremity of the heat which then raged through the influence of the Dog Star. So that loft no fewer than 7000 men, 600 onely of the Carthaginians being flain. 7. Agathocles getting together his straglers betook himself to Gela, having given our, that he determined for Spracuse with all speed, forhat 300 Africans entering Gela, and fearing nothing, were all cut off by him. Then shut he himself up there, that the Carthaginians laying siege to the place, the Syracustans might have time enough to victual their City, and indeed Amilear, thought first of all to besiege it, but afterwards understanding what force was in it, changed his purpose, and rook in several Towns and Castles, and behaved himself so lovingly, as many within a short time revolted to him. Agathocles then withdrew to Syracufe, which he furnished with all forts of provisions for the enduring of a siege, intending to leave a party for defence thereof, and remove the War into Africk, by paffing all his Army over thicher. For ; confidering that the Carthaginians had almost got all Sicilie, and his confederates generally revolted to them (who were most petent now both at Sea and Land) he urged it (though the most venturous, yet) Adam, 3. the safest way to invade the Enemy in his own Territories, whichbeing a sud-

dain and most unusual thing, he should daunt him therewith, and drive his Subjects into an open revolt, and force him to call back the Army out of Sicitie. Communicaring therefore this purpose to no man living, he lest Syamoft got all racuse to the Government of his brother. Animader , and severing all the relations of the City one from another, that no mutiny or fedition might atheir hands. rife in his absence (taking part of them along with him as hostages) he raised he refolverh he reloveth money by feizing the estates of Orphans into his hands (which he promised to restore when they should come to age) by borrowing money of Merchants, robbing of Temples; but especially by calling the People together, and acquainting them, how he was most ready to endure any hardship, but it pitied hint for the People s therefore he advised all that feared themselves and eftares to depart, which when the richeft and most out of favour had done, he procured them to be cut off, and conficated all their goods. Then manumicting all flaves that were fit for the Wars, he flipt his men in fixty Veffels, and getting out into the Main whilst the Carthaginians knew not his delign, escaped them by the darknesse of the night, and though they chased him all the way, yet arrived he in Africk with his Army in safety.

86. Once arrived he burnt his ships, as well to take away from his Soldiers Bring landed all hope of escape (thereby to heighten their valour) as also having no great bebuneth his Army, left for the defence of the Navy, it should be divided. Then fell he upon two Cities immediately, which he took (the Soldiers being incouraged at the fight of so pleasant and rich a Country) but suffered none of his Army to lye there, but destroyed the places, less his men shoul relie upon them as a refuge. The Carehaginians were wonderfully daunted at the first

The Carthagi- report of his landing, concluding he durit not venture over, except he had first, by diestroying their Army, made all sure in Stellie, but understanding the whole affaites from some messengers sent from the Fleer, they gathered courage, blamed their Sea-officers, who having the Sea in their power, had fuffered the Enemy to land, and made choice of two Captains, Hanno and Bomilear, thinking that their enmity towards each other which had been inthough indeed therein they were mistaken. These two Generals thought not fit to stay for their affociates, but muster as many of their own Cirizens as would make a shift, and so raising 40000 Foot, and 1000 Horse, with 2000 Chariots, they encounter the Enemy. Agathocles his men, many of them, wanting Arms, he made them counterfeit ones, to be so esteemed a far off, and perceiving them to be discouraged at the number of the Carthaginian Horse, he procured many Owlsto be let go in the Camp, which birds being taken to bring alwaies good luck with them, the Soldiers were therewith so cheared, that they resolutely set upon the Everny, and brake presently the body of Horse. The Charets they drove for the most part back amongst the Foot, which they charged also with such resolution, that the wing where Hanno commanded was discomfitted, and he himself slain. Romilcar his Collegue understanding this, having formerly wished for some good opportunity to invade the Tyranny (which the most eminent men of Carthage were railed upon them, would prove the commodity of the Commonwealth?

many times forced to do, for the avoiding of those censures and punishments constantly inflicted upon them for the least miscariage of fortune, by the heady rable) thinking now an occasion to be presented to bim, as it were from Heaven, he resolved to take hold of it. And for that he thought it most convenient for him, that the Enemy should not be overthrown, but an awe continued upon his Citizens, he retreated by little and little, suffering the Sicilians to prevail, and at length drew off his men to an hill, whence they all fled as fast as they could to Carthage, having lost of their number 1000 men, and killed of the Greeks but 200.

Are over-

thrown by him.

> o. The Carthaginians now shut up in their City, and besieged by Agathocies (though they had caried with them above 20000 pair of manicles in their Chariots to bind the Greeks, over whom they promifed themselves an easie victory) very much discouraged, and laying the blame of the misfortune upon the neglect of their superstition, sent great gifts to Hercules the god of the Tyrians, from whom they were issued, and for that they had redeemed their own children of late (by others gorten elsewhere) from being sacrisized to Saturn, they presently offered up to him 200 boyes of the chiefest amongst them for Nobility, being put into the hand of the Statue, and thence falling down into the hollow of it full of fire. They fent also to Amilear into Sicilie for aid, who receiving the news, caused it to be given out, that all the Sicilian Army was cut off, and earneftly thereupon urged the belieged to a furrender of Syracufe, shewing them (to inforce the matter) the ironwork of the ships wherein the Army had passed over, which indeed the Carthaginians had taken up into their Vessels after the burning of the Fleet. But the chief men amongst the besieged stayed the rest from yielding, though Antander the brother of Agathocles was fo faint-hearted, as to be for the delivering up the City, and cast 8000 of the contrary faction, and the friends of the exiles, out of the Town: But within a few dayes arrived a Gally from the Carthaginians, and the People flooking to the Haven to gaze, the walls were fo forsaken, that Amilcar taking his opportunity, got some of his men over, but an Alarm being given, they were either flain, or forced headlong Amilear raifdown the fortifications. Amilcar hereat discouraged, raised his siege, and fent a supply of 5000 men over to Carthage.

10. Aguthocles in this mean while took divers places in Africk , and fortifying his Camp before Tunis (wherein he also left a strong Garrison) marched further and befieged Adrymus, and drew into fociety with him Elymus the King of the Africans. The Carthaginians having notice of this, turned all their forces upon Tunis, which they besieged, having first become Masters of his Camp; but he hereupon leaving a great part of his Army still before the Town, went with the rest to an high hill, whence he might easily be seen

Agathocles, to give them knowledge of his successe, which being pursued by prospereth ex- by both the Carthaginians that lay before Tinis, and also by the Inhabitants ceedingly in of Adrymic, and there making abundance of fires, deceived them by this st aragem at both places. For the beliegers thought he was coming with a great' Army to relieve Tunis, and therefore raifed their fiege out of hand, and departed to Carthage; the befieged of Adymis out of a strong apprehension that new supplies were coming to the Enemy, yielded the Town. Then took hee Thapfus by fform, and divers other places, and having now gor into his hands about 200 Towns, went higher up into Libya. The Carthagimans took another occasion at his absence to besiege Tunis, but he thereupon returned as before, but overcame them by a stratagem of a clean contrary Nature with the former; for he commanded that no fires now should be made, and marching very fast fell upon them at unawares, and cutting off 2000 . took very many prisoners, and forced the other to betake them to their heels, whereby he exceedingly advanced his affaires, giving the Corthaginians such a blow (who now by reason of their supplies arrived out of Sicilie, were thought superior to him) that improving the Victory he went against Elymas, who had revolted from him, and killed him with a great number of his Subjects. 11. The year following, Amilear in Sicilie once more besieged Syracuse, Ad ann. 4.

and presently made great haste for storming of it after his arrival, because the Soothsavers had foretold him, that that day he should dine in the City. A great number joyning themselves to him out of hope of plunder, they so stopped up the way with cariages; that they hindered one another, and fuch a tumult arose, that the Syracustans having notice of it, sallied out upon them, and putting them to slight made great slaughter of them, and taking Amilear alive, delivered him to the friends of those that had been slain, who most cruelly tortured him to death, having been formerly it's probable, condemned by his ingrateful Cirizens themselves, though as then, he having the Army Justin. 1, 22. in his power, they durft not let it be known, but cafting all their votes (writeten as the manner was) into a veffel, they ordered it to be covered, and the thing not to be looked into, until his return, and the giving up of his command. But his Army which confifled of 120000 Foot, and 5000 Horse, being thus strangely defeated, was divided then into two factions. The Exiles and Greeks chose them Dinocrates for their Captain, and the Carthaginians, him that had held the next place to Amilear. The affaires of Sicilie divided into being thus in confusion, the Inhabitants of Agricentum thinking a fit opportwo factions. tunity for gaining the Principality of the whole Island to be put into their hands, made Xenodocus their Captain, who went and took in divers Towns, many revolving to him (all which with the former he restored to their liberty) and restrained the excursions of the Syracustans, who were in great distresse for want of provisions which had been cut off by the Carthaginians, the confant Mafters at Sea. By this time Amilear's head was fent over to Agathoclas, who receiving it with joy, raifed the contrary affection in the Enemy, to whose Camp he brought it, together with the message, that their forces were utterly cut off, whereupon they dispaired forthwith of better fortune, adoring the head of their nominal King.

12. Agathocles was much puffed up at his prosperity, though he was not far from the waining of his fortune, a preludium unto which was made by Ly-Agabetes be- cifeus one of his Officers, who in a drunken fit exceedingly seered him. He ing puffed up took it pariently, and made a jeft of it, because the min was very servicechangeth by a able to him in his Wars, but Archagathus his fon taking it heinously, returngrivous mu- ed it to him in his own language with threats, which further so inraged him. that he threw in his teeth (which was generally reported) his incessious having to do with his step-mother. The young man hereat was so transported, as he ran him thorow and flew him outright, which was followed by a mutiny of the whole Army, demanding justice against him, which slew to that height, that the Soldiers chose themselves Captains, seized on Tunis, and besieged Agathocles and his fon, many of the Officers upon promife of lager pay, revolted to the Carthaginians, who had not been wanting to add fuel to this flame. Agasbocles seeing the danger he was in, laid aside his Purple, and made a pitiful Oration to the Soldiers, wherein he told them hee was willing to lay down his life if so they pleased, rather than end his dayes by some Mmmm

Amilear be-

fieging Syra-

cufe again is taken and Whereupon

his Army is killed.

634

ignominious death, and drew out his Sword as intending to kill himfelf; but the Army hindered it, and compelling him to resume his Robes, were throughly reconciled unto him, except some 200 which went over to the Eneeth them now, my. He taking this opportunity marched presently against the Carthaginians. and defeateth who full little thought of a battel, but expected presently a general revolt; fo the Cathagi- that taking them thus at unawares, he easily overthrew them with great flaugh-13. About this time the Numidians revolted from those of Carshage.

who fent out an Army the next Spring to reduce them to obedience. Aga- Diodonu Sicu. thocles understanding that, left his son at Tunio, and marching after them with his in mile. all expedition, at length overtakes them, then overthrows them, though with dd am I. great difficulty, and losse to himself. The Numidians, whilest he was emblympass. ployed in the battel, having been intent upon the event of the fight, fell in. and plundred his Carriages, and getting away with the greatest part of the goods, by reason of the darknesse of the night, he was glad to divide the plunder of the field equally amongst his Soldiers, in way of recompence for the caineth another victory against the Carthaginians.

Agathetes obe damage fustained by them. Such Greeks as he took prisoners, which had affisted the Carthaginians, he put into a Castle, where they fearing to be put to death fer upon the Garrison by night, but being too weak, betook themselves thence to a certain fortified place, which Againstes hearing marched thither with his Army, and drawing them out under promise of impunity, contrary to his faith given, killed them all to the number of 1000. of which half were Stracustans. At this time there was one Ophellas, who having been an Officer under Alexander the Great, had seized upon Cyrene, and gaped still after larger Dominions. To him now fent Agarbocles, inviting him to come and joyn with him against the Carehaginians, offering him all Africk for a reward, to which he pretended he was constrained to passe over, affuring him he would content himself with Sicily, or else, if he thought good, invade Italy more commodious for him than Africk by far. The man puffed up with great expectations, fent to Athens (whence he had Ophelias out of married a wife of the Rock of famous Miltiades) to joyn with him in the expedition, which not onely divers of that Citie readily imbraced, but others of Greece now much shattered by Wars within it self, which were raised by Alexander his Successors. Ophellas then began his journey (with above 10000 A. M. 364) foot, 600 horse, 100 Chariots, besides 10000 others, extraordinary, as they of 118, and called them) of two moneths long, through a defart infested with wild V.C. 446. bealts and venemous Serpents, wherewith his Army was fore diffressed, as alfo by want of necessaries, till at length they arrived at Agashocles his Camp. P.Duin Mana. There they were received with all manner of Provisions, but as the greatest 2. Fabio Munpart of them were gone out to gather forrage, he fet upon the rest with their mo 3. Colf. Captain, who though he refisted, yet being overborn, was slain most treacheroully, and Agathocles then forcing them to lay down their Arms, got into his power the whole Army, having aforehand stirred up his Soldiers against Ophelles, by feigning that he lay in wait for his life.

Greece.

Whom he treacheroufly murdereth.

Bomilear feekthe Tyranny at Carthage, and miscarricth.

14. Whilest Agathoeles was in hand with this treacherous design, Boeth to invade milear having long intended, but still out of fear deferred, the invasion of the Tyranny, communicating his intention to 500 Citizens, and 1000 Mercentrie broke out into open Rebellion against his Countrey. Having seized on the new Citie, he thence invaded the old, which caused great consternation at first, whilest every one feared they had been betrayed into the Enemies hands; but understanding the matter, they presently made head against him, who going on in his way made flaughters of all he met; but what with opposing him in the freets, and throwing down stones from the houses, they drove him back again into the new Citie through the narrow wayes, and there befieged him. At length upon promife of pardon for what had passed, an agreement was made, and his followers by reason of the danger the Citie stood in, were all dismissed without any punishment; but he, notwithstanding the faith given to him, was most ignominiously, and with great Tortures put to death.

Agathocles ta-

15. The year after Agathocles hearing that the Captains of Alexander had Idem ad ann. 2 taken the Titles of Kings upon them; for that he thought himself neither inferiour to them in power, Territories, or for valiant acts, he called himhead the title felf King in like manner: yet took he not the Diadem, heing accustomed constantly to wear a Crown of Myrtles heretofore, either for the Ceremony of some Prieshhood, or as * others have conceived, by reason of baldnesse, * Alian, Var, which rendred him exceedingly uncomely about the head. Then to attempt Hift His. 1. fomething worthy of fo great a Title, he fell upon Mices, near which ta- cap.4. king 300 of the Inhabitants, which upon his coming had been shut out, when the could not perswade them to yield, he framed an Engine, to which A. M. 3698. he tied many of them, and drawing it along to that place where he intended Ois 18. am. 2. to break into the Town, exposed them either to be shot to death by their V. c. 447. friends, or elle if they within, out of affection to them should forbear, then Selenci 6. could he easily enter. The Defendants yer preferring their Countreys fafe- Ptol. Lagi 17. ty before that of a few private men, when they could do no leffe, repulfed the Enemy with all possible endeavour; but for all this, Agathocles broke in at another place, and filled the Citie with flaughter, no regard being had to any condition; and after he had overcome them also in a Sea-fight, placed a Garrison there, and subdued all the Maritime Towns under his power.

"" the whate of the wacedonians.

affairs go down the wind, both there and in Africk.

Though he prospered thus in Africk, yet was he follicitous for Sicily, where the Agrigentines had made some progresse in freeing the Cities; but now of late had received so great a blow from his Captains, that broke in pieces their design. Just after the fight was over he arrived, and making a progreffe about the Island, recovered most of the Towns, onely he was repulfed with great loffe from Centorippa, and upon the same terms gained Appollonia. Reunning in Henceforth his affairs began universally to decline. In Sicily, Dinocrates got so great an Army of Exiles together, that he durst not fight him, though continually dared, and dogged anthe heels. In Africk his fon Arthagathus prospered very much at the first through the good fortune of Enmachus, who fubdued many places. But the Senate at Carthage dividing their Army into three parties, whereof one was to march for the Maritime parts, another for the Inland, and the last for the upper Countreys, they thereby attained their ends, viz. to lessen their number in the Citie (which made all Provisions scarce, by sending out 30000 men) to contain their Allies in fidelity, by giving them hopes of relief, and (which was the chiefest) to force the Enemy also to divide his Army, and so draw him down from Carthage

16. For Archagaihus dividing his Army to oppose the Carthaginians in the feveral quarters, lost almost the two parts thereof, which he fent out under Conduct of two feveral Captains, to the number of about 19000 men ; folthat the Carthaginians reduced almost all places back to obedience, all the Confederates revolted except a few, and Archagaibus being diffreffed for want of all things, and the remainder of his Army in great terrour, he fent to his father into Sietly to acquaint him in what posture matters stood, and to defire speedy relief. He seeing his affairs go down the wind in that Island was sollicitous how to leave it, and 300 Vessels of the Carthaginians blocked up the mouth of the Haven, so that he could not stir out. But 18 Vessels coming in from Herruria, he perswaded the Masters thereof being friends to put out, and then when the Carthaginians (as he expected) gave them the chace, he fell in upon their Rear, and beyond all hope got a victory over them, boarding five of their Fleer, which he took together with the Defenders. Hereat encouraged, he sent Leptines against Agrigenum, knowing Xenodocus their General then to be out of favour with a great part of the Town, and he seeing himself unable to graple with him stirred not out, but provoked by the Citizens, fo that being worsted, for fear of condemnation he fled to Gela, Agathoeles now featted the people for joy, making himself common with all, and giving them vvine to excesse, so that their vvits being out, when that once was in, they might speak their minds, and he thereby know their inclinations; for he feared that after his departure

Mmmm 2

Being to return into Africk, he maketh a Maffacre at Syracufe,

Government. Having by this means got out who they were that distalted his power he feasted them again by themselves, with other 500 who bore the most noble minds, and compassing them in with his Mercenaries, slew them every

17. Then fayled he over into Africk, where he found his Army in a low and defolate condition for yvant of necessaries. Therefore resolved he to fight, though far inferiour to the Carthaginians, vvho fought rather to draw our the time in length, knowing the condition of the Enemy; but he leading down his men to their Trenches, forced them to come our and give battel. in which he fighting valiantly, yet was worsted with the losse of 1000 men. After this a sudden calamity seized upon both the Armses by reason of mistakes. For the Carthaginians offering the most beautifull of their Captives. as a facrifize to their gods, it happed that the fire thence was driven to their Tents, which being covered with Reed and Straw eafily carched it, and as eafily yvere confumed, whence it came to passe that all things yvere in great confusion. But the worst of it was, that the Africans which had fought with Agathocles coming now over to them, the Scouts feeing them, gave an Allarm, as if all the Greeks taking their advantage of the fire vvere coming against them, so that flying in great consusion, they killed, and trode down one another, mistaking one another for Enemies, and having thus dispatched

5000 of their Company, all run away to Carthage, where they were received with great trembling by their friends, lest that with them the Enemy should enter. The Africans which were coming over, being affrighted at the burning of the Camp, retreated, which being feen also by the Greeks, cident which maketh great disorder in both the Camps.

they gave notice to Agathocles that the Carthaginians yvere coming against him, so that he drew out his men in great fear and terrour, who meeting the Africans, and they taking one another for Enemies, they killed, and flew all they could during the night feafon, till fuch time as 4000 being flain, the rest retreated to the Camp. Agathocles after this, seeing himself too weak now Agathocles def. to graple with the Carthagimans, and thereby his affairs to be desperare in pairing of his Africk, refolved to return into Sicily, and confidering that the Enemy having the command at Sea, would not suffer the Army to passe away quietly, he resolved with his younger son Heraclides, and a few more, to passe over secretly, and leave Archagathus behind him, whom he was jealous of, be-

18. But Archagathus having notice of his intention (which he took in affairs in Africk, intendoth to fly away with his youngest fon, cause of the report raised of him that he had to do with his Step-mother. The eldeft marvailous evil part) communicated it to several of the Officers, who raifing a motiny prefently in the Army, Agathocles was feized on, and made fure in Ferters. A little after it hapned that an Allarm was made in the hearing of it Camp, as if the Enemy approched, which made all Arm themselves and run raileth a mu- out, and amongst the rest the Keepers of Agathocles, whom then the multiny, wherein titude feeing in fuch a condition, cried out prefently that he should be loosed; Agathocles is which being done, he forthwith took Boat with a few attendants, leaving bound in Fer- both his fons behind him. The Army understanding this killed them both, ters, but being both his form bothing the first three trem both, looked escapeth and then agreed with the Carthaginians for 300 Talents to restore the away, and both Towns yet in their hands, and that fuch as would should receive pay in their his fons are fervice. And fuch as did fo had the terms performed; but those that our of killed by his hope of fuccour from Agatheeles held out the places, being all forced to yield, their Captains were Crucified, and the common Soldiers being bound in Ferters, were forced with their hard labour to repair that Countrey, which for-maketh its own terms merly they had helped to depopulate.

19. Thus the Carthaginians obtained peace after four years; Divine vengeance hurrying Agathocles to punishment, after that perfidious murder of Ophellas, his two fons being flain on the fame day, and by the hands of his Soldiers. After his arrival in Sicily he went presently to Agesta, a Town confederate with him, whence wanting money he exacted much Treasure, but they grumbling, and complaining thereof, all the poorer fort he brought forth, and flew at the River Seamander, and then tortured the rest with all forts of corments to make them confesse what they had. Some he broke upon the wheel, others he thick of from Engines as stones. Some had their ancies the off, and endured other cruel torments. He invented a kind of puniflyment allo, something resembling Phalaris his Bull, being a bed of iron, wherein one being put, was thent of fried to death by fire put underneath. Rich worden had their ancies broken with iron tongs, others their breafts cut off, Some out of terror burnt themselves in their houses, and others hanged themselves, to that the whole flower of the People being absolutely destroyed, he fold the children to the Brutit in Italy, and utterly to destroy the name of the City, called it Diccopolis, and Peopled it with fugitives. Hearing then that his fons were flam in Africk, to be revenged on the Soldiers, he fent commands to Aniander his brother, to kill all their friends and kinsfolks at Syracufe, which he readily performing, no fex nor age was spaced, but so horrid a malface committed, that as well old and decrepit men as young infants were included in the flaughter. Such as were thus murdered lying on the Sea shoar, none durst bury them, though never so nearly related, so that the Sea washing them away was coloured with the blood, carying along with it a note of this cruelty to other parts at a good diffance. Agathocies con- Diodorus ut fietinued his progresse up and down the Mand, strengthning Towns, and raif- pra. ad ann. 3. ing money; but Paliphilas his Captain despising him now for the Iownesse him. This cast him into such despair, that contrary to his former boldnesse, of his fortune, fled over to Dinocrates, and withdrew the Army also from

His horrid crueky towards the Estians.

he fent to Dinocrates, offering to quit the Tyranny, and restore the Government to the People, to he might have but two Castles to maintain himself on, and earnestly pressed him to admit of the conditions. But he gaping af-Out of despair er the chief power himself, and unwilling to be reduced again to the estate by down his of a private Citizen (being now (though but accounted Captain of the Expower, but ciles) as a King indeed, in regard of the great extent of his power and compower, out mand) put him off with one pretence or other full, till Agaibocles smelling unding to ob- out his device, fent some to accuse him to the Army, and sending to Carthage our ins device, tent tome to accute him to the Army, and fending to Carthage made Peace with them on these terms; to restore all the places to them they resident it, formerly bad in Sicilie, and for this in way of requital, to receive 500 Talents of Gold, and a great quantity of Corn. 20. Furnishing then himself with a small Army, he went against Dino- Idem ad ann 4. crates and his Exiles, who feeing the little number he brought with him (being but about 5000 Foot, and 800 Horfe) in comparison of themselves, amounting to 25000 Foot, and 3000 Horfe, gave him battel. The dispute at first was very sharp; but shortly some 2000 of the Exciles revolting to the Tyrant, so encouraged his men, and discouraged those they had for laken (who thought them to be more than indeed they were) that they were easily put to flight, though to far exceeding in number. All the Horfe got clean A. M. 3700?

Whom he overthroweth and yet receiveth into favour.

away, and fome of the Foot; but the greatest part setting upon an Hill, A. M. 3700. made Peace with Agathocles, who had sent to them, inviting them now at V.C. 449. length to lay down their enmity, and return home; but after he had got them seleucid. 8. into his power, contrary to his faith given (which he never observed) he flew Piol. Lagi 19. fome 7000 of them. The reliques of the Army being gathered up he received, and Dinacrases himself, to whole command he committed part of his Soldiers, and contrary to his own disposition, trusted him to the last. He becraying his companions, flew Pafiphilus at Gela, and going about in subduing the Towns and Caffles (in which work he fpent two years) delivered them all up to Agathocles. 21. Not long after, Caffandar the King of Macedonia belieging Corcyra, Agathocles went and raifed the fiege, burning all his ships in the Havens. Diodorus in Returning to his Army, and understanding that certain Ligurians and Tyr- Except. 1, 21. rbenians had joyned with those that slew his son Archagainus, he got them & M. 3704. into his power to the number of 2000, and put them all to the fword. The Brusii (a People which issuing from the Lucanians, were grown mighty high, and at the very first fought against those from whom they had their original, and forced them to a Peace, on equal terms) being offended with him, he Julin lib. 23.

Contemporary with the Empire of the Macedonians. 639

Stures. Manon in the mean while who had poyloned him being in the Camp with Archagathus, and elevated with the thought of what he had done, made away also Archagathus by treachery, and with good words drawing the Army to himself, resolved to make War upon the Syracustans, and seize on the possoned him Principality. The Syracustans therefore having made Hieres their Prator. fent him out against him, but the Carthaginians joyning with Manon, they abouted in were constrained to deliver them 400 Hostages to let fall the War with them, the Tyranny, and receive the Exiles. Afterwards the mercenary Soldiers being denied the right of Suffrage in the election of Magistraces, a great sedition arose thereupon, and both they and the People took arms, but the better fort interposed themselves, and prevailed with both parties to agree, the Soldiers confenting to depart the Island with their goods. These Mercenaries marching away, came to Messene, a Sea-town standing over against Iraly, where being kindly entertained by the Inhabitants, they so well requited them, that in Idemibid. & the night they maffacred them all, and marying their wives, seized upon the Polybius lib. 1. Themercena- Town, which they called in their own Campanian language Mamertina: the maffacre Mars in that tongue being named Mamers. Over against this Town stood the Messians, Rhegium upon the promontory of Isaly, which being in danger now in the and the Roman War betwirt the Romans and the Tarentines, the Inhabitants defired of the Diodorus Ex-Soldiers those Romans to have a Party sent them for their defence, which being also Campanians, in imitation of what their Countrymen had done at Messens, and by their help, they also killed or expelled the Inhabitants, and seized upon their

Town and territories. Desire their chief Commander they banished for the unequal division of the prey, who going thence to Messene , fell ill afterwards of his eyes, and fent to Rhegium for an expert Physician in this kind-

who coming to him, in revenge of what he had done to his Country, applied Cantharides to his eyes instead of salve, and utterly blinded him. And when the Romans were once difintangled from the War, having grievously refented the treachery of their Soldiers, they befieged them in the Town,

22. Once more having prepared an Army of 30000 Foot, and 2000 Diodomi ivid, they sent to him to treat, and delivered up 600 Hostages. Yet after his departure they broke their oath, and expelling his Garrison, returned again to their own freedom. Agathocles being returned home, fent his fon of his own name to Demetrius Poliorcetes now King of Macedonia, to enter into fociety with him, who taking the message in good part, rewarded the Ambassador Demotring Polis with royal gifts, and fent one back with him, who under colour of ratifying the League, might espie out the condition of Sicilie. Having now been a long time, as he thought, at Peace with the Carthrginians, he made all provision possible again for shipping, intending to make another Expedition into Africk, and hinder the exportation of Corn from Sicilie and Sardinia. 23. Bur whilft he bussed himself with such thoughts, he was prevented by one A. M. 2716. Manon, who being born at Ægefta, had been taken captive there, and for of 1822 at 4 his beauty was preferred to his fervice. For a time he diffembled the difplea- V. c. 465. fure he conceived from the calamity of his Country, and his own ignomini- Selection. ous and filthy condition, till he might have an opportunity to be revenged Piolom, Log 35. making anoupon the Tyrant. But now it happing, that Agathoeles commending Agather Expedithocles his, fon to the Syracufians as his Succeffor; and fending him to succeed failed over into Isaly against them, and determined to besiege a Town belonging to them, but they fetting upon him at unawares, forced him with the lolle of 4000 men to return to Syracufe. Yet was he not discouraged from making another Expedition against Crotone, which intending to beliege, he prerended he was about to fend his daughter to the King of Epirus with a Royal Fleet, and beguiling them herewith, laid close fiege both by Sea and Land to the Town, when they full little thought it. Having undermined a great house, they being terrified thereat, opened their gates and let him in, after which he plundered the Town, and committed great flaughters. Then entred he into fociety with the Japyges and Pacetii notable Pyrates; whom furnishing with Vessels, he was to have part of the booty; and leaving a Garrison in Crotone,

Horse, he passed over into leaty, where being arrived, committing the Navy to the care of Stilpo, he commanded him to make excursions into the Territories of the Brutii, but he coasting along and wasting the maritime parts.

lost almost all his ships by a tempest. He himself took by storm the City of the Hipponiata, at the report whereof the Brutis were fo affrighted, that

Rageth against the whilft he thinketh of ted by poy-

he returned to Syracufe.

Italians.

tion into Af-Archagaibus (his nephew by Archagaibus his son, and a man of great courage) in the command of the Army then quartering about Aina; Archagathus feeing how things were likely to go, plotted the ruine of them both, and fending to Manon, defired him to make the old man away with poylon. whilst he in the mean time inviting the young one to a feast, made him drunk, and then killed him. Manon mindful of the message, whereas the King after meat called for a tooth-pick to cleanse his teeth, dipped one in poyson and gave him it, which he using, began by little and little to wax ill, and then his teeth putrifying in a horrid manner, this was fucceeded by tormenting pains. Seeing therefore himfelf near his end, he called the People together,

He is preven- and inveighing bitterly against Archagathus, stirred them up to revenge him on him, and restored the Democracy to the People. Afterwards his voice failing him, he was put upon the funeral fire yer breathing, by Oxythenius, who had been fent to him by Demetrins, and burnt. Justin from Trogus A. M. 3718. (who in the whole flory of this Prince different from Diodorus) reporteth, V. C. 4614 that before his end, he fent back his wife Theogene an . Egyptian by birth, Selenti 26. with her two young children, and great wealth, into her own Country, to be Ptol. Lag 37. out of that danger which he foresaw must needs ensue. The story of his life Vide Diodeis almost beyond parallel; but he died after he had lived 72 years, and rum in except. thereof reigned 23, as amongst other Historians cited by our Author, Antander his own brother left recorded; A.M. 3718, and the second of the 24. The Syracufians having again got the power into their own hands, put to sale Agathosles his goods, pulled down and tare in pieces all his pi-which taking, they brought 300 of them to Rome, and in the market-place first whipped and then beheaded them, after the custom of their Ancestors, to vindicate their credit with their confederates. 25. In Sicilie were now many petty Tyrants: Hiceias at Syracufe, Phinrias at Agrigentum, and several others at other places. These two fell out and warred with each other, infomuch that by reason of their mutual excurfions and depredations their ground lay untilled. Hiceras having fill the upper hand of the other, was so elevated, that he ventured to fight with the per hand or the other, was to Carthaginians at the River Teria, but it proved to the great losse of his men. Plutasebia Ever fince the death of Agathocles , hid the Syraes fians laboured with all Pyrth. their might to reduce that whole Island into their power, and now at this time rather doubling their diligence than at all flacking their endeavours, fent over into Isaly to Pyrrhus King of Epirus (who now was bufie in War against the Romans, being called thither by the Tarentines) desiring aid of him for the expelling of the Africans, and to take upon him the protection of Sicilie.

Hicetas having held the Dominion of Syracuse nine years, was then ejected Proba King by Thyrio, who together with Softratus were so vexed with the Caribaginian. Dinus cal- War, that they again called Pyrrhus into Sicilie. The Mamertines entered into League with the Carthaginians, and resolved if possible to hinder his landing, the Romans were also by reason of their enmity with him easily drawn into the confederacy, fo that the Straights of Sicily were narrowly watched. He delaying his coming till the next year, the Carthaginians sent back thirty of their ships upon other occasions, and besieged Syracuse. But then he A.M. 3728. (having been in Italy now two years and four moneths, without successe) 01, 113, 40, 4, passed over without control, and came directly to Spracuse; where the Cartha. V. C. 477. ginians lying incamped with no leffe than 50000 men, having also 100 ships Anioc Societ.

at anchor in the Haven, yet upon his approach raised their siege, not daring detp. 3. to try the hazard of a battel. 26. Pyrrhu coming to the City, reconciled the Inhabitants to their Governours, for which getting great favour, and receiving messages from diverse

CHAP. VIII.

Cities, which gave up themselves into his hands, he not onely thought now of gaining Sicily (which he intended to give to his fon, begotten ou Lana ff a Juliu lib.22 the daughter of Agathocles, as Italy to another) but of laving Africk it felf also to his Dominions. Making a journey through the Island, he received the Diodorus at Ciries to protection, and within a short space subdued all the places held by sura. the Carthaginians; except Lilybaum, a Town built upon the Sea by their Ancestors, after that Diony sims had taken Morya. After he had been some time before it, though a great supply had arrived, yet fent they also to him, offering him money to raise his siege; and he was inclined to accept of the Affairs of Sicily

Prospereth. offer; but his friends in Gouncil perswaded him by all means to refuse it, and utterly expel the Africans out of Sicily. Then did he with all his might attempt the taking of the place by force, but it being strongly defended, he every time came off, with loffe, and finally after he had continued the fiege for two moneths, rose up and departed. After this he had thoughts of be-plutarebut coming matter at Sea, and transporting his Army into Africk; but behaving wins. himself coo: Magisterially in the preparation for this attempt he lost himself exceedingly, and then suspecting the fidelity of Themo and Softratus, the one he compelled by fear to revolt from him, and the later he flew as guilty of the same intention. This so provoked the Cities, that some revolted back cruely loseth to the Carthaginians, and others to the Mamertines, fothat perceiving a great defection, and a conspiracy also hatched against him, being now solhimfelf and licited also by the Samnites and Tarentines for more aid, he departed again departeth.

into Icaly, being opposed so in his passage by the Carthaginians on the Sea, and that he loft most of his ships, and so much after he had landed by the Mamertines (who had before wafted over 1000 men) that with much ado he got fase to Tarentum. 27. After the departure of Pyrrhus, the Soldiers which quartered in the Polybus lib. I. Towns near to Syracufe, beyond all example, created two Magistrates out of their own body, Artemidorus & Hiero, to the great indignation of the people, Juliant points, which took it in distain that their privilege should be thus usurped by the Ar-kept with himself, exposed them against the Enemie, and suffered them of A. Curio Duevery man to be cut off, so that being rid of them, he thenceforth Go-lido 2.

verned without any fear or trouble. Three or four years after he fet upon the L. Cornello Lea-

my. Yet afterwards did they confirm the honour unto Hiero for his great The Syracumoderation and high abilities, who being the fon of Hierocles, had ftrange Gan Soldiers created two prefages whilest yet a Child concerning his future Dignity. He perceiving Magistrates, how in the absence of the Prator, the Syracusians were apt to be seditious, Artemidorus and attempt new matters, entred into affinity with Leptines (by marrying his and Hiero, daughter), whom he knew to be the most considerable man, and of great Authority amongst the vulgar, that he might supply his place as it were in his absence, and contain the people in obedience. After this marriage was over, ablence, and contain the people in obedience. After this marriage was over, A. M. 3730, taking notice of the loofe Carriage of the old Mercenary Soldiers, and how Ol.128, AM. 2, they were ever inclining to mutinies, he drew them out against the Mamer- V.C. 430. tines, who being Barbarians (as the Greeks alwayes termed all besides them- Amioch, Sot. 8. felves) had feized upon Meffene, and dividing them from the reft, which he Ptol. Philad.

Mamertines in good earnest, who though they bare themselves high so long tulo coff. as their friends and affociates continued Masters of Rhegium (created much Polybius & Hiero being trouble to the Carbaginians, and compelled divers Towns to pay Tribute) fupral yet now fince the defeat of them, and especially after that Hiero had got infole Magiftrate falleth upon the Mato his power two places near unto them, they were exceedingly firaitned. mertines. 28. Yet fent they out against him 8000 foot, and 1000 horse under the Conduct of one Cios, who calling the Soothfayers to divine what the iffue should be , they answered, that he was to spend the next night in the Enemies Camp, at which being much elevated, he fer his men in order, and passed over the River. Hiero sent 2000 choice Messenians, and 500 0- A. M. 3735 thers, to get about the Hill Thorax, and come upon their backs, he in the mean time charging their front. Here was maintained a sharp dispute, till the 700 fresh men coming upon the backs of the Mamertines, did great execution upon them, so that being now compassed about, they betook themselves to flight. Cios the General fighting most valiantly, received so many and great wounds that he swooned with too great expense of bloud, and being taken alive, was brought into the Camp of the Syracusians, where all means possible were used for his recovery. But it hapning that divers horses being brought out of the field, he espied that on which his fon rode amongst them; whereat taking an apprehension of the young mans death, in great trouble of mind he untied his wounds, and thereby caufed his own end, as unwilling to outlive his fon. 29. The Mamertines upon the news of this defeat were minded to give up themselves, and their Citie, into the hands of Hiero. But it happing Havibal the that Hannibal the Carthaginian General, being at that time in the Island Cathaginian Lipara, heard of the overthrow, and came over presently to congratulate General dechifully tam- Hiero, as he pretended, but indeed to circumvent him with his General craft in which he was well skilled; and Hiero was fo wrought upon as to give credit to him, and ly still. Then went he to the Mamertines, and finding them ready to furrender, turned them clearly from it, and drew them to his own interest, by bringing them relief into the Citie-Hiero returning to Syracuse, was for a reward of his great service saluted Polybins ibid. King by the consent of all men, which Title he held to his last, the space of 54 years. Hannibal cunningly placed his Garrison in the Ca-

فوده الماء

now to take upon them to protect those that were guilty, and patterns of especially, under whom thenceforth Sicilia was ever subject, it must ne-ceffarily be referred thither, as to its proper place. It began A. M. 3741.

the first of the 129 Olympiad, in the 19th of the reign of Antiochus Soter, the second King of Syria, and the 21th of Prolomy Philadelphus, the second also of Egypt, after the division of the Empire of Alexander the Great;

22 years after the death of Agathoeles, in the 490th year after the building of Roose, Appins Claudius Candex, and M. Fulvius Flaccus, being Con-file, and thereby awed the whole Town, so that the Mamertines then suspected him as much as Hiero, and they hindring thus each other from gaining the place, at length made an accord to carry on the War against it in common. This Combination causing the other to bethink themselves Theyland to of some forein aid, they sent to the Romans, desiring them to take the the Romans for patronage of them, their own Countrey-men, as being Originally Campa-30. The Message found no good entertainment with the Senate, for that the fathers accounted it an abfurd thing for them, who had punished the perfidiousnesse of those that had seized upon Rhegium so sharply, the same Crime; and they could by no means be brought to consent unto it. But the people (who alone could do it) being periwaded by the Prator AM.3739. that it was high time to stop the proceedings of the Carthaginians, who Oligh. ann 3. had almost swallowed up all Sicily, and would use that Island as a bridge V.C. 488.

to passe over into Italy, and being also made to believe how profitable it 17. would be to their particular interests to undertake the War, having suffered Prod. Philad. much by that late one with Pyrrhu, and the Tarentines, they decreed 19. that aid should be sent them. The next year was Appins Clandius accordingly fent over with an Army, with which he put to the worst, both Hiero and Hannibal, and thereupon constrained the other to joyn himself to him against the Carthaginians. This is called the Sicilian, or the first Punick War, which for that it falls into the History of the Romans more

Nnnn

CHAP.

The affaires of the Romans Contemporary with the Empire of the Macedonians.

SECT. I.

From the war of Privernum to the first Punick War, wherein the Romans first set foot out of Italy, the space of War decreed against the Palepolitans.

1. TN the year after the taking of Privernum was War decreed against Livingliks. the Parapylitans. Palaopolis flood not far off from the place where Neapolis (now Napili or Naples) is feated, and, as somethink, there where at this day, is seen il borgo de Chiara. The same people inhabited two Ci- A. M. 3678. ties, being descended from Cuma, which was also a Colony of Chilcis in Olina and Euban, now called Negropont. For the Cumani having a good fleet first passed V. c. 173. to the Islands Menaria and P.thecufa, and afterward ventured upon the Con- Aexand, 16. tinent. The Palapolicans trusting to their own strength, and counting of the treachery of the Sammiler, and the plague which now had seized upon Rome, committed many Hostile actions against the Romans that inhabited the Countreys about Cume and Falernus. When L. Cornelius Lentulus, and Q. Publius Philo were both Confuls the second time, the Faciales were sent to demand reflictution, who bringing from those Greeks (more valiant in tongue, faith Livy, than in deeds) a fiery and resolute answer, it was resolved that War should be made upon them. 2. Whilest this War depended, the year following was Alexandria

Alexandria in in Expres built, as Livy writeth, whereas the foundation of this Citie was laid, Egypt, when while Alexander was in Africk, the year before the death of Darins, and the built. fifth before this, wherein C. Patilius and L. Papyrius Mugilanus were Confuls. This same year he maketh Alexander the King of Epirus to have been flain, who being Uncle by the mothers fide to Alexander the Great, is thought to have undertaken an expedition into Italy, out of emulation towards his Nephew, that as the one was now Conquering the East, so the other might endeavour to subdue the West, having no lesse matter to work upon in Italy, Africk, and Sicily, than the other found in Afia and Persia. He was deceived by the Oracle of Jupiter of Dodona, which bidding him beware of Pandosia and Acheron, he knowing there was a Citie of the former name in Epirus, and a River of the later, thought himself so much the safer, as he could get farthest off from these. Being therefore sent for by the Tarentines, he came into Italy, and made War with the Brutis and Lucani, from whom he took many Towns, and 300 families, which he fent as Hostages into Epirus. He entred into a League with the Metapontini and Romans. But the Brutil and Lucani recruiting themselves by the supplies of their neighbours, re-inforced the War, and fet upon him near Pandofia (a Town fituate a little above Confentia, the Metropolis of the Brutii) near to which ran a River called Acheron. Taking this River with his horse, he was there-King of Epirus in flain by a Lucanian, and his dead body being carried down the ftream into flain in Italy, the Enemies quarters was mangled into pieces. A certain woman whose husband and Children were taken prisoners by the Epirots, got the pieces together, and in exchange for her relations fent his bones to Metaponius, whence they were conveyed into Epirus unto Cleopatra his wife, and Olymp'as his fifter, whereof the one was fifter, and the other mother to Alexander the Great. 2. The

The Palapoli- 2. The Palapolitans though affifted by the Sammites and Tarentines, were SECT. 1. overmatched fo, as glad they were to yield up their City, and the Samutes conquered the lost three of their own Towns. The Tarentines, yet proceeded, and drew both the Samnites and Neapolitans (the other part of this Greek Colony) draw in the Samiles and Neapolitans.

proceed in the afresh into the War, wherein also the Inhabitants of Vestinas, together with their allies ingaged themselves. Whilst this War was but beginning, great stirs hapned in the City. There, one L. Papyrius had given up himself to C. Publim as a flave, to work out his fathers debt. Being a young man of a beautiful body, Publins attempted filthily to abuse him, and when he would in no wife fuffer this, most grievously beat and tore his body with rods. In this plight Papyrius got away, and running to the People, by declaring his condition, so affected them, that they procured the Faihers to decree, that the Confuls should propose to them in the Comitia these two Laws : the first,

Debtors.

New Laws in That no men should be detained in bonds, except for some misdemeanor, till the time of his punishment : the second, that the money and goods, not the body of the debior (rould be responsible. Whereupon all prisoners for debt were forthwith fet at liberty. The year following the Vesting were overthrown by Tunius Brutus Scava the Conful, who also took from them two Towns. His Collegue L. Furins Camillus being fick in Samnium (or the Country of the Samnies) pronounced Dictator L. Papyrius Curfor, the most famous Captain by far of those times, who named Q. Fabins Rutilianus for his Mafter of Horse-men, Papyrius being in Campaguinst the S mnites, was forced to return to Rome, for the renewing of his auspicia, and at his departure commanded his Master of Horse-men not to stir out of the trenches to fight one ftroak till he came back; but Fabius understanding that a notable advantage of doing formething of consequence was presented from the Enemy, fell up- A. M. 3681. on the Sammiter, and made great flughter of them. The Dictator hearing V. c. 430. of this, in a great rage returned to the amp, and had puthim to death, but Alexand, 13. that he was rescued by the Army, from which flying to the City, Papyrius followed him, and preffing fore to the Senare the necessity of discipline and authority, would not at all give way to the intreaties of the Fathers. This forced M. Fabius the father of the party to appeal to the People and their fon punish. Tribunes, by which he hardly was drawn to pardon him, though his authoing fability Riching R

L. Papyrius tufor made Dictator

Ishindred Mafter of the those who might justly have Commanded it, as was confessed by him-Horfe-men,

3. This feverity of the Distair so alienated the hearts of the Soldiers from him, that it had well nigh cost him the losse of a battel, which constrained him to be more Popular; then afterward he overthrew the Samnies, and har-The samules razed their Country This made them defire Peace, but returning quickly oranhrown, again to their former counity, in the fecond year after, they received another great defeat from A. Cornelius Arnina the Diltator. Herewith they were fo struck, that they sent all the prisoners they had home to Rome, with such plunder as they hid taken, and the dead body with the goods of him who had been the author of the revolt, and who fearing to be given up had killed Defice Peace himself. The Senate onely received the men, with such goods as any Citizen which is deni. could challenge for his own, and denied them Peace. At this C. Ponjus a num called Furca Caudina (at this day Caudino, and Forche Caudine, ten leading man amongst them took occasion grievously to enveigh against the injuffice of the Romans, and causing them to take arms, led them presently near to a place called Caudium, whence having apparelled ten Soldiers in the habit of Shepherds, he fent them to Calatia (where he heard the Confuls lay at present) with a charge, that when they should be asked where the Army of the Samnites was, they should answer in Apulia, besieging Luceria, which it had already well night aken. A rumour being already spred abroad of such a thing, now obtained greater credit, and the Romans accounted themselves by all means bound to succour Luceria, and the rather, for fear lest all Apulia should revolt. Two wayes there were which led to I.uceria: One by the Sea fide open and fecure, another through the Strughts of Caudi-

Nnnn 2

SECT.1. miles distant from Benevento) a place incompassed about with high mountains, & into which one could not enter, nor depart out of it, but through very difficult They entrap and ftraight passages. The Corfuls leading their Army through this, as the

the Reman Ar- nearest way, were quickly stopped up, so as they could neither proceed my at Furce nor retire, because on all sides Pontins had blocked up the passage. Caudine.

4. The Samnites having the Roman Armies at this advantage, fent to He- 01, 114, 40,4 rennius the father of Pontius their General, and a very wife man, for his ad- V. C. 433. vice what was to be done. He fent word, they should dismisse the Romans Ptolom. Lagi 3. without any injury at all, which answer not pleasing, they fent back for another, and then he counselled them to cut them off, and not leave a man alive.

These two extremes being ascribed to dotage, he came to the Camp, and offered his reasons. He said, he gave the first advice as such, which if followed, would by a great courrefie have for ever obliged a most powerful People, and the fecond, as tending to far to the weakning of their power, as they could not for a long time either recruit themselves or renew the War, having lost two so considerable Armies; as for any third expedient he found none.

A: M. 3684.

the Cons-

mons.

Being asked concerning a middle way of difmiffing the Romans in fafety, but under the obligation of fome conditions, he answered, that this course would not procure them friends nor diminish their enemies; for such was the Roman Nation, that being difgraced or defeated, it could not rest, but would still retain the memory of what prefent necessity urged it to submit to:neither. faith

he, will they fuffer you to rest till punished abundantly. But this wife coufel would not be heard; fo that the Romans had these conditions fer them; The Army was to march away onely with their clothes, having first in token of flavery paffed under the jugum: the Romans should quit wholly the Coun-· 1ry of the Samnitet, and thence remove their Colonies : and both Roman and Samnite live under the same terms of confederacy and alliance. The Armies were constrained to submit, and in great shame and consternation

Make it difmarched away disarmed. This disaster hapned in the 433 year of the City. gracefully passe under and the third after the death of Alexander the Great, when T. Veturius the jugum and Calvinus the first, and Sp. Posthumius the second time were Consuls. march away c. The City was most grievously afflicted with shame and anger at so disdifarmed. graceful and unufual a thing. Posthumius perswaded the Senate to deliver himself and his Collegue into the hands of the Samnites, as being onely obliged to the conditions, and not the State, which was unacquainted therewith. This being accordingly done, Pontius refused to receive them, exclaiming against the perfidiousnesse of the Romans. The Army then marching down again sufficiently revenged themselves, under conduct of Papirins. Several Towns which had revolted were recovered, and scarce Rome, and the could the Samnites obtain a Truce for two years. They brake this Truce ere Sammites often the time was out, and thereby drew the War again upon them, which en-

The conditions are renounced at again defeat- during for eleven years, they loft many thousands of men, with many Towns,

granted to them. Then were the Equi chastized, who had helped them, and thereby were other Nations affrighted into subjection. In the second year after, began another War with the Hetruscans, wherein were fought divers bloody battels; but fill the Romans had the better, who formed divers Towns, and wasted the Country. Two years after, the Samnites rebelled again, and joyned with the Herruscans, but with the same successe as formerly, being grievously slaughtered, especially under the conduct of Q. Fabius Maximus, and Decius Mus; the later of whom, seeing his wing give ground, in a great and bloody battel fought with the Samnites and Galls (for those now had joyned with them) solemnly devoted himself and the Enemy to the Dis Manes, and rushing into the midst was killed, as his Decius Mus which humbled them for that upon their submission the usual confederacy was as his father father had been 44 years before. Still continued the miseries of the Samnites, and two years after their last Army (for this time it must be underdevoteth him-flood) was cut in pieces by L. Papirius fon to the former, who also took many felf to the Dii Towns, and for his service obtained a most splendid Triumph. It is observed, Mancs. that over the Samnites the Romans triumphed thirty times: viz. Confuls 26 mportary with the Empire of the Macedonians. times, L. Papirius the Distator twice, Publius Philo once, who first of all others triumphed with Proconsular power, and once Q. Fabius another Proconful. The family of the Fabit obtained, of thefe thirty, four Trinmphs, and that of the Papirii five, as may be feen in the Capitoline Tables. This War having begun in the 410 year of the City, ended in the 481, and therefore continued 71 years, not fifty onely, as Florus, according to his custome, A fummary account of the falfely computeth; neither 81 as Appian, nor 49 onely, as Eutropius; nor War with the yet onely feventy, which number Livie affigneth with tolerable difference. All Writers agree, that the Romans had no Enemy in Italy, who longer, or more pertinaciously, managed the grand quarrel with them, than the Sam-

6. During these successes abroad, the People having got of late so many privileges, were reasonably quiet; yet their Tribunes having one occasion left to creare trouble to the Fathers, Romached much the all the Priests and Augurs should be created out of the Nobility, and laboured to make the Commons partakers of those Offices. The Senate made no great relistance, gurhip com. as being now accustomed to yield, and that in things of far greater moment, gump communicated to as the Confulship, Consorship, Distatorship, and Triumphs. So, whereas as yet there were but four chief Priests and as many Augurs, to them were added four, and to those five out of the body of the Commons. And this fame year did M. Valerius the Conful prefer a Law of Appeale more diligently enacted. Now was it the third time preferred fince the banishment The Law of Appeal reof the Kings, alwaies by the same family. The cause of renewing it, saith newed the Livie, I suppose was no other, than that the power of a few prevailed above third time. the liberry of the Commons. Which cannot be, if we confider, how for a long time the will of the multitude had got ground, and before this overturned the prerogative of the Pairicians. The Lex Porcia, faith he, seemeth alone to be enacted for the backs of the Citizens, because it inflicted an heavy punishment upon him that should beat with rods or kill a Roman Citizen. The Lex Valeria having prohibited any to be killed or heaten who had appealed, if any did contrary, added no more than it was naughtily done, which (fuch was then the modesty of men) was I believe, a sufficient obligation for the Law. Now scarcely can any one threaten a Slave in that manner. Fabius Gurges after this, being Conful, fought unprosperously with the Samnites, whereupon the Senate confulted about removing him from the Army. Fabius Maximus his father deprecating this ignominy, prevented it, by promissing he would go to the War as Legatas or Lieutenant to his son. He performed it, and so affifted the young man, that he procured him Victory, and Ol. 122, an. 1. a Triumph, wherein C. Pontins the Samnite being led was put to death. Af- V. C. 462. ter this, L. Posthumius a min of Consular dignity, being set over the Army, Seleuci 31. used the help of the Soldiers in his own field, and for that was punished. Ptol. Lagi 31. The Samnites defiring Peace, the League was renewed with them the fourth time. But presently again, as it seemeth, they rebelled; for P. Cornelius War with the Rusinus, and Manius Curius (firnamed Densains, because born with teeth, according to Plinie) overthrew them in several bloody battels, and took di- Eutropius lib.2. vers of their Towns. Livie in his eleventh Book (as appeareth from it's Epirome) wrote, that Curius Dentatus the Conful, having overthrown the Samnites and Sabines, who had rebelled, triumphed twice the same year. After this were Colonies sent to Castrum, Sona, and Adria. The Triumviri for Capital matters were now also first made. The Cenfus being perfelled, the Lustrum was made, and 273000 polls of Roman Citizens were 7. Presently after happened the third separation of the Commons from Livii Epitom. The third fe, the Patricians. The cause was the great debts which the poter for thad contracted. As a remedy for this the Tribunes of the Commons, those incendiaries. proposed new tables in way of defalcation, which the Conful in diaries, proposed new tables in way of defalcation, which the Confuls in favour of the creditors opposed. The contest came to that height, that the Plebeians departed into the Janiculum, for the reconciliation and reducement of whom, Q. Hortenfins was made Diffator. He appealed then with

SECT.I.

SECT. I. miles distant from Benevento) a place incompassed about with high mountains. & into which one could not enter, nor depart out of it, but through very difficult They entrap and ftraight passages. The Corfuls leading their Army through this, as the nearest way, were quickly stopped up, so as they could neither proceed nor retire, because on all sides Pontins had blocked up the passage. 4. The Samnites having the Roman Armies at this advantage, fent to He- 01, 114, an. 4.

rennius the father of Pontius their General, and a very wife man, for his ad- V. C. 422.

my at Furce Candina. vice what was to be done. He fent word, they should dismisse the Romans Ptolom, Lagi 3, without any injury at all, which answer not pleasing, they sent back for another, and then he counselled them to cut them off, and not leave a man alive.

These two extremes being ascribed to dotage, he came to the Camp, and offered his reasons. He said, he gave the first advice as such, which if followed, would by a great courrefie have for ever obliged a most powerful People, and the fecond, as tending to far to the weakning of their power, as they could not for a long time either recruit themselves or renew the War, having lost two so considerable Armies: as for any third expedient he found none.

Being asked concerning a middle way of difmissing the Romans in safety, but under the obligation of some conditions, he answered, that this course would not procure them friends nor diminish their enemies; for such was the Roman Nation, that being diffraced or defeated, it could not rest, but would still retain the memory of what present necessity urged it to submit to:neither faith he, will they fuffer you to rest till punished abundantly. But this wife coufel would not be heard; fo that the Romans had these conditions fer them: The Army was to march away onely with their clothes, having first in token of flavery passed under the jugum: the Romans should quit wholly the Coun-· 1ry of the Samnites, and thence remove their Colonies: and both Roman and Samnite live under the same terms of confederacy and alliance. The Armies were constrained to submit, and in great shame and consternation

Make it difmarched away difarmed. This difaster hapned in the 433 year of the City, gracefully and the third after the death of Alexander the Great, when T. Veturius the jugum and Calvinus the first, and Sp. Posthumius the second time were Consuls. march away 5. The City was most grievously afflicted with shame and anger at so disdifarmed. graceful and unufual a thing. Posthumius perswaded the Senate to deliver himself and his Collegue into the hands of the Samnites, as being onely obliged to the conditions, and not the State, which was unacquainted therewith. This being accordingly done, Pontius refused to receive them, exclaiming against the perfidiousnesse of the Romans. The Army then The conditimarching down again sufficiently revenged themselves, under conduct of Papiring. Several Towns which had revolted were recovered, and fcarce Rome, and the could the Samnites obtain a Truce for two years. They brake this Truce ere Sammites often the time was out, and thereby drew the War again upon them, which enagain defeat during for eleven years, they loft many thousands of men, with many Towns, which humbled them fo, that upon their submission the usual confederacy was granted to them. Then were the Aqui chastized, who had helped them. and thereby were other Nations affrighted into subjection. In the second year after, began another War with the Hetruscans, wherein were fought divers bloody battels; but fill the Romans had the better, who formed divers Towns, and wasted the Country. Two years after, the Samnites rebelled again, and joyned with the Herruscans, but with the same successe as formerly, being grievously flaughtered, especially under the conduct of Q. Fabius Maximus, and Decius Mus; the later of whom, feeing his wing give ground, in a great and bloody battel fought with the Samnites and Galls (for those now had joyned with them) solemnly devoted himself and the Enemy to the Dis Manes, and rushing into the midst was killed, as his Decius Mus father had been 44 years before. Still continued the miseries of the Samas his father nites, and two years after their last Army (for this time it must be underdevoteth him flood) was cut in pieces by L. Papirius fon to the former, who also took many felf to the Dii Towns, and for his service obtained a most splendid Triumph. It is observed, Mancs. that over the Samnites the Romans triumphed thirty times: viz. Confuls 26 the Macedonians. times, L. Papirius the Distasor twice, Publius Philo once, who first of all others triumphed with Proconfular power, and once Q. Fabius another Proconful. The family of the Fabii obtained, of thefe thirty, four Triumphs, and that of the Papirii five, as may be feen in the Capitoline Tables. This War having begun in the 410 year of the City, ended in the 481, and therefore continued 71 years, not fifty onely, as Florus, according to his custome, A fummary A funmary account of the falfely computeth; neither 81 as Appian, nor 49 onely, as Europius; nor War with the yet onely seventy, which number Livie assigneth with tolerable difference. All Writers agree, that the Romans had no Enemy in Italy, who longer, or more pertinaciously, managed the grand quarrel with them, than the Sam-6. During these successes abroad, the People having got of late so many privileges, were reasonably quiet; yet their Tribunes having one occasion left to create trouble to the Fathers, flomached much that all the Priests and Angurs should be created out of the Nobility, and laboured to make the Commons partakers of those Offices. The Senate made no great resistance, bood and Au-gurfhip com. as being now accustomed to yield, and that in things of far greater moment, municated to as the Consulship, Censorship, Dictatorship, and Triumphi. So, whereas as yet there were but four chief Priess and as many Augurs, to them were added four, and to those five out of the body of the Commons. And this fame year did M. Valerius the Conful prefer a Law of Appeale more diligently enacted. Now was it the third time preferred fince the banishment The Law of Appeal reof the Kings, alwaies by the same family. The cause of renewing it, saith newed the Livie, I suppose was no other, than that the power of a few prevailed above third time. the liberty of the Commons. Which cannot be, if we confider, how for a long time the will of the multitude had got ground, and before this overturned the pretogrtive of the Pairicians. The Lex Porcia, faith he, seemeth alone to be enacted for the backs of the Citizens, because it inflicted an heavy punishment upon him that should beat with rods or kill a Roman Citizen. The Lex Valeria having prohibited any to be killed or beaten who had appealed, if any did contrary, added no more than it was naughtily done, which (fuch was then the modesty of men) was I believe, a sufficient obligation for the Law. Now scarcely can any one threaten a Slave in that manner. Fabins Gurges after this , being Conful , fought unprosperously with the Samnites, whereupon the Senate confulted about removing him from the Army. Pabius Maximus his father deprecating this ignominy, prevented it, by promiling he would go to the War as Legalus or Lieutenant to his fon. He performed it, and so affifted the young man, that he procured him Victory, and Ol. 122, an. I. a Triumph, wherein C. Pontius the Samnite being led was pur to death. Af- V. C. 462. ter this, L. Posthumius a min of Consular dignity, being set over the Army, Seleuci 21. used the help of the Soldiers in his own field, and for that was punished. Ptol. Lagi 32. The Samnites defiring Peace, the League was renewed with them the fourth time. But presently again, asit seemeth, they rebelled; for P. Cornelius War with the Rufinus, and Manius Curius (firnamed Dentains, because born with teeth, vers of their Towns. Livie in his eleventh Book (as appeareth from it's Epitome) wrote, that Curius Dentatus the Conful, having overthrown the Sammies and Sabines, who had rebelled, triumphed twice the same year. After this were Colonies sent to Castrum, Sena, and Adria. The Trumwiri for Capital matters were now also first made. The Cenfus being perfelled, the Lustrum was made, and 273000 polls of Roman Citizens were diaries, proposed new tables in way of defalcation, which the Confuts in

Livii Epitom,

according to Plinie) overthrew them in several bloody battels, and took di- Eutropius lib.2.

7. Presently after happened the third separation of the Commons from Livii Epitom. The third fe. the Patricians. The cause was the great debts which the poter for had conpartion of tracted. As a remedy for this the Tribunes of the Commons, those incenfavour of the creditors opposed. The contest came to that height, that the Plebaians departed into the Janiculum, for the reconciliation and reducement of whom, Q. Hortensius was made Distator. He appealed then with

A: M. 3684.

mons.

" I was the Empire of the Macedonians. SECT. 1. good words, and perswaded them to return, by promising that for the time the Romans were) of as others think, having both knowledge and malice sufficient, fet upon the Fleet, and either sunk, or at least risled it, and slew the

to come their Plib feira should have the force of Laws, and bind the whole A.M. 2710. ro come their Pio Jeria mould have the force that Lex Hortensia, he enacted; 0.1123, adm. 1, politick body. This accordingly, by a Law called Lex Hortensia, he enacted; 0.1123, adm. 1, though it appeareth out of Livy, that the same in effect had been granted V. C., 468. The Lex Hortensi.i. twice before, vz. in the 305 year of the Citie, by L. Valerius, and M. Ho- piol. Lagi 18. ratius the Confuls, and again in the 416. by Q. Pablius Philo the Dittator,

50 years before this present, which having not been observed, might give the Commons as great distaste as the matter of debts, if we may judge from that which pacified them. * Fiorus relleth a story, that the businesse of Matri- * Lib.t.cap.ac.

of this Sedition in this place, and by the infligation of this person, for this cause of murriage. That great Contentions were raised betwixt the two orders about the taking away the Law made by the Decemviri, which forbad marriage betwixt them, is oftens attested by Livy. But that the Commons departed into the Taniculum for the burthen of their debts, after great and long contentions in the 468th year of the Citie, is by several Authors affirmed, and that thence they were reduced by Hortensius the Dictator, who prefer-

The errour of

of the Tarendescription of Florus.

mony betwixt the Pairicians and Plebeians caused this third separation of the Commons into the Taniculum, the rumult being raised by Canaleius the Tribune. But Students are to take notice, that none but he fpeak any thing red a Law in the Esculeium, that what the Commons commanded should bind all Quirites: neither do Writers mention any other cause of the third 8. Hortenfin died in the time of his Magistracy. After this there was Livius Epilom, action with the Volfimenses and Lucani, against whom assistance was given to 1.11.13, the Thurini. Then the Roman Ambassadors being killed by the Galls Senones, War was decreed against them, and L. Cacilius the Prator was cut off by them with the Legions. The Tarentines being jealous of the growth of the Roman power, had hitherto privily favoured the Samnites, though openly

The Original they maintained a confederacy with the Romans. This people, being the ofspring of the Parthenia, who were banished Lacedamon, for that being promiscuously begotten, they could not have any inheritance, and therefore plot- Leve Strabon. ted against the State as was shown before, inhabited a Citie casted Taren- 1.6, p.278.66.

their Citie, Government, tum, from Taras a certain Heroe, the Metropolis once of Calabria, Apulia, Florium libit. and all Lucania. It was fituate in a Peninsula on the Bay of the Adriatick 6, 18, and conver-Sea, famous for its bignesse, Walls, and Haven especially, which lay so fation. convenient for fayling into the Roman Coafts, Ifria , Illyricum , Epirus, Achaia, Africk, and Sicily, that Florus accounterh the lituation admirable. The Tarentines affecting took Democratical Government, obtained great power in those parts, having a more considerable Fleet than any of their neighbours, 30000 foot, 3000 horse, and 1000 persons fit to command them. They imbraced the Philosophy of Pythagoras, especially one Archytas, who governed the Citie a long time. In after times luxury was produced by prosperity to such excesse, that if credit may be given to Strabo, the Tarentines had more publick Festivals yearly, than the year hath dayes; by reafon whereof, the State of the Commonwealth under fuch a Government was rendred much worse. One of their bad customs was (as he judgeth it) to use the Conduct of foreiners in their Wars; for against the Messapii and Lucavi they imployed Alexander the Molossian, and before that Archidamus the fon of Agefilans, as afterward Cleonymus and Agathocles; and afterwards Pyrrhus against the Romans. They contended with the Messapii about Heraclea, and imployed also against them the two Kings of the Dannii and Peucetii. Neither would they obey the forein Captains for whom they had fent, but fell to odds with them which procured no small inconvenience. 9. Near to the Haven, in the view of the Sea, was the Theatre of the City, which proved the cause of all irs misery and calamities, saith Florus. They were therein beholding Games, when L. Va'erius the Duumvir (as he is cilled in Livy's Epitome) or one of the Roman Admirals fayled thither as to Orofius libe. a confederate Citie. They taking the Romans for Enemies, faith Florus; cap. 1. (who addeth what cannot be credited, that they scarce knew, who, or whence Xanaras, abilities and reputation; Italy it felf being able to furnish them with forces our of the Countreys of the Lucanians, Meffapians, and Samnites. The King being of a refilefle spirit, incouraging himself in vain hopes (whereby he grasped as it were the Empire of all the West) promised them to come over A.M. 3725. with an Army, and dispatched before him with 3000 men One Cineas a 01,125, ann.). Thessalian, an excellent Orator and Scholar of Demosthenes. He afterwards V. C. 474.

pest, that his Pleet being severed, many Vessels were lost, he was forced to ris 3. leap out into the water, and with great hazard got to Land, and onely at pre- Prof. Phila-of Epirus.

fent two Elephants, a very few horf-men, and about 2000 foot could be re- delph. f. covered from the shipwrack by the Messapians, upon the Coasts of whom they

10. Pyrrhus did nothing without the confent of the Tarentines, till his thips, and the greater part of his Army arrived; then taking notice how they Identified. minded nothing but bathing and feathing, he thut up the publick meeting places, restrained them from walking (in which exercise they were wont to difcourse idly concerning War) and forbidding drinking, and Games, called them to Arms, making Levies of the youth with some rigour and severity.

Valerius Lavinus the Conful halting to give him battel ere the affiltance of the Confederates came, he drew out his Army to him; but before they should joyn, sent to him, offering himself an Umpire betwirt the Romans, and their adversaries, to which Va'erius answered, that they neither cared for him as an Umpire, nor feared him as an Enemy, and taking his Spies, he caused them to be led throughout the Camp, and then hade them return, and tell him what they had seen. Pyrrhus pitched his Tents betwixt Pandosa and Hera- Europ. clea, a Town fituate betwirt Tarentum and Metapomiu, built by the Tarensines. The Romans beyond the River Siris not Liris, a River of Campania, as Florus and Orosius write, who also draw Heraclea out of that part of Magna Gracia, lying upon Siris & Metapontus, into Campania. In the figle Pyrrhus had his horse killed under him, by one Obsidius a Ferentane, who was

The Original Admiral. The Senate sent L. Posthumius co complain of the injury, who

The Conguest delivering his message boldly was dismissed with a very distatistation answers to reclaim them, and when that could not do it, wasted their Territories with fire and sword, revenging their insolence with cruelty as Orosius writeth, for which service he triumphed the year after his Consulship, as appeareth out of an old inscription. The Tarentines finding themselves too weak for the enmagogi (from their leading of the people) would not let them reft, till they had resolved upon the War; whereupon they sent Ambassadors to Pyrrhus, who not onely in their name, but of other Italians also Presented him with gifts, and fignified that they flood in need of a General, Eminent both for

flain in the place by his followers. This made him change Armour with one near to him, who being made at for him and struck down, his Armour was taken from off him, and being carried about by the Romans in token of his death, fruck such a terrour into his Soldiers that it had cost him the victory, but that he feafonably with fome labour made himself known. Whilest the victory seemed yet to be doubtfull, or rather to incline toward the Romans, the Elephants being brought into the bettel decided the controversie. Till the paffing of Alexander into the East, this beast had been talked of, but never feen by the Europeans nor them of Asia, except the Indians and their neighbours, as also the Southern Africans. Homer describeth the houses of at his coming in, having had * Urine thrown upon him, or one of his compani- * Valor. Max.

ons. War therefore was decreed against the Tarentines, and committed to the lib.2. cap.5. management of L. Æmilius the Conful, who first indeavoured by fair means Exemp, s.

counter, fent to Pyrrhus King of Epirus for aid, whom they had formerly They fend for affulted against the Corcyreans. The multitude were of themselves rather Plutarch in inclined to peace; but a certain company of men, by Greek Authors called De- Pyribo.

> took the Sea himself with twenty Elephants, 3000 horse, and 22 foot, besides Seleusidarum 500 Archers and Slingers; bur upon the Main was feized with fuch a Tem- 33.

SECT. 1. good words, and perswaded them to return, by promising that for the time to come their Plub foira should have the force of Laws, and bind the whole A.M. 3719. politick body. This accordingly, by a Law called Lex Hortenfia, he enacted; Ol. 123, 449, 3. though it appeareth out of Livy, that the same in effect had been granted V. C. 468.

twice before, v z. in the 305 year of the Citie, by L. Valerim, and M. Ho- Piol. Lati 18. ration the Confuls, and again in the 416. by Q. Pablius Philo the Dittator. 50 years before this present, which having not been observed, might give the which pacified them. * Florus telleth a story, that the businesse of Matri- * Lib. 1. cap. 26.

of this Sedition in this place, and by the infligation of this person, for this cause of marriage. That great Contentions were raised betwixt the two orders about the taking away the Law made by the Decemviri, which forbad marriage betwixt them, is oftens attested by Livy. But that the Commons departed into the Janiculum for the burthen of their debts, after great and The errour of Florus.

Commons as great distaste as the matter of debts, if we may judge from that mony betwixt the Pairicians and Picheians caused this third separation of the Commons into the Faniculum, the rumult being raised by Canuloius the Tribune. But Students are to take notice, that none but he freak any thing tensia.

The Lex Hor-

long contentions in the 468th year of the Citie, is by several Authors affirmed, and that thence they were reduced by Hortensius the Distator, who preferred a Law in the Esculeium, that what the Commons commanded should bind all Quirites: neither do Writers mention any other cause of the third Separation. 8. Hortensius died in the time of his Magistracy. After this there was Livius Epitom, action with the Volsimenses and Lucani, against whom assistance was given to Lillis, the Thurini. Then the Roman Ambassadors being killed by the Galls Senones, War was decreed against them, and L. Cacilius the Prator was cut off by them with the Legions. The Tarentines being jealous of the growth of the Roman power, had hitherto privily favoured the Samnites, though openly The Original they maintained a confederacy with the Romans. This people, being the offpring of the Parthenia, who were banished Lacedamon, for that being proof the Taren-miscuously begotten, they could not have any inheritance, and therefore plot- Leve Strabon. tines, and a description of ted against the State as was shown before, inhabited a Citie called Taren- 1.6, p.278, oc. their Citie, Government, tum, from Taras a certain Heroe, the Metropolis once of Calabria, Apulia, Florum lib.1. and all Lucania. It was fituate in a Peninsula on the Bay of the Adriatick 6, 18, and conver-Sea, famous for its bignesse, Walls, and Haven especially, which lay so fation. convenient for fayling into the Roman Coafts, Ifria , Illyricum , Epiru, Achain, Africk, and Sicily, that Florus accounterh the lituation admirable. The Tarentines affecting, took Democratical Government, obtained great power in those parts, having a more considerable Fleet than any of their neighbours, 30000 foot, 2000 horse, and 1000 persons fit to command them. They imbraced the Philosophy of Pythagoras, especially one Archytas, who governed the Citie a long time. In after times luxury was produced by prosperity to such excesse, that if credit may be given to Strabo, the Tarentines had more publick Festivals yearly, than the year hath dayes; by reafon whereof, the State of the Commonwealth under fuch a Government was rendred much worse. One of their bad customs was (as he judgeth it) to > cavi they imployed Alexander the Molossian, and before that Archidamus the fon of Agefilans, as afterward Cleonymus and Agathocles; and afterwards Pyrrhus against the Romans. They contended with the Messapis about Heraclea, and imployed also against them the two Kings of the Dannii and Peucetii. Neither would they obey the forein Captains for whom they had fent but fell to odds with them which procured no small inconvenience.

> use the Conduct of foreiners in their Wars; for against the Messapii and Lu-

9. Near to the Haven, in the view of the Sea, was the Theatre of the City, which proved the cause of all its misery and calamities, faith Florus. They were therein beholding Games, when L. Va'erius the Duumvir (as he is called in Livy's Epitome) or one of the Roman Admirals fayled thither as to Orofins libe. a confederate Citie. They taking the Romans for Enemies, faith Florus; cap. 1. (who addeth what cannot be credited, that they scarce knew, who, or whence xonaras, the iviacedonians. the Remans were) or as others think, having both knowledge and malice fufficient, fet upon the Fleer, and either sunk, or at least rifled it, and slew the The Original Admiral. The Senate sent L. Posthumius to complain of the injury, who of their War delivering his message boldly was dismissed with a very distatistation answer, at his coming in, having had * Urine thrown upon him, or one of his compani- * Valce, Max, ons. War therefore was decreed against the Tarentines, and committed to the lib.s. cap, s. management of L. Emilius the Conful, who first indeavoured by fair means Exemp. 5. to reclaim them, and when that could not do it, wasted their Territories with fire and sword, revenging their insolence with cruelty as Orofius writeth, for which service he triumphed the year after his Consulthip, as appeareth out of an old inscription. The Tarentines finding themselves too weak for the encounter, fent to Pyrrhus King of Epirus for aid, whom they had formerly They fend for affifted against the Corcyraans. The multitude were of themselves rather Plutarch in Proba King inclined to peace; but a certain company of men, by Greek Authors called De- Pyribo. magogi (from their leading of the people) would not let them rest, till they had refolved upon the War; whereur on they fent Ambassadors to Pyrrhus, who not onely in their name, but of other Italians also Presented him with

gifts, and fignified that they flood in need of a General, Eminent both for

abilities and reputation; Italy it felf being able to furnish them with forces out of the Countreys of the Lucanians, Mefapians, and Samnites. The King being of a reftleffe spirit, incouraging himself in vain hopes (whereby he

Thesalian, an excellent Orator and Scholar of Demosthenes. He afterwards V. C. 474. took the Sea himself with twenty Elephants, 3000 horse, and 22 foot, besides Seleusidarum 500 Archers and Slingers; bur upon the Main was feized with fuch a Tem- 33. peff, that his Pleet being severed, many Vessels were lost, he was forced to vis 3. leap out into the water, and with great hazard got to Land, and onely at pre- Ptol. Philafent two Elephants, a very few horf-men, and about 2000 foot could be re- delph. 5. covered from the flipwrack by the Meffapians, upon the Coasts of whom they No. Pyrrhus did nothing without the confent of the Tarentines , till his thips, and the greater part of his Army arrived; then taking notice how they Idemibid. minded nothing but bathing and feathing, he shut up the publick meeting places, restrained them from walking (in which exercise they were wont to discourse idly concerning War) and forbidding drinking, and Games, called them to Arms, making Levies of the youth with some rigour and severity. Valerius Lavinus the Conful hasting to give him battel ere the affiftance of the Confederates came, he drew out his Army to him; but before they should joyn, sent to him, offering himself an Umpire betwixt the Romans, and their adversaries, to which Va'ering answered, that they neither cared for him as an Umpire, nor feared him as an Enemy, and taking his Spies, he caused them to be led throughout the Camp, and then hade them return, and tell him what they had feen. Pyrrhus pitched his Tents betwixt Pandofa and Hera- Eutrop. clea, a Town fituate betwirt Tarentum and Metaponius, built by the Tarensines. The Romans beyond the River Siris not Liris, a River of Campania, as Florus and Orofius write, who also draw Heraclea out of that part of Magna Gracia, lying upon Siris & Metapontus, into Campania. In the figte Pyrrhus had his horse killed under him, by one Obsidius a Ferentane, who was flain in the place by his followers. This made him change Armour with one near to him, who being made at for him and struck down, his Armour was taken from off him, and being carried about by the Romans in token of his death, fruck such a terrour into his Soldiers that it had cost him the victory, but that he feafonably with some labour made himself known. Whilest the victory seemed yet to be doubtfull, or rather to incline toward the Romans, the Elephants being brought into the battel decided the controversie. Till the passing of Alexander into the East, this beast had been talked of, but never seen by the Europeans nor them of Asia, except the Indians and their neighbours, as also the Southern Africans. Homer describeth the houses of grasped as it were the Empire of all the West) promised them to come over A.M. 3725. with an Army, and dispatched before him with 3000 men One Cineas a 01,125, ann. 1.

647

SECT. 1. rich men to have been adorned with Ivory, but as * Pah fanies noteth, never * Exemp. vide. mentioneth the beaft. The Romans themselves were amazed, not knowing in Atticis P. M. Who defeat- what they were; but the fault is laid upon their horses, which not enduring & Justin 118 the smell nor bignesse of the Elephants broke their Ranks, which opportunity eth Lavinus the Contui by the King took, and fending his horse in amongst the Romans thus disordered, put them to the rout. He got but a bloudy victory, he himself being wounded, Elephants. and a great part of his men flain, though of the numbers on either fide Writers Having taken prisoners 1800 of the Romans, he used them with great Eutrop, ut briks civility, and buried their dead, whom observing to be wounded all before, and & Plutarch. to be with Hern countenances, he lifted up his eyes, and faid : He could have been Master of all the world if he had had but such Soldiers. After this having Marcheth to. received the Auxiliaries of the Samnites, Lucans and Brutis, he marched towards Rome. wards Rome as far as Praneste, a Town 18 miles distant from the Citie, wasting all with fire and fword in his paffage. Hearing that the Romans were bufie in recruiting their Army, he confidered it was most creditable for him to make peace with them, being he had no hopes to subdue them, and for that purpose sent Cineas to feel their minds, a man so powerfull in the art of Rhetorick, that the King acknowledged him to have stormed more Cities Sendeth about by his tongue, than he had ever done by force of Arms. Cinem presented the a peace which principal Citizens and their Wives with gifts from Pyrrhus; but they refused Apprus Clauthem. When he had something wrought upon the Senate to make a peace, and admit Pyrhus into the Cirie, Appius Claudius now blind came in, and by an Oration, recorded by Plutarch, procured the contrary. The Ambassadour at his return being asked what he thought of Rome, answered, that the Senate feemed to him as a Council of fo many Kings. After Cinear his return the Romans sent to Pyrrhus about redeeming of prisoners, amongst others C.F.a. bricins, a man of great note for virtue and poverty. The King being informed by Cineas concerning his disposition, offered him Gold, which when he refufed with great resolution, to try his gravity, the next day as they were talking together, he commanded the greatest Elephant he had to be set behind the hanging, and then on a sudden the Tapestry being removed, the beast held his Fabricius goeth probofcis over Fabricius his head, and roared exceedingly. But he not at all to him about terrified, though he had never before feen this kind of Creature, smiled, and told the King, that neither his Gold the day before, nor his Elephant now did the prisoners, on this condition, that if the Senate accepted not of peace they should return to him, which accordingly they did, having saluted their friends, and solemnized the Saturnalia, being commanded to do it by the Fathers upon pain of death. 12. P. Sulpicius Saverrio and P. Decius Mus, being Confuls for the A. M. 3716. following year, were fent against Pyrrhus. The Romans by this time had V.C. 475. learnt not to fear Elephants with fuch astonishment as formerly; so that these beasts now were overcome and killed, Pyrrhus himself was wounded, 2000 Lib. 13.

at all move him. Pyrrhus amazed at his greatnesse of mind, released to him of his men flain, and 5000 of the Romans, according to Eutropius, but from Livies Epitome, if should appear that the issue of this battel was doubtfull, Tuscul, and Cicero writeth that Decius was flain. Florus relateth, that first in Apulia, and then at Afoulum the Romans had better successe, Curius and Fabricius being Confuls; for now the terrour of the Elephants was worn off, and C. Minutius by cutting off the probofcis from one, shewed that the beasts could die. Darts were thrown so thick upon them, and fire upon the Towers

Several ingagements of the Romans with him.

redceming of

prifoners.

cth.

on their backs, that the Army was forely distressed, in which condition it remained till night relieved it, and the King being the last that fled, having received a wound in his shoulder, was carried out by his Guard in his Armour. But as Florus is to be read with great caution in every place, so especially in this; for Curius and Fabricius were never Consuls together, as the Tables show. This therefore is to be referred to the ensuing year wherein C. Fabricius Luscinus, and Q. Amylius Papus (both of them the second time) were Consuls, Plutarch writeth that two dayes together Pyrrhus and the

Confuls fought at Afcalum; whereof, on the former, his Elephants could Sect. 1. do him no service, but on the later, chusing a more even ground, by the means of the Elephants especially, he drove the Romans back into their Camp, having flain of them 6000, and loft 3505 of his own men, as Hieronymas relateth out of the King's Records. But he addeth, that Dionyfius neither wrote any thing of two battels fought at Afculum, neither, for certain, of Ryrrhus his Victory: one fight he mentioned fought till Sun-fet,, at the conclusion whereof Pyrrbus was wounded in the Arm, which wound, with the Sammites rifling his baggage, put an end to it; either party having lost above 15000 men. That this buttel (or those battels) fell out in the year aforefaid is clear from that which moved Pyrrhus this way to attempt the ending of the controversie. For the Consuls, Fabricius and Amilius, receiving a letter from the King's * Physician, wherein he offered to poylon him, upon condition to be well requited, they wrote back to Pyrrhus to acquaint him * De bac hiftswith the treason, and in theirs included the Physician's letter. To requite the allos relate Romans for this courtefie, he sent back their prisoners grass, and dispatched Confute Livis away Ciness again to treat of Peace. The Romans would neither receive their Epit. 1. 13. Captives in way of free gift, nor reward; but fent him so many of the Sam- Val. Max.1.6. Captives in way of free gift, nor reward; but fent him to many or the same interest and Tarentines: as for Peace, they refused to admit of any, except he Tullis Offic.13. would return with his forces into Epirus. He perceiving (faith Platarch) Gellium 1, 3. that he must try with them another battel, marched unto Afenlum. More- c. 8. over the Triumphal tables show, that in the Consulship of Fabricius and Emilius, the Romans fought with the Lucani, Brutil, Tarentines, and Lib. 5 9.241. Samnites, at Afoulum, which as * Strabo Writteth, was a Town of the Pi- B. ceni in the midland Country, most fortified by nature, being encompassed, besides a wall, with mountains, over which no Army could passe. 13. Pyrrhus after this action at Asculum, is reported to have answered one who congratulated with him about his successe, in this manner: If we overcome the Romans another time we are utterly loft. For he had by this time loft a great part of the Soldiers he had brought over, and almost all his Pjabus getfriends and Captains: he had no more to send for: he perceived his Italian ting nothing Allies to loiter, and the Romans to have a constant supply, whereby they prefently recruited their Army, and filled up their Legions, and he faw clearly that their courage was nothing daunted by the losse of one battel, but rather their strength and resolution to be the more increased. Being pressed with these difficulties, he had presently a recourse to vain hopes, occasioned by fuch affaires as cast him necessarily into an anxious deliberation. For at the fame time, the Agrigentines, Syracufians, and Leontines, out of Sicily, give up themselves to him, desiring his help in casting out the Carthaginians, and clearing the Island of Tyrants: and out of Greece came intelligence, that Prolomans Cecaunus was flain in battel by the Galls, and therefore it was most convenient for him to come into Macedon a, now without a King. Blaming Fortune much that had conjoyned two fuch great opportunities, whereof the one must necessarily be omitted, after a long debute he resolved to apply himself to the matters of Sicily, as more considerable than the other him for in of Greece, because of Africk. Having sent over Cineas beforehind to deal with the Cities about the state of affiires, he put a Gurison upon the Tarentines, who took it in ill part, requiring him either to profecure the Warre against the Romans, for which he had been called, or clearly quirting the Country of Tarentum, to leave the City in that condition wherein he found it: But returning them no pleafant answer, he hade them stay histime, and so departed, after he had caried on the War in Italy two years and four moneths. For the following year, P. Cornelius Rufinus, and C. Julius Brutus, both Gellius 1.4 c.8. the second time, were Confuls. Rufinus was a min very expert in War, but A. M.3728. extraordinarily covetous and scraping, insomuch that upon this account he was V.C. 477. much hated by Fabricias, formerly mentioned. Yet, when this year he flood for the Consulship, for that it was a very dangerous time, and his com-

peritors were persons of no value, Fabricius laboured earnestly to have him elected, and when every one wondered at it; either to his friends, or, as

0000

* Cicero

SECT. 1. * Citero Writeth, to Rufinus himfolf, giving bim thanks, hee answered & L. a.de Orange

And with-

draweth him-

Malui compilari quam vanire ; l'desired rather to be pilled than fold. 14. Pyrrhus having found things in Sicily according to his mind, proceeded in his enterprize with as much fatisfaction, till growing tyrannical, he incurred the hatred of those that imployed him; part of whom revolted to the Carchaginians, and others betook themselves to the aid of the Mamertines. Perceiving at length that he was involved in the deep hatred of all, and nothing throughout the Island but tevolts, new councils and a strong conspiracy against him, he received letters from the Sammites and Tarehines, who being that up in their Towns, which they hardly maintained, defired his affistance. He was glad of so specious a pretence, that he might not seem to be driven by desperation out of Sivily, which indeed as a perishing Vestel inso great a Tempest he was not able to govern, and so returned into Italy, after he had been absent near as long as formerly he had there continued. The A.M. 2920. with difficul- Barbarians fet upon him in his passage, and the Carthaginians fo distressed. 01, 126, an, 2, him the Straights, that he lost many of his ships. The Mamertines having V. C. 479. landed, to the number of 10000 men before him, would not adventure to Antiochi Sot. 8. fight with him, but diffrested his Army much in narrow and difficult places, Ptol. Philad. killing two Elephants and many Men in the rear. He himself fighting in the 10. front with a valiant and skilful Enemy, received a hurt in his head, whereupon he withdrew himself a little. This so animated the Mametines, that one of them, great in bulck, and glittering with atmour, came out far before the rest, and in a threatening manner bade Pyrrhus come forth if he were alive. Pyrthus inraged with his guard, bloody as he was, and with a terrible countenance rufted through the midft and coming up to the Barbarian, fruck him with fuch fury upon the head, that the Broak through the fwords mettal and the friength of the arm, pierced to the lower part of the body, fo that in a moment it was chined down in the midle, and the two parts fell down on either fide. The Barbariani aftonished hereat, left off their attempts, and so without further interruption he marched with 20000 Foot, and 3000 Horse to Tarentum, where increasing his forces by new levies, he proceeded into Samniam against the Romans, who there lay incamped.

15. Few of the Samnites Joyned now with him, because being so often overthrown by the Romans, their courage was wholly broken, and for that they were displeased with him for his going into Sicily. He divided his forces into two parts, whereof one he fent against L. Cornelius Lenthlus into Lncania to hinder him from joyning with his Colleague M. Carins Dentatus the other Conful, against whom he marched, then lying in a fortified place near Beneventum. Hasting to set upon him ere the other could come to his relief, with the most valiant of his men, and fiercest of his Elephants picked out, he marched by night towards his Camp, but passing through Woods his lights

He is defea. sed by Curius Dentatus the Conful.

faild him, and going out of his way he loft his time fo much, that at break of day the Romans discovered him upon the hills. Curius then in haste, as he could, drew out his forces, and falling upon the vantguard of Pyrrhus put it to flight, killing many men, and taking some Elephanes. Animated by this successe, he descended into the Plain, and there joyned battel with the whole Army. In one wing he beat back the Enemy, in the other by the violence of the beafts was born back to his Camp, whence calling forth those who kept the guard, they from high places to plied the Elephants with darts, that they forced them back upon their own friends, whom bearing down, and breaking their ranks, they thereby procured Victory to the Romans. Florus and Orofius, contrary to what Placarch reporterh of Beneventum (concerning which place Learned men do much doubt) make the battel to have been fought in Lucania in the Arusinian Plains. Florus writeth, that the cause of the Victory was a young Elephants being wounded in the head, which turning back and roaring for the pain, the Dam hearing him, ran as to his relief, and so both of them disordered the battel, the overturning as Enemies all the mer. Orofins faith, that the beafts were thus difordered by bundles of hemp beforeared with pitch, which having hooks in them and fet on five, the Romans cast upon their backs, and the towers set thereon. Frontinus maketh the battel fought about Fatuentum, in the Arufinian Plains, Entrepins is filent concerning the place; but writeth, that Curius Dentatus beat SECT.I. Pyrrhus back to Tarensum, slew 23000 of his men, and led, the first of all others, Elephants (four in number) in triumph to Rome; which beasts the Romans called Lucaboves, because they were first brought out of Lucania, where Pyrrhus was overthrown: This maketh much against that place which Plutarch affigneth for the battel, the original of whose error seemeth a militaking of Benevenium for Fatuentum, or Statuentum, a City of Lu-

651

16. This Victory, faith Plutarch, made way for the establishment of the Roman Empire: for the Roman: got such courage and reputation by this fuccesse, that being counted invincible, they presently obtained all lealy, and not long after, Sicily also. As for Pyrrhus, he having spent fix years, and fallen from his hopes both in Italy and Sicily, returned into Epirus, yet with a mind nothing daunted. He was thought the ableft Captain of all the Kings of that time, both for military skill, and perfonal valour; but what he had already obtained, he lost still by striving to grasp more. Therefore Antitigonus compared him to a Gamester, who having lucky hits, knew not how to use them. (a) Having sent to the Kings of Asia, and Antigonus especially, for men and money, after he had received bare letters, he called the Atticis. Epirous and Tarentines together, and told them, that prefently assistance (b) Val. Max. would come, which report being caried unto the Roman Camp, the Confuls 1. 4. c.3. exemp durst not stir, and so taking this advintage, the night following, he passed over unmolested into Epirus, (b) Curius the Conful having taken his Camp, touched (c) Idem. 1. 4. unmoletted into Epirus. (b) Curius the Confut having taken his Camp, touched C. A. exemp, 3 nothing of the plunder; and whereas the Senate gave feven Akers of ground (d) Livii Epit. apiece to the People, and 500 to him, he would not exceed the common pro- 1. 14. fil into his ownkingdom, portion. This year, C. Fabricius Luscinus and Q. Æmilius Papus, much Val. Max. 1.2. (6) commended for their poverty, being Cenfors, (d) removed P. Cornelius c. 9. exemp. 4. Rufinus, who had been twice Conful and once Diltator, from the Senate, Agellius 1.17. hecanfe they had found in his house of place for the Coming of his children for the Coming of his ch because they had found in his house of plate for the service of his table ten (e) in sylla. pounds; this being against a Law, as (e) Plutarch hinteth. At this Lustrum were ceffed 271224 polls of Roman Citizens, as appeareth from the Epitome of the 14 Book of Livie's History, 17. The Roman name had begun to be famous before, but was terrible after the overthrow of Pyrrhus. In the second year after his flight, (a) Ptolomy Philadelphus fent Ambassadors to congrarulate with the Romans about (a) Livii Ep. their successe, and to enter into confederacy with them. They fent, to do Eutrop. 1.2. him honour, Ambassadors also to Alexandria, where he received them most Val. Max.l. 4. talphus by an courteoully, and sent them back loaded with gifts. At their return they brought c. 3, ex. 9. Embaie ma- the gifts, though given to themselves in particular, into the Treasury; but the Senare commanded them to be reflored. In the third year after the departure of Pyrrhus, the (b) Tarentines, being neither able to drive out the Garrison he had there lest under Milo, nor procure Peace of the Romans, (b) Orosius desired aid of the Carthaginians, wherewith giving the Romans battel, they 1.4.c.3. were overthrown. Mile sensible how hadly he was able to resist, by leave Xodarat. from the Conful Papirins, departed with his men, and left the Caffle, which of 127, and 1. the Romans having got into their hands, easily mastered the City, the walls V. C. 482. whereof they demolished. Peace and liberty was granted to the Citizens, Selencid, 41. The Castle and the two Consuls L. Papirius Curjor, and Sp. Cornelius Maximus (both Antioth Sot, 11: and Town of Confuls the second time) triumphed, having finished both the Tarentine Prof. Philad. War and that of the Samnites in the 481 (or 481) year of the City, as the 13.

to note dilds being Capitoline tables do shew. The greatest part of Italy was now conquered, was subdued, an accession being made not onely of the Tarentines and Samnites, but the Lucanians alfo, and a little before of the Etruscans. After this, the (c) Cam- (c) Livii Epit. panian Legion, which without command had feized upon Rhegium was befie- 115, 15, ged, and upon furrender was put to death. The inhabitants of Apollonia in Val. Max. 1.6 Hyricum fending Ambassadors to Rome, the two Ædiles Q. Fabius and Cn. Apronius beat them, and for that were delivered up to the Apolloniates.

SECT. 2. The Picenies were overcome and had peace given them. Colonies were fent forth to Ariminum in the Country of the Piceni, and to Beneventum (till now called Maleventum) in that of the Samutes. About the same time was filver Coin first stamped at Rome, brasse being used altogether rill now, the State having got much filver in a Castle of the Samnites, as Xona-Silver money ras writeth, This hapned five years before the first Punick, War, as (d) Pliny (d)Lib 33.63.

first stamped, computerh, C. Fab.us Pictor, and Q. Ogulnius Gallus being Confuls, in the fourteenth year of Antiochus Soter, and the fixteenth of Ptolomy Philadelphus, A. M. 3736, 267 before the birth of Christ.

SECT. II.

From the First Punick war, to that with Antiochus the Great, in which the Romans first invaded Asia, the Space of 37 years.

I. THe Umbri and Sallentini being newly subdued, and the number of Quafters being increased to eight, the Romans took occasion to transfer their Armies over the Sea into Sicily, and begun that, which from the Island (that gave both occasion to, and was the feat of, it) is by Greek Writers called the Sicilian War. There had the Mamertines most perfidi-

The original only feized on M. ffana, as is already related, and thereupon were become of the Sicilian Enemies to Hieron King of Syracufe, who befreged them justly as thieves or first Punick and murderers, and had taken the City, but that Annibal the Carthaginian cumningly diverted him, with an intention to get it into his own hands, as it came to passe; for pretending fair things to the Mamertines, as before to Hiero, and fending them in provisions, he possessed himself of the Castle. They being thus cheated by him, and now straightned by both, who had joyned together against them, betook themselves to the Romans for relief. The Senaie begun to be very sensible of the power of the Carthaginians, who had now almost the whole Mand in their hands, and was jealous of their approach so near to Italy; so that a just quarrel with them seemed very acceptable. But so bad was the cause of the Mamertines, as they could not in conscience undertake the patronage of it, and gave them a denial. From the A. M. 2740. Senite the thing was brought to the People, which besides it's antient use to 01, 128, 40, 4, debate matters concerning War, had by the Hortensian Law obtained power V. C. 490. by it's Plebifcita to bind the whole State. The Prators shewed what great Sciencial 49. profit would redound to the Commonwealth in general, and particularly to Ptolom, Phild. private Citizens (who having suffered much by the late Italian Wars, were 21. defirous by a new one to recruit their fortunes) and therefore by a Plebiscitum they decreed aid to bee fent to the Mamertines, in the 489 year of the City, Q. Fabius Maximus Gurges the third time, and L. Mamiliu Vitulus being Confuls, 2. In the year following, and the Confulship of Appius Claudius Caudex, and M. Fulvius Flaccus, Appins was fent over with an Army to Mellana, to execute the commands of the People. He first defeated Hiero, then the Carthaginians, and so raised the siege. The succeeding Confuls Manins Offacilius and M. Valerius Maximus, were ordered both, and with all the Hiero King of Legions, to passe into Sicily, wherewith Hiero was affrighted into obedience, Syracuse being perceiving that the Romans were most likely to remain Victors, and made his worked ma- Peace upon these terms, To restore all their prisoners without ransom, and with the Ro. Pay 100 Talents of Silver. The Romans imbraced his frienship the more readily, for that the Carthaginians being mafters at Sea, they could not well fend over provisions, which they hoped might be supplied by him in good meafure. They also by this alliance thought themselves eased of the burthen of Wir, and therefore the next year they fent over but two Legions. Valorius the Conful from Messana had the sirname of Messala, who also having taken

A Dial brought our of Sicily to Rome, And Barbers,

Catana, carried thence a new Sundial to Rome, Papirius Curfor having SECT. 2. thirry years before fet up the first that ever was in that City. This though not perfect, the People ufed 99 years, till M. Philippus their Cenfor fet up a perfect one by it, and about the same time Scipio Nasica being Confor, first divided the equal division of the day into hours, by water dropping out of one vessel into another. This Pliny relateth out of Varro, who also reported, that out of Sicily the first Barbers were brought to Rome by P. Ticinins Mena, about the 454 year of the City, before which time the Romans never cut their hair. The first that was shaven every day was Scipio A. fricanus, whom Augustus imitated therein, none more using the Razor

3. the next year was Agrigentum taken after a long fiege; Hannibal who came to raise it being overthrown by L. Posthumins and Q. Mamilius the Con-

Agrigentum va- fuls. The news whereof filled Rome with excessive joy, and the Citizens now elevated in mind, would not acquiesce in former Councils. It seemed not sufficient to them, that they had saved the Mamertines, nor inriched themfelves with great booty: but conceiving good hope that they might be able to cast the Carthaginians out of Sicily, and much thereby promote their affairs, they thitherto directed their thoughts and confultations. On Land indeed they seemed sufficiently to prosper, for L. Vaerius and T. Octacilius the fucceeding Confut; managed the War very well; but the Carthaginians with- A. M. 3743. out controversie being Masters at Sea, thereby procured the Maritime Towns of 129,00.3.

To revolt to them, forhat the War was noised herwise the two interests. to revolt to them, fothat the War was poifed betwirt the two interests, now Antioch. Their. inclining to one fide, and then presently to the other. Moreover Italy was Ptol. Philada 3. often molested by the Carthaginian Fleet; but Africk out of all danger.

now first apply them-felves to fca matters.

Wherefore they concluded, there was necessity of betaking themselves also to Sea matters. Having never as much as thought of the Sea before, they now fer upon building of 100 Quinqueremes and 20 Triremes, a thing most difficult, because the Carpenters were utterly to seek how to make the former fort of Gallies, their use being utterly unknown to the Italians. But before they had made trial, when they first transported their forces to Messana, they ventured to fight with the Ca thaginians, who had received the Dominion of the Sea, without any competition from their Ancestors; which boldneffe and confidence Polybius esteemeth no lesse thin miraculous. First of all Cn. Cornelius the Conful and Admiral, going with seven Vessels to reduce a Town of the Lipara ans, was taken in the Haven by one fent from Hannibal, But Duilins his Collegue presently after gave the Caribaginans agreat overthrow, the Soldiers having provided iron hooks, by the help of which they could board them and fight as on Land. The Romans hereby extraordinarily animated, relieved the Agestant, and took Macella a certain Town by florm. But Amilear Captain of the Carthaginian Land-forces then lying at Panormus, understanding that in the Roman Camp there was a mutiny, for that the Auxiliaries and Legions contended who should have the lumbal encei. first place in battel; and that the former had separated themselves, he sodainly fell upon them in their removal, and killed almost 4000 men. Hannibel after this loffe at Sea departed to Carthage, where recruiting his Naval A. M. 3745.

Catana.

forces he went into Sardinia, and being blocked up in a port by the Romans, Val. Max. 1.7. loft many ships, and for that was crucified by the foldiers, who overlived the c. 3. exter. defear. The punishment which he feared for the former overthrow he craf- exemp. 7. tily evaded; for, before the thing was heard at Carthage, he fent one of his friends thicher, who coming to the Court, told the Senate that the Roman Admiral was come with a great Fleet, and therefore he was come to ask their advice whether he should fight him. All the Senate answered, there was no doubt but he ought, to which the messenger replied, he hath fought and is overebrown. By this means he hindered them from condemning that fact, which before they had judged that it ought to be done. 4. Now had the Romans passed both into Sardina and Corsica; Divine Povidence as Casaubon noteth upon Polybins, so ordering it, that present successe should dispose their minds for such future undertakings, as made way

The Macedonians.

SECT. 2. for their decreed Empire. (a) Hanno, the year following, being in Sardi- (a) Orollas betweet she rifing of Octoo and the Dog. But they gave no heed to the Seaand had ment sout of a define to by showing of their fresh Victory and Plunder, to Agrigentum destroyed.

Conful de.

feateth the

Which mo-

mia was flain, and his Army cut off by L. Cornelius Scipio the Conful. The 1.4.6.7. next, many Towns were lost and taken in Sicilie on both fides. But (b) Cal- (b) Front.

Durnius Flamma a Roman Tribune (or Leader of a Legion) gave a great de- Exemp. 15,6 monstration of his valour. For A. Attilius Calatinus the Conful, having 1.4. c.s. Econ. rashly brought the Army into such straights, out of which there was no possibi- 10. lity to extricate himself, he with 300 men took an hill near adjoyning, Gellius 1367. and drew thereby the Carthaginians to himself, till the Army could passe alii, The valiant through without opposition. All the 300 were slain, yet he forely wounded act of Calpurand covered with dead bodies survived, being by Roman Writes compared, nius Flamma. for this act, to Leonidas the Spartan. This story is twice told by Julius Fron-tinus, who acquainteth us with the uncertainty of the man's name, fome calling him Laberius, others Q. Caditsus, but most Calpurnius Flamma. The following year, C. Attilus Regulus the Conful fubdued the Islands Lipara and Melita, whereof the later is ennobled by the ship-wrack of St. Paul, lying betwixt Sicily and Africk. Polybins writeth, that first Regulus was worlded at Sea, and then he defeated the Carthaginians. Now the Romans resolved to change the seat of the War into Africk, and the next year sent a Fleet under command of the Confuls M. Attilus Regulus (who was fubcovered ships. The Carthaginians sensible enough how concernd they were passe into A- to keep the War from their own dores, opposed them with 250 Vessels, and frick, and in a threefold battel was fought on the same day, in which the Romans remained defeat the Carthaginians at Sca, their passage Victors, having taken 64 ships with the defendants, and sunk 30, and of their own lost 24, but not with the men; for the Carthaginians feating their Corvi or iron hooks, were afraid to come near them. Repairing then the ships they had taken, they passed over into Africk, and had surrendered to them Clupea a City feated upon the Promontory Herman. This done, they fent to the Senate for further orders employing themselves, til the return of themessengers, in wasting the Country, which they did without interruption. At length they received the resolution of the Senate, which was, that one of them should continue in Africk with a convenient Army, and the other return to Rome with the remaining forces.

Hanno flain.

stituted in the place of Caditius) and L. Manlius, containing 330 long and

5. (a) M. Atullius Regulus remained in Africk with 40 thips, $5000 (a) Publius Rigulus make Foot, and 500 Horse. Pitching his Camp upon the River Bragada, or lib. 1. Bagrada, he was forced to make (b) War with a Serpent of a miraculous (b) Gdlius 1.6. gainst a mon-bignesse, which with the great trouble of his whole Army, and use of En- c. 3. ftrous Serpent, gines for battery, at length he flew, and fent it's skin, 120 foot long, to Liv. Epit. 1.18.

Rome. The history hereof was curiously and elegantly related by Livie, as (c) Valerius telleth us. After this, (d) the Conful gave the Carthaginians a defeat, Exemp, ult. fighting in such a place where their Horse and Elephants could do them no Palybius at laservice, and then took Tunetum or Tunis. But not long after he was over-pra.

thrown himself, taken prisoner, and almost his whole Army lost; this Victory the Carthagimi being got for the Carthaginians by Xantippus, the Lacedemonian, whom af- A. M. 3749. terwards fending honourably home as they precended, they commanded those of, 121, 41,1 that caried him to drown him and his in the Sea, left fo great a Victory should V. c. 498. taken himself, be ascribed to the Lacedemonians, as Appian writeth. Of 30000 but a few Ant. Thin, escaped into the City Aspis (called also Clupea) where they were besieged, Ptol. Philad. till their Enemies perceiving they profited nothing, rose up and made provi- M. Apilio Refion for refisting the succours which the Senate sent the following year, under gulo 2. command of M. Amilius Paulus and Ser. Fabius Nobilior, the Confuls. L. Manlie Vid. They taking the Sea with 350 ships were opposed by the Carthaginians, sourcess. whom they defeated, and took 114 of their Vessels with the men in them, as Polybius writeth, or took 30 and fank 104, as Eutropius and Orofius, the later whereof addeth, that of the Carthaginians were flain 25000, and that the Romans lost nine Gallies and 1 too men. The Consuls then went to Clupea, but, taking in the reliques of the Army, presently set sail again for Sicily. The Pilots told them they must take heed of the outward part of that Island, which was full of shelves and very dangerous, especially at that time

Procure contain Towns upon the Coaffeto yield. They had fafely p ffed the middle of the fear hind drew near to the Coatts of Camarina, when fuch a sempeti such so great unistitics felt upon them; as eather be expressed; fairly Palydiney for the greatioffe the dereof. Per, of 464 flips, 80 feetely Identities. were laved justide hereft were fivellowethup, or each upon rocks, to that the Europ. I. a. tum from Si- Moar was filled with dead bodies, and broken pieces of thips. Both the Died Sicolus from washined with dead bodies; and process or imps. Don't ne Confuls perished. Those few that escaped Hiero kindly received, and fur Edg. 12. a lamentable shipwrack.

niffting them with clother and other necoffaries, coveyed them fafe to Mef- A. M. 3750. Jana: Karthale the Carthaginian saking advantage of this difafter, befinged, conqueted, and burnt Agriginum, the walls whereof he also demo-6. The Romans nothing at all discouraged by the greatest losse that ever a tempest produced, gave didde for the making of 220 Gallies, which was profestited with fach alacrity, that in three moneths time they were both made and lauch de, Afdrubul the Carebaginian with all the old Army, new levies, and $40 Elephants, came into Sicily, and of old and new Velles made up a Flest of soo fail. The Confuls A. Authius and Ca. Cornelius being commanded to peffecinto Sistly, therein, this year, took leveral Towns, and returned. Their succeffors C. Serviling Cape and C. Semprovius Blafe, in the beginning of the next Spring with all the Fleet paffed into Stoily, and thence into Africk, where coasting about they landed in many places, but did nothing memorable. At length they came to the Island of the Lotophagi called Menine, not far diffant from the leffer Syrtie. Here they fell upon some quicks in the low water, and were in great danger, being utterly ignorant of the Costs, but the tide redurning, when they had light ned the Mips; Cleared then off the thelves, and they returned in a kind of flight to Panormini in Si-Another thip city. There passing hence towards Rome through the Straights very unadvitedwack of the ly, such a tempest fell upon them, as above 150 ships were lost. Though the Senate and People were marvailoufly pricked forward to all attempts by defire of glory, yet fo many and great were their losses at Sea, that they were conftrained to omit haval preparations, and place all their hope in the land forces. They fent L. Cacilius Metellus and Cn. Furius Pacilus the Confuls into Sicily with the Legions, and 60 thirs onely; for the conveying of necessaries to the Army. And not onely did they plainty yield the Dominion of the Sea to the Caribasinians, but feared them also on Land, because of their Elephants, which had often times done them great dammage. Afdrubal the Punish General understanding their fears, and how one of the Confuls was returned back into lealy with half of the Army, in great confidence walted the grounds about Panormus, and the more carelessely, because Merellus kept himfelf within the walls. But the Conful taking an opportunity, fo placed his men in respect of the Elephants, that when the Carthaginians came against the Town, he overthrew them, slew 20000, and took 26 Elephants, according to Entropins. But Orofins writerh, that 26 were flain, and 104 taken: and Livis related, as appeareth by the Epicome of his nine-Macllus the teenth Book, that 120 Elephants were led in triumph, with thirteen Captains of the Enemy. Diedorns Sieulus maketh the occasion of the overthrow to have been given by the Celta, in Afdrubals Army, who meeting Cathaginane with wine brought shither by Merchants, fo ingurgitated themselves therein, that being not themselves, they broke the ranks and turned all into diforder, which opportunity Metellus instantly improved. 7 This defeat caused the Canthaginians to desire Peace, and offered to send with them to to the Senare about it. Amongst the Massengers was Authus Regulus whom fand about a they had overthrown, and taken prifoner, five years before, and now bound with an oath to return to Carthage, in case neither Peace nor exchange of prisoners could be procured. He when he came to Rome, according to what he chought of the intererst of the Commonwealth, distwaded the Senate from Peace; and yet to keep his oath returned to Carthage, where he was

SECT. 2. cruelly tormented to death; and as * Givero writeth, by hunger and watch * De Finite. ing, having his eye-lids cut off. The year following, because the Land-for- Sed confident Regulia one of ces were very fearful of the Caribaginian Elephants, and very unchearfully Gellium keen the Mellen went about their work, the Romans provided another Fleet, and belieged eth it, and for Lilybaum, a Town standing upon the Southern Promontory of Sicily, overthat at his re- against Africk, but without successe; within a while the Navy was brought to turn is tornothing, and Amilear Bareas being fent from Carebage troubled Italy with mented to his inroads and depredations. For feven years then did they abstain from the death. Sea: but being forely diffurbed by Amilcar, they refolved once more to try their fortune that way, and a Fleet was provided, and furnished out of their private purfes, the Treasury being now exhausted. With this they gave such Defeated a. gain at the islands .fea. disposition, much averse to it, yet seeing it necessary for his Countrie's wel- Polybins 1, 3. tes, they de- fare, he made an agreement with Lutatins upon these terms, if the Romans fire.

Peace.

with full authority to conclude the Peace, who therened the time of payment, added 1000 talents to the former fum, and further cautionated that the Carthiginians should not onely quit Sicily but all the I flands also between it and Italy. Thus ended the first Punick War, after it had continued 24 years, and Diodons 1.24. Lilybaum bad been besieged ten; in the 513 year of the City, the fourth of the 124 Olympiad, the fixth of Selencus Callinions, and the fixth of Ptolomy V. C. 12.

quatus the second time, and Q. Lutatius Cerco being Consuls. 8. The Carebaginians submitted to the terms of this Peace, that they Plot, Eurog. 6.

might recruit themselves by a cessation; but the Peace procured them greater danger than the War could well have done. For, Amilcar Barcas, after the ratification, drew down the forces to bilybaum, and giving them up into the hands of Gesco to be transported, laid down his Office. Gesco wisely consi- Lege Polylium dering what danger there was of such a multitude of Mercenaries it's falling into fedition (especially because they wanted their pay, which the pub-

a blow to the Carthaginians near the Islands Agates, under conduct of C. Lucatius Catulus the Conful, as made them give committon to Amilear to conclude a Peace, if he found it requifite. Though he was, as to his own would approve them: viz. I bat the Carthaginians (hould wholly quit Sicily:

make no War upon the Syracufians or their allies ; release without ransom all prisoners, and pay within the space of twenty years 2200 Talents of Silver.

This pleased not the People, and therefore ten men were sent into Sicily.

lick Treasurvalready exhausted could not afford them) conveyed them into A lamentable Africk by small companies together. But his Superiours, either through inmutiny of the advertency, or for want of money, dismissed them not as they arrived; but flayed them till all should come together, with intention to prevail for an abatement of their wages. The City growing full, many outrages were committed by the Soldiers, which caused the Townsmen to procure their Captains to lead them out to Sicca a Town not far off, and when they left their baggage behind them, as intending shortly to return to Carebage, they fearing their unwillingnesse to depart, or their speedy return, because of their wives and children, in the cariages, forced them to take all away. When they were come to Sicca, they fell into greater licentiousnesse through want of employment, and demanded larger pay than formerly they had pretended to, expecting also great rewards promised them by their Captains in dangerous adventures. As foon as they were all come thither, Hanno the Carthaginian Prator was fent to them, who was fo far from curing, that he heighthened the distemper.

Hanns fent to make up the breach in largeth it.

9. He not onely brought none of those things with him which they expected, but complaining of the emptinesse of the Treasury, talked of abaring fomething of their constant wages. This put the multirude into a rage, into which having once fallen, it was hard to be appealed, as upon other accounts, fo through the divertity of their speech, things being either misrepresented by unskilful interpreters, or milunderstood by them who were willing enough to he militiken. Breathing nothing but fury and violence, they took Arms, and in despight of Hanno and the other Officers marched toward Carthage,

They march towards Carthace.

and encamped at Tunu, fifteen miles from the Citie, to the number of 20000, SECT. 2. The Carthaginians affrighted at the multitude resolved to satisfie them; but then the Mercenaries perceiving how they were feared, every day invented what to add to their demands, requiring besides their pay the price of their horses lost in the War, and, after this was granted, Provision for several years, which they said was behind. Their lare Masters not daring to deny them any thing, prevailed that fome one who had commanded them in Sicily should be chosen as Moderator, and the whole matter left to him. 10. The Soldiers made choice of Gelco, as one who had best deserved

the agreeprovoke the

ment, and multitude.

Energeses, A. M. 3764, 230 before the birth of Chrift, A. Manlins Tor- Selenci Callin.

of them. And he laboured to pacifie them all he might, and was about to pay them their Arreats. But there being in the Army one Spendins, a Cam-Author hinder panian of Italy by birth, but by condition a Roman flave, who having ran away from his Mafter, wanted neither strength nor courage; and one Mathos an African; the former fearing to be tortured to death if his Master caught him, as the Roman manner was, and the later though free, fearing to be called to account for his too great forwardnesse in the late stirs, sought how to drive all things into extremity, that they might procure a War, inveighing grievously against Gesco and the Carthaginians, as having a design as soon as the rest were dispersed and gone home, to spend their rage against the Africans. The multitude herewith were strangely incensed, so that who ever attempted to speak, before they could be heard what they would say, were all stoned to death except these two. Gesco yet would not cease to do his duty, but went from one Nation to another, labouring to pacifie them; but when the Africans demanded allowance for their Provisions, he bade them ask it of Mathos their Captain. This so transported them, that they plundered the goods of the Carthaginians, with all the money he had brought for the dischargement of the Army, and binding him and his followers in a contume-· lious manner cast them into prison.

bjan, or Afri-(as Ware

11. By the advice of Mathos they rebelled against the Carthagians, and fo began the War called Libycum and Africum, as also Zeundy. Their numbers being increased to 70000. Matho and Spendius now created Generals, divided their forces, and befieged Usica and Hippacra. Hanno was fent from Carthage to the relief of the Uticans, and at the first onser drove away the besiegers; but entring the Town, and loitering there, they set upon his Camp without, and killing muny, took all his Engines, and other things prepared for the War. His Superiours troubled hereat, created Captain Amilear Barca, and fent him into the field with 70 Elephants, and 10000 men. There he was encompassed by the Africans on his Front, the Numidians on his Rear, and Spendius on his Flanck, where Naravasius a Numidian with

Aniltan Barcas 2000 of his followers revolted to him. Encouraged by this addition he endetauth the gaged with his Enemies, causing his men so to face about as the Front became the Rear, whereby feeming to be in confusion, the Mercenaries thought they ran, and breaking their Ranks to pursue them, he took this opportunity, and fetting on them out of order obtained the victory having slain 10000, and taken 4000 prifoners

12. He gave Arms to all such prisoners as would serve under him, and having exhorted the rest to fight no more against the Carthaginians, dismissed them freely. Spendim and Matho, together with Antaritas Captain of the Galls, hearing this, doubted how far his elemency, especially the offer of indemnity, might prevail with the Africans and others, and confulted how to obviate this his delign by fetting the multitude at irreconcilable enmity with the Carthaginians. To this purpose they seigned Letters to be sent out of Sardinia from their friends, giving them to understand, that certain amongst them held intelligence with the Enemy, and advising them to keep close

Gefco, and the other with him. Spending taking hereat occasion, emettly Who are fur- advited them not to trust to the pretended clemency of Amilear, and by no the provoked meants to permit Gefeo to escape; for thereby they should incur the conby their Cap- tempt of their Enemies, and; by strengthning them through the assistance of fo great a Captain, not a little damnifie their own affairs. Whilest he yet spake

Pppp

another

SECT. 2. another Carrier brought Letters as from I mis of the fame Contents with the former; and then Autavitus openly protested, that whosoever had any regard to the kindnesse of the Carthaginians could not be faithfull, and therefore such were to be heard as perswaded the most bitter things against Carthage; all others being Traitors and Enemies. Then did he perswade them to Torture Gefco to death, with fuch as were now with him, and all that hereafter should be taken. There were many which spoke against this cruelty, especially as Gestro was concerned in it; but for some time they were not understood, speaking in their own languages, and when what they aimed at was fully known, some one cried out strike them, which so provoked the multitude, that they fortwith floned them. After this, bringing forth Gelco, and the other Carthaginians to the number of 700, they cruelly tormented them to death; and made a decree, that whomfoever of them for the time to come they should take, he should be used in the same manner, and if any of their Allies were taken, his hands being cut off, he should be sent back to Carthage. This they very carefully afterwards observed, having also refused to deliver the dead bodies to the Messengers that came for them, and threatned, if any more came, to deal with them as they had used Gelco. 12. Amilear seeing into what straights he was cast by this boldnesse of the Mercenaries, fent for Hanno, judging that an end might sooner be put to the War if the forces of the State were all United. Such of the Enemies as he took in the heat of the fight he killed, as he might by the Law of War, thavinian for- or taking them alive, cast them to wild beasts. When he thought that he had brought matters into a fair way of recovery, they presently relapsed into a far worse condition than ever. For, the ships that brought Provisions miscarried by force of Tempest: Sardinia at the same time revolted from them. which was wont to supply them with large Provisions; and Hippacrita and Utica which hitherto had remained faithfull, now revolted without any manifest cause. Mathes and Spendins herewith elevated, resolved to lay siege to Carthage it felf, and shortly after performed it. The Carthaginians in Mathos and this their distresse betook themselves to their neighbours, whereof the Ro-Spendius elevated by their mans, and Hiero King of Syracufe in Sicily, being fensible of the fawcinesse fuccesse beof their Enemies, were ready to do them all good Offices. Herewith better siege carthage, enabled, they held out, and Amilear lying abroad, so cut off all Provisions from the Mercenaries, that being no other than belieged themselves, they were forced at length to rife up and depart, refolving to observe Amilear's motions, and ly in wait for him on the fides of the Mountains; for they would not venture to take the plain, being afraid of his Elephants, and the horse of Naravascus; and otherwise they were much inferiour to the Carthaginians, who far surpassed them in Military skill, though but equal to them in when they ingaged with their whole force cut them off by stratagems: some-

Amilear forceth them to break up.

14. But Amilear fingling them out by parties, killed many of them, and times by day, otherwhiles by night he would fall upon them on a fudden with great terrour; and such of them as he took he cast them to the beasts. At length he compassed them about in such a place, as, though they were afraid to fight, they could not escape, and being shut up within a Ditch and Rampire, they were forced to devour one another. Though they now could expect no mercy, yet they fent to defire a Parley, and having obtained leave, Aniarelus, Zarxas, Spendins, and other Captains were ordered to manage ir. It was agreed that the Carthaginians should pick out ten men whom they pleased, and the other be dismissed in their Coats. The Covenants being finished, Amilear declared that he made choice of those who were present, and so got the most eminent Leaders into his power. The Africans understanding that their Officers were feized , took Armsin great hafte, but Amilour with his Elephants and his Army compassing them in on every side, purthern to the fword. For the improvement of this successe, he and Annibal went and belieged Mathos in Tunis, before the Walls whereof he nailed Spendins to a

Crosse with the rest of the Captives. Annibal pitching his Camp on that SECT.2. fide of the Town towards Carthage, carelefly demeaned himfelf, which Mathe s confidering, made a Sally, and killing many, took much plunder, and amongst other prisoners Annibal himself, whom bringing to Spendius his Cross, after he had taken down his Collegue's body, he nailed him to it, and killed 30 more of the most noble Carthaginians, when the Empire of the Macedonians.

15. It was long ere Amilear knew of this difaster, and when he did, for the distance of place, and difficulty of passage, he could give no relief. Marching therefore from Tunis, he fite down by the mouth of the River Macarie, and his Superiours at Caribage making new Levies joyned Hanno in Commission with him. These two, after several passages, at length agreed to fight one fer battel with the Enemy, who confenting, a bloody contest enfeateth them, and the War and almost four moneths.

sued, wherein at length the Carthaginians had the better. A great part of the Africans were flain, and the rest fled to a neighbouring Citie, where not long after they yielded themselves, and Mathos was taken alive. The subjects of Carthage now turned to obedience all, except they of Hippacrita and the War and Mica, who being past hope of mercy from their inraged Lords, feemed resolved to stand out; but Hanno and Amilear bringing their forces, constrained them to submit to such conditions as the Carthaginians would lay upon them. Mathos, and those that were with him being carried to the Citie, was used with all forts of contumely and torment, and so this Libyan War ended, having lasted three years, and almost four moneths, being, faith Polybim, the most cruel and wicked that ever we heard of. But it gave the Carthaginians occasion to repent of two great errors, viz. Trusting so great a multitude of Mercenaries together when they were idle; and the cruel, and tyrannical usage of their subjects. 26. The Romans, (that we may return to them the History of whom is our proper subject) though they observed the League during these troubles, and at length, as was faid, gave the Carthaginians also reason to like well of their friendship, yet thought they had some cause to be angry with them. For such of their subjects as sayled from Italy into Africk, they seized on, lest they should carry Provisions to their Enemies, and had at Carchage almost 500 of fuch kind of men in prison. Yer when Ambasfadors were sent to complain hereof, they kindly dismissed all those in custody, which so affected the Romans, that they also sent them all their prisoners, gave them all they asked, and permitted their Merchants to carry them necessaries, forbidding them to Trassick with their Enemies: they also refufed to hearken to fuch of the Carthaginian Mercenaties as having betrayed their erust invited them into Sardinia. But though Polybin telleth us that this they did; yet it appeareth from him also that this modesty continued but for a time. For, allured, as it seemeth, by this invitation, they sayled thither, which much offended the Carthaginians, who thought that the place by far more right belonged to them; so that they prepared to send forces into the Island. The Romans took occasion herear to decree War against them, complaining that these forces were not designed so much against the Sardinians as themselves, which forced the other, who found themselves in no week Sardinia good case to manage the War with them, to give way to the time, and quit not onely Sardinia, but pay further to the Romans 1200 Talents. This, more Tribute, though submitted to at present, bred such grudges and malice, as at length brake out into another War, a more dangerous and bloudy than the former, as made by Livins Andronicus the Poet. This man being a Gracian born, was Cafsiedorus in Chronico rightly called Andronicus, and firnamed Living from his Mafter Livins Sali-Transfer fifth states, whose Children he raught, and for his learning was manumitted by him. has, made by him.

17. In the (a) year after the ending of the first Panick War, the 514 of (a) ciero the Citie, C. Clandin Cento, and M. Sempronius Tuditamus being Confuls, Tucal lib.t. the year preceding the birth of Ennius, the first Comedies and Tragedies were & in Brus.

has, made by (b) Gelling faith, that he now first at Rome taught playes about 160 years af(b) Lib.17. ter the death of Sophocles and Euripides, and 52 after that of Menander. cap.21.

lerius Maximus telling us, that he drew the minds of the spectators to those thews from the use of Satires, which by little and little succeeded that most antient and plain Roman sport of the Histriones brought out of Etruria, (as we shewed before) for the stopping of the Pestilence, through the command of the Oracle. These Ludi Scenici were first managed with rude genures, and incomposed Songs, called Versus Fescennini from Fescennium a City 1.9. & cliub. The Ludi Senici. of Herruria. From these jocular speeches, which at random were wont to de Salira Robe uttered at the Roman folemnities, came the Satire, as later in time fo more mana, elaborate, and as for metre a period Poeme containing ridiculous things digested into Verse, which they were wont to utter amongst themselves, after the antient custom. It differed as much from that of the Greeks, as from the The Satire. rest different Dramatick Poetry, whereof the Romans at this time knew not fo much as the name. A Satire being afterwards variously handled by the Romans, at length was reduced to two forts, which Fabius onely acknowledgeth. The former was found out by Lucilius, and the later ennobled by

Varro, Horace mentioneth two kinds of most antient Poetry; one whereof they used in the praise of their gods, as when they appealed Tellus with a fow-pig, and Sylvanns with milk: the other, when in jest and sport they seered one another, being the same with the Fescennine Verses, whence came the Saures, to which Livius Andronicus added the playes of Comedies and Tragedies, as was observed. 18. Four years after, were celebrated at Romo the third time the Sacular A.M. 2760 Gamei, concerning which it is convenient to fpeak in this place, that begin- 01, 136, 44,16

ners may know the differences of Roman exercises. These were called Ludi V. c. 518. The third $x Magni, as others were, (in opposition to the Scenici, and games made by Schwid 77. private men) and Ludi Terentini (not Tarentini, whereof Students are to mici al. beware) from Teventus a place in the Campus Martin where they were ce- Ptol. Empet. lebrated. But there were other games called also Torentini Ludi (which ii. fome not confidering have run into confusion) and that more properly than these Sacular ones were, and therefore the rise of them all is to be related. There was one Valefius a man of prime note, amongst the Sabines, who living near Ereius, and not far from Tiber, in a great Plague, had two sons and Vide Valuium cular or Te-

rentine

Games,

a daughter which fell dangeroully fick. Amongst his prayers for them, he Maxim, l. 2.4.4. heard a voice that they should recover, if carying them to Terentus, he would fetch them some warm water of Tiber from the altar of Pluto and Proferpina. He thought the City Tarentum was meant, and doubted how he should come by any Tiberine water in that remote part of Italy; but refolving to be obedient, he failed down the River towards Oftia, and fate at night arrived at the Campus Martius, where he undestood there was a place called Terentus. Landing here, he gave his children fome warm water, wherewith refreshed they fully recovered, and cold their father, how in a dream they had feen a The Original certain god, who commanded, that at the altar of Pluto and Proferpina black of the Teren- coloured sacrifices (furva hostia) should be offered, as also that Lettisternes tine Games. (beds made for the cause of sacrifice, as whereon to lye down after the Roman fashion at a solemn feast) and night games should be made. Valesius feeing no altar in the place, thought of making one, when, as his flaves were digging for that purpose, they found one in the earth dedicated to Pluto and Profespina. Here then he facrificed, and three nights together, because of the number of his children, mide Lettisterns and Games, being afterwards from this thing named Manine Valefius Terentinus. Zomimus writeth, that Trina Torelle the Romans 100 years before being to fight with the Albans, were admonifhed to build this altar in the earth, and that having facrifized they covered it. But this reflect covered it. it. But this passage concerning Valesius hapned about the twelfth year of Servius Tullius, wherein he founded the Lustrum; in the 188 of the City, and the same wherein the Panathenea were instituted (or rather reduced to the course of five years, being formerly instituted by Thesens) at Athens, this being the third year of the 53 Olympiad.

- Inpries y the Macedonians. 19. This was the Original of Terentine Games, which some have contine and Sx- founded with the Sacular. For, the next that were celebrated were made by Valerius Poplicola in the year following the banishment of Tarquinius,

The Teren-

Quindecim

the Centena-

19. This

confounded_ which Zozimus calleth Games of Pluto and Proferpins, and * Cenforinus, * Quem vide from Antias the Historian, giveth them the name of Sacular. This confu-cap. 17. lib. de fion cast Cenforinus into such a perplexity about the Secular Games, that he die Natali. thus expresseth the incertainty of the Roman intervals of times and ages. Some think the Roman ages to be distinguished by the Sacular Games; which, which much if it be for the manner of the Roman age is uncertain. For, concerning the intervals of times, wherein these Games ought to be celebrated, we are Censorinus. ' not onely ignorant how great they were formerly, but what they ought to be for the time to come. For, Antias and other Historians, with Varro and Livy, have written, that they ought to be made every hund eth year. But conthe contrary, both the Commentaries of the Quindecimviri (or 15 men) and the editts of Augustus restricte, that they ought to be reiterated every * Certus undehundred and temb, as * Horatius Flaccus a fo faith. Further, if we fearch nos decies per chundred and temp, as "Hotatius Fiaccus a jo jaith. Eurther, if we jearen annos Orbis ut the annals of antient times, we shall yet be in greater uncertainty by far cantus, referring; For, Valerius Antias saith, that the first Sæcular Games were made after ludos Terdie the banil ment of the Kings, 245 years after the building of Rome by clara tottening Valerius Publicola : But the commentaries of the 15 Men fay, that 298 grata Notte 'years M. Valerius and Sp. Virginius being Consuls. The second Games sequentes. Antias will have made in the 305 year of the City, but its written in the Commentaries of the 15 Men, in the 408, M. Valerius Corvinus the fecond time, and C. Patilius being Conful: and so he proceedeth. 20. * Jacobus Cappellus dissolveth the difficulty in this manner. The *Hist Sacra and of this perplevies which examines Conference in this Manner. cause of this perplexity which troubleth Censorinus is this. All Sæcular A. M. 3491. The difficulty Games are Terentine, but all Terentine Games are not Secular. For some were made upon some occasion, as those which Valerius Publicola made this ' 245 year of the City, and Valesius about the year 188. These were Te-rentine Games but not Sacular. Naw, the Sacular are of two forts. The greater, which perhaps thou mayst not call amisse * Quindecimvitales, were * Vide Tacitum celebrated at the distance of 110 years, Of this kind the first were made Annal, lib, 11. mission caret. - 6 by the command of the Quindecimviri, in the 298 year of the City, 110 Bunt, in carm, e years, as it seemeth, after the first Terentine Games made by Valefius. So, the Valefian Shall fall in the 188 of the City. The first of the Quindecimvin were made in the 29 8 year of the City, the Second in the 408, the Third in the 518, and the Fourth in the 628. The leffer Saculum, or Age, cone fifted but of 100 years, instituted as it seemeth, by L. Valerius, after the banilhment of the Decemviri, that year being according to some the 300 of the City. So the First Centenatie Games agree with the 305 Varronian ' year of the City, the Second with the 405, the Third with the 505, the 21. Though the Second of the Centenaries should have been celebrated in the 405 year, yet (whether it happened through the Gallick War or otherwife) they were not till that following, wherein M. Popilius Lanus the fourth time, and L. Cornelius Scipio were Confuls, as Zozimus writeth. Observations These Censorinus bath omitted and sour more, if credit be given to the inscription of a certain stone mentioned by George Herware, from which it count of Varro, to which may be added those made by Poplicola extraordinarily in the 245 year. So that the Games celebrated this year (viz. in the 406) may rightly be called the feventh Games. The Quindscimvirals (or those of 100 years) continued till Constantine's time, who forbad them to be celebrated in the 1067 year of the City. His fon Constantius also prohi-

should appear, that before this year were celebrated three Sacular Games, viz. in the 100, 200, and 300 years, according to the account of Piltor, and the 105, 205, and 305, according to that of Vario. Two Solemnities also at the distance of 1110 years, as in the 188 and 298, after the ac-bired the Centenaries, which in his time fell in the 1700 year of the City. Fifty feven years after, the Heathen got leave of Hanorius to celebrate the

SECT. 2. Terentine Games again in his fixth Consulthip (for which Claudian thanks him) 200 years after they had been kept by Severus. But to return, these Third Sacular Games which gave occasion to this discourse, and were celebrated in the 518 year of the City, and the fifth after the first Punick Warre. P. Cornel us Lincolus and C. Licinius Varus being Confuls, were those of the Quindecimviri, or of the interval of 110 years; that we may note thus much for the information of Students.

22. In the fixth year afer the first Punick War (a) the Temple of Janus was thut at Rome now the fecond time, all things being in quiet, and the (a) Livius t. The Temple Romans having no Wars any where after the reducement of Sardinia by Eutropius, 7 of Janus shur the fecond time.

The first diverce.

Cn. Navius

the Poet.

tians at fea,

T. Man'ius Torquatus the Consul. In the following year, being the 520 Numa. of the City, the first (b) divorce was made by Sp. Carvilius Ruga, who, though he did it under a specious pretence of his wives barrennesse, was ever (b) Val. Max. ill-willed for it by the People. This same year was M. Porcius (c) born in Agellius 1.12.

the precincts of Tusculum, who had the name of (d) Cato for his wildom; 6.21. Catus in the Roman language (whence the diminutive Catulus) fignifying fa- Diony, Haligacious, acute, or ingenious. And this year did Cn. Navius the Poet carn (e) publish playes to the People, who wrote also the first Punick war, (where Semetinte in he served) in the most ancient kind of Verse called Saturnii Versius, (d) Plutarlo which were succeeded by the Fescennini, some being with metre, and some in catone, withour. He died in the 20 year after this, and left a proud (f) Epiraph of (e) Agelling it his own making, which he commanded should be ingraven on his Tomb, fupra. and Gellim hith recorded together with those of Planim and Pacuvins. 23. Five years the Temple of James continued thut, and in the fixth was 6, 24. opened by a War with the Illyrians. For, Tenta Queen of that Nation, the widdow of Agron (who for joy that he had prospered in his enterprises against the Etolians, drank so hard, that he fell into a Pleurisie, and thereof died) elevated by her prosperity in Peace, gave out commissions to her Subjects to rob all at Sea . whomsoever they met with. The Illyrians then having taken Phanice a strong City of Epirus, Struck a great terror into all the maritime parts of Greece, and fetting upon the Italian Merchants, some they robbed, others they killed, and not a few they caried away prisoners. The The Illyrians Romans having hitherto neglected all complaints against them, when now mainfest the Itany came together, fent unto Illyricum Cains and Lucius Coruncani, to inform themselves concerning these matters. Tenta answered, she would take care that no publick injury should be offered to the Romans, but it was not the custom to hinder any from making what private commodity they could out of the Sea. But faith Lucius, the Romans have a good custom publickly to profecute private injuries, and to relieve the injured: therefore we will shortly endeavour, God willing, to constrain thee to amend these cu-froms. The Queen took this liberty of speech so hainously, that her womanish impotency and anger prevailed against the Law of Nations, to have some fent after the Ambassadors, who killed Lucius. For this, War was decreed against her, and both the Consuls of the 525 year of the City, Cn. Ful-Whence a vins Centumalus, and L. Posthumius Albinus Consul the second time, were War ensueth. fent into Illyricum; Fulvius with the Navy, and his Collegue with the Land-

24. Fulvius received Corcyra, given up into hishands by Demetrius Pha- A. M. 3716. rius; then took he Apollonia, and the Armies joyning, the Confuls freed of 137.48.4. Dyrrhachium besieged by the Illyrians. Then most of the Illyrick Cities V.C. 525. were either taken or delivered up, whereupon the Queen retired with a few followers to Rhizan a Groote Town Groote followers to Rhizon a strong Town, situate upon a River of the same name, Ptol. Eurog. 18. and the Spring following fent to Rome to defire Peace. It was granted to Idem & Juffin. very few places: and Not to fall beyond the River Quissus with more than

Peace is gran- her on these terms : To pay a yearly tribute; to quit all Illyricum, except a ted to Tenta the Queen, two Barks, and these unarmed. For nine years the Illyrians continued in obedience, till the 535 year of the City, wherein rebelling, they were again reduced by Amilias Paulus and M. Livius the Confuls. For, Demetrius Pharius then their King, forgetting the great favours received from the People

" we wacedonians. People of Rome, wasted the Towns of Illyricum subject to the Romans, and SECT.2. patted the bounds fet by the League. Emiliar within feven dayes rook Dimalium, and followed him to Pharus, a Town of the Island Phario, which he also cook. Democrius being fled to Philip King of Macedonia, he seized on the rest of Ilyriann, which he ordered to pay a stipend to Pineus, the son of Agron. But thus was begun, and finished the War with Tenen, which Florus (according to his custom, breaking the order and feries of time) falfly placeth after the Gallioum Cifalpinum, or that with the Galls inhabiting within the Alps.

25. For, the same year wherein the Peace was made with Tenne, the pro- A. M. 3777. mulgating of the Agragrian Law by C. Flaminius, Tribune of the people, The Seditious brought this great, and dangerous War upon the Commonwealth. There being a good quantity of ground Conquered within the Countrey of these attempts of Galls, he preferred a Law for the dividing of it to the peoples man by man.

Q. Fabins Maximus being now Conful the second time stifly opposed it, Sp. Curbilius his Collegue no: stirring as (a) Cicero telleth us; the Senate (a) De Senett. also laboured to crosse it, but when in the Rostra Plaminius read the Law, his father laying hands on him he obeyed, and went down, though he neither valued the Conful nor Senate, nor yet was affrighted with the levying of an Army. Nay, the people about him was so overawed by parernal right, that, as Lib.s. cap. 4. Valerius Maximus writeth, though the Assembly was thus disappointed, not Exemp.s. the least muttering was heard. Whether the Law for division fully passed or not (by reason of the interruption by old Flaminins) yet this thing gave occasion to a new and great War, as Polybins writteth, who mistaketh the time by four years, for as much as thefe ftirs about the Agrarian fell not out in the 522. but the 526 of the Citie, wherewithall the second Consulship of Fabins Maximus, and that of Sp. Carnilius Maximus is joyned. Indeed the first of Fabins fell in with the 521 year of the Citie, two years before

Tensa killed the Ambassador, and two more at least before the finishing of the Illyrian War, whence may be conjectured, that as the miftike of Polybius might arise from want of distinction, betwixt the first and second Confulfhlps of Fabius; fo the error of Florus (or him, who ever wrote that Syfem) in placing the Gallick War before the Myrian, might proceed from an (inconsiderate) trust to the Authority of that excellent Author. 26. The report concerning this Law awakened the Gall, especially the Boli, who were nearest neighbours. Concluding now that the Romans fought hot fo much for glory and dominion, as out of a covetous defign of inriching the War,calthemselves, they sent to the Insubres for all, exhorting them to remember licam Cifalpiwhat their Ancestors once did at Rome, and to tread in their steps. These joyning rogether sent over the Alps for other Gulls, living near Rhodanus, and called Geffate, from their wages, faith Polybina, or as others write, from Geffa a kind of weapon they used. Their Kings, Congolizanus and Aneroestus being affured by great promifes, with a valt force passed over the Alper, and joyning with the Insubres and Basis, to the number of 50000 foor, and 20000 horse brake into Erruria. When first the Romans heard of their passing the Alps, they commanded Emilius the Conful to go to Assiminam, to give them trouble in case they came that way. They ordered one of the Pracers into Eiraria; for, C. Assidias the other of the Confuls was already fent into Sardinia. The whole Citie was fad and grievously afflicted, fearing the Galls as fatal to it. All the Registers of the Military age were inquired int, too feel what forces they, and what their Affociares, were able to fet forth. The Italians prepared to fight, not as for the Roman Empire, but their own

Preparations on the Roman lide for this

Tribune.

pius relateth, that 800000 men were prepared for this War, wherein he him-27. The Tables of the Military age, as they were brought to the Senate, contained of the Latines 80000 foot, and 5000 horfe; of the Samnies 70000 foor, and 2000 horse; of the lapyges and Messaplans 50000 feot, and 16000 safety; so that an Army was in a readinesse, consisting of 700000 foot, and 70000 horse, according to Polybins. But Fabins Pictor wrote, as Euro-overthrown

The Galls

beg peace.

Which the

Grais Cooliis

Marcellus opi-

Elergue viros

bante tumultu

Confuls hin-

SECT.2. horse; of the Lucanians 30000 foot, and 3000 horse; of the Marsi. Marrucini, Ferentani & Vestini 20000 foot, and 4000 horse. And of the Reman people gave their names, together with those of Campania, 250000 foot, and 230000 horse. The total sum 558000. There went out with the Confuls four Legions, whereof each contained 5200 foot, and 200 horse. together with 20000 foot, and 2000 horse of the Associates: in all 40800 foot. and 3200 horse. There were in readinesse for necessary occasions, of the Etruscans and Sabines 50000 foor, and 4000 horse, which the Prator led into Etruria to oppose the Enemy on the Borders. Of the Venets and Cenomani were affembled 20000. and as many of the Umbri and Sarfinates inhabiting the Appennine Mountains, who were placed on the Borders of Gall, by invading the Territories of the Bosi to draw them back, and divide them from the rest. These were the forces placed on the Borders. At Rome were in a readinesse for the uncertain chances of War, as a supply 20000 foot, and 1500 horse of Citizens, besides of the Associates 30000 foot, and 2000 horse. In Sicily, and about Tarenium were placed two Legions, whereof each contained 4200 foot, and 200 horse. The sum of all these amounts to 210300 men. So, faith Polybins, the fum of the forces which guarded the Citie were 150000 foot, and about 6000 horse, but the whole number of the multitude fit for War was 700000 foot, 70000 horse, which yet Hannibal durstoppose, and invade Italy with scarce 20000. But this will appear further in what shall be hereafter said. 28. The Galls descending into Etruria washed all with fire and sword, till A. M. 3780.

they came to Clusium, a place three dayes journey distant from Rome. There of 138, and 1 were they before the Prater on their back, and the two Confuls before bloc- V.C. 120. king up all the passages, so that they were forced to fight two contrary waves Sel. Ceranni 2. in two fronts, and that very difadvantagiously, both by reason of their naked. Fiel, Eurgan, nesse, and the unfitnesse of their Arms. But the vanity of the Gasata was most hursfull to them, who calting off their Cloths would needs fight naked and charge first; for, being easily discomfitted, they discouraged their fellows. Forcy thousand were sain, and ten thousand taken, amongst whom was Concolitanus; the other King Anoroestus having killed himself. This battel was fought in the 529 year of the Citie, L. Æmilius Dapus, and C. Attilius Regulus (who was therein flain) being Confuls. Afterwards inroads being made into the Territories of the Galls, they were several times overthrown, and so harrased, that they sent Ambassadors to Rome to beg peace on any terms. The people being inclining enough to it, M. Claudius Marcellus, and

Cn. Cornelius Scipio the Confuls of the 532 year Ropped the thing. 29. The former especially having a disposition suitable to his name (Marcus and Mamercus being thought to be derived of Mars, and therefore also the diminutives Marculus and Marcellus) inflamed the multitude to the War; whereupon the Galls now desperate resolved to make the last tryal, Vide (Politism and lifting all indeavours, fent, and hired 30000 of the Gafata. The Confuls lib. 1.

Marcellus endeth the War. invading the Country of the Insubres besieged Acerra, which to relieve the Plutarch, in * Aspice ut in Galls laid fiege to Clastidium, a Town affociate with the Romans. Here was Marcello. fought a bloudy battel, wherein the Galls were overthrown, Marcellus with his Florum 1.2.64. own hand killed Virdomarus King of the Gafata, and dedicated the third Graffum lib.4. Ingreditur, vi-* Opima Spolia to Jupiter Feretrius, though Numa had commanded they cap. 13. fupereminet om. should be consecrated to Quirinus. Those that escaped fled to Mediolanum Livis Episam. (now Millane) the chief feat of the Insubres, which being shortly taken, the lib.20.

His rem Roma- War was thereby ended after fix years, and Marcellus returned in Triumph. nam magno tur- The title of the Triumph in the Capitoline stories mentioned with the Galls Infubres, Germans also to have been subdued, which Germans seem no other then the Gasara, thus called by some mistake. As for the name of Casa-Gallumq; rebel- 1a, though Polybius thinkerh it derived from their wages, and others from a kind of vvenpon; yet * another rendreth a more probable derivation, which * simplestill Tertiagne arms the condition of these people being Mercenaries prompteth to. The Tento- Chronic Cultihick language (a dialect whereof Tofeph Scaliger and others prove the an- lie ad A.M. Phylicano, tient Gallick to have been) calleth him Gaeft, whom the English Saxon 3780. (a branch the Romins.

(a branch also of the l'entonick) nameth Guest at this time, betokening a stranger. The word Gasata might well therefore bethence de ived, being changed fomething by those that were ignorant of the Language, from that whereby the Galls fignified strangers; such as these Mercenaries

30. The third year after the ending of the Gallick, began the fecond Punik, or Carthaginian War. Amilear the Carthaginian Captain had a great itching defire to renew the quarrel with the Romans, as foon as the State could recover its firength, and had done it betimes, but that the War with the Mercenaries hapned, which much distressing the Commonwealth, he pasfed over into Spain, where having to do with fuch an Enemy as he could grow upon, he there inlarged far and wide the Carthaginian Dominion, and died

Of Afdrubal

The Acts of Anicar Bareas, in great honour, though he was drowned in a River, being put also to flight Anter the end by Oriffon King of the Iberi, who pretending to come to his affiftance in the Died. Sicht. ing of the first slege of Helice unexpectedly fell upon him. As he had governed the Army in lib.23, Eelog. Spain nine years, so his son-in-law Astrubal succeeding him, commanded it almost as many, with a mind as averte from the Romans as he; but he difbs formin-law. fembled his hatred and designs, that he might gain all Spain to the Caribaginian interest. After 8 years he was slain by a Gall (faith Polybius) or a slave to a certain Spaniard (faith Justin) who killed him in revenge for his Masters death. He also much bettered the affairs of Carthage, not so much by Arms, Palyb. lib.3. as his winning carriage upon the petty Princes. After his death Annibal the Livius 1, 21, fon of Amilear Bareas was chosen Captain by the Army, and prefently con- Corn. Repos in ion of Amilear firmed at Carthage by the people, whom his father taking along with him Hamilton, Ensurerated into Spain, being then nine years old, compelled to five ar at the Altar, his Val. Max. 1.9.

General by hand rouch no the factifice that as food as he could be would be an Ensurer to 3. Enter, Exhand touching the facrifice, that as foon as he could he would be an Enemy to cmp.3.

~)

SECT.2.

3 t. Annibal presently after his Creation fell upon the Olcades whom he subdued, and besides them, within a years space, the Vaccai and Carpentani, and nothing remained beyond the River Iberus that was confiderable, and unsubdued, besides the Saguntines. They being consederate with Rome gave them there intelligence how things went, who fent some into Spain to see how mitters flood, and what was intended by the Carthaginians. Thefe Commissioners having audience of Hannibal, religiously admonished him nor to meddle with the Suguntines, and (according to the Lergue mide with Afirmbal) not to puffe over the River Iberus. His answers did not conceal his inward hatred, which caused the Romans to expect no better than a War; but they hoped to have Saguntus the feat thereof, and endeavoured to clear themselves of Illyricum ere it hapned. Annibal was not ignorant of what they defigned, and therefore refolved by taking that Town to cut off all hope of vvarring in Spain. He doubted not by that example to terrifie others, so as to reduce to obedience those that yet flood out, and confirm rherein such as he had already brought under; and this especially he aimed at, by reducing this place, to leave no Enemy at his back, by the plunder of which also he intended to gratifie his Soldiers. With all his force then he fer upon it, and provoking his men by his own example to all manner of diile taketh Sa- ligence, took it in the eighth moneth. The Inhabitants retained their fideresults Town lity unto the Romans to the last, and when almost spent with hunger, in spain, con- Fire, Sword, and Engines, they that remained, in a fire made in the Forum confumed themselves with all their riches, as Flores writeth, though Polybins speaketh of much money found in the Town, besides rich stuff, which Hannibal sent to Carthage. 32. When first the Romans heard that Saguntus was taken, they fent Ambassadors to Carthage to require that Hannibal should be delivered up as the breaker of the League, or else to denounce War. Upon their arrival the Carthaginians deputed Hanno to treat with them, who sleighted the matter of the League made with Asdrubal, pretending there was none; and if there was, it was made by his meer pleasure without consent of the Senate. Besides, therein, he said, was no mention made of the River Iberus; that a

Qqqq

SECT.2. regard was to be had of the Allies of both the States he confessed, but this nothing concerned the Saguntines, who at the time of the ratification were not confederates with Rome. The Ambassadors perceiving the Caribaginians backward to what they propounded, faid no more; but the Senior of them holding out the lap of his Gown to the Senate. Here, faith he, we bring you buth War and Peace; whether you will have I shall bring forth. The Car haginian King bade them bring forth which they pleased; then the Roman, faying, he would take out War, many of the Senators answered, that And none be. they accepted of it. This fell out in the Confulfhip of M. Livins, afterward called Salinator (from his bringing up the Impost upon Salt) and L. Emi-

ing given. lins Paulus. In their time forein Ceremonies begun to be brought into War is deaounced and Rome, which displeasing the more sober fort of men, the * Senate thought * Val, Blar accepted of. fit that the Chapels of Isis and Serapis should be pulled down. When Licia comes no Artificers would venture to touch them, Emilius the Conful put off his pratexia, or long Roab edged with purple filk, and taking an Hatchet flruck it into the door. 33. In the year following, being the 536 of the City, the fixth of Anti- A.M. 2782.

ochus the Great, and the fifth of Prolomy Philopator, in the Consulling of Ol. 140, at a. ochus the Great, and the fifth of Pulony Philopator, in the Connelling of V.C. 336.

Pub. Cornelius Scipio, and Tib. Sempronius Longus, three and twenty years V.C. 336.

Antichi Mag. after the ending of the first Punick War, the Second began, which we have described by Polybius, and after him by T. Livius, who bath transcribed the Ptol. Philoso. Punich or Car- 21 Book of his History almost word for word. Annibal now 26 years of age, Puly, 1, 3.

theginian War in the Spring moved from his winter quarters with 90000 Foot, and 12000 Living Lat. beginneth. Horse, and passing over the River Iberus, subdued all the Towns as far as the Pyrenaan hills. Then leaving Hanno with a sufficient force to keep the Assibal ha-Country, and fending as many of the Spanish Soldiers home, he marched ed all State as with the the rest, in number 50000 Foot, and nigh 9000 Horse, over the Pyrefar as the Py- nean hills; and fo through Gall unto the Alpes. Having marched 100 miles veneau hills, in ten days from the River Rhodanus, he came to the foot of these mountains, which when he afcended, he encountred with great difficulties, being opposed by the Allobroges (inhabiting the Country now called Savoy) who possessed themselves of the places through which he must necessarily passe. On the ninth day he came to the top, whence his Soldiers had a prospect of Italy. Proceeding after a little rest, he lost as many men here in the depth of the Snow, as formerly by the incursions of Enemies, and at length came to a place which would affoard no passage for Horse, or Elephanes. The place of it felf was precipitious, but lately by a falling of earth it was become fo, to the depth of 1000 foor. He laboured then to bring his men through other wayes never before trodden, but at length the Snow making them impaffible, he was forced to betake himself to the levelling of the Rock. They made a great fire, wherewith the Rock being heated, they putrified it with Vinegar, then did they cleave it, and so diminished the descent by moderate turnings, that not onely the beafts of burthen, but the Elephants also might fafe-Paffeth over ly paffe. Four dayes were spent about the Rock : and by this time almost all the Alps into the beafts were wasted; for on the top was little graffe, and that covered with Snow. Coming lower, certaing valleys afforded pasture, where the cattel were refreshed, and rest was given to the weary Soldiers. Thence descended Annibal into the Plain, in the fifth moneth after he had parted from new Carthage (built by Afdrubal, and now called Cartagena) in Spain, having passed over the Alpes in fourteen dayes. In the passage he lost a great part of his Army, bringing into the Country of the Insubres, but 10200 African Foot, 8000 of the Spanish, and 6000 Horse.

34. Scipio the Conful having Spain for his Province, was by Sea going thither, when he understood that Hannibal was near the River Rhodanus. There he intended to have given him a stop; but missing of him, he returned on shipboard and hasted to Italy, there to meet him, before his men had yet refreshed themselves. They met and joyned battel, wherein the Consul had the worst, being wounded, and preserved alive by the valour of his young

Deteareth fon afterwards named Africanus. The Roman Senate, when first they received intelligence that Hannibal had passed the Alpes, sent for the other SECT.2. Consul Sempronius out of Sicily to the aid of his Collegue. According to order he brought over his Army, and united it with Scipio's at the River Trebia. Having had the better in ome skirmishes with certain parties of Annibal, he defired to make trial of a battel, that his Collegue being fick, he might have all the glory of Victory, and though Scipio alleged, that by delaying to fight the Galls might be farther drawn in, and their own Soldiers better exercifed, yet lest the battel should be deferred till the coming of the next Confuls, he resolved to fight alone. Annibal feared nothing more, then that they should refuse to fight, because as yet the Galls continued his, and he knew the best of the Roman Captains to be unable to act, and his own Army fresh and chearful. In the battel, which shortly followed, the Romans were overthrown, being drawn out by a party that Hanribal fent to provoke them, ere they had armed their bodies against the extremity of the mid-winter seafon, either by meat or other provision; fo that ingiging with cold and hunger, and befer with their enemies (whereof as in the former battel, the Numidians, to their great terror fell upon their rear) they were defeated, though with great fluighter of the Enemy, through whose ranks 10000 broke and escaped to Placentia, the rest being either stain, taken, or drowned in the River. The Carthaginians having pursued them to the River Trebia, returned to their Camp so stupisfied with cold, that they were scarce sensible of the Victory. For, rain mixed with snow, and intollerable cold, killed many men, and almost all the beasts and Elephants.

And Scmme. nius his Collegue.

25. At this time things went better with the Romans in Spain and Sicily. In the former Cnaus Scipio (being fent thicher by his brother the Conful upon his return into Italy) overthrew Hanno the Caribaginian, and took in a good part of the Country, wherein was also new Carthage. For the following year C. Flaminius (who being Tribune had preferred the Agrarian Law) was the second time made Conful, together with Cn. Servilius Geminus. He had a good gift in speaking, but no skill in War, being yet heady and impatient of advice. Hannibal having all this while made the Country of the Galls the feat of War, refolved to change it, and after some consultation about his way into Eiruria, resolved upon that of the Fens, as short and unexpected to the Enemy, though more troublesome to passe. Being forced to march three or four whole dayes through water, this forely diffressed all his men, except the Galls, miny of the beists were left in the mid, and the hoofs of the Horses came off. He himself riding on an Elephant that was onely left, escaped with his life, but was forely pained in his eyes, one whereof he loft utterly. Being arrived at dry ground, he hoped by some means or other to intrap the Conful, understanding what his disposition was: He passed by his Camp and went further into the Country, which intaged Flaminius, who thought himself flighted by the Enemy. When amongst the Romans some told him that he must not rashly pursue, but use great caution, especially by reason of the Horse; but above all things stry for his Collegue, and not hizard a battel without the conjunction of both Armies, he was so far from following their advice, that he could not bear their words. Rifing with all his forces he had neither respect to time nor place, onely seeking to fight, as if nothing had been more certain than the Victory, with hope whereof he he so elevated the vulgar, that a rable sollowed the Camp greater in number than the Army it self, and furnished with chains, bonds, and other things, wherewith to keep fast those prisoners and booty, whereof they doubted not 36. Annibal murching through Etruria, wasted it with fire and sword, Polyb. & Liv. the more to inrage his Enemy, and at length came to the Lake called Thrasy- Phitaubin vimenus and Thrasymene, near to which are certain mountains, and betwirt ta Fabit. menus ind Thrasymene, near to which are certain mountains, and netwist them and it a narrow way leading to a valley, before with them, and a ridge of done, Report domb. And Flaminius hills. These hills he made choice of, wherein to place his men, bestowing Appian in Anas the Lake them round about, for that Flaminius following him into the valley, was fal- mbalicis.

len upon round about, and fluin with many of his men ere (almost) they knew Florum (2.0.6)

Scipro the Conful,

Italy.

delaying

SECT. 2. who hurt them, by reason of a mist which then was risen from the Lake. Within the valley fell 15000, and near upon 6000 escaped to a Village, where they were forced to yield themselves. Annibal gathering all his prisoners together, to the number of 1,5000, kept in cultody the Romans, but dismissed the Latines without ransome. The body of the Consul, faith Vale_ Val. Max. 1.1. difmiffed the Latines Without rantome. The body of the Collins, family of the letters Maximus, was fought for by Annibal to be buried; even his body, Entrop. Orgina, who, as much as in him lay, had buried the Roman Empire. Cn. Servilius the other Conful who kept Ariminum (a Country of Italy now called Rimini, lying upon the River Rubicon) hearing of Annibal's coming into Erruria, purposed to go and joyn with his Collegue, but finding that difficult, chose out 4000 men whom he sent to his aid, under conduct of C. Centenau (by some called Controlius) whom he commanded, if possible, to reach him before the fight. Hannibal hearing of this supplie, after the battel, fent out Mabarbal with a party, which cutting off one half, forced the other to an hill, where they also yielded themselves. 37. The Romans struck with consternation at these losses, upon mature deliberation resolved there was need of a General with absolute authority. But the Conful (who alone had power, and that in the Roman Dominions, to name a Distator) being absent, and incompassed with the Carthaginian Forces, so that no message could conveniently be sent to him, and the People having no power to create a Dictator, they created as a Prodictator, or Vice D. Etator, Q. Fabius Maximu Verrucofus, whose Master of the Horsemen was M. Minutius Rufus. Fabius marched Annibal in policy, break-Whereupon ing his successe by delaying to fight, which others had increased by their te-Fabius Maximerity, so that he obtained the name of * Cunstator. Hannibal was hereof * unus home mus is made very fensible, being by him put to his shifts, wanting provisions exceedingly, nobis cumlands Vice Dictaand lying in an Enemies Country. But the Mafter of Horse-men being some restitution, tor, who by thing hot and rash, in Fabius his absence, got the better in certain skirmishes, breaketh Anaibal's fueces, and hereby procured to much favour from the multitude, which now accounted the worthy Dictator lazie and fearful, that beyond all example his power was made equal to that of his. Minutius puffed up herewith, fought to improve his authority by further raffinesse, so as to ingage with the Enemy, in which action he and his party had been overthrown, but that Fabius in good time came in and faved him. This so convinced him of his former folly, that he confessed his fault to the Distator, whom he called his Father, and renouncing his new power again, subjected his office to the Distatorship. 38. Fabius, when his fix moneths were our, laid down his Office, and was badly required, the Tribures and others calumniating him with the Nobility, as wilfully lengthening the War, which procured Terentius Varro a rash, hot, and inconfiderable man, for the next year to be created Conful. He, though joyned with a prudent person L. Æmilius Paulus, so far prevailed, as to joyn battel with Annibal at the place of Canna an ignoble Village of Apulia, which the year before had been destroyed, and onely the Castle remained, on which Annibal had lately feized. The Romans brought into the field 80000 Foot, and about 6000 Horse; the Carthaginians not much above 40000 Foot, and 10000 Horse. Florus writeth, that for the destru-Etion of the unhappy Army, both General, Earth, Heaven, the day, and the whole nature of things conspired. For Annibal not content with the sending of those who counterfeiring a revolt, fell upon the backs of the Romans, obferving the nature of the place, so chose out his ground, that besides his Army they must needs fight with wind, dust, and Sun. But from others it appeareth, that the Romans fighting with their faces toward the South, and the Carthaginians toward the North, the Sun-beams offended neither. However, the abilities of the Punick General were feen fo far in this, as in other battels, that he overmatched them in skill, who exceeded him in numbers, making fuch flughter of them, that at length wearied, he commanded his Soldiers to forberr, as Florus telleth us. Of the Romans were flain 50000 men say Plutarch and Appian; 70000 faith Polybius, and Livy hath 40000 Foot, and 2600 Horse. Amongst these was Emilius the Consul (who unwilling

Who yet gi- unwilling to survive the defeat refused to flie) 2 Quaftors, 21. Tribunes, SECT-2. 80 of Senatorian degree, divers of Confutar dignicy, and fo many Equites or Knights, that, as Pliny Writeth, Hannibal fent three buffics of gold A. M. 3789. grievous overrings to Rome, which were the Enfignes of that order, though Pliny from this Ol.141. ann.1. throw at Cannumber endeavoureth to prove that the use of them at this time was promiscu- V. C. 538. ous, elfe a vast number must there have been of them: but Livy writeth, that Ptol. Philop. 7. more likely report held there were but one bushel. Hannibal lost 5700 of Belli Punici 3. his men. Varro the Conful fled to Venusia with 70 Horse, whither also escaned 4000 Foot and Horse, which leading to Cannussum, where were already 10000 men, he made up a shew of a Consular Army, which by the help of walls, though not of arms, seemed able to defend it self. 20. Had Hannibal taken his opportunity and marched to Rome, in all pro-

And enerva- bability he might have made an end of the War, and of the Roman Empire teth his Army both together; but this great Soldier knew (as Maharbal Captain of his

by winting at Horse truly told him) how to get, but not how to use and improve a Vistory, For, he loitered all this Summer, and having Capua a wealthy and luxurious Livius lib.23. Citie given up into his hands by the Towns-men, there he took up his Winter quarters, and Capua became a Canna to his Soldiers. For, hereby he utterly spoyled an excellent Army, which now was so enervated by the pleasures and esseminatenesse of the place, as ever after it became impatient of labour, and its antient Military Discipline, so that before this it was hirder for the Rimans not to be overcome by Hannibal, than afterwards to overcome him. His fortune presently began to change. He was worsted at Nota by Marcellus the Praior, and repulsed at Calilinum, a very small Caille, for a good space. At this time, though there was a D. Stator in the Camp (M. Junius Pera, whose Master of the Hors-men was Tib. Sempronius) yet by Terentius the Conful, for filling it up, without a Master of Hors-men. He coming into the Roftra, faid, he did not approve that there should be two Diffaiors at one time (which never before had been known) nor that he was created without a Master of Hors-men; neither that the power of Cenfor ship should twice be permitted to one man; nor that power for fix moneths should be given to any Diltaior, except for the War. What extrem neces-fity had procured, he faid he would moderate. For he would not remove any onely transcribe, and cause them to be read over, lest the credit, and esteem of Senators should be in the power of one min; and so he would supply the places of the dead, that this man before that, and not one order should feem preferred above another. The old Senate then being called over, he chose into vacunt places, first such as since the last Censorship had born

, Senator which C. Flaminius, and L. , £ milius the late Cenfors had chosen,

Two Diffators the Senate being exhausted by the War, M. Fabius Buleo was named Diffator

The Senate

Curule Offices, as each one had been first created; then such as had been Adiles, Tribunes of the Commons, or Quaffors, and lattly, fuch had any spoyls hung up at home, which they themselves had taken from the Enemy, or had received a Civiek Crown. So 177 being thus chosen with universal approbation, he presently laid down his Office. 40. The Romans, though the defeat at Cauna threatned them with no less than Aubal and his party goand Spain.

The Romane

quickly recovered their courage.

ruin, quickly recovered their courage. When Varro (being fent for to name a Dittator) was near the Citie, all Ranks went forth to meet him, and though he was the cause of the overthrow, gave him thanks that he had not despaired concerning the Commonwealth, Philip King of Macedonia having expected the fortune of both parties, after the battel of Canna joyned in affiancy with Hannibal; and this being discovered through the intercepting of his Ambassadors, for to prevent his coming into Italy, the Romans took order for the invasion of his own Territories. At this time Hannibal was beaten at Cuma, and constrained to raise his siege; and from Nola the second th down the time by the fame hand; Hanno having the fame fortune at Grumentum. In Spain the Scipices fo minaged the War that they got ground, being continually Superiors. Afdrubal was ordered by the Senate at Carthage to paffe into Isaly, but upon his departure they defeated him in battel,

41. In Sicilie and Sardinia, though feveral attempts were made by the Ca thag mans, and some revolts happened, yet things proceeded in a good And in Sardi-condition. In one battel in Sardinia 12000 were flain, and many taken prifoners, amongst whom were Afdrubal, Hanno, and Mago, all noble Caribaginians. A year or two after the death of H. eron King of Syracufe (who have- Living lib. 24 ing been a falt friend to the Romans died at 90 years of age or more) altered much the face of affairs. For Hieronymus his Grandfon succeeding him, was for his wicked disposition quickly made away, and then the Citie breaking into divers factions; that which was most contrary to the Roman interest prevailed by the means of two inconfiderable men made Prators. Marcellus the Conful belieged Syracufe both by Sea and Land, but was hindred from cellus befiegeth Syracufe, florming it by the skill and invention of that excellent Mathematican Lege Platach In Sicily Mar- Archamedes. He framed fuch Engins, as therewith to cast huge stones upon in Marcello. the Romans, and great beams upon their ships. He would fet the ships upon Livium libas. one end, overturn them, and hoizing them up into the air, after all the men, Val. Max. and other things were falln out of them, let them fall upon the Walls, or re- lib. 8. cap 7. turn down into the Sea. Such was the exactnesse of his skill, both near at Extern Extent. hand, and afar of, that neither by Sea nor by Land could they attempt a ciceron, Tufcol, florm, their Engins of battery being also dismounted by the force of libit, or s. o 42. Man cellus hereupon departed from the fiege, jeering his own Engi-

Archimedes for- neers, and calling Archimedes by the name of Briarens. He destroyed Megara, one of the most antient Cities of the Island, and falling upon the Army depart. of Hippocrates, as it was incamping it felf, killed above 8000 men. After this he made incursions, and drew several Towns from the Carthaginians.

He took Damippus the Spartan as he fayled from Syracule, about the redemption of whom coming often near the Walls of that Citie, he obferved a Tower negligently kept, & convenient for receiving of men, because the Wall there might be easily mounted. Taking the opportunity of Diana's feast, wherein the Syracusians gave up themselves to Wine and sports, he feized on this Tower, and through it bestowing his men about the Walls, ea-Yet he surpri- fily became Master of the Citie, after three years spent in the siege. He wept zeth the City, when he beheld the goodlinesse of it, which notwithstanding his Commands for moderation (in which he was eminent) he knew would fuffer much. But more than the rest, the death of Archimedes troubled him, whom he most lapreferve Archimedes.

> coming to him, and bidding him follow him to Marcellus, he would not go till he had finished his probleme, and demonstrated it, whereupon the Soldier killed him. Others reported that a Soldier rushing in upon him, he de- A. M. 2793. fired respite from death till he had finished his contemplation; but the Sol- Ol,142,100,1. dier not at all regarding him flew him prefently. A third report went, that V.C. 54a. as he was carrying his Mithematical infiruments to Marcellus, certain Sol- Ptol, Philo, 11. diers came upon him, who supposing it to be Gold he carried in the Vessel, Bella Parisit 2. instantly slew him. One of these wayes perished Archimedes, who excelling all men in this noble skill, deferveth as much of blame as he had of knowledge, in that effeeming fordid and base the making of Engins, and what ferved necessary uses, he onely seriously studied the Science abstracted from The Scipios Mechanick works, and through this kind of greatnesse of mind, refused to having Con-quered almost any thing concerning those works, which procured him his deferved fame boured to preferve. Some wrote that this famous Artist busied in his Geometrical speculations minded not what was doing in the Citie; but a Soldier

MATCHE.

all Spain, are and estimation. 43. At this time the Scipioes in Spain having well nigh done their work, dividing their and intending suddenly to make an end of the War, unfortunately divided forces, and their forces, and through the treachery of the Celtiberians were both cut off their death is with almost their whole Armies. The Roman interest hereby had been derevenged by froyed in that Countrey, had not the remainders of the forces been kept together, and preferved by L. Marcius a Tribane, who revenged the death of SECT. 2. the two Generals and his other Countrey-men, by falling on the Carthagiriams, divided into two feveral Camps, Secure, and without any watch, and suffering none to escape from one to give notice to the other, flew 37000, and took 1830 with great plunder. In Italy, Hannibal had Tarentum be-

Hannibal having got Tageth the Cafile in yain, and Marcheth for Rome.

De Finibus l.s.

trayed to him by the Inhabitants, the Castle still holding out; and the Ro- Livius lib. 26. mans laid fiege to Capna. Hither was Annibal called for aid; but he made beliege Capus, no great hafte, out of desire he had to take the Castle of Tarentum. Bethinking himfelf how great feandal he should give to all his confederates, in case he did not relieve that Citie, he marched thither, and fet upon the Roman Camp, which was fo well defended, that he was repelled, though affilled by the Inhabitants, and his own Garrison he there had left. Perceiving then that the Enemy would not be drawn out of his Trenches, and that he could not break through his Camp, left the new Confuls should intercept his Provisions, he refolved to be gone. Confidering much whither he should go, he refolved for Rome it felf, the head of the War, designing at least by this Enterprize to raise the siege of Capua. 44. His coming being heard of at Rome, they were there variously inclined as to resistance. Some thought that all the Armies in Italy were to be fent for ; but Fabius Maximus would by so means hear of leaving Capua: Therefore a middle way was taken, to fend for one of the Captains from the fiege to the defence of the Citie. Q. Fu vin then the Proconful chaning our 15000 foot, and 1000 horse out of the three Armies, marched for Rome, which he entred at the Gate Capena (when Hannibal now lay incamped eight miles off) the Senate, left his power should be diminished, having decreed, that if he came into the Citie he should have equal authority with the Confuls. Annibal removing to the River Aniene, three miles from the Citie, with two thousand horse thence went to take a view of it, Flacque ftomaching he should take this liberty and do it with ease, sent out a party of horse, which falling on made him retreat. The day after, and that following, Hannibal on one fide, and Flaceus with the Confuls on the other, drew out their forces for a battel, when on both dayes fell such storms of hail and rain, as the Armies could not joyn, but when they had retreated into their

Ishindred from fighting

Camps, a wonderfull ferenity appeared. This struck the Carthaginians with a religious awe, and caufed Hamibal to fay, that formetimes a will, and by Tempelts, otherwiles fortune were wanting to him for the taking of the Citic. Removing back then his Camp to the River Turia, thence he proceeded to the Lake of Feronia, which Goddeffe had then a rich Temple there. This he robbed, and so murched through the Countreys of the Lucani and Brutii towards Rhegium and the Straights, where he well nigh had destroyed the Inwards kneepinm and the straights, much habitants unawares by the fuddennesse of his coming. Flacens returned to V. C. 543. the fiege of Capua, whither that Hannibal returned not was much admired.

capa yielded. The Campanians therefore despairing of any assistance from him, Capua was yielded up. The heads of the Rebellion (53 in number) were fut death (28 having before poyloned themselves) at the command of Fulvius, contrary to the Will of his Collegue Appine Clandins, who would have had the matter determined by the Senate at Rome. The common fort was fold, and the Citie, because situate in so good a soyl, reserved for a receptacle of all forts of Plow-men, Labourers, and Artificers, without any thew of government of its own, after it had flood about 260 years. These things hapued in Paterculus the eighth year of the War, being the 543 of the Citie, the 1 th of Antiochus lib. the Great, and the 12 of Ptolomy Philopator, P. Sulpicius Galba, and Cn. Falvius Centumalus being Confuls. 45. This year was fent into Spain Claudius Nere, who having got Afdru-bal the Carthaginian into a straight so as he might have cut off him and his Livius lib. 27. Mendeluded Army, A sarubal promised he would draw all his soldiers out of the Countrey, but drew out the time in length by the interpolition of his Punick faith, till by little and he withdrew all his men out of the danger. The Senate and People hearing this, took it ill that Nero would thus fuffer him-

SECT. 2. felf to be abused, yet know they not whom to fend to succeed him. and when the Comitia were held for the creation of a Proconsul, none appeared to stand for the Office. A great sadnesse hereupon seized on the multitude. When Publin Scipio fon to Publins Cornelins Scipio flain in Spain (whom as we faid he defended in battel) a young man but of 24 years of age, flood up in a place where he might be feen, and professed himself candidate, having the year before been made Ædilis, though under age, by the great favour and confidence of the People. With great joy he was created by the suffrages of all, but when they confidered what they had done, and especially thought of his age, they were again much perplexed, which he apprehending, called them together, and with such spirit and resolution promised them good successe, that they departed well satisfied, judging many things to be in him Publius Scivio which surpassed humane admiration; for having good parts, he could fer them taketh upon him the go-off to purpose. Passing into Spain then this year, the summer following he took new Carthage by form, a place of great consequence both for riches vernment of Spain and ex- and fituation, by the fame of which exploit, together with his loving demeanour towards the natives, he well improved the Victory. 46. Hannibal at this time indulging his cruel disposition in washing such Countries as he could not keep, loft his credit; and the Romans in Italy gained thereby. This year M. Valerius Lavinus, who had done good fervice against Philip of Macedonia, was the second time, in his absence, created Conful, together with Marcellin the fourth time. Lavinus went into Sicily, where taking the City Agrigentum, he thereby brought the whole Island under the Roman jurisdiction. The year following being the tenth of the War, Tarentum was betraied into the hands of Fabius Maximus, now Conful the vereth all si-fifth time, with Q. Fulvins Flacens, who the fourth time bore this Office.

cily.

ceedingly

prospereth.

Marcellus

flain.

next Confuls.

Afdrubal ordered to march our of Spain into Italy,

Is cut off with his by Livius and cer his undertaking the charge, and thirteen after the beginning of the

48. Scipio coming to Rome, and being made Conful, greatly defired to be Scipio having sent into Africk, urging it to the Senate as necessary for finishing the War, subdued Spain and undertaking so to manage his affaires, as to force the Carthaginians to is made Con-recall Hannibal for the defence of his own Country. Fabius Maximus most earnesty, and with some heat opposed this, and a considerable difference hereupoa he joyned with Afdrubal. Being joyned, they incompassed him, who was

by a deceitful guide led into a dangerous place, and cut him with his whole

Army in pieces: then marched Nero back to his own Army, and ere Hannibal knew of his departure, cast his brothers head into his Camp, whereby to his grief he knew of the defeat. The year following did P. Scipio after Crifpinus, accompanied onely with 220 Horse, he went to view a place of, 143, 44,1 Ptol. Philop.15.

where he had a great desire to fight Hannibal. Crispinus also received a V. C. 546. wound whereof he died, after he had named a Dittator for creation of the Am. M. 16. 47. The year following, Aldrubal was ordered to go out of Spain into Ita-Marcellus for this year fometimes winning and sometimes losing with Annibal, for that following being created Conful (though he scarcely seemeth rightly created according to the Roman Superstition) though other whiles wary enough, was cut off in an ambush, whilst with his Collegue T. Quintius A. M. 2792.

ly, to the affiftance of his brother Annibal. This caused great carefulnesse in Rom, by reason they knew not well whom to oppose against him. At length M. Claudius Nero and M. Livins Salinator (who lately had returned to the City, after that being publickly difgraced he had absented himself for feve al years) were created Confuls, having been at great ods, and now reconciled through the interpolition of the Senate. Livius was ordered to meet Afdrubal, and Nero appointed to attend the motions of Annibal. But the later having some successe against his Enemy, picked out of the flower of his Army 6000 Foor, and 1000 Horse, and with great secrecy, and as much speed, marched towards his Collegue, that he might reach him ere many Victories obtained, finish the War in Spain; all the Carthaginian Captains being either taken or driven away. This hapned five years af-hereupon arole; but at length Sicely was granted him for his Province, and SECT.2. leave given him to passe over into Africk, if he saw is convenient for the Commonwealth. All this year he spent in the Island, in providing necessa. A. M. 3800. ries for his Expedition, and the next, with a brave Fleet landed in Africk, 01. 143. an. 4. where Malanilla Kine of Numidia (who in Spain had journed with him) V. C. 149. where Mafanissa King of Numidia (who in Spain had joyned with him) Seleucidarum came in to his aid. Within a while he killed Hanno with 3000 men, and 108, befieged Mica; but Syphax King of Numidia, the enemy and competitor Ant. Mag. 19. of Mafanissa (who formerly had entred into league with Scipio, but again Piol. Philop. whinte Africe, upon a marriage with Annibal's niece revolted) coming with the Carthaginians to raise the siege, he having attempted in vain to storm the Town, rose up and departed to his winter quarters.

49. In Winter he was not idle, but again befieged nica, and entred into Identib. 30. a Treaty with Syphan and Afarabal about a Peace, in the mean time fending his ablest Soldiers in the habit of slaves with his Commissioners, to view the Enemie's Camps. This being fufficiently done, he brake off the Treaty, and fet fire upon the Camps, which the other not suspecting, but thinking it came by accident, were cut in pieces when they were builed in quenching the fire, to the number of 40000 men, and 6000 were taken Prisoners. Not long after he gave them another great overthrow, which so affected the Carthaginians with fear, that they called home Hannibal. Presently after they sent a Fleet to relieve Wica, which worsted the Roman Navy; and they might have done more where he to than this had not fear made them loiter. But shortly after this, Scipio again cubaginians, routed Syphax, who had got together an unexperienced company of frangers, and taking him prisoner, gave his Kingdom to Masanisa. In Italy about this time Mago was overthrown, and wounded in an ingagement with Quintilius Varus the Prator, and M. Cornelius the Proconful: he also was recalled as well as his brother Annibal, and died on the Sea of his wounds. The Carthaginians sent an Ambassage to Rome, with a design to obtain a ces-Sation till Hannibal could arrive out of Italy. But their aim being sufficiently understood, the message was slighted; and to witnesse their persidiousnesse, they brake the Law of Nations, by offering to violate Messengers sent from Scipio.

50. Annibal being recalled by his superlours, with very much reluctancy That they requitted Italy, after he had therein spent sixteen years. He complained much cal Hannibal. of the Senate and of himself. Of the Senate, because fighting so long a time in an Enemie's Country, they had so little supplied him with money and other things necessary for War. Of himself, for that having so often overthrown and put to flight the Roman Legions, he had still delayed and given them time to breath. It's reported also, that ere he took ship, he built an arch near the Temple of Juno Lacinia, wherein, in Punick and Greek letters, he wrote the sum of his great archievements. Taking the Sea, he landed in a few dayes at Lepis, whence he murched to Adrumentum, and thence A. M. 3802. to Zama. Confidering now the weak estate of his Country, he defired a meeting with Scipio to treat of Peace, which being granted, the two greatest Captains in the World came to an interview betwixt their Armies, but receiving mutually no fatisfaction, they returned to decide the controversie by the sword. Hannibal in the battel behaved himself most gallantly, and like so expert a Warriour amongst his Soldiers, confisting of so many Nations. and languages. But providence ordained the Victory to Scipio, who slew 20000, and took as many prisoners, yet not without great losse of his own men, whereof 2000 fell. After this, Annibal perswaded his Country-men Whom he al- to aske Peace, and Ambassadors were dispatched away accordingly. 51. Scipio was not averse to a closure, as loth to part with the glory of concluding the War, which the year before was in danger of being taken from him by Tib. Claudius Nero the Conful, and now by C. Cornelius Lentulus, who both had procured Africk for their Province, and to be joyned in aqual authority with him. The power of concluding the Peace was by the People decreed to Scipio, with ten others, which was at length agreed to on these. termes. That the Carthaginians being free . (hould enjoy all their territories Rrrr ranean any time in question betwier the two States. That all rebells and fuvisives should be viven up so the Romans. That the Carthaginians should deliver up all their beaked (hips, except ten Treremes, with all their tamed Elephanes, and tame no more. Is was made unlawful for them to make War in Africk or elsewhere, without licence from the People of Rome. They were to restore all to Masanissa, and enter into confederacy with him. To give money and corn to the Roman Auxiliaries, till the Ambaffadors should be resurned. To pay 10000 talents of Silver in the space of fifty years, and give 100 Ho- A. M. 3804. To pay 10000 talents of sweet on the spring of springs. Thus ended the fecond Punick War, 01. 144.01.4 frages for performance of these things. Thus ended the second Punick War, V. C. 553. in the eighteenth year, and Scipio obtained the honourable firname of Afri- Ant, Mag. 13.

SECT. 2. in Africk; but the Romans hold Spain with all the Islands of the Mediter-Whereupon Peace is defired and obtained.

came, being the first General (if Livy observeth rightly) who was emobled Ptol. Epiphas. by the name of a Country he had overcome. 52. The Romans had little or no rest after this War; for immediately hegun, or rather went on the Macedonian, or that with Philip, the occasion being given, as was faid, ten years before, upon his entrance into confe-

The Macedo nian War.

Galba the

Conful prof-

deracy with Annibal. The Ætolians being also invaded by him, aid was Livius lib al. fent them, by which he was worsted, and after seven years a Peace was made. But now the Romans having nothing to do, and being not without provocation, as well by his breaking of his faith with the Etolians and others of their friends in those parts, as by his supply of men and mony not long before sent to Hannibal, and at the carnest request of the Athenians (the territories of whom he had wasted) they decreed War anew against him, being also complained of by Attalns King of Pergamus, and the Rhodians, for molefting the Cities in Afia. Ser. Sulpisins Galba the Conful obtaining Macedonia for his Province, by himself and his Lieucenant, pur him to the worst divers times, and, had almost taken him. Together with Attalus and the Rhodians pereth against he caused him to raise his siege from Athens, whereupon the Ltolians before backward enough, by reason of their Magistrate, and the Athamanians A. M. 3805. now incouraged invaded his Dominions, but being idle and careleleffe were 01, 145,55,1. easily renelled by him This year did M. Furnus the Pretty get a great V. C.534.

easily repelled by him. This year, did M. Furin the Prator get a great Schwidson Victory over the Galls, which befieged Cremona in Italy, killing 30000, 113. and with them Amilear the Carthaginian Captain. For this, after much Am. M. 24. dispute in the Senate, he triumphed, though against the custom, and without Prof. Epiph. 4. president, for any one to receive this honour, that had obtained Victory with the Army of another, as he had done with the Soldiers of C. Aureliu Cotta the Conful in his absence, who took it most hainously. The year following, C. Bebius the Prasor entering unadvifedly into the territories of the Galls Insubres, was incompassed and lost above 6600 men.

53. Nothing confiderable was this year done in Macedonia by P. Villius Tappulus the Conful; but his successor T. Quintins * Flamininus (not Fla- * Apud Livien minius as Plusarch now hath him; for the Flaminini Patritians must not 1.32. be confounded with the Flaminii who were Plebeians) using great expedition beat Philip out of the Straights, wherein fecurely he had incamped, and

And fo doth Flaminius,

One good E venna. Philip overthrown by Cynofcephale, defireth, and

obtaineth

peace.

by Sea his brother Lucius (with Attalus) took several towns of his confederates, and befieged Corinth, though in vain. The time coming for the election of new Confuls, and it being usual for them to take the Provinces from their predecessors, the Tribunes rightly objected, that this course hindred the thing done by progresse of the Wars, and procured Quintins his Government to be conthe Tribunes tinued to him, who being about taking of the Castle of Opis, Messengers of the People came from Philip about a Treaty. Several times they mer (which before they had also done at the Straights) and the Ambassadors of Attalus, the Rhodians, and Acheans were present; but the effect was nothing, and Philip Flaminimus at gave up Argos into the hands of Nabis Tyrant of Lacedamon, who wied the Inhabitants with great icruelty and incredible exaction. But Quintins following Philip into Theffaly, gave him fuch a blow at Cynofcephale, as forced A. M. 3809. him to ask Peace, which was granted upon terms moderate enough. All the Cities of Greece which he had got in his hands, were hereby, beyond all expe- Ant. M. 18. Station, and to the wonder of themselves and others, set at liberty, and lest to Prol. Pople 8.

their own Laws. The year preceding this conclusion, did the Galls receive SECT. 2. a great overthrow from Corneman the Conful; But in Spain, C. Sempronius Tuditanus was totally defeated. The same year wherein the Macedonian Was ended the slaves in Trisians made a dangerous Rebellion, but were cha-flized, and surfeed by Tritius the Frator. And about the same time was an other victory oblished over the Galle.

54. The year afred the ratificitabil of the peace, some Bickering there was A.M. 3810. in the Citie about the women. For twenty years before, there had been a V.c. 559. Law preferred by Oppius, Tribune of the People, presently after the defeat at Canna, forbidding women the wearing of Gold or Purple, and the use of any other kind of Pomp. This now did two of the present Tribunes labour to abrogate, the face of things being changed, and the occasion removed. M. Poreim Cato the Conful flood Riny for preferving the Law, inveighing much against the Females; but partly through the apposite reply of L. Valorius the [Iribune unto the Conful, out of his own book, called Origenes, and especially through the importunity of the women themselves (who with liberty of behaviour sufficient filled the streets, and came to the Assembly , and constrained two of the Tribunes to let fall their interposition) it was abrogated. Cato then betook himself into Spain his Province, where using severity

The Oppian Law against the women repealed.

Motions in

Grecce.

towards himself as well as his Soldiers, he restored the Roman interest by good Discipline. Having led his Army upon the back of the Spaniards, and thereby necessitated them to fight, he overthrew them in a great battel, and took their Camp; after which, notwithstanding the sicklenesse of the Natives, he reduced the Province to obedience. The same Summer did L. Valerim Flacem his Collegue give another overthrow to the Galls in I-55. In Greece, Nabis the Tyrant of Sparsa, still held it, and Argos, in flavery; wherefore the freedom of them fill was wanting to the universal liberty of Greece, resolved to be vindicated from the oppression of the Macedonian party. Quinisis, upon Nabis his refulal to quit Argos, teged them both, and took in Gytheum a Port Town, which drove Nabis to ask peace. Quintius was not against it, urging to the Gracian Allies the length, which was likely to be of the fiege of Sparra, the unseasonablenesse of the Winter season, and the War that threatned from Aniochus King of Asia; bur indeed fearing left one of the new Confuls taking Macedonia for his Province, might rob him of the glory of fending the whole controversie in these parts. Yet the Greeks being earnest for suppressing the Tyrant, he feemed to yield to it, and afterwards put them off by demanding fuch supplies as they could not furnish him with. Notwithstanding this, the peace could not be made; for, Nahis accepted not of the terms, especially of parting with his ships. Hereupon Sparta was set upon round about, and had been taken, but that Pythagoras fon-in-law to the Tyrant fet the out-houses on fire, which drove away the Inhabitants. Though the onset succeeded nor, yet the danger put Nabie into such a fright, that he now accepted of the former conditions, and had peace granted him; the Argives having ere this taken heart at the absence of Pythagoras their Governour, and freed themfelves. The following year T. Sempronius the Consul killed many of the Galls who had fee upon his Camp, but with great loffe of his own men. Sevetal times had the Romans now the better against these people, and the Ligurians. Then came they flatly to fall out with Antiochus the Great, King of Syria, and began a War with him five years after the ending of the Macedonian, in the 563 year of the Citie, the second of the 147 Olympiad, the 33th

The Romans fight profperoufly against

of Antiochus, and the 13th of Ptolomy Epiphanes , A.M. 3814. P. Corn Scipio

Nafica, and Manius Actius Glabrio being Confuls.

their

SECT. III.

From the war with Antiochus, and the invalion of Alia, to the destruction of Carthage, after which the Romans degenerated through security, the space of 45

1. A Neischus had invaded the Territories of Arealus; but being then the Africad of the Romans, gave over his Buterprize at their defire. After this, having an hungry defire after Egypt; upon application of the Egypt with Antiochus, tians to Rome, he was commanded to defit, which breeding in him difconcent, it was heightned by reason of his setting upon several Cities in Greeke. He fald that they once had belonged (though not of a long time) so his Predecessors; but the Romans being ambitious to fee all Greece at liberty, plainly told him that these Towns must not be excepted. When he was thus enough incented, and by Hamibal (who had fled to him) Tourred on, the Etolians importuned him to joyn with them against their late friends and befactors. This they did, being an inconstant people, and very coverous, having taken offence at the finali quantity of booty, as they accounted it, alorted to them in the War against Philip, by T. Quintins.

2. The Atolians first of all arcempted to get into their hands Lucidemon, and other Towns, before held as cautionary by Quinning; but miffed of their design, though they brake into the former, and killed Natio the Tyrant; for, they were afterwards cut in pieces by the Inhabitants themselves. Annochus having through the cunning infinuations of Thom the Eiclian, changed his purpose of fending Manibal into Africk, and thence into Italy, landed in Greece, with an intention to make it the Seat of War. He brought an in infinite finite Army with him; but feemed to have made a good beginning, naving go: Chalcis into his hands, and by that means easily brought under the whole Island of Euban. After this, he font, and buried the dead bodies of the Macedonians flain at Cynoscophale, thinking thereby to oblige . Philip, who taking it as rending to his reproach. because he had not done it before, it proved but an effectual means to make him his Enemy, the Thef. falians being no better affected, because he had taken some of their Towns. Then vying in Chalcis, he fell in Love with, and matried an obscure maid: his Army which before was indifferently good, falling with him into all idlenesse and excesse.

M. Acilius the

2. M. Acilius the Conful, to whom Green fell by lot, eafily recovered the Conful defeat-places of The fuly, and afterwards beat Antiochus out of the Straights of A. M. 1814. Thermopyle, whither, being deferted by his confederates, he had retired, as is 01,147,411,1. thewn in the History of his Kingdom. Then the Conful received the Bassians, V. C. 563. chiding them onely for their ingratitude, and the Gares of Chalcin being fer 122, open to him, he preferrly recovered Embers. This done, he went against the Ani, Mar. 33. . Epolians, from whom after he had taken one or two Towns they offered to Piol. swiften fubmit, but being offended with the hard conditions he propounded, and for 13. that large things were promifed by Anthobus, they flew back. Hereupon he belieged Nanpattus (now Lipunto) and had urrerly ruined them, but for the interceffion of T. Quintime. For he having then received the Island of Zacynebus from the Arbinians, came to the Camp, and though they had ill deferved at his hands by derracting from his worth, yet thinking it dishonourable for him, being the deliverer of Greece, that any one people should perish, he proposed to the Constitute be considered, whether to counterpoise the power of Philip, who now had got by his leave Athamania, Perrhebia, Aperantia, and Dolonio into his hands, it would not be good policy to preferve the Atolians. For this respect, and at their humble sute he gave them Truce, that they might fend to the Senate Mt Rome, and broke up his fiege. Whilest Acilius did these things in Greece, his Collegue Scipio Nasica got a norable victory over the Bail in Italy, which unterly broke their power in SECT. 2. pieces.

a. Lubius Cornelius Scipio, and C. Lulius Nepas, being Confuls for the following year, came, according to the custom, to divide the Provinces by lot. Both were extreamly defirous to have Greece, and Lahus being a man in great favour, offered that the thing might be left to the discretion of the Senate. caineth Greece Scipis the first knew not what to do, but his brother Africanus partivaded him by all means to affent to it. The thing was new, and the Senate expected Province with leave to passe many words on both sides, when Africanus standing up, told the Haibers. that if they would decree Greece to his brother, he would go his Legaces or Lieutename, whereupon there was no need any more should be said; for it was presently voted with universal consent, and power given to the Consulto passe into Asia, if he saw it convenient. Coming into Greece he sound Acities falln upon the Acolions again , because the Senate had given them. no positive answer, either as to peace or War; onely two things were proposed : To raft themselves wholely upon the Senate, or pay down 1000 Ta. lents, and have the same friends and evenies with the Romans. When they defired an exposition of the former, no answer would be given, but a 'command to their Ambassadors to depart: The Consul profecured white his Predecessor had begun, and with much ado., through the intercession of the Athenians by Africanus, another Truce was granted that they might have time once more to fend to Rome. There their Ambassadors instead of confessing their faults, and asking pardon, boasted what friends and assistants they had been to the Roman State, which gave such offence, that they were commanded out of the Oirie as before. 9. Authorhus having with his fon Sciencus besieged Pergamus the Chief Citie of Emmenes, the friend of the Romans, was forced to raife his fiege. He fent to Amilius the Roman Admiral now on those Coasts about peace, who disswined any power of concluding it without the Consul. Then did the Rhodians at Sea defeat his Admiral, which was Hannibal, a man out of his proper Element, and afterward in a barrel fought with Amilius, Eumenes, and the Rhodians, he fully lost the command of the Sea. Affrighted herear, figured at his he foolishedy left Ly simachia, which this year might have kept the Gonful in action, and adding one folly to another suffered Scipioto passe the Helle-Spont without interruption. Now he offered to quit all places in Europe, and fuch in Afin as were the friends of Rome; to discharge half of the costs.

suffained by the Romans in the War, and rather than not be quiet, he was content to pair with a portion of his own Kingdom. These seemed but small keth offers.

L. Cornelius

Scipio the Conful ob-

for his into Afia.

jected

He is overthrown, and hath peace mands.

things to the Conful, who thought it just that he, who had been the cause of the War, should bear all the charges of it, and not onely quit Ionta and Aolis, but leave all the Greek Cities to their liberty, which could not be, except he parted with all Afia on this fide the Mountain Taurus. The Ambassor had in charge to procure the favour of Africanus, to whom was offered the reflitution of his son taken prisoner, and all that could be expected on this side the title of King, if he would live with him. But all private Offices of kindnesse onely would Africanus promise, desiring him by all means to procure peace, and, when he had received his fon, not to fight till he should (being now fick) return to the Camp. This cauted Antiochus to delay fighting, but the Conful followed, and provoked him to give battel, wherein his own Chariors Armed with Scithes, being driven back upon his own men, procured his overthrow. After this, peace was granted on the fame terms as it had been offered to him before the battel. And thus this War ended in a short time, and leffe trouble than was expected, the second Conful putgranted upon ting a period to it, who in imitation of his brother took on him the firname of

6. The year following, wherein M. Falvius Nobilior, and Cn. Manlins were Confuls, the former going into Greece fell upon the Andians, who now had taken from Philip Dologia, and Amphilochia with Athamania; and Livius lib. 38. befieging Ambracia, drove them once more to fue for peace. They were

SECT. 3. referred by the Conful to Rome, where the Ambassadors of Philip made great complaints against them upon the former account. But the Rhodians and Athensans interceding once more for them, their fute was granted, on condition to pay 500 Euberan Talents, at feveral paiments, to restore all Peace granprisoners, and have the same Friends and Enemies with the People of ted to the .Atolians.

7. (n. Manlius the other Conful was now in Affa, where of that part taken from Amischus, much he conferred upon Eumenes, and the Rhedians, according to the result of the Senate. This done, he undertook an Expedition against the Gallogracians, or Galatians, a People which having followed Brennus into Greece, after his death, had go years before passed into Asia, Jufin. bb. 3.

Manlius Sublatians.

dueth the Ga- where they were so terrible, as none denied them tribute before Assalus King of Pergamus. They inhabited vast and high mountains, and in that respect were with difficulty to be come at ; but the Conful by throwing darts, especially at their huge bodies, made great flaughter and fubdued them. Returning home through Thrace, he had well nigh lost his booty by the inhabitants that lay in wait for it in the woody passages, and hardly got leave to triumph, because he had underraken the War on his own head. It is observed, that luxury and idlenesse were first brought to Rome by his Army, out of Asia, through the provocations to effeminate neffe there found, and his loofe and neglected

Luxury first brought to Rome by his Army.

8. In the third year after the ending of the War with Antiochiu, and the fame wherein he died, envy procured the fall of those by whom the Victory was obtained. For, Scipio Africanus was accused of having defrauded the Treasury of the booty taken in the War, and had a day set him by the Tri- Lege Livium buneoto answer it before the People. It is not certain who was his accuser, Val. Max.1,3. fome mentioning M. Navim, and others the two Patilis Tribunes, fet on, c. 7, exim, t.

Scipio Africames called to account by the Tribunes.

as some delivered, by M. Porcine Cate the Enemy of Scipio. The day of Gellium Noth. hearing being come, and the Tribunes having taken their places in the Ro- Allie, 1, 40,18, fire, the party entred the Assembly with a great train of Friends and Clients. Silence being made, he put on his triumphal crown, and told the People, how as that day he had overthrown Hannibal and the Carthaginians; wherefore thinking it convenient for that time not to medle with any brawl- A. M. 1818. ing businesse, he would go and salute the gods in the Capitol, and give them of 148. M. s. thanks, that as well that day, as at other times, they had given him both will V. C. 167. and power to do eminent fervice for his Countrey. Then he wished that Seleui Philips. fuch of them there prefent as thought it convenient, would accompany him, Ptol. Epiphan and pray that they might have fuch principal Officers (Principes) as he had been

g. Going up to the Capitol, the whole Assembly followed him, as also to all the temples in the City, infomuch that the very Viators and Clerks left the Tribunes alone, who also followed, and from accusers turned admirers, (as appeareth from Valerius Maximus) out of very shame. The Tribunes accused him also grievously in the Senate, and defired he might be brought to his answer. He rising up, produced the Books of accounts, wherein was punctually fer down all the particulars, but he tore it in pieces before them all, disdaining to give account for so small a matter in comparison of His great fei appearance he absented himself, and his brother pretending his indisposition, rit.

to Linternum and is not condemned through the of Gracehus.

those vast sums he himself had brought into the Treasury. The next day of he was excused, and another day appointed, before which he withdrew himself to Linternum (or Liternum) a Sea Town of Campania. For he clearly He departeth perceived under what envy he laboured, it being also objected against him, that he had spent in idlenesse all that Summer he lay in Sicily, and his power with Antiochus, who having discharged his son without ransom, honoured him above all others, which he willingly cook upon him, as one, who alone procurement fare at the helm, and could steer matters concerning Rome according to his pleasure. In his absence the Tribunes were very fierce against him, yet through the interpolition of Tiberius Gracehus (formerly accounted his Enemy) he was not condemned. 10. Lucina

10. Lucius Scipio Afiaticus his brother was also called to an account, and escaped nor condemnation, the money supposed to be retained to his own use, being charged upon his estate; and he was kept from imprisonment meer-Ir by the power of Gracehus. The following year was discovered the abho-

Affations his minable practice of certain women at the feaths of Bacchus, which being Val. Max. 1.6. Affatters his brother is fin- kept in the night, all manner of filthinesse and continual murders were com- cap 3, exemp. mitted. At first these sestivals were observed but three dayes in a year; but Angustin de sinow five in every moneth, and men were admitted, whereas they were be- vitate Dei Lis. gun by women. All who being present and drawn in , would not confent to 6.13. fuch abhominations, were facrificed as beafts, a valt number being bewirch. A. M. 3819. The abhomi- ed with this folly. The matter being revealed to Sp. Posthumoins Albinus N. M. 381 nable practi- the Conful, he acquainted the Senate with it, by which, order was taken for ces at the bac-apprehending the persons, imprisoning some, and putting others to death, as well in other parts of Isaly, as in the City; the contagion having infected many other places, but especially Capua. It was brought to Rome out of 11. In the second or third year after this discovery, and the fourth of his exile, died P. Cornelius Scipio Africanus, whether at Linternum, or Rome, is unknown, the place of his burial being also uncertain. That he died this A.M. 3822. 18 mintown; the place of the Source or chief of the Senare at 0/.139.aan.2.

Africanus di-

Live gathereth, because having been Prince or chief of the Senare at V.C. 571. the former Lustrum, this year he was left out, (which none used to be as long Seleui Philop. as he lived) by L. Valerius Flacens, and M. Porcius Cato the Cenfors, the former whereof was chosen into the place. Valerius Maximus telleth us, Ptol. Epiph, 21. that he commanded this to be ingraven on his Tomb , Ingrata Patria ne offa quidem mea babes, which sheweth that he was not buried at Rome. He had to himself in Spain, when the natives saluted him by, and would have had him take upon him, the title it felf. And upon this account he might be hated by Cato, who though a virtuous man, was morose and sowre. Livy iovneth with his (in the fame year) the death of Philopæmen, and of Han-

that hap which usually accompanieth the best men, to find their Country ingrateful, being of excellent parts, and of a kingly spirit, which he ascribed nibal; for that the three great Captains of the World at that time, left it de-And Philopa: solate as it were by agreement. Philopomen Captain of the Acheans was mea General through the fall off his Horse, taken in an engagement with the Meffenians, of the Acheans, and compelled to drink poyfon, having done great fervice for his Countrey, Hannibal having notice that the Romans would demand him from Antiochus, fled into Crete to the Gortynians, Having great treasure with hims and knowing himself to be in much danger, because of the Avarice of the Cretans, he filled many barrels with Lead, which covering on the top with Gold, he deposited in the Temple of Diana, trusting the Gortynians with his wealth, Then put he his money into brazen Statues, wich he was wont to cary about Lege Livium ut with him, and cast them before the gate. They then watching the Temple fupra, diligently from none fo much as him, he got away fecretly, and went to Pri - com. Nepot, in fin King of Bithynia, who used him in the Warre against Enmenes. But Hannibale. T. Quinting being fent to Prusia, whether by the Senate on purpose, or up- Justine 1. 32. on other occasions, demanded him as the grand enemy of Rome, to be deli- viris illustrate. vered into his hands. He had provided in his house several places for issuing And Hamibal, our upon fuch an occasion; but being befer, and no way left to escape, he sook poylon, which it's faid he caried about him in his ring. So this renown-

Plutarch Writeth. 12. After these things, the Ligurians were often deseated by the Confuls and other Commanders; many a thousand of them being slain, as also of the Celtiberians and other Nations in Spain who were continually rebel-41. ling. The Istrians beat the Romans out of their camp, and put them to the rout;

ed Captain ended his life in his 70 year; for which thing Quining was by many hardly thought of, and got the efteem of an importune and cruel man, as Manlins the Conful in vain opposing it; but shortly after they were discomfixed by the faid Manlins, and afterward fully subdued by Claudius the Conful, who quelled also the Ligurians, as his Collegue Tib. Sempronius Grac-

SECT. 3. chus did the rebellion of Sardinia, with the losse of 1500 of the revolters. About this time Corfice also was subdued. The year following, Cornelins one of the Confuls died at the bath at Cuma, into whose place C. Valerins Lavinus was elected. Petilius Spurinus the other Conful fighting against the Ligurians, laboured to take a certain Mountain called Letus, concerning which in his speech to his Soldiers he saying, that that day he would take Letus (Hodie ego Letum utique capiam) by rash fighting confirmed what he had faid in another sence (viz., wherein Lethum fignifieth death) than he had meant it. These actions abroad were shortly after followed by the second Macedonian War, or that with Perfeus, in the 583 year of the City, 24 after the Peace made with his Father, and seventeen after the conclusion with Antiochus.

The War with Perfeus.

12. Perfeus in a manner succeeded to this War as well as the Kingdom, his Father having intended and made great preparations for it. Puffed up by these preparations, he fought to draw away the Allies of the Romans from their friendship, and abused several of their friends. Their Ambassadors he flighted, refusing to give them audience, which made the Senate refolve upon the War; but it was to be committed to one of the following Confuls; only for the present, Cn. Sicinius the Prator of the City was commanded to raise men, and transport them into Epirus, there to seize on the Seatowns, that the Conful might more freely land his Army. Some were fent also into Greece to confirm the States in their friendship and alliance, who also demanding audience of Perseus, after long waiting, he renounced the league made with the Romans, as entred into at the beginning of his reign meerly for fecurity. Hereupon the Ambassadors renounced also the confederacy made with him, and after that the Confuls P. Licinius Crassus and C. Cassinus had assumed their Office, the Warre was propounded to, and decreed by, the People.

14. Quintus Martius and others being fent into Greece to establish the confederates in their fidelity, Perfeus began to bethink himfelf, and was affrighted, hearing of the motions of the Eneny. He applied himself to Martins about a Treaty for Peace, trufting to that friendship which had passed betwixt their two families. The Ambassadors were glad of this addresse, and to divert him granted him Truce, that he might fend to Rome, for he had all Peace is deni- things in a readinesse, and might have begun the War, as with great advaned him by the tage to himself, so too speedily to the Romans, who as yet had neither Army nor Leader arrived. Peace was denied him by the Senate, and A. Atulius was sent to seize upon Larissa the chief City of Thessaly. Whereupon he drew together his Forces, having got a greater Army than any of his predecessors were Masters of since Alexander the Great. He took in some Towns upon his borders, and Licinius the Conful led fo raw and unexperienced an Army into Macedonia, and through such difficult and almost unpassable places, as had Perfeus taken his opportunity, he might easily have destroyed it, as also if he had not too soon retreated in a battel fought shortly after. After A. M. 3834. this he fent to Licinius, offering to embrace the conditions submitted to by his ol, 151 an. 2. Father, in paying the tribute, and leaving the Cities to their liberty; which V. C. 83.

Schate.

yet would not be granted. Then were Thebes and Alearens taken in by Ln. Selencid, 143. cretius the Prator; and the Conful having had the better in another skirmish, Ptol. Philan. Aliartus taken, received some Towns, and rook up his winter quarters; whilst Appins Clan- 10. dius in Illyricum lost many men. 15. The year following C. Hostilius the Consul did nothing of moment: yet this he did in reference to the Army; he reduced the Soldiers to that an-tient discipline which his predecessor had let fall. O. Marcins Philippus fucceeding him, at his first enterance into his Province might easily have been Puleus befor- defeated, had he met with a prudent enemy, the wayes being so difficult and ted with fear dangerous, that the Soldiers could scarcely for wearinesse hold their weapons. And after he had got into the plains he might eafily have been thut up on every his opportuni fide, and famished, but that Perfeus besotted with fear ran away to Pyana, and left the Straights open to him. Yet Martins did nothing of confequence, leaving all to be performed by his Successor L. Amilius Paulus, who had SECT-3. been Conful 17 years before. He caused the Eclypse of the Moon to be foretold to his Soldiers, left they should be discouraged by it, which brought great terrour to the Enemy, that knew nothing of the natural cause. He kept Livius! 45. them from fighting when they were weary, though the Officers much defired Plutarebin to ingage. But the Armies lying incamped on each fide of the River Eni- Amylio. peus, it hapned that a beast passing over from the Roman side, was seized on, and being refcued by degrees drew both the Armies into an ingagement, wherein Persens lost the day, and with it his Kingdom. Flying into the Isle of Crete, when all forfook him, he delivered up himfelf into the hands of Cn. Ottavius. Amilias severely chastized the Epiross, who had joyned with Perfeus, plundering and demolithing about 70 of their Towns, whereby fo much booty was got, as each foot-man had 200 Denarii, and every horf-man as much more. But the Soldiers having got little or no plunder in Macedonia, nor any of the King's Treasure, denied their General a Triumph, which yet he obtained, and that very splendid. Of his four sons, the two eldest he granted to be adopted to Fabius Maximus, and Publius Scipso the fon of Africanus, and of his two youngest, the one died five dayes before his Triumph, and the other three dayes after, which toffe he sustained with great courage. Before his Triumphal Chariot was led Perseus with his two fons, and this same year Triumphed Cn. Oftavius the Prator at Sea, besides L. Anicius, before whose Chariot was led Gontius King of the Illyrians, whom being the Confederate of Perfens he had subdued, and forced to yield himself.

by Amilius the Confui, and yieldeth himfelf.

製はいまがなる

This hapned to Macedonia and Illyricum, in the 586 year of the Citie, the faid . Emilius, and L. Licinius Crassus being Confuls. 16. In the late War, Eumenes King of Pergamus, and the Rhodians, being Livis Epitom. wrought upon by Perfeus, flood Neuters, whereupon Eumenes coming towards lib.46. Rome, the Senate being unwilling either to declare him friend or foe, made a decree in General, that no King should come into the Citie: the Rhodians Eumenee and the Rhodians having stood Neuters, are accordingly respected by the Senate.

Things go ill

in Spain.

with much ado, and after much feeking, were hardly received as friends and confederates. The same year that Perfeus was overthrown, Antiochus Epiphanes besieging Ptolomy in Alexandria, upon the desire of the besieged. C. Popillius Land an auftere man, with C. Decimus, were fent from the Se- Velleius Pattrnate to command him to defift, which he obeyed, After this the Romans culus l. 1, c.10, fought in Ligaria and Corfica with various fortune, the Dalmatians who had wisted the Borders of Illyricum and had overcome, and were overcome by C. Marcius, were subdued by Scipio Nasica. But in Spain things went so badly, and fuch losses were received, that the Citie was abashed, none being found who would either go Lieutenant to the Conful, or take place of a Tribune upon him , till Scipio Emilianus (the fon of Paulus Emilius , but adopted by Scipio the son of the African) flanding up offered himself, and by his example drew on others. He went Lieurenant to Lucullus the Conful, and behaving himself most gallantly in the War, killed an Enemy in a Duel which had challenged out any one in the Army, and first mounted the Walls of Intercation

17. Lucullus subdued several Nations in Spain, though Sulpicius Galba unfortunately fought against the Lusitanians. About the same time one Andiffeus, an obscure man in Macedonia, but something resembling Philip, Florus lib. 2. counterfeited himself the base son of Persens. He was once sent to Rome 6.12. counterfeit fon by Demerrias the King of Syria, but making thence an escape returned, and Control renewed his claim to Macedonia, which partly by fair means, and partly by Orofins lib.4. constraint, he got into his hands. Juventius the Prator was first sent against capes. him; but he having strengthned himself with the Thracians, cut him off and all his Army, and invaded The faly, whence he was ejected by the help of the Acheans. After this, Q. Merellus the Prator sufficiently revenged A. M. 3857. the Commonwealth upon him, for he overthrew him in a great battel, whence Ol. 152, am. 1. he fled to B) zuis, a petty King of Thrace, who delivering him up, he V.C. 606. led him in Triumph. Meiellus (accounted most fortunare) reduced Macedo Piol. Philom. main this third Macedonian War into the form of Province, which shortly 33.

SIII

SECT.2. after also hapned to Africk, For, even now was profecuting with all earnestnesse the third and last Punick or Carthaginian War, and the ruin of the Citie Carthage it felf.

18. Their opinion is not faulty, who professe not to be able to find any Meritorious cause of this War in the Carthaginians, & theirs, who affirm that Carchage was more hated for its competition of Empire, than for any fault The pretences it had committed in those times. But there wanted not pretences. For, di-

The pretences it nad committee in those times of Numidia, and the Carthaginians, quare tage rope for the third vers times had Mafaniffa King of Numidia, and the Carthaginians, quare tage in 16.33. Punick War. relled about grounds upon the Borders, and often had the Romans fent to Appian in The take up the quarrel, but especially of lare not with indifferency had they men. Livit judged, for that the fault lay in Majaniffa, who being a great friend of Epitom, Lib. 49. judged, for that the tault tay in majannia, who being a great menu of theirs, prefumed too much upon their affection to himself, and the jealouse Flor, lib. 4. wherewith he knew them prejudiced against the other. The Ambassadors easits. also that were fent to Carshage, finding the Citie full, and flourishing, from Eutrop, libe. that peace they had now enjoyed about fifty years, and provided also for War Orofinm libe. as well as peace, spake much of the danger which threatned Rome from it : capas, especially Caro, who never came into the Senate, but after that he had spoken his mind to any bufinesse, added, This I think, and that Carthage is to be destroyed. He was earnestly contradicted by Scipio Nasica, who feared, that this rival for Empire once being removed, fecurity would breed the destruction of the Commonwealth as it too truely proved, this fecurity being Grengthned by luxury and avarice, which the Afraick Triumphs had brought in. But Cato's reasons drawn from present danger, so, in the apprehension of the Senate, over-ruled Scipio's forecast, that they resolved upon a War, and kept the resolution close till they could catch at a convenient opportunity and pretence. 19. There being at this time three factions in Carthage, one affected towards the Romans, another standing for the true interest of the State it self. and the third for Majaniffa, this later was expelled by the second, and a Law made that they should never be again received. Those men flying to Masanissa, he sent Gulussa his son to intercede for them, who being laid in wait for by Amilear Samnis, although he escaped, yet thereupon the King befieged Horoscopa, a Town he much defired; which act was expresly against the articles of the League. Asarabal went with a great Army to raise the fiege, and a bloudy battel was fought, wherein the Carthaginians were overthrown; but more died of the Plague, being incompassed near a Lake, which by its noisom vapours corrupted the air. Hereby the remnant were forced to yield, and consent to a great Tribute, with the receiving back of their Exiles, and yet were they almost all slain by a party of horse sent against them, out of revenge by Guluffa. The Carthaginians therefore had now had an Army in the field, and that against a confederate of Rome, which was against the tenour of the last League. This advantage the Romans took, and ordered the Confuls to undertake the War, though the other condemned those that had broken the League, and most humbly offered any reasonable satisfaction. M. Manilius Nepos, and L. Marcius Cenforinus being now on their journey, it was answered, that they should enjoy all as formerly, if within 30 dayes they would fend 300 hostages, (all sons of Senators, or the principal Citizens) to Lilybaum, and do what the Consuls should further command them. The Carthaginians desirous to give satisfaction within the time limited fent the Children, and when now the Confuls were landed at Mica (which being a Sea-Town convenient for their purpose had been seized on beforehand) thither they fent their Commissioners to wait on them, and know their pleasure. Conforinus the Senior Consul commending their diligence, demanded all their Arms, which without any deceit were delivered up. Now The Carthagi- with tears imploring mercy they defired to know their last doom, and were commanded to leave their Citie (which the Confuls had order to level with commanded to leave their the ground) and build another any where in their own Territories, so it were Citie, refule but ten miles from the Sea. This they received with great horrour and rage, and all resolved rather to die than forfake, or give way to the ruin of, their anto obcy. tient feat and habitation.

20. The Contuis delayed to begin the War, as not doubting in the least SECT.3. but to take the Citie thus disarmed and naked at their pleasure. But they found it not fo; for the Inhabitants acted by indignation and fury, though at first scarce themselves settled their minds to refistance, men and women working night and day in making of Arms. Where iron and braffe were wanting, they made use of Gold and Silver; and the women gave the hair of their heads to supply the defect of Tow, or Flax. They made also Asdrubal (whom before for fear of the Romans they had condemned) their General in the field, where he had already a good Army. When the Confuls came against the Citie, they found such resistance that they were discouraged, and the resolution of the besieged increased hereby. They ingaged several times And the War to their disadvantage, and might have suffered much, had not the Army been secured and brought off, through the great wisdom and courage of Scipio Emilianus, who drew off also Pharness, the Mafter of the Carthaginian ho f-men, to his own party; which things procured him an exceeding great name. This year died Masanisa go years old, leaving a son but of four years behind him; and truffing his Kingdom with Scipto, to be at his discretion disposed of to his Children. This same year also died Cato, being a-Majaniffa and bout 85 years of age, and lived not to see the too much defired ruin of Carthage.

21. The year following, Calpurnius Pifo the Conful, and Mancinus the Admiral did no great matters, befieging Clupea, and Hippo (a Town fituate betwixt Caribage and Usica) to no purpose. Within Caribage, Afdrubal Grand-son to Masanissa by his daughter, being joyned in commission with the other Afdrubal without, was accused by him as intending to betray the Citie to his Uncle Gulussa, and having nothing to say for himself, or being too flow in it, was knocked on the head by a form in the Council-house. Now at Rome were all mens eyes upon Scipio Æmilianus, looking on him as destined to end the War; and whereas he sought but the Ædileship, and it Scipio Amilia. Was against the Law for him to be chosen Consul so young (being but 36. was made Con- whereas the Law required 43) it was dispensed with for this time, and then ful, though was he made Conful, who fo ordered the matter, though not wholy during his Consulship, as he demonstrated the people not to have conceived vain hopes Confular age. concerning him.

22. For restoring Discipline which had gone much to wreck through the neglect of Pifo, he soon after took that part of Caribage, called Megara, and drove the Inhabitants into the Citadel or Byrfa. Then fecuring the Ifthmus leading to the Citie, he cut off all Provisions from out of the Countrey, and blocked up the Haven; but the Cirizens with incredible industry cut out another passage into the Sea, whereby at certain times they could receive neceffaries from the Army without. Scipto therefore in the beginning of Winter fet upon their forces lying abroad, whereof he flew 70000. and took 10000. fo that now no relief could be obtained from without. In the beginning of Spring , he first took the Wall leading to the Haven Citho, and then the Forum, where was a most lamentable spectacle, some being killed by the sword, and other wayes, others half killed by the fall of houses, or by fire, or half buried in the earth; or having one Limb torn from another. Six dayes the fiege of the Citadel continued. On the feventh it was defired by fome that all who would come forth should have their lives, which being granted to all but revolters, some 50000 yielded, and afterward Afdrubal him- A. M. 3859. felf, who was revited for it by the revolters (who fet fire to the Temple, and Ol. 158, ann. 3. therewith burnt themselves) as also by his wife, which threw her self with her V.C. 608. two Children into the flames.

Taketh Carthage.

beginneth.

23. Then was the Citie destroyed, being 22 miles in compasse, and so big, that the burning of it continued 17 dayes. The snate at Rome receiving the news joyfully, fent ten of their own Rank whom they joyned with Scipia. for disposing of the Countrey. They ordered none of Carthage to be left, and that it should never be rebuilt, laying heavy curies on those that should do it. All the Cities which affifted it, in the War were so be razed, and the

Which is ra-

Ptol. Physconis

SECT. 4. grounds given to the friends of the People of Kome: the relt of the Towns were to be tributaries, and governed yearly by a Prator. All the Captives were fold, except some of the chief. And such was the destruction of this renowned City, fo famous once for command and Empire, and rival to Rome it felf, after it had flood about 700 years, in the fourth after the beginning of the War, the 608 of Rome, the third of the 198 Olympiad, and the fifth of Protomy Physcon. A. M. 2859, Cn. Cornelius Lentulus and L. Mummius Nepos being Confuls.

SECT. IV.

From the destruction of Carthage to the war with Mithridates King of Pontus, which afforded the occasion to the first Civil war, the space of $8 years.

I. This year was fatal, not onely to the greatest City of Africk, but of Greece alfo ; Corinth that famous Mart-town being levelled with the ground. The occasion was given by the Acheans themselves, who violated Lege Velleium the Roman Ambassadors (though whether by word or deed is uncertain) who Paterell, 1, 1, destruction of were sent to dissolve their Communality, and leave the Cicies to their own 612. Corinth. peculiar Laws, which because of this union and fellowship had been too formi- Livii Epitom. dable. They had also in conjunction with the Bostians and those of Chalcie, lib. 6, 6, 112 made War against the Lacedemonians the friends and allies of Rome, be- Pausania cause they would not be subject to them. Upon these grounds the Senate de- Adaitis, & creed the War, which Metallus as yet in Macedonia first undertook; who de are contains drawing down his Army through The fally into Buotias there overthrew Critolaus, then took Thebes, with Megara, and coming to the Isthmus was there treating of Peace, when L. Mummius the Conful came into this his Province. He overthrew Dians the Achean General, after which he en-

The men were flain, and the women and children fold, with all fuch flaves as A. M. 3859. the Acheans had manumitted for the Wars. As Scipio, who destroyed Car- 01, 118. 41.3. thage (as his Grand-father before him for conquering it) had the firmame V.C. 608. of Africanus, and Merellus for his reducing Macedonia, that of Macedo- Profitonia. nicus; so this year Mummius for this successe obtained the Sirname of Achaicus, and according to the custom, having others joyned with him, rethence firna-duced those parts and all Grasce with Epirus into the form of a Province, calmed Achaicus. 1ed afterwards Achaia, not Greece, because the Greeks were subdued when tred Corinth and razed it, because there the Ambassadors had been abused.

the Achains had the chief command, as Paufanias writeth. 2. Now was it 74 years fince the Romans, in the second year of the second Punick War, entred Spain in an hostile manner, and fince that time, especially since the departure of Scipio Africanus the elder, many had the rifings and struglings of that People been, of all others most impatient of the yoak. Now was Viriains up in arms, who of a shepherd became a robber, Viviatus up in and of a robber a General over such-like as himself, and made the Romans work sufficient for the space of 14 years, in which time he defeated many Armies. Q. Pabius Maximus Semilianus (or rather Amilianus, being brother to Scipio Emilius, and adopted by Pabins Maximus) after some fuccesse was yet by him brought to such straights, as glad he was to ask Peace Vide Appara upon equal terms, which Capie the Conful of the following year refuling to in Ibrici. stand to, received orders from the Senate accordingly to profecute the War.

Mummius

Is destroyed b

Capio.

Capio attempted at unawares to destroy him; but he escaped, and sending Ambassadors to treat of Peace, Cepio so wrought on them, that returning they murdered him, to their own shame, and the Consul's small credit, in his bed.

But, a more dangerous War than this threatned from Numantia a town of no great bigneffe, yet peopled with most valiant, though but few, Inhabitants. Before

Before Viriains his death they had foiled Q. Pompsius the Conful feveral times, SECT-4. and forced him to condescend to a dishonourable Peace, which though he denied, was sufficiently proved, and by favour onely he escaped that punish- orosiumit, s.

ment which fell on Mancinus, who being constrained to accept of the same 6.7.

Patercul, 1.2. terms, was delivered up to the Enemy; but (as the Sammites formerly did c. 4. by another after the defeat at Caudinum) they refused to receive him. After this Brusus defeated many thousands of the Lusisanians, and overthrew the Gallacians; but Lepiden the Proconsul set upon the Vaccas an harmlesse People of the hithermost Spain, or Hispania Terraconensis (for in the 559 year of the City, Spain was divided into Citerior or Terracenensis, and Witerior Bad fuceffe in or Benea, and Lustiania, two Prators being yearly fent thither, the number of which Officers was therefore upon this occasion increased to fix) by whom he was utterly defeated. These things so affrighted the Roman Soldier, that he almost quaked at the light of a Spaniard, and at Rome men were seized with great fear and shame. Therefore Scipio Emilianus Africanus must be created Consul the second time, as the onely refuge and hope of his Conful the fecond time.

4. At the first he restored discipline, the want of which had spoiled all, but then coming to engage, found the courage of the Enemy such, that he refolved to fight no more, but lay close fiege to Numantia, and govern himfelf according to the comportment of affairs. At length the befiged greatly He beliegeth straightned offered to yield upon reasonable conditions, or fight if they might have battel given them, which being denied, having drunk strong drink on purpose, they affailed the besiegers so fiercely, that the Romans had run, but that Scipio was the General. At last they fired the City over their own heads, and (carcely one of them remained to be led in triumph. This famous City was feated in the hithermost Spain, in the head of Gallacia, and the confines of the Celtiberians. It had with 4000 men, for the space of sourteen years, faith Florus, or twenty according to Strabo, born the brunt of 40000 Romans, and many times put them to shameful flight with great slaughter. Scipio destroyed it, after he had for a year and three moneths continued the fiege, fourteen years after he had to dealt with Carthage, in the 621 of the City, A. M. 2871, P. Musius Scavela and L. Calpurnius Pifo Fruges (both learned men) being Confuls. At this time a servile War was raised in Sicily by Ascrile was one Ennus a Syrian of Apamea, the flave of Antigenes of Enna. It was followed by Calpurnius Pifo the Conful, and finished by P. Rupilius Nepos Except. Diod. followed by Calpurnius Pifo the Conful, and finished by P. Kupitius Ivepos his Successor; Twenty thousand flaves were by him flin in battel: Orofius 1,5.0.9 Ennus being cast in prison died (it's said, of the sowsie disease) at Mor-

5. Ever fince the beginning of the Tarenine War to this time, for the space of almost 150 years was there much modelty, abstinence, selfdenial, valour and virtue amongst the Romans in general, of which yet especially the Fabii, Fabricii, Marcelli, Curii, Metelli, the Scipio's and Æmilii have left examples admirable to be commended to all posterity, such were their cautious and politick yet just and noble carriage both at home and abroad. But now the Afan Expeditions and Triumphs having brought in excesse and riot, and the ruine of Carthage having taken away fear; idlenesse with security by degrees stole in upon them, and the infirmity of the Government (after that fear, which hitherto had preserved it safe, was removed) again effectually shewed it self. For though after this time many a People was subdued and brought under, and much glory gotten abroad, yet was it stained by emulations, jealousies, and contentions at home, and even by shedding the blood of one another in an open though civil feud, which first came to passe while the former things were performed in Spain by Scipio. 6. Tiberius Sempronius Gracebus fon to one of the same name (who had been twice Conful and once Cenfor) by Cornelia an excellent woman, Orofius 1.5. Thing Gifts been twice Contul and once Centor) by Cornessa an execution woman, sugar after a daughter of Africanus the elder, being Quaffor to Mancinus the Conful 6.8, 9. Edition about in Spain, had an hand in the diffeonourable Peace made by him, for which be. Flows 1.3.6.14. the Against, ing restected on by the Senate, or or at least thinking himself so to be, acted head how to become gracious and popular with the commons. Procuring himself to be chosen Tribune, he preferred a Law, forbidding any man to possesse above 500 acres of the publick grounds, and ordering the overplus to be divided to the poor. For, such grounds as the People of Rome took from their Enemies, they were wont, if tilled, to divide to their own Citi- Com, in Flor. zens: if not arable, they then let them out to farm by the Cenfors to Ita- 1.3.6.14. lians, or the ordinary fort of Romans, on condition, that if they plowed them . they should pay the tenth part of the Corn, and the fifth of other fruits: and if they bred up Cattel, they were charged with a certain rent. But it came to passe, that by incredible impudence and licentiousnesse of the rich. the Husband-men were outed of their antient possessions, which by purchasing and other wayes they got wholly into their hands, fo that the Publick was defrauded of it's revenue, and the poor of their livelyhoods. For restraining the avarice of the rich, the Lex Lionia and Sempronia were enacted. Gracehus increased the former by adding that; lest the Law should be wrested. half should be given to the children, and the rest divided to such poor as had nothing. And if any went about to inlarge their portion by purchase, Triumviri or three men should be yearly appointed to judge what ground was publick, and what private. 7. This netled the Nobility exceedingly, who by virtue of this Law were to part with their inheritances; and one of his Collegues, Ottavins by name, Livii Epilon, I. opposed it, for which he so handled him, as glad he was to quit his place, in- 58. to which Gracebus chose Q, Mummins one of his own facton. This severity Velleius lacg. being without prefident, much alienated even the minds of the multitude from Gracehus, who also perceiving there was not ground enough to quiet them all (the expectation of whom he had now raised) he offered a Law for Proposing another Law distributing the money which Attalus King of Pergamus had left, together for dividing of with his Kingdom, to the People of Rome. The Senare being affembled to consult what was to be done, and all being of opinion that P. Mutius Scavemoney, la the Conful should defend the Commonwealth by arms, he refused to do any thing by force. Hereupon Scipio Nasica taking up his gown under his left arm, held up his right hand, and bade every one that loved the State to follow him. Up he went into the Capitol, being accompanied with most A. M. 3871.

of the Senate, many Equites, and some Commoners, where Gracehus was 01, 161, 48, 4. speaking to the People, and endeavoring to be chosen Tribune for the follow. V. C.611. ing year. They fell upon him and his hearers, whereof they killed 200, and Ptol. Phylicit. amongst them himself with a piece of a seat as he ran down from the Capitol. Thus he fell by the means of his own kinfman, being a most excellently accomcomplices are plished man, though too violent in a matter honest enough. And this was killed by the means of Sci-the first blood which in a seditious way the Romans first drew from one ano- Offic. 1. 1.

pio Nasica his ther, observed by Cicero to have been at the same time that the other Scipio destroyed Numantia. which was the 8. At this time were there some risings at Athens, and in Delos, being as Livii Enton. drawn by the spirks of that fire formerly kindled by Ennus in Sigily, which with some trou- 1. 19. Romans from ble were extinguished; neither was Italy altogether free from them. But a one another, more noble War infued about the Kingdom of Afia, For, Attalas King of Orofine 1,518.

M. Perpenna, hasting into Asia set upon Aristonieus at unawares, when he was not yet recovered of the security contracted by his Victory, and over-

Pergamus or Alia (for so he is called, because of a good part of Alia given & 9. to Eumenes his father) by his last will left the People of Rome his heir : But after his death Aristonicus his base brother seized on the Kingdom as his in- Velleius Patte heritance. First was Liginius Crassus the Conful sent against him, but was cut. 1.2.64. Ariftonicus overthrown, and being taken struck one of the Soldiers on the eye, on pur- Florus 1.24.41. contesting pose to provoke him to kill him, which he did. He having thus miscaried with the Ro-(though he was affifted in his enterprise by several Kings,) his Successor mans for the throwing him in battel befieged him in Stratonice, where he forced him by famine to yield, and shortly after the Conful died at Pergamus. The remainder of the War was finished by M. Aquilius the next year's Conful, Istaken

Kingdom of Pergamus,

Triacedollians. who poil and Bountains for taking in some Cities, and having rogether with SECT. 4. shole joyned with him (according to the cultom) feeled the Province with fufficient oppression of the people, he led Aristonicas in Triumph, though taken by another man's labour ; who by order of the Senate was strangled in priton, in the Guy year of the Cirie, the faid M. Agustus. Nepos , and C . Sempronius

And Strang-Tuditunus being Confuls.

g. The civil diffencions died not with Gracehu (who perished four years Vide Appian. before) his Law for division of the grounds being still in sorce, and the peo- de bello civili ple being sensible of the equity thereof, as they accounted it s for that the lib.2. The civil dif-rich had gor all into their hands, and those that underwent all the toyl in Velleium lib. 2. Conquering the Land, were ready to starve, being also exhausted by the cap.6. Wars, and almost none but flaves left in Italy for ordering of the grounds. Gracehis. newed.

Gravelus had a younger brother called Caise, whom together with Fulvius Val. Maxim. Flacom, and Papirius Carto, he had made Trimmoirs for division of the 10.6, cap 2. Cains Gracebus, grounds; He with his Collegues undertook the patronage of the Law, and Exemp. 3. the brother of profeduting his Enterprize with all earnestnesses, such trouble arose about the Livis Epitom, patro division, in accomming and removing, that the Italians Studies changes in 115,59,60, Tiberius, patro division, in accounting and removing, that the Italians finding themselves Orosium libs.

agricum harook themselves to Science Africance. He resulted from the Orosium libs. agrieved betook themselves to Scipio Africanus. He refused not to under- cap.to. rake their parronago, , yet in the Senate spake nothing against the Law; onely Florum lib.3. thought fit that the executive power thereof should be taken from the Trium. cap. 15. viri, and given to some others. The Senate most willingly did this, and conferred it on Sompronius Tuditanius the Conful, who finding the work troubleform, went his way under presence of the War in Illyrians. There being now none to flie to in this case, the people conceived great indignation against Scapio, asingrarefull, and favouring the Italians more than themselves, from which his Enemies rook occasion to raise further jealousies. Indeed hearing of Granchan! his death at Numantia by repeating a verse in * Homer he liked * Oς απόλοιτο wall of what was done to him, and being at his return asked concerning his & and 616 death, he approved of it before all the people, which being offended ar him 200000 20 for it, he rebuked the multitude with contumelious language. But at night isco. going to his Chamber, he meditated of fomerhing he intended to speak to the Odys. 1. people the day following, and in the morning was found dead in his bed, it's Sone Africanus undertain by what means. Cornelia the Mother of the Gracchi was suspected the younger to have joyned with her daughter his wire (who being not obtain for dieth fudden-neither loved him much nor was over much loved) in practizing fomeried privately, though to great a min, and one this hid been the pillar of the

10. The Postesfors of the grounds still made delayes in the division, and some thought that they to whom they were to be divided should in way of recompenie be made free of the Citie, which however pleafing to others, was highly displeasing to the Senate. While men muttered much of these things, C. Gravebus procured the Tribuneship, and then bearing a grudge to the Senate effectually shewed it. He preferred a Law for dividing of the the Tribunefing publick Corn to every man monethly, and getting his Office continued to him for another year, that he might gratifie the Equitor, brought down the Laws diffast. Office of judging corrupt Officers from the Schators unto them. Romulus, as we faid, inflictited three Centuries of Equitor of Flors men, whereof one from himfelf was named Rannenfis; another from Tieus Taties, Tatienfis; and the third from Lucanio (or Lucus) Lucetis. Under Romulus, and the Kings, they were also called Celeres, Flenumines and Troffull. Afterwards, Parquinius Profess added 300 more, and so there continued to be 600 Equitor. But though they were in the Commonwealth from the beginning, yet The Order and Aank of had they no peculiar order, authority, or rank, till this Law of Gracehus, by which it was enacted, that these judgements should be peculiar to them. Their Knights how, and when it reputation thence forward increased with various successe about the Publicans till Cicero's time, who boatting himfelf of this order, procured it fuch came up. honour, that from his Confulfamit came to be as a peculiar order in the State (before being included in the Plebeim, though it had a diffinction by way

The Allobrich

Affairs of Thrace very obfeure.

SECT. 4. of service) being added to the Senatorian and Plebeian; out of which refpect it was written after them both. Thus in feveral times were there feveral Ranks and diffinctions; the first distinction was betwixe Pairicians and Plebeianss then Plebeians wresting from the other a Communion in the greatest Offices and places, though Patricians might still be distinguished in reference to Families, yet all Dignities being common to the rest with them. fuch Plebesans as could rife to be Senators, constituted with the other the Senatorian rank (which included the Patritian, though the Patritian not it) thenceforth diffinct from the Plebeian which still contained the Equites. Then, as was faid, the Equites by the means of Gracehus and Cicero brake out from amongs? the Plebeians into a rank of their own.

11. By this Law (faith Florus) Gracehus so divided the people of Rome. that he made it double headed (bicipitem, which expression Varro also used. as appeareth from Nonins) and the Equites having the lives, and fortunes of Senators and Nobles in their hands, by feizing on the Revenue, with authority pilled the Commonwealth. He took the best time that could be devited for the making of the Law, because the Senators having had hitherto the power of judging, were become adjous of late, in that for money they had acquitted Aurelius Cotta, Salmator, and M. Aquilius, persons Capitally guilty of corruption. Its faid, he boafted, that by this Law he had cut the finews of the Senatorian rank. And so he did; for by the authority of iudicature they passed sentence upon Roman Citizens, Italians and Senators, nators loft in the translanoting them with ignominy, banishing, or putting them to death at pleasure, tion of the till such time as their power was abated, as will be seen. For in the Comitia.or to the Equites Assemblies, they conspired with the Tribunes, and obtaining thereby what they pleased, had all things in their power, and flourished with riches, whereby Caius. as nothing remained to Senators, but a vain shew of Dignity. The Senators prevailed with Servilius Capio when Conful, to make themselves partakers of the power of judging, by a Law which he got preferred; yet Hill had the Equites the better, for 200 Senators onely were added to them, who were in number 600. By the Laws of Livius Drusus, Sylla and Cotta their power was abated, Drusus making it but equal in judgement with that of Senators. Sylla transferred it wholely to the Senators, and Aurelius Cotta communicated the power of judging to three forts; viz. Senators, Equites, and the Tribuni Erarii. But the Equites alone were wont to farm the customes of the Cenfors for five years, and thence from their farming the Publick Revenue had the name of Publicans. These were the principal of the Equestrian order, whence so cale the Ornament of the Citie, and the strength of the State, who made so many Companies as there were Provinces subject to the payment of Toll, Tribute, Cuttom, or Impost. 12. But, C. Gracchus, further than this, to gratifie the Commons, repaired the high-wayes throughout Italy, fent forth Colonies, bade the Italians sue for their freedom, and gave power of suffrages to other Friends and Allies.

Caius attempt. contrary to the custom; whom the Senate forbad to come near the Cirie, eth other fe- at fuch time as they knew his Laws would be offered, and to please the dirious acts people, they gave way to the fending out of twelve Colonies. Gracebus thus frustrated, departed into Africk with Flaceus his Collegue, intending to plant a Colony where Carthage flood; but was disappointed therein also, Wolves, it's said, removing the bounds of the intended Citie by night, as they were laid by day, whereupon the Sooth-sayers pronounced the design unlawfull. Having been twice Tribune, he stood for it the third time, and had many voices; but his Collegues offended by his vehement carriage, got Minucius Rufus chosen into his place, who rescinded many of his Laws. Gracebus inraged hereat, when the Assembly was met, went up to the Capitol, accompanied with Flaceus and his friends privily Armed. There Anilius, the Crier of Opimius the Conful taking him by the hand, and defiring him to spare his own Countrey, was flain. He then went about to excuse the fact to the people, but could not be heard, and so together with Flaccus, and his other Confederates got them home, the Conful keeping strict watch all night in the 680 Citie. After this they were cited by the senate to come and give an ac- SECT.4. count of their actions, but they betook themselves to the Aventine Mount, where fortifying themselves, they offered in vain liberty to all flaves that would come in to them. But the Conful fending a party against them, Grac- A. M. 3884. chus fled into a grove beyond Tiber, and procured his slave to kill him, who 01.164.nan.4. instantly after he had cut off his head, run himself through with the bloody V.c. 631.

fword. Flaceus slving to a friends house was hetraved and slain and of their Ptol. Phys. 26. fword. Flaceus flying to a friends house was betrayed and slain : and of their Is destroyed party, through the severe inquisition of the Conful, were put to death 3coo with his parpersons, 11 years after the death of the elder Gracchus. In the Consulship of this Opimius was there such a temper of the air called Cottura, that wine being congealed through the heat of the Sun into a confifency of honey, kept good for near 200 years, and from him had the name of Vinum Opimianum, being fill preferved in Plinius (4) his time, though (b) Pateronlus denieth there (a) Plini, 14. was any in his, which was long before. 13. The death of Gracehus (whose head was not Sacrosanst, as Florus (b) Lib. 2.c.7. imagineth, being out of the Office of Tribane) for the present allayed the diftempers of the Commonwealth. For, presently after was a Liw made, that Lege Appianum any one might fell his Land, which the Elder Gracebus had forbidden, where- de bello civils pers of the by the poor, partly by purchase, & partly by constraint, were again dispossessed, lib.1. State fomething allayed' Afterward the Law for division was fully abrogated by Sp. Borcus, and the grounds left to their antient Owners, with this conditions that a Tribute out of them should be payed to the people, and this divided man by man. But not long after another Tribune abrogated the Tribute it felf, and so nothing was left remaining to the poor. 14. During these Domestick troubles the Sardinians rebelled, and were reduced by L. Aurelius, and the Fregellans were punished with the loss of Livis Epitom. their Citie by L. Opimim the Prator. Upon Africk fell fuch a Peffilence, lib.60. An horrid Pe- as for its Original, and effects, was strange and wonderfull. It arose from an Orosius lib. 5. Allence in A infinite number of Locusts, which having overspread the ground, and destroyed cap. 11. not onely Corn and other fruits, but even Trees and dry things themselves, at length by a wind were driven into the Mediterranean Sea, and there puttifying corrupted the air., Hence enfued a most fearfull plague, both of men, Carrel, and Fowls. In Numidia, where Micipfa was now King, 800000 died; upon the Sea-Coasts about Carthage and Utica 200000; and in Utica it felf 30000 Soldiers there lying in Garruson, 1500 being reported to have been carried out in one day through one Gare alone. Two years after, Allobrogicum; which hence arose. The Salies in Gall beyond the Alps in- Livil Epitom. vaded the Malilians, the friends of the people of Rome; and for this were libeo, 61. chiffized by Fulvius, and subdued by C. Sextius Calvinus. Tentomalus their Flores libs. King flying out of the battel, was received, and protected by the Allobroges, cap.2. who also invaded, the Adni friends of Rome, and drew into Confederacy the Arvernia, First, Ci. Domicius Anebarbus, overthrew them, and (by the use of Ejephants especially) slew 20000, and rook 3000 prisoners. After him Q. Fabini Maximus (Grandson of Paulus Emilius, by his son adopted into the Fabjan family) defeated them, with the Arverni and Ruteni, in a bloody battel, wherein 120000 are, reported to have been fluin, and taking Bituitus (or Botultus) King of the Arverni prisonet, obtained the firmame of Allebrogiens. These Allebroges unhabited about the Countreys now called Daulphine and Savoy : the Ruteni nearer to the Sea; the Arverni more toward the North; the Admi in Burgundy, and the Salois Cafar de bello or Salyes in Piemoni. Now was Gallia Narbonensis reduced into a Pro- Callico lib. .

Q. Meiellus the Conful flibdued the Islands Baleares , and restrained pyracy there maintained, and at the same time was carried on the War, called Bellum

15. But the Scordifei, a people of Gallish Original , inhibiting Thrace , de Livis epiton, feated the Roman Army under Cato the Conful, yet were afterwards driven 116,53, 55. feated the Koman Army under Caro the Comus, yet were accessing actives back into their own Countrey by Didius the Prator, and the Conful Drafus; Flows lib 3. cap. a. and after this gave occasion of a glorious Triumph to Minutine, of which ho- vellays libs. nour Mejellus also had partaken. These transactions of Thrace are of all caps. Tett

SECT. 4. others most unknown; either because they are confounded with those of Illyricum, Pannonia, Mysia, or Macedonia; or because what has been written of that subject in particular, hath miscaried. Now we arrive at two Wars both together, and carying noyfe sufficient with them through the variety of events, and fulnesse of history: viz. that with Jugartha, and the other with the Cimbri and Teutones. Now to know the Original of the former, it's necessary to fetch things a little higher. 16. Mafaniffa King of Numidia, that old and constant friend of the Romans, left three fons: Gulassa, Mastanabat, and Micipsa, of whom the

The original of the War with Jugurtha.

quereth all opposition,

last (his brothers being dead) obtained the Kingdom alone. He had two fons, Hiempfal and Adherbal, with whom he brought up Jugartha his brother Mastanabal's son in the same condition, and receiving letters from Scipio out of Spain, who gave him large commendations (and under whom he ferved with his Uncle's Auxiliary forces) he adopted him. When Micipfa Leve Sallult de was dead, Fugurtha murdered Hiempfat, and attempted to do as much for bello Jugar-Adherbal, who fled to the Romans for succour. By this time avarice and thino. injustice had so much possessed the City, that Jaguriba sensible of it, fent Ovosium t, s. Ambaffadors to Rome with full hands, who so wrought upon the Senate, that Florum 12.51. might overcame right, and it was decreed, that ten Commissioners should Livis Entom be fent to divide the Kingdom betwist them. The Commissioners thinking lib. 61,64,65. they might lawfully imitate those that fent them, were bribed to bestow the 66. richest and best Peopled part upon Jugartha, who therewith not satisfied, after their departure, fell fodainly upon Adherbal, befieged him in Cirtha, and at length getting him into his hands made him away. For this, War was at length decreed against him by the Senate, and committed to the management of L. Calpurnius Bestin the Conful, in the 643 year of the City, A. M. 1804. the second of the 167 Olympiad, the seventh of Piolomy Lathurus, the V.C. 643. 25 68 Joh. Hyrcanis, P. Cornelius Scipio Nafica, and the faid Calputnius being Confuls. 17. Calpurnius invaded Numidia with great flercenesse, and rook in some Towns, but was prefently stopped in his career, being allured with the golden balls of Inguriba; forhat a Treaty of Peace was fer on foot. The Senate was moved hereat, and at the power of M. Scaurm, who accompany-Ing the Conful as his friend and counfellor, was guilty of the same crime. The People was perswaded to send L. Cassins Longinus the Prator to setch Tuourthato Rome upon the publick faith, to discover his complices, whereof he had by gold procured many in the Senare it felf.' Caffins perswaded him to cast himself upon the Peoples mercy, and he came to the City in a mournpons he con. ing habit. But coming into the Assembly to do as he was commanded , Ba-Ins the Tribune bade him hold his, Peace, being also bribed to put off the businesse, and delude the People. At this time there was one Mastina the fon of Guluffa his coulin german at Rome, who when he had murdered Adherbal escaped out of Africk. Him Albinus the Consul, (who gladly would have had to do with Numidia) perswaded to beg the Kingdom of the Senate: but Inguirtha having some notice hereof, procured him to be killed, and conveyed away the murderer into Numidia. Hereupon within a few dayes he was commanded to be gone, and being out of the City, he looked back upon it, and uttered thefe words : O City that wouldest be fold if there was but a chapman for thee. This he faid, as having himself experience of > 18. Albimus followed him with an Army, and at first seemed to be very ambitious of finishing the War, before the creation of new Confuls. But upon some account he prolonged it, and his brother, by virtue of some compact, withdrew from Suthal, where the treasure of the Kingdom lay, when he was about to befrege it. The Centurions also were so corrupted, as Jugartha was suffered to break into the Camp, whence beating out the Army, he elcher fotced, or by former agreement, brought Albinus to submit thro most dishonourable terms. In this condition Metellus the following the corruption of it's Inhabitants; so horribly were they now degenerated from the fidelity and abstimence of the preceding age.

Conful found affairs and the Army spoiled for want of discipline. But bring Section ing the Soldiers into good order, within the space of two years he overthrew led by Metel- Jugurtha several times, outed him of several Towns, and chased him further than his own borders, which constrained him to submit and beg Peace : but the conditions thereof he brake, and the former hostility returned. Now was there one C. Marins, Legatus or Lieutenant to Metellus, who by his good demeanour won much upon the Soldiers, for being defirous of the Confulfhip, he took all wayes to purchase their favour. He calumniated Metellus privily to the Merchants at Mica, avowing that he was able with half of the Army, and that within a few dayes, to take Jugurtha. By these speeches Manius by un- he procured many complaints to be written to Rome against Metellus, and getting leave to go thither, obtained his defire, being created Conful, and had the management of the War committed to him, which now was even ended. Norwithstanding, the People was so grateful to Metellus, that at his return, being certified what he had done, they both granted him a Triumph, and bestowed on him the siriame of Numidicus.

Metellus perteth the Con-

19. This was the fourth Metellus, who from the Nation subdued obtained a firname. The first was Q. Cacilius Merellus firnamed Macedonicus, of whom we have formerly spoken. Much is faid of this man's * felicity, whereof this is chief, that when he died, he had, of four fons, feen three *Confule Val. Several of the Confuls, and the fourth Prator. Of these, the first was Q. Merellus firma Confule Val.

tained firnames from Countries conquered, med Balearicus from his subduing the Baleares, who was Consul in the 631 exemp. 1. year of the City : the second L. Metellus , who was Conful in the 635 year : Patercul. 1. 1. the third M. Merellus, Conful in the 639 year, the same wherein his father 6,11. died : and the fourth C. Metellus of Pratorian rank. But the third of this Ciceron, de Finame who obtained a firname was L. Cacilius Metellus, firnamed first Diadematus, because having an ulcer in his forehead, he kept it bound a long time. and afterwards Dalmaticus, from the Dalmatians whom he subdued to get him a Triumph; this People having nothing offended. He was fon to L. Com cilius Metellus Calvus, who was Conful in the 612 year. Laftly, the fourth thus firnamed was this Q. Cacilins Merellus Numidicus, who was Conful together with M. Junius Silanus in the 645 year of the City. 20. Marius after some time took the City Capsa a place very rich and Marius overthroweth Tuguitha and Bécchus,

Taketh 711-

strong, and after this another called Mulucha. Jugurtha finding himself too weak, drew in to his affiftance Bocchus King of Mauritiana his Father in Law, by the help of whose Horse he very much wearied the Roman Army. Coming to raise the siege at Cirta, before which Marius was sat down, what by the number of the Horse reported to be 60000, and what by heat and dust, the Romans were forely distressed, and the fight continued dangerous and terrible to them for three dayes. Then a Tempest of rain fell, which spoiled their Enemies weapons, and relieved Marius his men almost killed with thirst; and the course of fortune changing, the two Kings were defeated and fled. In another battel Marius, as it's faid, killed 9,000, after which Bocchus hegan to repent of his enterprize, and fent to Rome to enter into a League, which he could not procure, but obtained pardon of his fault. Not. long after, Marius took Jugartha in an ambush, whitherhe had drawn him by specious precences; and delivered him up to Sylla his Questor, who had brought oversome forces gathered in Italy ... Sylla having little or no skill in guitha who is matters of War before, under him got that skill, which afterwards he used umph and put against his General. Jugartha being sed in triumph by Marius with his two fons, was after, by order of the Senare put to death, and fo the Warte ended, after about seven years continuance. Numidia was not now made a Province, as some have thought; for we find other some Kings on which it was bestowed, viz. Hiempfal, Hiarban, and Juba, concerning whom we may have occasion to speak hereafter. Now is to be described the War with the Cimbri short bo21. The Gimbri inhabited the Chenfonelus from them mamed Cimbrica, chom (now Hoffatia) and were a vagabond Reople. Within forc of Germans 21. Called Toutopes (from Toute or Thisto the Patriarch, or reputed god of that Trre 2 nibus lib, 4.

SECT. 4. Nation) they brake into Illyricum in the 641 year of the City, and there put to flight Cn. Carbo the Conful, to whom that Province had fallen by lot. Some three years after, they made an irruption into Gall and Spain, but being repelled, fent to Silanns the Conful, desiring some ground wherein to plant Legs Floring and fettle themselves. This being denied by the Senate, they betook them- 13.63. and fettle themselves. This being denied by the Consul put him to flight, Livil spitm, selves from intreaties to force, and setting upon the Consul put him to flight, Livil spitm, selves from intreaties to force, and setting upon the Consul put him to flight, Livil spitm, selves from intreaties to force, and setting upon the Consul put him to flight, Livil spitm, selves from intreaties to force, and setting upon the Consul put him to flight, Livil spitm, selves from intreaties to force, and setting upon the Consul put him to flight, Livil spitm, selves from intreaties to force, and setting upon the Consul put him to flight, Livil spitm, selves from intreaties to force, and setting upon the Consul put him to flight, Livil spitm, selves from intreaties to force, and setting upon the Consul put him to flight, Livil spitm, selves from intreaties to force, and setting upon the Consul put him to flight, Livil spitm, selves from the Consul put him to flight, Livil spitm, selves from the Consul put him to flight, Livil spitm, selves from the Consul put him to flight, selves from the Consul put him to flight him t The occasion entertaining M. Scaurus fent against them into Gall in the same manner. 100.6 Scaurus was succeeded by the Conful L. Caffins Longinus, who pursuing the Orofina 1.5. with the cim-Tieurins (now Switzers) to the Ocean, was circumvented by them, and cale. bii by the flain, with L. P.fo. a man of Consular dignity , his Lieutenant. After him Patric, 12. Greeks called Capio the Conful made War upon the Teltofages or Tolofans, whose chief 6.13. Kipuleios. City Tolose (now in Gascoigne) he took, and therein a great treasure. which some said was taken out of the Temple at Delphos by the Galls. His command was continued to him for the following year, as Proconful, in coniunction with' Manilius (or Mallius) his Successor. These two could not agree, but divided the Army, and parted the Province betwire them. At length they were overthrown in a bloody battel by the Cimbri, to whom the Tentons, Tigurins, and Ambrones, another People of Gall joyned themfelves: 80000 men were flain, and 40000 lackies and drudges, as also both the Camps taken. Capio for this was cast into prison, where he died, these great defeats being charged upon his facrilege, of which those Galls that were guilty, were flill followed and confumed by one plague after another. After this, the Cimbri made another Expedition into Spain; bur being thence repelled by the Celuberians, returned into Gall, whence, with the Toutons and Ambrones, they resolved to passe over the Alpes into Italy. 22. C. Marins having vancquished Juguriba, was in his absence made Conful the second time, to manage the War against the Cimbri. Whilst they continued in Spain he waged War against their friends the Tolosans, whose King Copilus was taken by Sylla his Lieutenant. Being created Conful again the following year, he neglected to fight till their fury was abared. In his fourth

.. .

Confulship they were ready in three bands to passe over the Alpes, which he confidering, attended their motions. His Army was almost oppressed with thirst, the Teutons and Ambrones lying betwit it and the water, which made him desirous to ingage with them, and coming to fight, in two dayes he utterly destroyed them, taking prisoner Theusobocchus their King. The Cim-Which Marik bri escaped him and got over into Italy, though it was Winter, and the difparcheth. Alpes were covered with Snow, being in vain opposed by Catulus, both at the Alpes and the River Athesis near Verona. To Catulus did Marias joyn him. A. M. 3904.

felf now the fifth time Conful, for carying on the War, and being challenged V. c. 653. to give battel flew 140000, and took 60000. Their wives refilled, fighting from the Chariots, and when they faw all desperate, killed first their children and then themselves. The third band of the Tigurines came to nothing; and so an end was put to this War, on the third of the moneth Sextilis, as Plutarch writeth, after it had continued twelve years, in the 653 year of the City, C. Marins the fifth time, and M. Aquilins Wepos being 14 Mail. Confuls, the former whereof was counted the preserver of his Country, and contented himself with one Triumph. And his Collegue put an end to the fecond Servile War in Sicily, which now had lasted almost four years. 21. These dangers abroad did not suppresse domestick troubles. There was one. L. Apuleins Sammions, who having been Quafter at Offia during & Vide doing to dearth, was pur out of his place by the Senate, for which he conceived bello civili. It. The sedition great displeasure against it, and to shew it, procured the Tribuneship. By his Flor. 1, 2, 4, 6. of Saturnians, help especially Marins obtained the fourth Confull (hip. But afedr his year was Livil Epitom.

out, Mesellas Numidieus being Cenfor would have removed him from the 1.69.
Senate, but he was hindred by his Colleague; and to revenge this he flood Grafium 1.5. to be Tribune the found time. Now was Marine Conful the fifth time, and Velleum Pathere being nine of the en Tribunes choien, and A: Nonins flanding in com- terculum !. 2. perition with him; by the affiftance of Marins he murdred him; and got the 416.

place. Now being again in power, he preferred a Law for dividing SECT.4. of fuch Lands as Ma sur had recovered in Gall, and compelled the Senage to sweet to it, which Mosellus refusing to do, he fer him a day to answer it before the people; but for fear of him and Marins, Metellus fled to Smyrna. Saurmanns being Tribune the third time, and finding C. Memmins to fland for the Confilling; he also made him away to prefer Glancins the Prator, a man most addicted to his own party. At these things the Senate being startled took up resolution, and Marins now the fixth time Conful, feeing him in a falling condition, withdrew himfelf from his friendship. The Consuls were, as in dangerous times, impowered by the Senate to see that the Commonwealth received no damage. Marins therefore with his Collegue L. Valerius Flaceus, set upon Saturninus in the publick meeting place, and drove him and his followers into the Capitol, where for wint of water (Marins having cut the pipes) they were forced to yield. This they did upon his faith given for their fafety; for Sainrninus and Glancius much refied upon him, not sticking to give out that they were but the actors of his designs. Notwithstanding, they were killed in the Court-house by the A. M. 3905. He is flain Equites, which brake in amongst them; and Metellus, through the labout V. C. 614. with his comof his fon especially, was recalled, with the general applause of the peoplices.

24. For the space of about 8 years after, there was not any open Sedition; yet great diffatisfaction amongst those of the Senatorian order. For, it lay un- Lege Appian. der great grievances by reason of the power of Judicature, which was by Grac- de belle civili chus his Law brought down to the Equites, by whom they were cruelly, and lib.t. despightfully used, their lives, liberties, and estates being wholely in their Livis Epitom, the Publicant who lib. 1. power. The Commonwealth was even bought and fold, the Publicans, who Paterculum 1.2. farmed the customs, and publick revenues, being, as Equites, both Judges cap. 13, 14. and parties. It hapned that thirty years after Gracehus his Law, M. Livius Drufus the Tribune cast in his mind how to restore the Fathers to their and

dy. But herewith neither party was farlsfied. Not the Senators, because they disdained that the other should be equal to them, and neither the Equites, for Equites, irilarthat they feared the power would at length be wholy removed from them. Capio also one of Drussis his Collegues (not that Capio, as some mistake, who having been formerly Conful had proposed such a Law, which took not, he himfelf being condemned, and dying in prison as was faid) opposed him, and coming into the Senate, there accused some of the chief of unlawfull seeking for Offices. Drufus to withfland his indeavours, by the favour of the people proposed again the Agrarian Law, and that the Allies and Confederates of Italy, now Possessor of the Lands, might not be aggrieved, he gave them hopes to make them free of the Citie. Great concourse there was, and as great contention. Q. Marcins Philippus the Conful opposed the Law for division of Lands, and for that was foundly buffetted by a Traveller. Drufiss in this particular disappointed, fill bont his mind how to make good what he had offered to the Italians; but going home accompanied with a great multitude, he was flabbed in the Court of his own house, its unknown by whom, the knife being left in his body, and died within a few hours. He was a man excellently accomplished, both with understanding and tient power, and yet not offend the Equites. He preferred therefore a Law, that because the Senators were reduced to a small number, as many Equites bouring to re- should be added to them, and the power of Judicature committed to this bo-

And is flab.

Drufus the Tribune la-

Fathers, and

geth the breach.

was in that great and dangerous War, which by his mean's (though not inten-olding a con 2. tious) was kindled, and which being foreseen or feared, might perhaps have no V, c. 663. fmall influence into his death. 25. This War is called by divers names. Sometimes Bellum Sociale, because of the Associates of the People of Ropps, who managed it ; formetimes Bellum Marsicum, from the Mars who began it, and otherwhiles Bellum

Italisum, from Italy the feat of it, Corfinium a Citie of the Peligni, being morals, whose good intentions had not the fortune to be rightly understood by the great ories, but to diffatisfie all parties. And ftill more unfortunate he A.M. 3914.

The occasion of the focial War.

before all others chosen for the place of the conspiracy. The occasion of it Strabe like was the disdain conceived by the Italians, because they were not admitted to Velleins lib. the freedom of the Citie, which had been partly promifed them 36 years be- cap. 15, 16,19 fore by Flaceus the Conful, who being earnest for it, was diverted into Gall Cicero pro Arby the Senate, and afterwards joyned himself in the Tribuneship with the Appears to younger Gracehas, to no purpose endeavouring with him the passing of it; pla with whom also as is formerly shewn he lost his life. Now again, their expectation was heightned by Drufus; but then was he murdered, and all the great ones banished who stood for them, by a Law which the Equites by force of Arms obtained, who hoped that having the power of Judicature in themselves, the profit would be great which would arise in ridding away their Enemies. They also thought they had reason enough to expect this privilege from that Citie, which was maintained both in its subsistence and Empire by their valour, they ever fending out forces double in number to those of the Romans. Upon these grounds they resolved to procure by force what could not be by fair means obtained, fending Meslages to and fro, and for the performance of what was agreed on, receiving Hostages from one another. 26. This being known late enough at Rome, so busied with its private feditious contests, Spies were sent out into the several quarters. One of them feeing a young man of Asculum carried into another Cirie as an Hostage, therewith acquainted Servilins the Proconful, who going to Asculum and chiding the Citizens, was fet upon and flain, together with all the Romans. After this, the Conspiracy being quite discovered, all broke out into open Rebellion : the Marsi, Peligni, Vestini, Marrucini, Ferentani, Hirpini, Picentes, Pompeiani, Venu fini, Apulians, Lucanians, and the old Enemies of the Romans, the Samnites. They thought good first to send to Rome to complain; but the Messengers could not be admitted without repentance for what was already done. Hereupon the War vvas committed to both the Preparations

Confuls, L. Tulius Cafar, and P. Rusilius Lupus, to vvhom vvere added

Cn. Pompeius Strabo (father to Pompey the Great) C. Marins, vyho had been fix times Conful, L. Sylla, Licinius Craffus, C. Perpenna, Q. Capio, Q. Me-tell . s Pous (son to the Numidian) M. Marcellus, Val. Meffala, and T. Di-blows.

The Romans

for it.

ains, who were all fent with Proconsular power. The forces on either side amounted to 100000 fighting men. Rutilius the Conful quickly toft his life. falling into an ambush laid for him by the Marsi, and many other blows did the Romans receive; so that they were forced to list such as once had receive many been flaves. The bodies of the Conful, and those of several others being carried into the Citie, the fight of them so discouraged the people, that the Senate made a decree, that thenceforth the flain should be buried where they died, which as a prudent example was followed by the Enemy. 27. None succeeded Rutilias all the year, for that Casar could not come to a new Election, but his Army was committed to Marius his Lieutenant, and Q. Capio. Capio vvas killed not long after, being intrapped by Popedins one of the Italian Generals. Marius now alone commanding the forces, did good service, as did also Sylla. For the following year, Cn. Pompeins Strabo, and L. Porcius Cato vvere made Confuls. Now the Senate thought fir to make such Italians free of the Citie as had not revolted, which thing established those, who something wavered in their minds, and took off the courage of the other already ingaged ! Yet they chose them not into any of the 35 Tribes, but placed them by themselves behind all; so that as in voting they could not hinder the rest, so seldom vyere they called to vote at all, which afterwards confidered, though not at prefent, vyrought fome diflurbance. Carp the Conful did very good service, but thereof boasted so much, that he compared himself to Marsus, for which, as he was fighting against the Marks he was killed in a croud by Marins his son. Pompey overthrew the Picentes and Afrelani. Having long besieged Afrelum, he defeated the Enemy which fallied forth, killed 18000 of the Marsi, took 3000, and being got into Afoulum, caused all the Officers and principal men to be beaten with Rods, and then beheaded. Silla his Successor in SECT.5. the Confulfup. overthrew the Sammites, and formed two of their Camps, by vyhich fuccesse elevated, he vyent, stood for, and carried that greatest Office. A. M. 3917. This War vvas ended by him after it had endured above two years, in the 666 Ol. 173.447.1. Silla endeth year of the Citie, he the faid 4. Gornelius Sylla, and Q. Pempeius Rufus being V.C. 666. 28. What the Italians could not get with armed hand, was given them Conquered; at first to all, except the Lucanians and Sammies, and shortly after to them also, but ranked by themselves in the same manner as the former. Not long after this, which was a kind of Civil War, there were ftirs in freedom of the the Citie about Usury, which being rigorously exacted by the Creditors, Afel-Citie is given Linthe Praton, who withstood it, was murdered by them. Yet hitherto these Sadirions in the Citie were managed but by private persons, or in a private quered Itamanner, but now came in to that passe, that the heads of the factions got hans, having whole Armies to themselves, and carried on their interests in open War one been before against another, their own Countrey being as the prize and reward of the this denied to victory, fuch were the manners and behaviour of those who through the infirmity of the Government were not able to bear that greatnesse of fortune, which from the comperance and moderation of their fathers had descended upon them. But an occasion to the first Civil War was ministred by that with Mithridates, which begin ere the Social or Italian ended,

SECT. V.

From the War with Mithridates, and first Civil War, to the combinanation of Pompey, Crassus, and Casar, termed by Varro Tricipitina, which proved the ruin of the Popular Government, for the space for 28 years.

1. A libridates was King of Pontus (a Country of Affa, to called because Julin lib. 37.

VI it lieth upon the Euxure Sea) thought by fome to have been descend- Strabo lib. 10.

Mibridates King of Pond

His vaft dea

figns and great attempts,

the War.

ed from one of the feven Perfiant, who conspired against the Magi that had usurped after the death of Cambifes. He was straamed Enpaior and Dionyfur, being a man of a wast mind and ambicious spirit. Succeeding his fa- estemnon apud ther, who was a friend of the people of Rome, at thirteen years of age, within Photium. two years he made away his mother, who was left partner with him in the Kingdom, and after her his brother also, and in his youth he subdued the Kings about Phasis beyond Caucajus. Thirty years after his coming to the Kingdom, be thought of no leffe than the Empire of Afa, the Romans, as he fancied, being now sufficiently imployed in the Cimbrian and Italian Wars. He began with Paphlagonia, pareing it betwite himself and Nico- Strabolib. 12. medes King of Birbynia, and being checked for this by the Romans, and commanded to defift, he precended it was his fathers inhefigance, and to amend the matter he seized on Galatia too. Then casting his eye upon Cappadocia, he caused to be murthered Ariarabes King thereof, and his sisters husband, and when the married to Nicomedes he drove out his forces, and pretended to seize upon it for the use of her son, whom then he mirdered also, and beflowed it on one of his own fons. The Cappadecians refuled to goey him, and called our of Afa Ariarathes one of their former King's fons; but him did Misbridates drive away, and he horrly after died! Nicomedes afterwards procured one to counterfeit himfelf the brother of Ariarathes , and bag the Kingdom of the people of Rome ; and he fent his wife thither to aver that the had three fons by Ariarathes. Mishridates hereupon fent one to the Senate to affirm, that he whom he had placed in Cappadoia was also the fon

The Senate oterpoleth.

2. The Schare knowing well the aim of both, took from Mithridates of Ariarathes.

Cappa-

Cappadocia; and Paphlagonia from Nicomedes, who had got it into his hands. SECT. S. and left thefe two Kingdoms to their own liberty. But the Cappadocians protested that they could not live without a King, and being therefore allowed to chuse one from amongst themselves, made choice of one Ariobarzanes Mithridates forely repining to be thus overruled, procured Tigranes the King of Armenia and his fon in Law to be an Enemy to the Romans, and perfivaded him to expel Ariobarzanes, whilst he did as much by young Nicomedes. who now had succeeded his dead Father. Both of these Princes fled to Rome for relief, which was decreed them, and Commissioners were appointed to re-establish them, whereof Manius Aquilius was chief. This being performed, they perswaded both the Kings to invade Mithridates. Nicomedes did it, though unwillingly, whilft Mithridates opposed him not, that he might have an advantage against him; onely he fent Pelopidas to the Commissioners to complain of him. They considering that Mubridates was a powerful Prince, returned this answer, that they did neither like that he should molest Nicomedes, nor Nicomedes him; for the former was not convenient for the Roman Commonwealth. He nothing moved with this answer, reinvaded Cappadocia, fending Pelopidus back with a bold exposulation. They hereupon raifed a confiderable Army against him on their own heads, without any decree of Senate or People. Nicomedes ingaging first of all with him was put to flight, though Mithridates his main body never ingaged, and next after him Manius was discomfitted. Then feized Mithridates upon Bithynia, Phrygia, Misia, Lycia, Pamphylia, and other Provinces, as far as many Countrics.

And restored the Kings he had cast out.

Ionia. He took also Q. Oppius and Aquilius, the later whereof he killed by melted gold poured into his mouth, being ever wont to upbraid the Romans with avarice and corruption. 3. The Romans hereupon decreed a War against him, though they were A. M.3011. now imployed in the Italian; and L. Cornelius Sylla and Q. Pompeius Ru- 01, 173, and Sylla hath the fus being Confuls, it fell by lot unto the former. But whilft he was yet im- V. c.666. charge of the ployed in finishing the Italian War about Nola, C. Marius, who had been Selentidats.

War decreed fix times Conful, either moved by a defire of profit or of glory, perswaded P. Sulpitius Tribune of the People to prefer a law for transferring the command against Mithridates to himself. He drew the People of Italy to his privilege with the reft, which were distributed into 35 tribes; so that the thing was caried on by frong hand, and Pompey's fon, the fon in law of Syl- Patental. 1. s. la, was killed in the heat of contention. Sylla hearing of this, hasted to cap, 17, 60. the City, eafily perswading his Army to any thing, for that his Soldiers were Plutare in unwilling that any other should go that Expedition, from which they promised themselves so great matters. To him his Collegue Pompey joyned, 1.77. and though Marius and the Tribune made all opposition possible, with some difficulty they entred the City, and Marius with his complices betook themselves to their heels. Sylla suffered no harm to be done to the Citizens, but

Which Mariu feeking unjustly, in dri- reversed what Sulpitius had done, regulated the Senate, and procured Maven from the rius, with Sulpitius, and ten others, to be declared Enemies to their Coun-City and detry, whom it might be lawful for any to kill, and unlawful to harbour; their clared an Enemy.

goods also being fer to fale. 4. Sulpitius was found and put to death. Marius hid himself in the fens of Minturnum, and being discovered, a Gall was sent to kill him, but could not do it, he was so dashed at his presence; so that being conveyed out of that place, he escaped into Africk. To him Cethegus and others, who had fled into Numidia, joyned themselves, expecting an opportunity to invade their own Country. Pompey the Conful, to fecure Italy, was appointed to receive the Army of Cn. Pemper, who had done fuch good fervice in the Marfian War; but the Soldiers unwilling to leave their old General J who also took it heavily, made away the Conful. For the year following L. Cornelius Cinna and C. Octavins were Confuts, whereof Cinna as some think corrupted, was altogether for the new Denisons, and recalled Marins with the rest of the Exiles; but he was driven away by his Collegue, and L. Merula was put in his place. He then going about to the Italian Cities, by giving them fresh SECT. 5. hopes of equal privilege, and pretending that he suffered these things for their fakes, got much money. Marius also coming over to him, they raised a confiderable Army, wherewith Cinna fate down before the City. Marius took Hostia by force, and Cinna being not able to do any thing at Rome . stormed Recalled by Ariminum. The Confuls, for that they could not recall Sylla, fent for Metellus then lying in Summiam, but he differing with them about some condirions, had them granted by Marius, to whom then he joyned himself. In the mean while the City it felf was near being betrayed to Marius by Appins Claudius a Tribane of the Army, who being intrusted with the Janiculum, thus required him for former kindnesse. Though he and Cinna brake in , they were repelled by Ottaviu, and C. Pemper the Proconful, who shortly after was killed with a Thunder-bolt. Marius after this took in several Towns about Rome where provisions lay, and Cinna by promise of liberty, drew many slaves out of the City, which the Senate understanding, lest the People should make disturbance within. fent to him about an agreement. He refused to admit of any addresse made to him as a private man, so that they were forced to treat with him as Conful, and defired he would swear to abstain from blood. This he flatly refuled to do; but promised, that wittingly and willingly he would not be the

Getteth into

Dieth.

Mithridates

Italians and €inna.

cause of any mans death; so he was received, and the Law abrogated for banishing Marius and his affociates. Upon their entrance began plundering and flaughters in Il places. Offavins, though having the oath both of Cinna there cruelly and Marins, refusing to flye from his charge, was killed, and his head fer upon tight with conditions the Rostra, to which was afterwards added that of Antonius (Grand-father to the Trimmvir) an excellent Orator, who for a good space defended himfelf by his eloquence from the Soldiers, and feveral others. None were foared, either for dignity, worth, or age. The dead bodies, being mangled and abused otherwise, were left to be torn in pieces by dogs and fowls, none daring to bury them. All Sylla's friends were killed, his house defaced, and his goods pur to fale, he being judged and declared an Enemy, Merula, though he never fought the Confulfhip, but had it put upon him, and Casulus, having their dayes fer them to answer, destroyed themselves. 6. Cinna and Marius having thus fatisfied their bloody minds, made themfelves Confuls for the following year: But Marins died ere the moneths end, having born this Office now feven times; a min more profitable to his Country in the time of War than of Peice. To him succeeded Valerins Flacens, whom Ginna fent into Afia, to supply the room of Sylla there. But he by this time had done the work, and was coming home to revenge the former injuries, having subdued Mubridates in lesse than three years, killed 160000 of his men, recovered Grecce, Macedonia, Ionia, Alia, and other Countries, which he had got into his hands, taken his Navy from him, and forced him to be content with his own inheritance. These things are to be declared in 7. After Mithridaies had taken Aquilius with the rest, and seized upon Asia A. M. 3917.

and other Countries (whilft Sylla was at Rome, feeling things there against Ma-rius and his faction, as is before shewed) he sent his letters abroad into all the Cities of Afia, willing them at one day prefixed, to kill all Italians and Romans, with their wives and children, and cast them our unburied; then to suleth 80000 feize on their effices, taking one part to themselves, and reserving the other for his use. This was accordingly done, and 80000 according to some; Valer Max.1.9, according to others 150000 perished in one day. Then went he into the 3. Ext. exemp. Island Cous, where getting great treasure into his hands, there laid up by Planarch in one of the Cleopatraes, he departed to Rhoder, and all manner of waies at - Sylla, tempted to take the City, though without successe; such was the constancy and fidelity of the Rhodians towards the Romans, amongst other confederates which univerfally revolted. Then fent he Archelaus his General into Greece, leaving Pelopidas in Lycia to carry on the War there, he himself providing Forces, and punishing such as he found inclinable towards the Romans.

8. Archelans first recovered Delos, which from the Athenians had revol-SECT. S. ted to the Romans, then joyned he to himself the Achaians, Lacademoniads, and Bostians. After this he was fought by Britisms, who had put to flight Metrophanes fent also into Greece from the King; but having fresh in Greece.

Supplies, Brittins withdrew himself to the Pirans, or Haven of Athens, which shortly after Archelaus took in with his Fleet. Now Sylla arrived in Sylla arriving Greece with five Legions and some Companies of Horse, and having furnish- in Millimedati- cit, & Phylands

ed himself with money and provisions in Leolia and Theffaly, marched into in Sylla

Attita against Archelaus, almost whole Baosia, with Thebes the chief City. revolting to him in his passage. He besieged Archelam in the Piram a very strong place, as fenced with a wall almost 40 cubits high, consisting of square Stones, and built by Perioles during the first motions of the Peloponne fian War. Having also besieged Athens it self, he spent the whole Summer in the siege, and at length took it, the Inhabitants being unable to make any more refistance through famine, which so far prevailed, as they made meat of sodden

Taketh Athens lether, and fed upon the bodies of dead men. The Pirans was also shortly and the Piraus after taken, and the walls thereof demolished, with the Arcenal, and all the raand over rities therein were destroyed. Then Sylla followed Archelanu through Bassia, throws Arche-and South with him and south throws Arche and fought with him near Cheronea, in a place fo straight, that no way heing General once, open for flight, he slew so many, that of 120000 not many more than 10000 remained, this being an Army fent over by the King out of his new Provinces. 9. Methridates put divers Princes of his newly conquered Provinces to death, for fear they should kill or betray him, by which cruelry he lost all Gallogracia. Ephesius also, and other towns revolted from him, whereof fuch as he recovered he used cruelly, and afterwards fearing a general defecti- Appliant lane.

on, to purchase favour he set the Greek Cities at liberty. Some that conspired Orofins lie. 6. his death were discovered, and upon suspicion were 1600 men made away. cap. 2. Then fent he another supply to Archelans of 80000 men, which with the Floris 1,3,6,5. other 10000 remaining of the former Army, were routed by Sylla near Orchomenes, and about 15000 being flain, the rest betaking themselves to their

Camp were also killed or taken, a vast slaughter having been made. Arche-And again! lans having loft his fon Diogenes hid himself in a fen, and thence fled to Chalcis once more. After this Sylla chastized the Baotians for their ficklenesse (for they would stand to neither party long) and took up his Winter quarters in Theffaly, providing himself of shipping, because he heard nothing of Lucullus, whom he had fent into Egypt to procure a Navy. Now at this time was Flacens, who had succeeded Marius, sent into Asia by Cinna to succeed Sylla. Him Fimbria his Quastor killed in a quarrel about lodging, being hated by his Soldiers, and he headed his Army, with which he feveral times fought, and that prosperously, against Mithridates his son, and drove the King himself into Pergamus, and thence to Pisane, where he took ship and fled to Mitylene, and might have been taken if Lucullus would. Then did Fimbria haraze Cappadocia, and burnt Ilium the daughter of Troy, for that the Inhabitants had given up themselves to Sylla, and not to him; so that though a Roman and so akin to them, he is faid to have used them worse than did Agamemnon himself. This hapned to Ilium in the later end of the 173 Olympiad, about 1050 years after the first taking it by the Greeks.

10. Mithridates receiving intelligence of the blow he had received at Orchomenus, wrote to Archelaus, to procure his peace on as good terms as he could. To a Peace Sylla was not now averse, being in great want of mony, and receiving no recruits from the City, where he was declared an Enemy, and defiring above all things to carry back a good Army into Italy to revenge himself. He offered Peace therefore on these conditions: That he should deliver up all his Navy, all fugitives and Captives, restore the Inha- A. M. 3921.

Forceth Mibitants of Chios, and others whom he had carled into Pontus, remove his 01. 174.451. thridates to garrifons from all places whither be bad brought them fince the breach of V. C. 690. beg Peace. garrejons from all places whither we was orong ht them fine the breach of Selevid. 219. the Peace, pay all the charges of the War, and be content with his Father's L. Co. Come 4. Kingdom. All these conditions were agreed to save parting with Paphlago- ca. Papirio Care nia, but the Ambassadors saying they could have had better certif of Fimbria bone a Cos. drove drove Sylla into a great displeasure; with a comparison so odious to him. SECT-5. Shortly after Michridates himfelf met him, and found him fo refolute, as he gladly accepted all the terms. So ended the first War with Mithridates, being concluded by Sylla three years after his coming into Greece.

Tr. Sylla required of Fimbria the Army to be deliverd up to him, as held by no authority; but was answered, as having as little himself. Yet the Appian.

Army denied to fight against that of Sylla, and forfook Fimbria; who Plutarch in thereupon sent a Slave to murder Sylla, which was discovered. He beg- Sylla, ribble's Ar ged pardon; and it was granted him, so he would take ship and depart out of Afia; but he faid, he had a better way, and going to Pergamus there's destroyed himself. Silla gave him to be buried, saving, he would not imitate the barbarism of Marius and Cinna towards his friends at Rome. whom they deprived both of life and burial; yet he kept in this mind but a while after his arival there, whither he now hafted, having fined Alia grievoully for it's revolt, and setled affaires according to present occasions. He He marcheth took Athens in his way, whence he caried with him the Library of Apellscon the Teian (in which were most of the Books of Aristotle and Theophrafins, then not vulgarly known) bought by him of the posterity of Nelena, to whom Theophrastus had given it. He wrote to the Senate, to which he recounted all the great fervices he had done, and then how he had been rewarded By the party of Marius, telling them plainly, he would come and revenge both himself and the Publick, by punishing the authors of the injuries, not medling with any other, either old or new Citizens. The Senate hereat affrighted fent to treat with him, offering their indeavour for his fatisfaction. if he would presently make known his mind. Cinna they ordered to stop his leavies; but he onely returned them a plaufible answer, and proceeded, defigning himself and his Collegue Carbo Consuls again for the following year, that there might be no need of going to Rome to a nevy creation. He paffed over some of his forces into Dalmatia, there to fight Sylla; but the hindermost overe driven back by a tempest, and they refused absolutely to fight against their Country-men; forthat those, who as yet had not passed the Sea. refused to go aboard. Hereupon he going to speak with them, an Officer who made way before him ftruck one of them, who ftruck him again, for which offence he commanding him to be laid hold on, a tumult arose, wherein he himself vvas ran through, and so perished in his fourth Consulship, and the 670 year of the City, a man vvorthier to have died by command of the Conquereur than the fury of the Soldiers, Carbo then continued Conful alone all the remaining part of the year.

cured War to be decreed against him, before the Senate was affrighted into the offer of a mediation. He answered, that he would never be reconciled to fuch wicked persons, as they defired he should; but if the People of Rome would give them indemnity he should not oppose it; yet he thought those that would come to him might be mole fafe, feeing he had at his devotion fuch an Army. Hereby declaring fufficiently what his intentions were, he also demanded restitution of his estate, his antient dignity and honours; but the messengers coming to Brundussium, and there hearing of Cinna's death, and the disturbance of the Commonwealth, returned back to him. Then croffed he the Sea to Brundu sum with a Fleet of 1600 ships, and 60000 men. Being landed, Merellus Pius, who had absented himself from Rome for fear of Marin and Cinua, came to him, as also Pompey, afterwards firnamed the Great, who though his father was no friend to Sylla, yet coming now to him with some forces, became afterwards his greatest favourite. Besides these came Cethegus, who having joyned with Cinna now begged pardon. C. Norbanus and L. Scipio the Confuls, with Carbo, made all preparation for refistance. The first tryal at arms was at Canusium, where Norbanus lost 6000 men, and fled to Capua. Scipio through the treachery of his Army, came With his fon into the power of Sylla, who dismissed them both. After this Sulla fent to Norbanus to treat of Peace; but (perhaps) being not thought ferious, had no answer returned back.

12. Cinna and Carbo had by a Lavv abrogated Sylla's command, and pro-

Defeateth Norbanus.

Landeth at Britidufium ,

for Italy against his Enemies

there.

13. He then passed on in Italy, making havocked all things, as Carbo did, A. M. 39221 SECT.5. who getting into Rome, procured Merellus and the rest that joyned with Sylla to be declared Enemies to the State. Both parties fent up and down the Italian Cities, labouring both by fair means and fowl to procure forces: and to all this Summer was frent, wherein the Capitol was burnt none knoweth how. For the following year Papirius Carbo the third time, and Marius, fon (but adoptive as most probable) to the old one, were Consults the later being but 27 years old. In the Spring was Carina the Lieutenant of Carbo A. M. 2012 overthrown by Marellus, and Marius himself by Sylla, and beaten into Pra- olymp, 174. meste, where being close besieged, and despairing of his own fafery, he wrote and to Bruthe, then Preser at Rome, that he should under some pretext call to- V.C. 672. gether the Senate, and kill those his Enemies : P. Antifhine another Carbo. L. Domitius, and Aductus Sequolathe High-Prieft, which was with cruelty enough performed. Metally by his time having overthrown another Army of Carbo's, Pampey defeated Marcinianother of that party , Sulla mar-Entreth Rome, ched to Rome, which he casily entred many of the opposite faction being fled. Their goods he facto fale, and willing the people to be of good chear, for that he was ascessificated thus to act, he left a sufficient Garrison, and departed to Cluffum, where he and his Officers feveral times overthrew Carbo's Armies. Carbo fant to Pranche to relieve Marius his Collegue eight Legions, which Pompey meeting in a straight place slew many of them, and most of those that escaped departed to their own homes. After this, Carbo and Norbann, in a fight with Metelly, had 10000 of their men flain, and 6000 yielded whereupon many fell off to Sylla's party, as also all Gall within the Alps. Norbanns fled to Rhodes, where fearing to be given up he killed himselfs Carboingo Africk, though he had apoon men at Classum and other forces, which were then broken in pieces by Pompey. Carinas, with other Commanders attempted to break through, by the help of the Samuites, and it felf. 14. A bloody battel was fought at the Gates, where many thousands were Gain on both fides. Yet Sulla had the better. Carinas and Maroiss were taken, and their heads fent to Pranelto to be shewed to the Inhabitants . at tyhich fight understanding how things had passed they yielded up the Town to Lucullus, and Marine killed himself, whose head was fet up in the pleading place at Rome. All his faction in Praneste were put to death, and all the Natives with the Samnites; the Romans onely with the Women and Children were spared, who lost all they had, the Town (the richest at that time of all others) being plundred. Norba a little after was taken, and burnt to the ground by a fire which the Inhabitants kindled over their own relieve Marius: but this being with no effect, they made then for Rome

Getreth all Italy into his DOMCL.

what fury and revenge backed with power are able to do. 15. Having sent Pompey into Africk against Carbo, and given him 2 Lege Appiar de charge thence to passe into Sicily against others of that party, he called the bello civiliant people together, and told them that he would put them into a better con-Plutarth.in dition if they would obey his commands, but he was refolved to profecure patricul. 12. his Enemies with all forts of calamities. So he did in a larger measure Valerium Mar. than any before him. He put to death 8000 together in the Villa publica, lib.9. c.2. a large house in the Campus Martins made for the reception of the Ambassa- Exemp. 1.

heads, some one way, and some another destroying themselves. So came Italy into the power of Sylla, who in the improvement of his victory shewed Publisheth Scription.

dors of Enemies; and liberty was given to his Soldiers to kill all they met, 6,21, till Fur fidum putting him in mind that he ought to leave some to reign over; Orollism liks. he then first of any man published Tables of proscription, wherein were cap. 20, 21. Tables of pro- proferibed first of all 80 Senators, and 1600 Equites, to which he after- Livii spilom. wards added more, promising two Talents to those that should discover 1.89. them, and threatned such as by whom they were harboured or concealed. Of those outlawed persons some were slain in their houses, others killed in the streets, and others profirate at his feet; those that fled their goods were seized on. Maries a man of Consular dignity, and brother to

And rageth cruelly both against Perfons and Ci-

and dieth

Stella's group Enemy, had at the Sepulcher of Catalan his eyes first pul- Sect. 5. led out of his head, and then his hands and legs cut off at feveral times, that he might die by degrees, But not onely against private persons, but Cities allo slid has rage, whereof forme, after the Inhabitants were fold, he caufed to be demalified. Many were thined out of their pollations which were given to his Creatities. Repress drave Carbo with Sicily, and thence into Capaira, whore being taken and brought to him, after he had inveighed against him in an assembly, he caused his head to be cut off, and sent it to 16. Both the Confull being now defloayed, Salla withdrew himfelf out

. 2 4 of the Citie, and willed the Senare to create an Inter-rew, which they willingly did hoping they should have a new election of Confuls, and named Kalering Flagene. He then wrote to him to ask the people, that feaing the necessity of affairs required to great an Officer, a Diffair might be created, and that not far any limited time, but till all evils should be redressed : and now he spared not to mantion himself. This the people was forced to He maketh himfelf Diaze yield to, as being in his power, and for this Office which for the space of 120 years (ever fince the years after Hannian's quitting of fant) had been intermirrord, was confurred on him without any limitation of time, A gilded Statue on horf-back was arected to his memory, near the Rofers, with this infeription, To b, Carneling Anlia the bappy General : for he would be called

Failin, and sometime Aphradius or beautifull. This hapned in the third year of the 174 Olympied, the 672 year of the Citie, 80 hefore the birth of Christ. 17. That a show of the Commonwealth might remain, he permitted Confuls to be made, which were M. Tulling Decula, and Ca. Cornelius Delabella; yes did he plainly reign alone; having a4 Axes carried before, as the Kings, in old time, with a great Guard continually at his heels, abrogaring old Laws, and ansating new at his pleasure. He regulated the Confuling, A. M. 3926.

ordering that none should be capable of it without passing first through other olars and the Offices. He overthrew the Tribute ship, by making those that bore it incapable V.C. 474. His actions of any other truft. To the Senate he added 300 out of the Equites, to the while fuch. people 10000 out of the flaves of the profcribed, making them free, and calling them after himself Cornelii ; and to 23 Legions he assigned much Land in Italy to oblige them to him. For the following year he gave way to have A. M. 3926. Confuls alfo, but joyned himfelf wieft Q. Caeiling Metellys , which course V. C. 675. the Emperaurs afterwards imitated. The year after, when the people to please him designed him Consul again, he waved it, and created Sarvilius Isaurious and Appius Claudius Pulcher; and then, to the altonishment of all men, laid down his Diftasonship, and though he had done such He layeth down his and so many horrid things, yet offered to give an account of his actibonct. 18. None accused him except one young man, whose reviling language made him fay, that this for the time to come would keep any one from laying down such Supream power; which Casar indeed seemsth to have been awar of. Not long after he went into the Countrey, where minding nothing but his pleasure, he not long after died at Passoli of the Lowsie disease, his body being purrified, and all turned into Lice, as Platarch writerh. And this was the end of L. Cornelius Sylla, a man born of the noble family of the Cornelli (which of lare had been Eclypfed through the lazineffe of his Anceftors) being the fixth in descent from Cornalius Rufinus, one of the most emi- A. M. 3027. nent Captains in the War with Pyrrbut. As his life was pernitious to his V. C. 636. Countrey; so his death also brought trouble to it, the two Consuls and their factions falling our about the honour which was to be given to him at his fubusine the neval. Caulius prevailed against Lipidus, and he was carried in great State Confuls about through the Cirie, and first of any of his family was burned, being fearfull, haburial, and as Cicero thought, left he himfelf should be dealt with as he had used Marius, tonfirmation whose bones he had caused to be digged up and thrown away. After the suneral, the Confuls fell into a greater differtion. Lapidus would reftore the grounds

SECT. 5. grounds given away by Sylla, and abolish his Laws. The Senate was fearfull of another War, and caused them both to swear that they would not decide the controversie by the sword; but Lepidus was resolved not to return out of his Province, till the new Creation was over, and when he should be out of his Office begin a War, as then discharged from his Oath. Hereupon the Senare sent for him, and when he came he would have brought his forces into the Citie, but being opposed by Cainlur and Pompey, a fight insued, wherein he had the worft, and then fled into Sardinia, where he died the same year

19. The Civil diffentions died not with him; for, though Pompey had fup- Livil Epitom pressed Carbo in Sicily, M. Bruins in Gall, Cn. Domisius and Hierba King fib. 9. of Numidia in Africk, who were preparing for War, (and for this triumphed, being neither Conful nor Preser; and scarcely 26 years of age;) yet a more dangerous War was now depending, railed in Spain by Q. Sertorius. This man being one of Cinna's faction, joyned with Carbo against Sylla, and Sertorius rifeth in Spain.

having taken Sueffa, thence passed into Spain, which fell to him by lot as Praior. Thence he drove out fuch as were for Sylla, and joyning the Celtiberians to himfelf, fliffy refifted Merellin who was fent against him; whereby obtaining a great name, he choice 300 of his friends, whom he called a Senate, in opposition, and despite to that at Rome. And now being made fronger by part of Lepidus his Army, which Perpenna had led thither, he defigned no leffe than the invafion of Italy, The Senate afraid of this, fent Pompey Appian deble against him, a young man, but of great esteem, who passing the Alps in imi- lo civilities. tation of Annibal, but another way, at first received some losse, & in the Spring Plutaris, in following had no successe, (though Perpenna and Herculeus, were several Science, Flour times beaten by Metellia) but was reduced into great fraights, and wrote to fib. 3, cap. 11. Rome for a supply. Likewillus Consul for the following year procured it to Livil Billian be sent him, lest the War that was renewed with Michiel Hould be com- lib. 90, dill. mitted to him if he came back into Italy, which he affirmed elfo he would. Being now supplied with men and money, he; and his affiftants, fell upon the places subject to Sertorius; yet did they this year no great matters. But many of Sertorius his Army came over to them, being aggrieved that he made the Celeiberians his Guard, as distrusting themselves, and upon fuspition of the alienation of their minds, being cruelly used by him.

20. The year following Pompey and Metallus being more bold, made excursions into several places, and with more successe; yet no considerable battel was there fought. Indeed it needed not. For, Sertorins now grown lazie, spent his time with women, and falling into an humour of cruelty had put many to death, whereby he wrought his destruction from his own party. Perpenna fearing it might fall to his lot to be made away amongst the rest,

Is murdered by Perpenna. resolved to prevent it, and so inviting him to a feast, murdred him after he had beforted him and his attendants with Wine. This was the end of this A. M. 3932. great Captain, who for some ten years had stoutly resisted such as had been 01,176, 481, 4 fent against him, being rather Superiour to them all, and admired by the V.c. 681. Spaniards as another Hannibal. Perpenna with much ado was owned as his Successor, and not long after was overthrown, and taken in battel by Pompey. He offered, if his life might be spared, to disclose certain things of consequence in private unto Pompey; but he to his great commendation, commanded him to be killed, left accusing any man he should bring the State into further trouble. So ended this War in the 681 year of the Cirie. M. Terentius Varro that yaft * Scholar (being the most learned of any, either a Virdosiij-Greeks or Romans) and Caius Cassins Varus being Confuls. Appins Clau- finus matters. dins in Thrace, and after him Scribonius Curio fought prosperoully against the que Vano. Scordifei and Dardanians at this time : so did Servillins against the Pirates of Livis Entern. Cilicia expelling them the Seas, and taking feveral of their Towns; as alfo originalists. Cosconius against the Dalmatians. But these were inconsiderable matters in 18923, dates senewed comparison of that War which now was renewed with Mithridates. 21. Sylla, upon this daparture for Italy, had left Murena behind him in Afia, to fettle such things as were not yet composed, with the two Legions tipon what occasion.

The War

that belonged to l'imbria. Historina being ambirious of a Triumph, had SECT.5. catched at all ostations to renew the War , and had one presented to him after this manner Mubridates, waging War with them of Colches and Befa phoras, who had revolted from him; the former defired and obtained his for confute Appiafor their King. This proved the destruction of the young man, for his father num in Milbrichinking it to have been procured by his feeking, put him to death, having daticis. fent for and bound him with iron chains, though he had done him especial fervide against Fimbria. Against the Bosphorians he made then great preparations, infomuch that every one thought he defigned another Warre against the Romans. Artholans was now at this time out of favour, for that he was thought so have granted too much unto Sylla in the Treaty of Peace, and therefore fled to Murena, and stirred him up to invade Mithridates, who neither had restored the intire possession of Cappadocia to Ariobarzanes. Murena did so, flighting the mention of Peace, which was objected to him. Mi-shridates sent to Rome, to complain to Sylla, and expecting the return of his Ambassadors, stirred not, though the other passing over the River Halys fired 300 of his Villages. Afterwards came Callidins from Rome, who though he shewed no Decree of the Senate, yet faid, it was the pleasure of the Fathers, that all acts of hostility should be forborn, and afterwards he talked with Murena alone. Yet did not Murena forbeat, so that the King judging that War indeed was intended, resolved to look to himself, and pas-

The King overthroweth Murena,

And the fecond Warre

endeth.

fing over the River overthrew Murena in battel, who fled into Phrygia. This Victory brought many over to the King's party, and hereupon he drove all Murona's Gatrifons out of Cappadocia. Sylla now Dictator, was not well pleased he should be thus disturbed, and therefore sent A. Gabinius to command Murena in good earnest coforbear, and reconcile the King to Ariobarzanes. Misbridates gave him his fon of four years of age for an Hoftage, and received part of Cappadacia. So things were fetled again, and the fecond War, as Appean faith, ended in the third year. But some seven years after another was begun.

22. Presently after the last conclusion, he sent to Rome to have the conditions of the League recorded, but the thing was neglected. Ariobarzanes fent also to complain, that he kept the greater part of Cappadecia from him, whereupon Salla commanded him to quit it, which accordingly he did. Afterward he fent again to defire that the League might be recorded; but Sylla being now dead, the matter was not as much as reported to the Senare. Hercupon he underhand procured Tigranes King of Armenia his fon in Law

The Warre at o invade Cappadocia, whence he led away 300000 persons, and there built gain breaketh a City, to be the Metropolis of the Kingdom, which from himself he named out and why. Tigranocorra; i. d. the City of Tigranes. L. Magius, and L. Fannius, who had fled to him from Fimbria's Army, perswaded him to send into Spain, and joyn in League with Sortorius, which he did, and had granted to him Bithynia and Cappadocia, receiving from him as a Captain M. Varius (of Marius) one of his Officers. Being now without hope of pardon, he made all preparations possible, and got together an Army out of divers Countries, consisting of 140000 Foot, and 16000 Horse, wherewith the following Spring he invaded Birbyna, which Country, Nicomedes being dead without iffue, had a little before given by testament to the People of Rome, which thing inra-and he got it all into his hands.

Mithridates recovereth' Bithynia.

Lucullus befiegeth him

belieging

23. In the 680 year of the City, L. Lieinius Lucullus and M. Aurelius Appian ut fee-Costa being Confuls, the former of them was fent against Miebridates with pra. one Legion out of the City, to which were joyned those two that belonged to Plut. in Lu-Fimbria, and two more, fo that in all he had an Army of 20000 Foot, and sullo. 1600 Horse. He found the King before Cypicus a City of Propontis, and prefently befieged the befieger. Hee drove him to fuch straights by the help of L. Manius (who now again revolted) that though having a great desire to the place, he laboured much to take it, yet through extreme famin he was forced first to send away the Horse, and fack Footmen, into Bithynia, ged him. Cotta the Governour, a man of little courage, fled to Chalcedon,

whereof

SECT.5. whereof 15000 were intercepted, and then to flye himself with the rest that could escape the great flaughter made of them in their flight. During this double siege, Eumachus one of Mithridates his Captains made incursions into Phrygia, subdued the Piside, and Isauri, and endeavoured to do the same by Cilicia, till he was repelled by Desorarus one of the Tetrarchs of Gallogracia. But Lucullus improved his successe on land by several Victories at sea, wherein he took divers of Mithridates his Commanders . and hasted into Bithyniato overtake him. He, flying with all speed for fear of this,

And forcing him to flye, persueth him suffered most grievous shipwrack, and had been cast away, but that he was received into a Pirate's Vessel, to which he was glad to commit himself in so into his King- great danger, and at length, after many difficulties, got into his own Kingdom, whither now Lucullus purfued him, having in his way taken in Bithrnia and Pathlagonia. He made all possible preparations for resistance, V.C. 681. fending for aid to Tigranes his fon in Law, and to his own fon reigning in Bolphorus; and hee fent Diocles with great gifts to the Scythians; but he ran away to Lucullus. In the space of a year hee got together 40000 Foot, and 4000 Horse, with which force he once or twice repelled the Romans, and struck some terror into them. But Lucullus sending out some Horse for provisions, he also sent a party to interrupt them, which fighting in a disadvantagious place was worsted. Being now destitute of Horse, he thought of removing from Cabira, where he had wintred; and communicared his intention to his friends. They not expecting the fign began to pack up, and fend their baggage out of the Camp before day, which the Army taking notice of, thought much they should flye without any warning given, and in great fear and disorder breaking out of the trenches ran away. The King went about to hinder them, but none taking notice of him, he was born down in the crowd, and being got on horseback betook himself also to flight, and might have been taken, but that the Romans were too busie in plundering the Camp, though warned by their General to forbear.

And into Armenia.

24. Mithridates first fled to Comana, and thence into Armenia to Tierawes, who admitted him not to his presence, but caused him to be entertained like a King, though in fenny and unwholesome places. All Pontus, except a few places, yielded to Lucullus, to whom also Machares King of Bosphorus fent a crown of gold, and purchased the title of his friend and allie. Afer this Lucullus pursued Mithridates into Armenta, intending to fall on Tigranes King thereof, if he gave him occasion by defending his Enemy. Tigranes at this time was a very potent Prince, having conquered several Nations. He wrestred Asia from the Parthians, transported many thousands of Greeks out of Cilicia and Cappadocia, into a Citybuilt by him near Euphrates, and called Tigranocerta; be obtained Syria and Palestine, displacing the Kings thereof, as was acknowledged by Lucullus. This made him intollerably proud, so that when he rode, he would have four of those Kings he had subdued to run beside him like Lackies, and stand before him with their hands folded in token of subjection, when he sate on his throne. Lucullus sent to him Appin Claudin his wive's brother, to demand Mithridates; but he was then busied in Phanicia, in reducing some places, which the Messenger made an opportunity in his absence, secretly to withdraw from him many, whom his intollerable pride had rendred impatient. At his return he gave a negative answer, and therefore Lucullus with two Legions and scarcely 3000 Horse, passed over Euphrates, being not acknowleged a General, because he had not given him the title of King of Kings. 25. Tigranes had no good intelligence of his coming, for he hanged him that first brought the news, as a disturber of the Peace; but when he perceived it was so indeed, he sent Mithrobarzanes with 2000 Horse to interrupt his passage, left Mancans to guard Tigranocerta, and went himself up and down levying forces. Whilst he was bringing 250000 Foot, and 50000 Horse, the former was beaten back, and the later could not defend the City. Mithridates advised him not to hazard all in a battel, but rather starve the Romans, as they had done him at Cypieus, but he slighted the motion, and jeered at the smallnesse of their number, saying, that if they were Ambassa- SECT. s. dors they were vary many, and if Soldiers , very few. But Lucullus pitch-Where he oing upon an hill, fent his Horse to provoke and draw out the Enemy; that he A. M. 3936. verthroweth in battel Tigranes the King, who protected him.

The Warre

committed afretwards to

Posts.y.

might break his ranks, and then fetting upon the cariage beafts, caused them Ol. 177. an. 4. to drive the Foot amonest the Horse, wherehald great consussion was made and V. C. 885. to drive the Foot amongst the Horse, whereby a great consussion was made, and 2. Horsessio great execution continued all the day. Tigranoce ta was taken by the means Nepole of certain Greeks, who being out of jealousie disarmed by Mancaus, took & Levilio Me. clubs, and setting upon him and his men, got the better, and received the Row tello cost. mans within the walls. After this, another great Army was raifed, and committed to the conduct of Mithridates. They then endeavoured to incompasse Luenllus, but were croffed in their expectation, and both parties continued without any great matter performed, till want of victuals forced them to depart. Then went Tigranes further into his Kingdom, and Mithridates marched away into his own, being purfued by Lucullus. 26. Mithridates overthrew Fabius, who had been left in Pomius by Lucullus, and after him Triarius, who being tent with a new supply, out of a Dion Cassius. defire of glory ventured to fight ere the General came. He lost in one in- Dion Cassius, Hiritus de ballo gagement 24 Tribunes, and 150 Centurions (which numbers were feldom Alexandrino, heard of in an overthrow of the Roman Armies) and 7000 in all were flain near the Mountain Scotius, about three miles distant from Zela a City of Pontus. Lucullus having heard of the Kings intention to fet upon Triarius, procured the Soldiers of Fimbria to march, who through the procurement of P. Clodius mutined against him, as formerly against Flaccus by the means of Fimbria. But Mithridates taking away all the necessaries he could carry, and . destroying the rest, departed into Armenia the lesse. Lucullus would gladly Lucullus being have followed him, and might have put an end to the War, but that now by in a fair way the procurement of A. Gabinius the Tribune, Manius Acilius Glabrio Dio. 1. 35. to finish the that years Consul, was appointed his successor, and an order made for dis-War, is inter-banding of Fimbria's Soldiers. This being known, Lucullus was slighted napsed by the by his Army fo much; that hardly could his men be drawn to ftay, though they marched no further against Mubridates; so that the King began to recruit himself, and Tigranes wasted Cappadocia. Shortly after, Glabrio arrived in his Province, and fent about to give notice, that the Senare was displeased with Lucullus for prolonging the War, disbanded his Army, and would confiscate the estates of such as should disobey it's order. Hereupon all the Ar-covered almost his whole Kingdom, and did much hure to Cappadocia; Glabria not as much as coming to the Army, but loitering in Bithymia. This hapned in the eighth year after Lucullus had undertaken the War; the 687 of the City, C. Calpurnius Pife and the faid M. Acilius Glabrio being Confuls. The year following the War was committed to Cneius Pompey (afterward Dio. lib. 36. firnamed the Great) by the means of C. Manilius the Tribune, who having Livii Epitom. offended the Senate by a Law, which gave the fame right of suffrages to Li- 1. 100. berts or Freemen (once flaves) as to their Patrons, or fuch as manumitted Politarch in them, procured this Law also to passe to curry favour withhim, who now had my forfook him, except fome few poor men, who had no cause to regard the threatnings; and Lucullus being outed of his command, Mishridates rea very great name and power, having scarcely finished the Piratick Warre, which for his famous and speedy Expedition, must be described, after we have first spoken something of the War with Spartacus, that was managed whilst Lucullus was busie in Pontus. The war with 27. Spartacus a Thracian born, was a Fencer in the house of Lentulus at Capua, where perswading about 70 of his condition, rather to fight for their

Capua, where perfuading about 70 of his condition, rather to night for their own liberty than the pleasure of spectators, they broke the house and fled to de bello civili Vesavius the hill in Campania, where receiving to them all sugitives, they I.I. fell down upon the parts adjacent, and robbed them. By making equal di- Plut, in craffo, vision of the booty, he got together a great power of men, over whom he Florum 1.3. vision of the booty, he got together a great power of men, over the said of the booty, he got together a great power of men, over the said of the said routed and put to flight, as also P. Varinus, whose Lictors and Horse they c.24. Xxxx ries at sea, wherein he took divers of Mithridates his Commanders, and ha-Red into Bithynia to overtake him. He, flying with all speed for fear of this, fuffered most grievous shipwrack; and had been cast away, but that he was And forcing him to flye, persueth him into his Kingdom, menia.

received into a Pirate's Vessel, to which he was glad to commit himself in so great danger, and at length, after many difficulties, got into his own Kingdom, whither now Lucullus purfued him, having in his way taken in Biabraia and Pathlagonio. He made all possible preparations for resistance, V. c. 681. fending for aid to Tigranes his fon in Law, and to his own fon reigning in Bolphorus; and hee fent Diocles with great gifts to the Scythians; but he ran away to Lucullus. In the space of a year hee got together 40000 Foot, and 4000 Horse, with which force he once or twice repelled the Remans, and struck some terror into them. But Lucullus sending out some Horse for provisions, he also sent a party to interrupt them, which fighting in a disadvantagious place was worsted. Being now destitute of Horse,

Gallogracia. But Lucullus improved his successe on land by several Victo-

he thought of removing from Cabira, where he had wintred; and communicated his intention to his friends. They not expecting the fign began to pack up, and fend their baggage out of the Camp before day, which the Army taking notice of, thought much they should flye without any warning given, and in great fear and diforder breaking out of the trenches ran away. The King went about to hinder them, but none taking notice of him, he was born down in the crowd, and being got on horseback betook himself also to flight, and might have been taken, but that the Romans were too busie in plundering the Camp, though warned by their General to forbear. 24. Mithridates first fled to Comana, and thence into Armenia to Tiera-And into Arwes, who admitted him not to his presence, but caused him to be entertained like a King, though in fenny and unwholesome places. All Pontus, except a few places, yielded to Lucullus, to whom also Machares King of Bosphorus fent a crown of gold, and purchased the title of his friend and allie. Afer this Lucultus pursued Mithridates into Armenta, intending to fall on Tigranes King thereof, if he gave him occasion by defending his Enemy. Tigranes at this time was a very potent Prince, having conquered several Nations. He wrestred Asia from the Parthians, transported many thousands of Greeks out of Cilicia and Cappadocia, into a Citybuilt by him near Euphrases, and called Tigranocerta; be obtained Syria and Palestine, displacing the Kings thereof, as was acknowledged by Lucullus. This made him intollerably proud, fo that when he rode, he would have four of those Kings he had subdued to run beside him like Lackies, and stand before him with their hands folded in token of subjection, when he sate on his throne. Lucullus sent to him Appine Claudine his wive's brother, to demand Mithridates; but he was then busied in Phanicia, in reducing some places, which the Messenger made an opportunity in his abfence, fecretly to withdraw from him many, whom his intollerable pride had rendred imparient. At his return he gave a

> had not given him the title of King of Kings. 25. Tigranes had no good intelligence of his coming, for he hanged him that first brought the news, as a disturber of the Peace; but when he perceived it was so indeed, he sent Mithrobarzanes with 2000 Horse to invertibe his passage, left Mancans to guard Tigranocerta, and went himself up and down levying forces. Whilft he was bringing 250000 Foot, and 50000 Horse, the former was beaten back, and the later could not defend the City. Mithridates advised him not to hazard all in a battel, but rather starve the Romans, as they had done him at Cypieus, but he slighted the motion, and negative answer, and therefore Lucullus with two Legions and scarcely 3000 Horse, passed over Euphrates, being not acknowleged a General, because he jeered at the smallnesse of their number, saying, that if they were Ambasa- SECT-5. dors they were very many, and if Soldiers, very few. But Lucullus pitch-Where he o ing upon an hill, fent his Horse to provoke and draw out the Enemy; that he A. M. 3936. verthroweth ing upon an mill, tent his riorie to provoke and draw out the Enemy, that he might break his ranks, and then fetting upon the carriage beafts, caused them 0. 177. an. 4.

V. c. 685. in battel Tito drive the Foot amongst the Horse, whereby a great consusion was made, and Q. Hottenso great execution continued all the day. Tigranoco ta was taken by the means Nepote protected him. of certain Greeks, who being out of jealousie disarmed by Mancaus, took & Lecilio Meclubs, and setting upon him and his men, got the better, and received the Ro- tetto cost. mans within the walls. After this, another great Army was raised, and committed to the conduct of Mithridates. They then endeavoured to incompasse Lucullus, but were crossed in their expectation, and both parties continued without any great matter performed, till want of victuals forced them to depart. Then went Tigranes further into his Kingdom, and Mithridates marched away into his own, being purfued by Lucullus, 26. Mithridates overthrew Fabins, who had been left in Ponius by Lu-

granes the

King, who

sommitted afretwards to

Pangey.

cullus, and after him Triarius, who being fent with a new supply, our of a defire of glory ventured to fight ere the General came. He loft in one in- Dion Captus. gagement 24 Tribunes, and 150 Centurions (which numbers were feldom Alexandrino, heard of in an overthrow of the Roman Armies) and 7000 in all were flain near the Mountain Scotins, about three miles distant from Zela a City of Ponius. Lucullus having heard of the Kings intention to fet upon Triarius, procured the Soldiers of Fimbria to march, who through the procurement of P. Clodius mutined against him, as formerly against Flaccus by the means of Fimbria. But Mithridates taking away all the necessaries he could carry, and .

destroying the rest, departed into Armenia the lesse. Lucullus would gladly Licultus being have followed him, and might have put an end to the War, but that now by in a fair way the procurement of A. Gabinius the Tribune, Manius Acilius Glabrio to finish the that years Consul, was appointed his successor, and an order made for dis-War, is inter-banding of Fimbria's Soldiers. This being known, Lucullus was flighted nipsed by the by his Army so much; that hardly could his men be drawn to stay, though they marched no further against Mubridates; so that the King began to recruit Plutasch in Luhimself, and Tigranes wasted Cappadocia. Shortly after, Glabrio arrived in his Province, and fent about to give notice, that the Senate was displeased with Lucullus for prolonging the War, disbanded his Army, and would confiscate the estates of such as should disobey it sorder. Hereupon all the Army forfook him, except fome few poor men, who had no cause to regard the threatnings; and Lucullus being outed of his command, Mithridates recovered almost his whole Kingdom, and did much hurt to Cappadocia; Glabria not as much as coming to the Army, but loitering in Bithynia. This hapned in the eighth year after Lucullus had undertaken the War; the 687 of the City, C. Calpurnius Pifo and the faid M. Acilius Glabrio being Consuls. The year following the War was committed to Cneius Pompey (afterward Dio. lib. 36. The Warre firnamed the Great) by the means of C. Manilius the Tribune, who having Livii Epitom.

offended the Senate by a Law, which gave the fame right of suffrages to Li- 1, 100.

them, procured this Law also to passe to curry favour withhim, who now had a very great name and power, having scarcely finished the Piratick Warre, berti or Freemen (once flaves) as to their Patrons, or fuch as manumitted Plutarch in them, procured this Law also to pulle to come the procured this Law also to pulle to come the procured this Law also to pulle to come the procured this Law also to pulle the procured this law also to pulle the procured this law also to pulle the pull which for his famous and speedy Expedition, must be described, after we have first spoken something of the War with Spartacus, that was managed whilst Lucullus was bulie in Pontus. The war with 27. Spartacus a Thracian born, was a Fencer in the house of Lentulus at Capua, where perswading about 70 of his condition, rather to fight for their Capua, where perfuading about 70 of his condition, ratnet to nght for their own liberty than the pleasure of spectators, they broke the house and fled to de bello civili Veluvius the hill in Campania, where receiving to them all fugitives, they L. fell down upon the parts adjacent, and robbed them. By making equal di- Plut, in Craffo. vision of the booty, he got together a great power of men, over whom he Florum I.g.

fet as Captains two Fencers that were Galls by birth , called Oenomaus and cao fet as Captains two Fencers that were come by such them from the City, they Orollim lib. 6. Crisms. Clodius the Prator, who was lent against them from the City, they Orollim lib. 5.

routed and put to flight, as also P. Varinus; whose Lictors and Horse they c.24.

Xxxx

SECT. 5. took, Spartacus now having got together 70000 men, and making great preparations, began to be formidable to the Romans, who therefore fent against him L. Gellius Poplicola, and Cn. Cornelius Leniulus the Confuls with two Legions. Crixus was at the Hill Garganus defeated and flain. Spartacus making for Gall, was befer before and behind by the Confuls: but one after the other he overthrew, and putting them both to flight, killed 300 prifoners to appeale the Gholt of Crixus. Marching then towards the Alos he was opposed by Cassius the Prator, whom he also overthrew, and who hardly escaped from the ingagement. 28. Spartaces puffed up by fuch successe, now consulted of no lesse than ferting upon Rome it felf. At the Comitia for Prators, when the Canditate appeared, M. Licinius Crassus, a person of great Nobility, and exceeding rich, undertook the Office, and was fent against Spartacus with fix Legions. He ordered Mummins his Lieurenant with two Legions to attend the Enemies motions, but not to fight, which doing, he was worked, and many being taken, many also cast away their Arms and fled. Crassus to terrifie others, used great severity against such as for sook their Colours, decimating 500 who had first begun to fly; which antient kind of Discipline being of a long time disused, he hereby revived. Spartacus having by this time passed to the Sea. thought of going over into Sicily; but failing of his design upon some Cicilian Rovers, he fate down in the Peninfula of Rhegium, where Craffus as it were besieged him, having drawn a line through the Isthmus from Sea to Sea, to cut off all Provisions. Spariaeus in a tempestuous night made a shift to fill up the Ditch, and get over the third part of his Army, then ingaging with Crassus lost 12000 men. After this defeat he went toward the Petiline Mountains, and the Lieurenant and Quaffor of Crassus pursuing him, he faced about, and put them to flight, whereby his men being incouraged, refused not to give the Romans battel. Crassus now defired also to fight, because Pompey, who was lately returned out of Spain was reported as coming to end this He is defeated War. Pitching then one against another, Spartacus engaged with all his for-and flain by ces, and made at Craffus through the midft of Weapons and Wounds, whom ver he missed, but killed two of his Centurions. At length such as stood near Craffus. him running away, whilest he stood his ground mansfully he was slain, and the rest were disordered and put to slight. Some that escaped from the battel, and made head again, Pompey suppressed, three years before he undertook the War against the Pirates. 29. The Pirates who had been a little repressed by Servilius Isauricus

(as we faid before) were now grown fo numerous and powerfull, that The infolence there was no paffing of the Seas, nor any dwelling upon the Coasts; for they not onely took and robbed thips on the Sea, but also whole Provinces on the Appliante Misof Pirates.

Land; the chief place of their Rendezvous being Cilicia the Rough. Mi- thridain. thridates first fet them on work, which finding profitable they ceased not when he left off, but continued their Robberies; many thousands of seve- Dielibad. ral Nations, as Syrians, Cypriots, Pamphylians, the Natives of Pontus, and Plutarchia almost all others of that part of the World joying together. For, seeing that Pompie. the War continued, they thought it more wildom to damnifie others, than lose their own Estares. Because they made choice of Cilicia, as most commodious in the Mountainy and Craggy places thereof to secure themselves, they all went under the name of Cilices. They had defeated several Roman Prators. Murena did little good against them, and Servilius but a little repressed their violence; for so impudent were they now grown, that besides their incursions into Sicily and other places, which made the Inhabitants of the Coasts forsake their habitations, they landed in Italy near Brundusium, whence they took away feveral women of quality; and more than that, two Armies with their Enfigns.

30. The People of Rome being very fensible of these disgracefull losses, a Provoketh the Law was preferred by A. Gabinius the Tribune, ('tis uncertain whether at the motion of Pompey, or from his own defire to ingrariate himself with people of him; for being none of the best men, he little valued the good of the Com-Rame monwealth)

Monwealth that folic one from amongst those of Constant Dignity Mould Sect. 5. be Created General with full power for three years against the Pirates, to whom also should be granted large forces, and many Lieutenants for carrying on the War. This Law little pleased the Fathers, who now began to be jeilous of Pompey's power; but to him was the businesse committed, havine equal authority with Proconfuls any where within fifty miles distance

Which fend.

Kings or others, that they might affilt him in the work. The Senate permitted him to chuse out of their body fifteen Lieutenants, to whom he might against them, commit several Provinces; to take up as much money out of the Treasury and from the Publicans as he pleased; to raise what force he would, and take 200 ships. But he obtained greater things of the people, and doubled his preparations, getting 500 ships, 120000 foot, and some 5000 horse. He had also out of the Senate about 25 Vicegerents, two Quaffors, and took up 6000 Artick Talents; so difficult a thing it seem'd to destroy so many Fleets as the

from the Sea, and full power over all persons within that compasse, whether Pirates had in fuch a Sea, where there was fo many places of retreat and refuge. 21. He distributed to his Lieutenants the Mediterranean Sea, including all the Bays, Havens, Promontories, Straights, Peninfulaes, and windings whatfoever, furnishing them with convenient shipping, forces, and authority; Florus ib. 3.

His Method.

fo that the Pirates being rouzed out of their lurking holes by fome, might be can 6. received by the next, and chafed by others, and none might need to fayl too far. He himself like a King of so many Kings sayled up and down, and Appian ut suvisiting, giving directions, and overseeing, took care that not one Pirate pra escaped. By this course prosecuted with singular industry, in 40 dayes he Plutarch. Dio. foured all the Seas about Africk, Sardinia, Corfica, and Sicily; and the Gicero pro lege Pirites that escaped flocked into Cilicia, as the common receptacle. He coming to Rome about some necessary occasions, quickly after followed them with 60 Gallies; but though they prepared to give him battel at Sea, yet when they faw his Fleet at hand, submitted to mercy. Then in the space of 40 dayes he reduced Cilicia unto Roman obedience; for though he had provided Engines of all forts to batter their Walls, it needed not, the greatnesse of his name, and preparation for the War had to torrified them, that one after another they all yielded themselves with the furniture for their trade. Such as remained of them being above 20000 he was unwilling to kill, and A. M. 2938.

With wonder- houses and Land; and furnished their seats with new Inhabitants. Thus having taken well nigh 400 ships, killed 10000 men, and taken 120 Forts, he on in three finished this War in three moneths, using the Conquered with more clemoneths he mency than did Q. Metellus in Crete, which being the other nest of these finisher's the Pirates, and glorying that it never underwent the yoak of any, he subdued, and obtained with a Triumph the firname of Cretions. Having fucceeded Antonius (who died in the action, and had as large authority there as Pompey) he used the Pirates very roughly, and so much the more, because hearing of Pompey's mercy, they had by a Message given up themselves into his hands. The Lsx Ma-

32. Whilest he was putting an end to this Piratick War, did Manilius prefer a Law as we faid before, that all the Armies the Romans had any Dio lib. 36. Whereby the where, with the Government of all Asia, and the War against Mithridates War against and Tigranes, might be committed to him. The Nobility conceived great indignation against this Law, as which did manifest injury to Lucullus, Glabrio, power is com- and Marcius; but especially out of an high jeasousie of Pompey's greatnesse. mitted to Pom. to whom now even all the Roman Empire was subject, having these Proving ces laid to his former, with the same power of Peace and War, and making what friends and enemies he pleased, and chiefly for that he had Jurisdiction over all Armies whatfoever, which things had never before been conferred upon any fingle person. But the Commons with great alacrity imbraced the Law; Cicero the Prator preffing it exceedingly, who having formerly set himself to defend the Nobility, now had betaken himself to let them return to their old habitations was not fafe : therefore he removed 01,178, ann. 2. them into another place at a good distance from the Sea, where he gave them V. C. 687.

XXXX 2

SECT. 5. to the Yugar fort. And C. Julius Cajar (who of late had been Que-(for) is said to have favoured it, that he might have the people more inclined afterwards to commit extraordinary commands to himfelf.

22. It being now the 688 year of the Citie, the 64th before the birth of A. M. 3919. Christ, the fourth of Aristobulus King of Judea, M. Emilius Lepidus, and V. C. 688. L. Volcatius Tullus being Confuls, Pompey undertook the expedition. He first sent to Mithridates, offering him good terms; but he sleighted them, Identitid because he hoped to have Phraates the Parthian on his side; yet when he heard Plutarth in that he had first made a League with him, on the same conditions as were Pompeiole offered to Sylla and Lucullus, he himself then sent and asked peace. Pom- Lucul. pey commanded him to lay down Arms, and deliver up all Fugitives; vyho fearing they should be given up, and the other Soldiers mutining for being

He offereth the King terms to no purpole, about to be deprived of their help, a great trouble infued, which he evaded. by faving that he onely fent to make an espial, and by swearing, that he never would be reconciled to the Romans, because of their insatiable avarice. Then marched Pompey into Galatia, where meeting with Lucullus, much ado there was betwirt them. Lucullus said the War was finished, and that the Commissioners sent from Rome were to decide the businesse, and when Pompey would not hear of this, he revited him with an immoderate thirst after power; Pompey again objecting coverousnesse to him, so that the accusations could on neither fide be denied. Lucullus gave out commands as yet in power, but Pompey by his Edicts forbade them, nulled all his Acts, and at length drew away most of his men. But at his return he was received with great honour by the Senate, carrying with him amongs his booty gotten in Ponens, many books, wherewith he furnished his Library, which ever flood 1, 6.6.3, open to Greeks especially. He also first brought * the Cherry-Tree out of * plin h you of Pontus (from a Cirie of which Region it was called Cerafus) into Italy. capas, 34. Mithridates had now got together a confiderable Army; but coming to ingage with Pompey was inferiour to him in all skirmishes. Pompey con- Dio. Abia. fidering how the King had wasted all the Countrey on purpose to straighten & Pluigh, him for Provisions, went into Armenia the lesse, subject to Mitbridates, ut supil. who fearing he might get that Countrey into his hands, followed him thi-ther. First here Mithridates had hopes to starve him; but was disappointed with considerable losse, and was himself encompassed with a Trench 150 furlongs about. Hearing that Marcius was joyned to Pompey, who had Provisions at will he fled away, having first killed all such as were fick, and uselesse, about him. But Pompey pursued, and prevented him from passing over Euphrates; then forced him to fight in the night, being surprized, and

him.

He defeateth Mithridates, at unawares. The Moon being low, and on the backs of the Romans, so lengthened their shadows, that his Soldiers thinking them nearer than they were, that most of their Arrows without doing any execution. He lost many thousands; but he himself brake out with 800 horse, whereof but 300 Rayed with him. Then wandring through the Woods with his horse in his hand, he light of forne Mercenaries, and about 3000 foot, by which he was conveyed into a Castel where he had laid up much Treasure. Hence he sent to Tigranes, who refused to receive him, laying to his charge, that by his means Tigranes his fon (by the daughter of Mithridates) had rebelled against him, and offering 100 Talents for his head. He fled therefore to Chalcos, which formerly he had subdued.

Who flieth to Chalcos.

And thence

35. Pompey followed him to Cholcos, thinking he would not have flired thence; but he passed into Scythia, where partly by force, and partly by perswasion, he made the Princes thereof of his party, bestowing his daughters into Scythia. in marriage upon them. For he had now vast designs in his head, though outed of his Kingdom, even no leffe than of paffing through Thrace, Macedonia, and Pannonia, and so over the Alps into Italy. Pompey departing from Cholcos, and escaping the ambushes laid for him by the Albanians and Iberians, marched into Armenia against Tigranes, vello veas resolved nove not to fight, for that having had three fons by Mitbridges his daughter, two of them upon provocation he had already killed, and he that remained rebelling also, was Tigranes fubmitteth to Pompey.

now after an overthrow received from his Father, fled to Pompey. This fon Sect.5. prevailed that his Ambassadors were not heard, who came to ask Peace. But Pompey marching against the City Artaxa, Tigranes yielded it up to him, Patercal, 1, 2. and afterwards, without fending any beforehand, came into his Camp, and gi. 637. ving up himself with all he had into his hands, made him umpire betwire him and his fon, who would not fo much as rife up to him, or give him any respect, though Pampey used him very civily. Pompey left him his inheritance of Armenia, with a great part also of Mesopotamia (allowing the son to reign in Gordona and Sophena, and expect the restafter his father's death) but deprived him of all the Provinces he had subdued, and fined him 6000 Talents of Silver for the charge he had put the People of Rome to in the War: So, he not onely quitted part of Cappadecia and Culicia, but also all Syria and Phoenicia from Emphratos to the Sea, which he had got into his hands, with part of Cilicia, after he had ejected Antiochus Pins, as is said before in the 1. 101. reign of this unfortunate King. Tigranes the fon was very refractory, unwilling his father should have the treasure adjudged to him by Pompty, that he might be able to pay his fine. Being minded to make away his father, and for that cast into prison; where therein also he sollicited the Parthians against His rebellious the Romans, he was referved for a Triumph, and after that killed in prifon. The old King payed more than his fine, and gave something to every Officer and Soldier, after which be was accounted a Friend and Allie of the People

The conditions fee him.

36. Pompey restored Cappadocia to Ariobarzanes, gave him also Sophene and Gordens, with Cabala a City of Cilicia, and others. After this with A. M. 3940. fome adoe he forced the Albanians and Iberians to beg Peace, and then pafe V. C. 689. fing over the mountain Taurus, made War upon Antiochus Comagenus, and also Darius the Median, either for that he had helped Antiochus, or made War against Tigranes, or Aret. King of the Nabalbean Arabs. Then Appearant for Die 1, 37. Phrantes the Parthian affrighted at his great archievements begged Peace, Plutareh ut Appian ut supra which he granted not, but sent Afranius into Gordiene, to drive out his forces, prim. and reftore it to Tigranes, who about it had warred with the Persian. Phraates hereupon invaded Armenia, and Tigranes fent to Pempey for aid, who being unwilling to begin a War with Phrases without an order from Rome, fent three Commissioners to agree them. Antiochus son of Antiochus Pins, himself to the Parthian; yet upon second thoughts, resolved to cast himself upon the good nature of Pompey. But he having obtained it without a Aroak, pur him beside it, commanding him to content himself with Comagena, though he had never ill deserved of the People of Rome: for knowing he was not able to right himself, he excused the matter, saying, it was not fit that Syria, whence Tigraner had banished the posterity of Selentus, should now rather fall to it being conquered, than to the Romans, who were Conque- Appian. rours. He refused flatly to give Autiochus what before he could not keep Julin 1.40. (for he had layn in a corner of Chicia fourteen years, all the time that Tigra- A. M. 3943. nos enjoyed it) left he should again render it lyable to the incursions of the V.C. 691. Jews and Arabians. Therefore having overcome the Isuraans and Arabians, Sciencid. 250.

Pampey reinto a Roman Province.

to whom Lucullus granted Syria his inheritance, thought first of betaking

37. Mithridaes, in the mean time had fent to Pompey to ask Peace, offering to pay tribute; but being willed to come to him, he flatly refuled, and made great preparations to renew the War. After this Caffor his Gover- Appian. nour of Phanagoria a Port Town of Ponus revolted, and calling the People to their liberty, took the Castle held by Mithidates his sons, whereof four he sent to Roman Garrisons. Hereupon several places fell off, which made him put many persons to death, amongst whom were divers of his own friends, and one of his fons. Seing also that many revolted, and his new Army had no heart to the service, he sent to the Princes of Seythia to histen their supplies, sending his daughters to them with a convoy of 500 Horse; but these men killing the Eunuchs who had molefied them about the King, caried away the women unto Pompey. Yet fuch a courage Rill fie had, astothink of pafe

SECT. 5. fing through Scythia and Istria, and joyning with the Galls of Europe to invade leady, hoping there to find many enemies of the Romans; though Pompey coming out of Siria had through ambition done what he condemned in Luculius, having reduced his Kingdom into the form of a Province, whilst Mithridates defigning in Luculius, having reduced his Kingdom into the both his Army was fartled at his mind great he was yet alive, and provided for new opposition. But his Army was fartled at his mind great he was yet alive, and provided for new opposition. But his Army was fartled at his mind great he was yet alive, and provided for new opposition. But his Army was fartled at the news of his intentions, hating the tediousnesses of the journy, and having things, fmall hope to conquer those in Italy, whom at their own doors they could not withfland. Yet fuch was his authority, as for a while they were quiet, till his own fon whom he had most loved, and destined his successor, became the procuror of their defection and his death. 38. This was Pharnaces, who either out of apprehension that this attempt upon Italy would cut off all pardon from his family, or upon other grounds, conspired against him. The plot was discovered, and though his Complices were rottured and put to death, yet was he pardoned, and betook himself to Orofuel.6.55. the fugitive Romans, shewing them their danger in case Italy were invaded, Diolib 37. and then to the Army, which with small trouble he drew to his party. Mi- Flores 13.45. naces draweth ibridates coming to speak to them, his own guard for sook him, his horse as he fled was killed under him, and Pharnaces (aluted King, having a piece of parchment put about his head in form of a diadem. Mithridates feeing this the Army from him. from a high room, fent divers to ask leave to depart, who not returning, he himself often desired it of his fon, but in vain, who bidding him dye, he cried out, and prayed, that he might hear one day the same words from his own children. Then came he down to his wives, daughters, and concubines, to whom when he had given poylon, fearing he should be delivered up to the Romans, he took some himself; but having used much his body to antidotes (fuch as yet are named from him) it would not work, though he walked .600 much for that purpose, whereupon he wounded himself, but this not disparching him foon enough, he called one Bitessa (or Bithocas) a Gall, who, the wall being broken, had got in, by whose hand partly, and partly by his own, He killeth he dispatched himself. A man, as one saith, neither, without good heed, to A. M. 344. himfelf. be omitted nor spoken of ; in War most eager and fierce, and alwaies of no- Patentilla. rable valour. Sometimes in fortune, all times in courage of highest rank; 6, 18, in direction a good Captain, in execution a good Soldier, in harred to the Romans another Hannibal; finally, the greatest King after Alexander in the judgment of Cicero. This end came he to, after the War had first commenced just 20 years; for it began when Cn. Pompeius Strabo, and L. Porcius Cato, and ended now when M. Tullus Cicero the Orator, and C. Antonius Nepos were Consuls, in the 691 year of the City, the second of the 179 Olympiad, and the first of the reign of Hyrcanus, 61 years before the birth of Chrift. A. M. 3942.

39. Pompey, when the first tidings of his death came to him, was near Jericho, marching towards Jerufalem against Ariftobulus King of Juden, who had displeased his elder brother Hyrcanus and usurped the Kingdom. Hyrcanus complained of his brother to Pompey at Damascus, who came Joseph Asia, thither to answer for himself. Pompey used them both kindly, telling them, 1. 15.69.64 that as soon as he had dispatched some affairs he would come into their Country, which after he had fetled Syria, subdued the Arabians with the Itura- c. 5. 4ns, and reduced Ponens into a Province, (all in a short time) he now per- Living lib. 10. deth Judea, formed, being much incenfed by Hyrcanus against the other. He fent to Plusath is where he ferwhere he lees Aristobulus to come to him, and deliver up all his holds, which he did with Pompio.

betwixt Hyrea- much regret, and afterwards withdrew himself to Hierusalem, to prepare for 1,5,09. nus and Arifto-War. Pompey suspecting some such matter, delayed not to follow him, Flores 13.65 bulus the two who then came out to meet him; but though the City was entred without op- Diol. 37, 134. position, his Soldiers fortified the Temple and Rood out, which made him c. be delivered into custody. The Temple being very strong by it's situation, was after much labour taken in the third moneth, Fauftus the fon of Sylla having first mounted the walls. Twelve thousand Jens were slain, of the Romans very few. Pompey entred the Holy of Holies, but medled with nothing, restored Hyrcanns to the Priesthood and Government (yet with command nor to wear a diodam) and took driftobulus along with him, making Judaa SECT. 5. tributary to Rome, as is more largely related in it's proper place. After this, leaving Sprin with two liegions to Somerns his Queffor, he fully subdued : Ciliain, and thence returning into Powers, feeled things there, bestowing the Kingdom of Bospharm upon Pharmace. At his return he wintred at Ephe-The whence having fabdued many Princes, and joyned others as Allies to the State of Rome, having taken 1000 Castles, 900 Cities, and restored 30: having planted Colonies in eight Cities and Countries; and ordered the pofice of fuch as through the continent of Affa belonged to the Romans : and having magnificently rewarded his Soldiers, he returned into Italy, and at A. M. 3444. Rame triumphed two dayes together very gloriously, leading amongst other V.C. 633. captives Aristobulus King of Judea, after he had spent five years in his Eaflern Expedicion.

40. The same year wherein Michridates died, and the Temple of Terufalem was taken, hapned a most dangerous conspiracy at Rome, by the means Leee Sallus, de The confpiratof L. Sergius Catalina, a Patrician by degree, but one of a debaucht and in- Conjugations cy of Cataline famous life. Some years before he had been accused of incest with Fabia a Cataline, Vestal Nan; but by the means of Catalas was acquitted; suspected also to Orosium I. 6.

have murdered his fon for the love of Aurelia, who would not marry one 6.3. & 6. that had children. Having contracted by this loofenesse of life a vast debt, civili lib. 2, he grew desperate, and sought for power and command, that he might if pos- Dionem 1, 37, fible obtain the foveraighty over all; but being also suspected hereof, he twice P. 42. E. received a repulse in standing for the Confulship. The later time it was caried from him by Cicero, whom he would have killed in the Comitia, and railed at as a foreiner and upstart, because he was born but of an Equestrian family at Arpinum a Town in Puglia, a Province (now) of the Kingdom of Naples, Hereby driven into extream disdain and rage, he fell into that course wherein formerly he had been ingaged with Pife for the destruction of his Country, to whom also L. Aurelius Cotta and L. Manlius Torquains (being denied the VelleiumPater-Confulibip Which they had fought by indirect means two years before) joyned cul. 1, 2, 6,34, themselves, and anew plotted the destruction of the Consuls and Senate, the 35.

41. The plot was discovered through Fulvia a Courtisan, to whom

O. Curius one of the Conspirators (a man that for his debaucheries had by the Cenfors been removed out of the Senate) blabbed it out, while he boulted to her, that shortly he should be a very considerable man. She gave intelligence to Cicero, who out of them two got the whole matter bow, and where they had mer, and what defigns they had in hand; particularly for his own destruction to be brought about by L. Vasquinteins a Senator, and C. Christins the Allobroges, who were come to Town to accuse their Magistrates, were also drawn in, to stir up the Galls against the Commonwealth; but declarburning of the City, and overthrowing of the Commonwealth, with Leng. Livii Epitom. tus, C. Cethegus, and others. This Lentulus had been Conful feven years before, and now was Prator (as also Cethegus) being driven on by a vain confidence he had in the Books of Sibylla, which he would often fay did portend that the foveraign power, should be in the hands of three Cornelii, viz. Sylla, of Equestrian tank, under pretence of a kind visit. He appointed guards to the feveral parts of the City, and on the eighth of November (as the year then went) called the Senate together, whither came Cataline amongst the rest; but none of the Senators would come near him, so as that part of the bench whereon he fate, was wholly void. Cicero, whether fearing him, or angry to see him there, made his first Oration against him, wherein he com-Grow maketh manded him to depart the City. He went away fate in the night with his fift Ora-300 armed men, and Lictors carying Axes and Rods before him as a Magi-Afrace, into Etruria, gathering Soldiers all along, intending to return and make prey of the City, which upon his departure he had given order to burn,

.Cinna, and himfelf.

Discovered by the means of Fulvia.

as alfo to kill Cicero, which Lentulus and Cethegus rook upon them to do, as foon as he should come to Fasula. In the mean time the Ambassadors of

ing it to Fabina Sanga their Patron (it was the custome for each Nation SECT. 5. or State to have one in the Citie) it came to Tullie's ear, and so was prevented. 42. The day after Cataline's departure, the Conful made his second Oration, wherein he Congratulates the People, and Commonwealth, concerning his absence. The Senare judged Cataline an Enemy, and Manlius, with whom in Eiruria he had joyned; they deprived Lentulus of his Office, by whom the Ambassadors had been drawn in, who consessed they had often heard from him what he idlely conjectured out of Sibylla's: books. Cicero's third Oration declareth what was done in the Senate. The times being very dangerous, he propounded to the Fathers to confider what course was to be taken with Lentulus, Cethegus, Stalins, and Cassins, all whom he having secured, this bred a great disturbance; for the Slaves and Dependents of the two former got together a great company of Artificers, and indeavoured to break in upon the back-fide of the Prator's house, and rescue their Lords. This being known, the Conful hasted out of the Senato-house, and appointed a weatch to be fet, then returning, asked the opinions of the Senators. Silanus defigned Conful for the enfuing year, being first asked his opinion, according to the cultom, was for putting them to death, and fo were divers others, till Nero diffwaded it, judging it better to secure them till Cataline were suppressed, and the thing better sisted out. Of this opinion was C. Julius Cafar, something suspected to be privy to the design. He would have them dispersed in several Towns in Italy by the Consul's appointment, afterwards to be tried, and not put to death altogether unheard. This seemed very plausible , till Cato (great Grand-son to M. Porcius Cato the Confor) very earnestly pressed the contrary, falling foul upon Cafar as a suspicious person. Then the Consul made his fourth Oration, wherein he Fourth. fo disputeth of the two contrary opinions, as he evidently inclineth to seve-ricy, as fearing what the guilty party might do the night following out of ne-Catalines com- ceffity and desperation. Hereby the Senate was induced to put them to death as surprized in the fact, which Cicero saw done accordingly ere the house arose. After this Cataline was overtaken by C. Antonius, the other Consul, near death, the Alps, as he was going into Gall to perfect his Levies, and there fighting

His fecond.

Third.

And he him-Telf flain,

most valiantly was stain. His men also fought it out to the last, scarcely one of them being taken. So was quashe this most dangerous conspiracy, by the vigilancy especially of Cicero the Consul, who wrote an Hifory thereof which is loft. Publick thanks for his great care and pains were given to him, and, at the inflance of Cato, with divers acclamations of the People, he was first of all others filled Father of his Coun-43. Now began C. Julius Cafar to be very eminent, two years after these flirs being sent as Prator into the further Spain. He was born in the Lige Suntainen

c. Julius Cafar beginneh to be eminent.

654 year of the Citie, C. Marins the fixth time, and L. Valerius Flaccus be. in Julie. ing Confuls, the same that the Sedition about Saturniums hapned, on the 12th day of the moneth Quintilia, afterward from him named Fuly by Antonius his Law. His father was C. Julius Cafar, who never arole higher than His birth. the Pracorship, and died suddenly at Pife, as his shooes were drawing on in the morning : his mother was Aurelia, the daughter of C. Corta; and Julia the wife of Marius was his Aunt. In his youth having married Conna's daughter (by which he had Julia) refusing to put her away, he was in great danger, being with much ado spared by Sylla, who as it were foretelling what trouble he would bring to the State, faid, that in Cafar were many Marii. The foundation of his Military skill he laid in Asia, under M. Thermus the The founds . Prator, by whom being fent into Bithynia to fetch away the Navy, be flayed eion of his with Nicomedes the King, to whom it was suspected that he proflicated himself. Afterwards in the taking of Mitylens he had deserved well, and ferved under Servilius Ifauricus in Cilicia; but not long. For, hearing of Salla's death, and hoping to make his fortune out of the differtions raised by Lepidus, home he came; but not finding a convenient oppportunity, and having to no purpose accused Dolobella, to shun the Envy thereby contra-éted, he went, to Rhodes to hear Apollonius, whence fayling in Winter, he fell into the hands of the Pirates, and was forced to purchase his freedom SECT.5. with fifty Talents; to revenge which, he procured some ships, & took some of them whom he nailed to Croffes, though without leave from the Prater, who would have fold them. After this he gave a flop to Mithridates his Lieurenant, and faved divers Cities in Afia. He affifted Pompey the Conful , and others, in restoring the Iribuneship which Sylla had broken. Shortly after he was made Qualtor, and fent into further Spain, where going about to administer Iustice, he came to Gades, and saw Alexanders image in the Temple of Hercules. It troubled him exceedingly, to confider that he himself had done no memorable thing at that age wherein Alexander had Conquered the World, and thereupon he earnestly defired to be recalled, that being in the Cltie, he might carch at some opportunity for his own advancement. 44. Having got leave to return ere his time was out, he joyned pre-fently with the Latine Colonies in demanding the freedom of the Cities and had incited them to some desperate design, but that the Senate for fear of the worst, retained the Legions some time, which were raised for Cilicia. He was suspected to have been of the party of M. Crassus, of P. Sulla also. and Autronius (who having been defigned Confuls, were found to have indirectly fought for the Office, and fo according to Law forfeited their places to the discoverers) in the beginning of the year to fet upon the Senate, and kill whom they pleased. Crassus being made Dittator, he was to have been Mafter of the horf-men under him, and all things being ordered according to their pleasure, the Consulship was to have been restored to the other two, 'ome have affirmed (whom Suetonius citeth) that he also conspired with Cn. Pifo, that the one in the Citie, and the other abroad, should rife, which was prevented by Pifo's death. Being after this Adilis, he fo ma-Made Adilis.

Made Quæ-

Joyneth with

naged the businesse of publick buildings, and shews, that all was ascribed to him, and nothing to his Collegue; by which means, and others, he procured the favour of the People, and effiyed by the Tribunes to get Egypt affigned to him, which, now having expelled the King, he thought would affoard him an opportunity of an extraordinary command. But he was croffed by the great ones, whom that he might vex, he restored the Trophies erected by Marino over the Cimbri, which Sulla had caused to be pulled down; and suborned those, who accused Rabirins. By his means especially the Senate had suppressed Saturninus the sedictious Tribune, and now being brought before Cefar as his Judge, he was so severe against him, that nothing so much helped the min in his appeal from him to the People.

44. After his repulse as to Egypt he flood for the High-Priesthood, and by 06,416, 145 Jarge fums (fuch corruption were those times arrived at) bought fo many Geneth by 1 cyoices as he carried it from two most powerfull men and his Seniors, having bribery the more luffrages out of their tryo Tribes, than they had out of all the rest be-High Priest - fides. Then being Prasor, he stood for the complices of Cavaline so earnestly, as he drew so his party the brother of Cieero the Conful, and diverse others.

After this he affifted Capilins Merellus the Tribune in preferring turbulent Laws, till both of them by a decree of the Senate were displaced, and yet ethen would he fir, and execute this Office fills till forced to withdraw : then, Joyneth again out of policy he restrained the multitude which flocked to him; and offered with sedicious to restore him by strong hand, of which the Senate taking notice, gave him thanks with great commendations, and re-invested him in his Office. After this, he fell into another danger, being accused by Westing and Curius; as a narther of Cataline; yet sappealing to Cicero that he had discovered somes things to him, he came off, and revenged himself upon his accusers. Then obtained he by lot, as we faid, the Government of Spain, and having contracted a vast debt, put off his Creditors for that time, by the interposition of sureries. Coming into his Province he spent not his time in administring Justice, but pierced farther into the Countrey, and subdued certain people before this untouched, seeking matter for a Triumph, which then to obtain he hasted to

Gotth Prator

SECT. 6

SECT. 5. Rome. But it being now that ime for the Confular Comisia, he had an extraordinary defire to that Office, and begged of the Senate, that he might stand for it by proxy, for that he could not himself be present, it being against the custom for any that was to Triumph to enter the Citie ere that day came; for which as yet he was not provided. This, though against the Laws, was not without president, but could not now be granted. Therefore he resolved rather to lose his Triumph than miffe of the Confulfhip, and coming to Town, flood for it himfelf.

46. Great contests hapned about this Office, and he had not carried it. but Obtaineth the that Pempey at this time flood in need of it. For, the great ones envying his Identified, Obtaineth the that Pompey at this time Itood in need of it. For, the great ones chaying in Platarch in Confulthip by fame, refuted to confurm those conditions which he had granted for the Kings, Pompio Colori, Pompio Pempey.

Governours, and Cities of Afia. Lucullan his Predecessor in the War with & Luculla Mithridates, who fince his return had given up himself wholy to idlenesse Velleius Paand luxury (for he first brought into Rome the extravagancy of buildings tercal. 1.2. c. 20. and feasting) they stirred up, by his authority to promote their opposition, Applicante bills and feating) they turred up, by his authority to promote their opportunity with the preferrly fell upon him, together with Metellus Creucus, who bore Dio lib. 37. him malice also ever fince the Piratick War. Lucullan bade him report his pagess. A. matters fingly, and not as a Soveraign Lord expect they should all be confir- Livit Epitem. med without any confideration : and whereas he had rescinded several of his lib.103. acts he defired of the Senate that this might be confidered of, whether juftly done or otherwise. Caso, Metallus Celer, the Conful, and Crassis, defended Lucullus, who boafted that the victory over Mithridates was his own; and he obtained that his decrees which Pompey had repealed might be in force, and those that Pompey made in reference to the Conquered Kings should be null: and he hindred, by the help of Cato, a Law which he would have preferred about dividing grounds to his Soldiers. Pompey being thus used in the Senate, betook himself to the Tribunes, one whereof (L. Flavius) that the Law for the grounds might more easily passe, would have given the suffrage to all Citizens, but Metellus the Consul so earnestly opposed it, that though the Tribune cast him in prison, yet would he not depart from his former sence, which pertinaciousnesse of him and others, when Pompey saw, he desisted, repenting too sare that he had: disbanded his Armies, and exposed himself thus to the malice of his Enemies.

471 At this time came C. Tulius Cafar to Rome to Rand for the Confulfhip. Pompey joyned with him, upon condition that he procuring the Confulfhip for him, he would confirm his acts. And whereas Pompey and M. Crassus had formerly been at odds ever fince their joyne Consulship which they executed with great discord; Cafar now made them friends, A. M. 2016. and not onely so, but they all three conspired together, that nothing should of 180 and 2. be done in the Commonwealth which displeased any one of them; which con- V. c. 695. spiracy, say Writers, was pernicious to the Cirie, the World, and at length to Hyrcan s. themselves. This conspiracy of these three principal persons, Varro (who wrote 4,00 books) described in one book, & called it Tendeavov, Tricipitina, or Three headed. Deodorus Siculus fercheth the Original of Cafarean matters from this year, wherein he travelled into Egypt, when young Ptolomy Dionyfus was King. With this conspiracy also Afinius Pollio begun his History of the Civil War. For the falling out of Cafar and Pompey, did not, as most have thought, procure the Civil Wars; but rather their Conjunction, which was defigned to break in pieces the power of the Nobility, as Plutareh observeth in the life of Cafar. This was the 694th year of the Citie, the first of the 180th Olympiad, Herodes being Arohan at Achens, the 58th year before the birch of Chrift, A. M. 3945. Q. Cacilins Motellus , and L. Afranius being Confuls.

Pombey and craffies made

friends, and they three

make the conspiracy,

called the Tricipitina.

CHAP.

From the beginning of the Tricipitina or first Triumvirate, to . the absolutenesse of Julius Cafar, containing the : Space of sixteen years.

fo his adverfaries pur-chase the Confulfhip.

A S A R by the help of Pompey obtained the Confulship; but not without the affiftance of money also. There were two other Competitors, L. Lucerius and M. Bibaius, whereof he was much for the former, having agreed with him, that because he was lesse in favour, but very Velleins !. 2. rich, he should give money for them both through the Centuries. But the c. 33. Grandees understanding this, and fearing if he had him for his Collegue he Appian belli cimight do what he listed, they caused Bibulus to offer more, they themselves vilis 1, 2,9,435. contributing to the expence, which corruption Cate denied not to be for the Strabo lib. 12. good of the Commonwealth, now brought by the means of fuch evil mem- P. 550. bers into absolute danger and necessity. Cefar confirmed Pompey's acts ac- fare, Lucullo, & cording to agreement, neither Lucullus nor any other opposing it, and Pom- Pompeio. pey procured, that what honour Lucullus had promifed to certain men of Pon- Livis Epitom, ins, should not be confirmed by the Senate, filling the City with Soldiers, and by force casting him and Care out of the Forum. In this his first Confulship he sold alliances with Rome, and also Kingdoms; and, to procure the favour of the Commons, preferred a Law for dividing certain grounds in Campania (which had been preserved to defray publick charges) to such Citizens as had three children or more. This he caused to passe by force, and compelled all Pleberans to swear to observe the Law, and the Senators actions for forme time to no purpose, kept himself at home, and stirred not for the remaining part of the year. Cafar then governed alone, and was much courted by the Equites or Knights, who having farmed the custome, defired an abatement of the rent. The Senate refused to remit any thing, but he did their businesse for them, procuring the People to abate a third part. By inveigling By this and other wayes of Thews and Targesses, he so inveigled the multitude, that he got Gall to be decreed to him for five years, with four Legions, and for ple he procure the remaining part of the year, spent it in seeking how to establish himself for the time to come.

His acts

also, though Cato urged them to refuse; for they did it to save their lives, he having caused the People to decree, that it should be capital for anyto deny it.

He had recourse to the People in all cases, making little use of the Senare.

which he feldom called together. Bibulus his Collegue having opposed his

He marieth eth for his five years.

2. Knowing how confiderable a man Pompey was, to bind him fafter to him, he gave him in mariage his daughter Julia. He procured two of his own his daughter creatures, A. Gabinius and L. Calpurnius, Pifo (whose daughter he had ma-Jalia to Pom- ried after Cornelia's death) to be defigned Confuls for the following year, py, and other- as also Vatinius and Clodius Tribunes, though the later had abused his wife (for he was a person exceedingly loose that way) having in womens clothes own interest, crept into the meetings proper onely to that Sex, for which he was accused as a breaker of the facred customes by Cicera. He appeared non against him though he puraway his wife, nay he helped him to his place, as it's thought, out of opposition to the Orator (who was wont to declarite against the combination of the three great ones, as permicious to the Commonwealth) and in way of requital for the help hee had afforded him in the procurement of Gall, whither, when the time of his Confulthin was expired, he departed. This year was Titus Livius the Historiographer born at Radua.

3. Clodim out of malice to Civero feeking for the Tribaneship, whereas he chairs the Was a Patrician, thereby uncapable of the place, the protured himself to be Tribune of adopted by a Pleberan, and so with the losse of his former dignity obtained it. Then did he prefera Law, that who foever had put to death any Roman Citizen unbeard, water and fire should be forbidden bim, which amounted Pompey at first stood stifly for the accused, saying, he would rather dve himfelf than Tully should behurt; but Cafar took him off, because Cicera having defired to go his Lieutenaut into dall, upon Cloding his feeming willing

his fecond

The third.

at Luca.

winter-quarters.

year.

to be reconciled, had changed his refolution, and hereby diffoleafed him. This is certain, that he who was wont to defend others fo earnestly, was very timorous in his own cause (which hapned also to Demosthenes) and chose ra- A. M. 3947. ther to depart the City, and late at night, than undergo his trial, after that V. C. 696. Pomper had forfaken him, and the Confuls would give him little hopes. After his departure Clodina banished him by decree of the People 400 miles from Italy, demolished his Villages and his house, on the plot whereof he built a Temple to Liberey, and fet his goods to fale. He went to Theffalonica a City of Macedonia, being by letters of the Sonate commended to fuch Kings, or Governours, as into the Dominions of whom he might have 4. Clodius having thus rid himself of Cicero, for that Caro's presence was very croublesom to him, sent him also out of the way, under colour of do-Sendeth Cato ing him honour. He preferred a Law against Prolomy King of Cyprus (broill deserved. He was indeed very vicious, if that could have given them any right to what he had; but the truth was, Cloding had been taken by the Pi- Lige Plutarto spoil the ther to Auletes of Agypt) for the spoiling him of all his estate, and re-King of Cyprus ducing that Island into the form of a Province, though this man had nothing Iy of his rates; and fending to him for money to redeem him, he would pare but with chumincancftate. two talents, and therefore he took this occasion to be revenged on him and Cate both together. The King hearing of Cate's coming, killed himfelf, and some said that he cast his treasures into the Sea. Care fold his goods, and brought a great fum of money into the treasury. Bur, by this time Pompey repented that he had forfaken Cicero; for, Clodius wanting other matter now to work on, vexed all the great ones, and repealed fome things which he had done, fo that now he fer himself to have him recalled. Clodius withstood it, but thereupon the Senate passed a Decree, that nothing should be heard before his restitution was propounded. Lemnins the Consul propounded it on the Calends of January; but the matter being hindred, several wayee was brought down to the People on the eighth before the Calends of Fibruary, where was great endeavour used by T. Annins Mile and P. Semine two other Tribunes for his restitution. Cloding their Collegue raking some Fencers belonging to his brother Appine, fell upon the multitude and killed many : The Tribuneswere wounded, and Q. Cicero brother of the banished (nawly recurred from Afia, which he had governed three years) lay for dead amongst the slain. Now the People began feriously to bothink themselves. Mile veneured to draw Clodius by force to judgement, and Pompes possessing himself of the Parum, put the People to their fuffrages, who with universal confere voted his restitution. The Senace decreed honour to such Cities as had entertained him, and that his house and Villages should be re-edified at the publick charge. So Cieero who had been banished the year before about the Calends of April, recurred this year in the moneth Sexuilio, or, the day before the Nones of September, and therefore was absent about fixteen moneths. As a A. M. 4948. Plutarch more rightly computesh than * Simplow, who firangely forgetting himself, blaming him, for faying he recurred in the fixteenth moneth, contendeth that from the first of April to the moneth Saxtilie or August of the following year, intervene but fourteen moneths. Now P. Cornelius Len-tulus and Q. Cacilius Metelins were Confuls. 5. Cafar having obtained of the People Gall within the Alper, and Illy- Vide Cafails ricum, with three Legions, the Senate added, that beyond the Alpes (which comment de in part we now call France) with another Legions. His first work was to repet the Muleurans (now called Swiscers) who having burne their houles and fare, recover to feek our more convenienc habitations, intended to passe over the Disam 1, 31.

feed to General, and pulled down the bridge there. They then fent to him to SECT.6. defire that they might passe through his Province without offence, to consider Cafar's acts whereof he took time till the Idas of April, and in the mean time raifed a in Gall the wall twenty miles in length, from the Lake Lemanus to the Hill Tura (which firft year. divideth Burgoin from Switzer-land) and thereby hindred their paffage. They then bent their course to Araris (a River in France now called Saon) where in their passage he overthrew and dispersed them. They sent him another Florum 1.3.c.to.

message to no purpose, and repelled 4000 of his Horse which too greedily Livis spirm. chased them; but he continually followed, and hindring them from walting 1. 103. the Country, at length quite routed and put them to flight; of 348000, Orofium 1.6.7. 140000 onely remaining, who also shortly after were forced for want of provarious to yield, and giving Hoftages, and delivering up their arms, to return from whence they came, and rebuild their Towns and Villages. After this was done, the Galls complained to him of Arievistus King of the Germans, who had seized on a third part of the Countrey belonging to the Sequani (now Burgandians) and intended to take the rest also. He first sent to him. but this being in vain, he led his Army against him, and they came to an enterview, which succeeding not, he overthrew him also, and he fled into Germany in a little boat, two of his wives and as many daughters being taken, These things Cafer accomplished in the first Summer, in the Consulthip of his two creatures, Pife and Gabinius.

6. The following year all the Bilge (now inhabitants of the Low-countries for the most part) except those about Rheimes, conspired together against the Romans, and befreged Bibyan (now Bearne) and another fort kept by Q. Ti. Cafar Comment. The acts of tunns. Cafar hereupon marched to the River Axona (now Le Difie) La. and there overthrew them, after which divers yielded themselves;

but the Newsi (a People about Tonrnay in Flanders) a warlike and fevere Mation, flood out , with whom joyned the Attrebates and Veromandai (now Inhabitants of Artow, and of part of Picardie) but these he utterly overthrew, scarcely any escaping out of the field. This was done that year wherein Cicera, was recalled. In the third year, purposing for Isaly himself, he sent Servius Galba with the twelfth Legion and part of the Horfe against the Antuates, Maragers, and Seduni, Nations inhabiting from the River Rhene as high as the Mass, because he would have the passage thereabout cleared for traffick. Die 18.39. Gaiba defeated a great multitude of them, which fet upon him in his Camp. Calar not long after returning, found the Venets and other Nations of Gall a Calara in rebellion, who gave him trouble enough, but at length he overthrew the Venetiat Sea, Craffes subdued the Somiates, and the greatest part of Aquitaine, and Sabinus the Unelli and maritime Cities. Then fell he upon the Morini (a People near Calais in Picardy) and the Menapii alfo, thele two Nations still being in Arms. But, Winter growing on, foul weather secured them in the marishes, and caused him to remove his men to their 7. Now by this time he had got great flore of of wealth, wherewith he not onely paid his debts, but made him great store of friends by gifts and contri- Sueton in Julio. butions. Herewith he corrupted the Eddes, Prairies, Confuls and their depian bills wives. Passing over the Alous this Winner into Luca where hardle in civilis lib. 2. wives. Passing over the Alps: this Winter into Luca, where he took up his Pultarchia head quarters, lo great concourse was made to him, that there were present Pompeio, & in 200 Senators, amongst whom were Crasses and Pompey, and so many Pra- (1986) Great confine confulr and Brators, that 120 bundles of rods have been feen together at his Diolib, 39. gates. He fearing he might be recalled, produced Fompsy and Craffus to Paterful, 1,2. obcain the Consulfhip for the following year, and continue him his imploy- c. 46. ment in Gall for other five years. Care perswaded L. Domities to stand forfought the Consulship, telling him he should contend not for Magistracy but for liberty against the Tyrants. But Pompey fearing Cate's vehictionicy, lest, having the whole Senate in his power, he should perswade the People to what was best, fent some armed men upon Domision as he went down to the Forum, who killed the flave that caried the light before them, disperled them all, Case being the last that fled, who received a wound on his arm whilst he fought for Damitim. Pompey and Crassin having thus by force obtained the SECT.5. Confulfhip, bore themselves nothing more moderately afterwards. The people being about to give Cato the Prator hip, Pompey pretended a ftrange fight Pompey and Craffus accord. ing to agreeed the Confulfhips by . for other five ving to go against the

Rheens, and to through his Province. He having intelligence thereof, ha- p. 78. 6.

Parthi ans.

from Heaven, and dismissed the Assembly: then corrupting the Tribes with ing to agree- money, he procured Antias and Vatinim to be chosen Prators. Then by A. M. 2016. the help of Irehonius the Tribune they procured Laws, which continued to 01.181.43, Cefar (as they had agreed) his Government in Gall for other five years, af- V. C. 699. force, and con- figned Syria to Crassus with the Parthian War; and to Pompey all Africk, Hyrcanis. tinue to Cafar and the Spains with Four Legions, whereof two he lent to Cafar for the Gallick Wars. Pompey being permitted to Govern his Provinces by Deputies stayed at Rome, where he spent his time in shews and pattimes. Crassus much rejoyced in his part, scarcely being able to contain himself abroad and at home, contrary to his wonted gravity, breaking forth into Childish expresfions of joy. For, he fleighted the thoughts of Syria and Parthia, as one who would so order his affairs, that the exploits of Lucullus against Tigranos, and of Pompey in the War with Muhridates, should seem but toys, extending his hope's as far as Baltria, the Indians, and the utmost Ocean.

8. The Tribunes hindred all they could, the Confuls from raifing men, Callus against and laboured to repeal the Laws made for their expeditions. Pomper was the minds of herewith well enough contented, having fent his Lieutenants into his Provinall men refol-ces, and being unwilling to leave the Citie, as he pretended, because of the Plutarit, & > his labour in his restitution, had procured him from the Senate, that so he might have authority all over the Roman Empire. But Crassus betook himfelf to force, which when the Tribunes faw themselves unable to withstand, they delifted, but loaded him with curies, and when he made the accustomed prayers in the Capitol for prosperous successe, they spoke of unluck auspicia and prodigies which had hapned. Atteins the Tribune laboured to hinder him from going, many exclaiming against it as an unworthy thing that he Thould fall with War upon those, who had nothing ill deserved of the Romans, but were at peace with them. This made him fly to Pompey to conduct him forth, at the fight of whom those who came to stop him gave way. But Aireins meeting him, earnestly exhorted him to desist, and when that would not do, sent'a Viator to lay hold of him ; but the rest of the Tribunes not permitting this, and the Visior not quite dismissing him., Aurius got before to the Gate where he had fome fire ready, and as Craffus came by, throwing his Odours upon the Coals, devoted him with horrible and bitter curses, invocating certain terrible and unheard of gods. These secret, and anticit execrations the Romans, thought to be of that force as no man ever escaped destruction to whom they were denounced, and also proved unfortunate to the denouncer, and therefore they were feldom used, and

9. Craffus in his march rifled the Temple of Jerufalem, and took away Lege Plutarity Temple of fe- the Treasures which Pompey touched not. He spent many dayes in weigh in Coasto. ing the Treasure of the Idol, called Atargatis by the Syrians, and by the Floring I, 3.c. Greeks Derceto, the Goddesse of Hieranolis otherwise called Ed. sufalem. Greeks Derceto, the Goddesse of Hierapolis, otherwise called Edessa, and Ovosium ubs. Bambyce, and Magog by the Syrians. In his whole passage he shewed more cap. 13. 2 coverousnesse than valour, listing men, and then for money discharging them Velltium lib. 2. again. He neglected his opportunities of falling on the Parthians unpro- cap. 40. vided, and the friendship of the Armenian King, who offered him to invade Paribia through his Kingdom, as also of refreshing his Army in some Citie, (as Cassim advised him) till he had certain news of the Parishans, or else passing down the River to Seleucia, where he might have Provisions by water, and could not be compassed in by the Parthians, This later Counsel he rejected by the cunning infinuations of Abgarus the Ofraenian (otherwise called Angarus, Mazares, Mazares, Marachus, Macorus, Ariamnes, and charge of Provisions committed to him, which Cicero, in way of recompence for Dio ut pins.

Craffus was blamed on the behalf of the Citie, * Florus calleth this Tri- * Lih 3, cap, 11. bune Meiellus, and others write that the Tribunes generally thus devoted * Lib, 1, de him , but it appeareth, * from Cicero , that P. Atteins was principal in this Divinat.

Britain.

head of the

Tricipitina is cut off.

Gabinius banished.

mans.

And is flain.

into Gall to feek new feats, and there outed the Menapit of their dwellings. Cafar defeated them; killing many thoulands, and purfued them over the Rhine, on which he laid a wooden bridge, into the Countrey of the Sigambre (now Guelderland) and freed the ubit (new Inhabitants of Cafar defeareth the Ger-Cullen) from the Dominion of the Snevi, to whom they had been Tributaries. Then returned he to the Morini, or into Picardy, and thence came over into Britaine and pri.

tes (or Phraortes) his other fon gave him Aconium, or Wolfs band, which foundation of the Civil War betwire the other two, for he, whileft he lived, him eafe, he made short work of it, and strangled him.

their painted bodies, for whatloever is thus painted and cololited, in their denum in Briantient Councrey speech they call Brith, having been of bld much given to tama, The name. whence depaint themselves, as many Writers do testifie. Now the amilene Greeks willo fayled by the Coafts, understanding that the Mation was called Brith, might

11. Britain, or Britany, which alfolis Abien, belief ift Greek BPE. TANIA, BPETANIKH, BPETANIE, AABION, and AAOT O.N. was by the Romans called Britania and Romania. It is most probable, faith Cambdan, the Inhabitants were called Britans from having formerly been afriend and Ally of the Romans, had now applied his mind to the Parthian, and feeding Craffus with money, to conceal his Trea- In Tacitus chery, gave him notice of whatfoever was done. He perswaded him to (Annal. 1,12.)

leave off thoughts of Selencia and Cresiphon, and go straight against Surenes Abbanus, but and Sillar, the Kings Captains. This he dld, and thereby first losing his Lippus noteth fon, a choice young man, he himself was by Surens circumvented under upon it that precence of a Treaty, and either slain by his Enemies, or killed by some in the Valican of his own men, to prevent his falling into their hands. This happed at Copy tis ever Sinnaca, a Citie of Mesopotamia, on the fixth of the Ides of June, as Owid was common informeth us ; 20000 men were flain, and 10000 taken, according to Plu- to all the Atarch (not to name other accounts) fo that the East being almost destitute of rabian Kings, forces, many Provinces thereof revolted; but by the care, industry, and as Ptotomy to valour of C. Cassius the Quaster of Crassus (the lame who afterwards with those of E-Brunus, killed Tulius Casar) Seria was appealed. This view Casar Spelin Appian Brutus, killed Julius Cafar) Syria was appealed. This King of Paribia Eypt, in Appear against whom Craffus miscarried (called Grodes , Herodes , and Hyrodes) was fomething skilled in the Greek tongue, and other learning. Arrabazes, or Arravasdes the Armenian (that first offered kindnesse to Craffus) had reconciled himself to the Parthian, who was now with him. He being also A. M. 3952. learned, (for he wrote Tragedies, Orations, and Histories) some of Euri- V. C. 701. pides his Baccha was repeated, and the head of Crassus was brought in as it were by chance, and thrown at their feer. But Sweems was alterwards: punished for his treachety, being killed by his Master who en nied him his glory. And Orodes himself having lost his son Pacorus in a Battel against the Romans, and falln into that kind of Dropfie, called Anaforth, Phran-working to upon him, as with it felf it brought out the humour, and give to. Thus perished Crassias (a) (who was so rich that he would have none (a) cieero offo accounted, but he that could by his own Revenues maintain an Army) fic. lib.1. Whereby one and one of the heads of the Tricipitina was hereby cut off. This laid the balancing them, when he was gone, Cafar must bring under Pompey before he could be Chief. Whilest Crassus warred against the Parchians, Gabinius, who had been Conful when Cicero was banished, reduced (b) into his nius, who had been Conful when Cicero was banished, reduced (b) into his (b) Idem Epi-Kingdom Pralomy Autores, whom his subjects had expelled. Then was he folio ad Quin-Proconful of Syria; but at his teturn being accused, especially for making tum fratem or War upon Egypt (which was supposed to be forbidden by the Verses of Si. ad Attitum bylla) and ready to be corn in pieces by the people, he was yet acquitted by Dio tib 39. corrupted Judges (or Leliar the Tribune) of treason, but bahished, as ur- lib. 8. cap. 1. on other accounts. To chiefly for that he had ferved out of his Province Exemp 3 100000 Drachman, or Denarii, and was afterwards recassed by Cafar. (c) Color, In the mean time feveral Nations of Germany, driven one by the Suevi Comment. 1. 4. (non Smedes (in Latine Sarol) but Grifons now for the most part) came

SECT. 6. unto it add Tania (which word in Greek, as the Gloffaries shew betokeneth a Region) and thereof made the compound name Berravia, that is Britons. Land, which is corrupted into Berravia, but by Lucretins and Cafar the two first Romans that make mention thereof is truely called Britania. In confirmation of this opinion Cambden observeth, that in the names of well-nigh all the antient Britains, there appeareth fome fignification of a colour. which no doubt (he faith) arose from this kind of painting. The Red colour is of the Britans called Coch and Goch, which in his judgement lieth Couched in these names, Cogidunus, Argentocoxus, and Segonar. The Black colour called Du, sheweth it self in Mandubratius, Cartimandua. Togodumnus, Bunduica, Cogidunus. The White collour called Gwin . in Venusius and Immannentius. The Waterish called Gwellme in Vellocatus. Carvilius and Suella. The Blew, which they call Glass in Cuniglasus, and he proceedeth further. But this Learned man coming to speak of the time wherein Britain came to be known abroad, denieth that the Britains were with Heronles at the rape of Hesione, that Uly ses was ever in Britain. that the Britans bestowed any Presents upon Cato, that King Alexander the Great, or Hannibal, was ever in the Island; he doubtern whether ever the thip of Hiero mentioned by Athenaus came hither; yet thinketh that the Britans, were mingled with the Cambri and Galls, in their expeditions into Italy and Greece.

12. But as the Romans, Galls, and Spaniards were unknown to Herodo-

Cambdens ar-Britain Was but known lately.

3

ens, and the antient Greik Geographers, so of this mind he ever was . that it was late ere the Greeks and Romans heard of the Britans name. For he judgeth that little book of the World, which goeth abroad under the name of Arifforle, and maketh mention of the Britans, of Albion and Hierne. to be of later dayes by far than that Philosopher, as the best learned men (faith he) have judged. He accounteth Polybius the antientest Greek veriter that mentioneth the British Isles; who yet knew nothing of them : then doth he, in reference to other Nations, count it but a fable that Himileo the Carthaginian, being commanded by his Superious to discover the Western Sea-Coals of Europe, entred into this Isle many years before that time. And the first Latin Author to his knowledge that made mention of Britain was Lucretius, in his Veries concerning the difference of aire. Now that Lucreting lived but a little before Cafar no man denieth : at what time we are taught out of Cafar himself, that Divitiacus King of the Soiffons, and the most mighty Prince of all Gall, Governed Britain, which, as also appeareth from Cafar, is onely to be understood of the Maritime Coasts. Howbeir, Diodorus Siculus writeth that Britain had experience of no foreiners rule; for neither Dipaylus (or Bacchus) nor Herculus, nor any other worthy, or Demiged have we heard (faith he) to have attempted Wall inpon that people. Now Calar, who for his noble atts is called Divus, was the fielt that Subdued the Britans , and forced them to pay a certain Tribute. From his time (faith Cambden) and no further off must the Writer of our History fetch the beginning of his work, if he throughly weigh with judgement what the Learned Varro hath in time past written (viz. of the three di-Rinctions of times which we have formerly mentioned "uncertain before the Flood, Fabalous before the Olympiads, and Historical linte the beginning of them) and my felf already heretofore fignified. This most learned man mentions this division of Varro, because that the British History of Geffrey of Monmouth taketh its beginning 333 years before the first Olympiad; This History we must absolutely disclaim as utterly Fabulous in reference to King Branks, and other fictions depending on his story. But whether or no Britain was not known abroad till fo lare time as our Anquary judgeth, must be examined for the honour of our Countrey, faving ever that respect which is due (and that justly) unto his name, and will not be at all dimished feeing the contest is betwire him also, and Hacharens himfelf. 13. The congroverile is decided clearly against Cambden if two things can but be made out. 1. That the Cassiterides or Islanas ef tinne were known The contrary very antiently, and 2. That the Cofficerides are no other than the British The first is proved from the restimony of many, that the P. anicians were wont to teade to the Caffirerides, and thence to fetch plenty of Tinne. Strabo affirmeth it, and that they first traded thither alone from Gades , hi- Lib.3, p. 175.

and fuffer shipwrack, to cause his pursuers to miscary, than to reveal the mar-

ding from others this course of traffick; infomuch that a certain Phoenician Sailor being chased by a Roman Vessel, chose rather to run, his ship aground rer, for which fidelity, having escaped himself, he had his toffe made up our of the publick Treasury at his return to Carthage. Pliny also writeth; (6) in the Chapter of the fielt inventors, that Midacritus fir ft caried Lead from the (b) Lib.7. c.56. Island Cashiteris. For Midacricus is to be read Melcarthus or Melicartus the Phanician Hercules, according to Sanchanidthan, whom the Phanicians make Author of the Western voyages. (c) Heroacins acknowledgeth

he knew not where the Caffirerides were; but that there were some then he (c) Lib 3. acknowlegeth alfo, whence Tinne came to them the Greeks, and from him it citis.

anneareth, that they were figuate in the utmost limits of Europe. The Phonnicians being unwilling that any should know them but themselves, the Greeks bought Tin and Lead, either of them, or the Venets or Narbonenfes, to whom it was wont to be caried by Land in a journy of thirty dayes, as Diodorns telleth us. (d) Dionyfins Pariegeies mentioneth them under the name (d) Videlis of Helperides, and fo doth I zerzes. Feffus Anienus Speaketh of them un- apad Bocharti. der the name of Cestrymnedes, expreshy of the sailing of the Phanicians to Canaas Lic. 39. them, and that Hamilto, who was fent from the Senate of Caribage to dif-

cover the West, came thither, as he himself recorded, whom Festus pro-71 fesseth to follow in the description of the West, having made his collections out of the depth of the Punick Annals. These things considered, prove sufficiently, that the Coffuerides were known in very antient times. 14. For the second, that the British Ifter a e thuse Cassiterides or Stannaries, there needs no proof, Cambden himself confessing, nay proving by many arguments, that the Islands of Silly lying off from the Promontory of Cornwal eight leagues, and in number 145, are the very same that from the plenty of Tin were called Caffiterides, from their fite Hesperides, and Oestrymnides from Oestrymnis the Promontory of the Artabri, now Gallitia in Spain, over against which they lye. Now for the consequence of the thing, can any imagine that these Islands should be so long known, and not Britain

it felf to which they lye so close, and from which they are deservedly called British Isles? And what reason is there to think (as Camden doth) that such dream as believe that Hamilto came hither? It's a wonder he should fay, that there's nothing for it but a Verse or two of Festus Anienus; when Fe-flus faith, that he read the flory of the whole Navigation, described by Hamilco himself in the Punick Annals. Cambden himself contendeth, that from the Caffiterides my Lead first of all caried into Greece, whence it folments refuted, loweth, that they were known before the time of Homer, who maketh mention of that metal. As for what he urgeth concerning Polybins, that he was utterly ignorant of these parts, if it were granted that he was, yet the Phoenicians, who in the Heroick times fent out Colonies into the Ocean bevond Gades, knew these Coasts sufficiently. But Cambden mistook the Historian, as may appear from all that passage read together, which onely importeth, that as ie was not known whether Afia and Africk on the South fide were terminated by the Sea, fo neither whether the Sea flowed about the Northern parts of Europe that lye above Narbons which truly at this day we know not certainly, though in so much light. That this interpretation is to be mide, and that Polybins did not mean, that in his age whatever lay above Narbon was unknown, and that they dreamed who spoke or wrote any thing

> rond the Soa, and what was there remarkable, nay (which is especially to Zzzz > of it, hence appeareth. For he himself accurately described the Fountains of Rhodanus, with Corbilon upon Ligeris, and many other maces of Gall above

Narbon. And in his third book he promifeth he would write of what lay bebe noted) of the British Islas and making of Tin. That he performed his SECT.6. promise in the Books that are lost, appeareth from * Strabo, who telleth us, * Like Rice that Polybius describing the regions of Europe, said, he would let passe the aucients, and inquire into fuch as reprehended them, as Dicarchus, and Eracothenes, who last of all had handled Geography, and Pytheas who had insposed upon many. For, he (Pytheas) faid he had not viewed all the foil of Britain : but the Island was above 40000 (Radia or furlongs I suppole) in compasse. 15. From this place it appeareth, that several whom Polybins calleth 78's ciexales or ancients wrote of thefe parts, before either Dicaurchus or Eratolthones, Pytham, or himself. Now Eratosthenes, who, as he faith, was the last that handled Geography, Suidas writerh to have been born in the 1 26 Olympiad, which was celebrated in the 27 year of the Selencide, the seventh of Antiochm Sorer, the ninth of Ptolomy Philadelphin, and the 478 year of the City, when Q. Pabins Gurges and C. Genuius Clepfina were Confuls, Pyrrbus then warring in Sicily, 274 years before the birth of Christ. But Dicaarchus bosteth in Athenaus, that he had Aristoile for his Master; and then Pythess who was cited by both, must needs have preceded them. Yer rhese Writers were but of late in comparison of Orpheus the most antient Poet, one of the Argonauta, by whom Cambden himfelf affirmeth Britain to have been described. Although in truth Orpheus was not Author of those Poems fathered on him, but Onomacritus an Athanian Poer, who lived under the Pifftratide, as both (a) Clemens Alexandrinus and (b) Ta- (a) Spinus I. seanus inform us; yet two advantages we have hereby. For first, Cambden (b) ord, con is inconstant, denying that Britain was known to the ancient Greeks; and fe- tra Greeks ag, condly, this Island must have been known then long before the former Geo- 173. Edn. graphers; for the Pififratida were banished Athens in the third year of the master de 67 Olympiad, the twelfth of Darius Hystaspis, the 244 of the City (at the Thusbulg. same time that Tarquinins was banished) 508 years before the birth of Christ, though they write that he flourished in the 50 Olympiad, in the first year whereof Pififiratus indeed got the Soveraignty over that City. These things fufficiently prove, that Britain was known of old to feveral Nations, though we mentioned not what Bochartus probably conjectureth concerning the Etymology of the name. The Phenicians trading hither for Lead or Tin, might justly call it Baras-Anac, that is, The Land of Lead or Tin, as the Greeks Cassiseris; and this might easily be changed into Bretanica. Anac fignifieth both Lead and Tin, no places in the World are so fruitful of either as the British Isles. And it may feem no wonder that the Word should be so altered, seeing that from Phanice are derived Panicus, Punicus, Punicus, and Panus. He also give th other marks of the Phanicians their planting in those Islands, in the 39 Chapter of the first Book of that excellent Work entituled Canaan, concerning the Colonies and Language of that People, ro which wee refer the studious in Antiquity, having thus farre in some fort feemed to vindicate the honour of our Country, yet with submission to the impartially Learned Reader. Now to return to the course of our Hiftory.

16. The occasion of this Expedition was given by the Britains. They had Cafar Comment. fent a continual supply to the Galls, almost in all their Wars against the Ro- lib. 4. mans, and therefore he refolved to use this advantage, and passe over this Summer, chough it was well spent, judging it would be worth his labour, though he but viewed the country, and took notice of the Havens and Natives. of Cofar passeth any whereof the Galls could give him but very small intelligence. He sent A. M. 2950. over into Bri- Voluseus beforehand to make what discovery he could, after whose return, Christian 53. having received the Morini into friendship, that he might have no Enemies Cn. Pompile at his back, about two of the clock at night he put forth to Sea, and at ten M. s. in the morning got to the Coasts of Britain, where he might fee all the shoar M. Liciais full of men to oppose him, for they had received intelligence of his coming, craffe 264. He perceived there was no good landing place where he was, and therefore staying for the Fleet till three of the clock, he failed eight miles further.

Here, though on an even shoar, was he so opposed, that his Soldiers fought SECT.6. not with their wonted alactity, because their ships being great and deep, could not come near the Land, untill he got more shallow Vessels, and the Enfign-bearer of the tenth Legion leaping out, drew others moved with shame after him. No order was kept in the fight, but every one as he leaped forth into the water, joyned himself to the next Ensign. Cafar fending our continually fresh supplies of men, at length landed all his Army, and the Britains fled 17. His horse being not come over, he could not pursue them, but they prefently fent to treat, promiting to give Hoftiges and do further what he should enjoyn them, He accepted of their offer, and some Hoflages they delivered, promiting to give up the rest with conveniency. But it hapned that the horse being come within kenning, was driven by the tide (the Moon now being at full) to the Westward, and forced back to the Continent; the ships which brought over the Legions, lying at Anchor, by tempest were miserably sharrered, and no Provisions had Casar brought over, as not intending to Winter here. The Britains, having knowledge of these things, agreed amongst themselves to break their promise, concluding, that if they could but intercept or destroy his Army, besides getting much plunder, they should not be invaded for the time to come. They then fer upon the feventh Legion as it was reaping Corn, but Cafar being informed by the His fucceffe. Watch of a greater dust than ordinary that way, suspected what the matter was, and going to the refcue killed many, and burnt their houses for a good compasse. Hereupon they sent to him again for peace. He required a double number of Holtages, whom he commanded them to fend over into the Continent; for the Æquinoctial being near, he would not in Winter trust himself, and the Army, in such weak Vessels. Going on board about mid-tion of Cafar into Britain fell out in the second year of the 181 O'ympiad, Fortresses, which they made onely with great Trees laid together, and when night he came fafe to Land; but 41 Vessels being driven, the men were forced to Land at another place, whereof 200 were presently besieged by the His retreat.

Morini, (who before had been reconciled to Cafar) out of hope of some booty. They were presently rescued, and T. Labienns was sent to chastize the Rebels, who being reduced to obedience, he, and L. Cours harrazed the Countrey of the Menapis, who hid themselves in the thick Woods. Then was the Army led into its Winter quarters in Belgia. The first expedi-

the 699th of the Citie, 53 years before the birth of Christ, A. M. 3950. Cn. Pompeius the Great, and M. Licinius Crassus (both of them the second time) being Confuls. 18. Cafar going into Italy according to his custom, ordered a great Navy to be provided. Having dispatch'd his businesse within the Alps, he went Identib. 5.

into Illyricum against the Pinista, who had invaded his Province. After this having fetled things amongst the Treviri (or them of Triers) who neither came to Councils, nor were otherwise obedient, he took ship at the Haven Iccius (now Calis) with five Legions, and 2000 horse, at Sun-set, and being for sometime carried down by the Tide towards the right hand, arrived again

He returneth, in Britain the next day by noon. The Natives feeing a great number of thips

(for in all there were 800 Veffels) for that they had falfified their word V. C. 70a (all but two forts of people, who fent their Hostages over into Belgia) for fear withdrew themselves into the Woods. Cafar pursuing them took one of their

he was busied in skirmishing, word came that his Navy was shattered by another Tempest, whereupon he recreated, and took care for the repairing of fuch ships as were fit to be mended (four being utterly lost) in which work ten dayes were spent with the great labour of the Soldiers. Drawing then up Cassivellaur fuch as were repaired, and forcifying the Camp, he returned. In the mean General of time the Britains had made Caffivellaun (whose Dominions lay North the River of Thames, and with whom before Cafar's coming they had waged War) their General against the Romans. At first the Britains fighting from their Waggons put their Enemies to it, and killed Q. Isherius Duing a the Britans.

SECT. 6. Tribune; but the day following, the Romans recovered their credit purring the other to flight who had falln upon them as they we're gathering forrage, so as they durit not after this time meddle any more with them when in any confiderable body. 19. Then did Cufar passe the Thames (the Soldiers wading over with Cefar paffeth their heads onely above water) though the Britains had fastneil sharp stakes over the under the bank, and there made all opposition they could, which was inconsi-Tham:s. derable. Paffing on in Caffivellaun's Countrey he wasted it. Caffivellaun (or Callibellin) having dismissed all his Army except 4000 Waggons, wherewith he much endamaged the Romans by making fallies upon advantage out of the Woods. But the Trinobantes (inhabiting those parts long after by the Saxons called Effex and Middlefex) having had their King Imannenting killed by Cuffivellann, for that Mandubrasius his fon had escaped to Cafar, vibided themselves, and defired that the young man being restored first to his Father's Kingdom might be protected against Caffivellaun. This Cafar granted receiving 40 Holtages and Corn for his Army; and these having prote-Rion given them, others near adjoyning yielded themselves. Then did Cafar take Caffivelaun's Town not far distant, being onely a fortified place in the Woods. He fent into Kent, where four perty Kings, Cingetoria, Carwillim, Taximagulus, and Segonax reigned, ordering them if possible to feize on Cafor's thips; but Cafor having left to guard the Camp ten Companies of foot and 300 horse, these repulsed them with great losse, killing many of their men, and amongst the rest Lugarorix, a Captain of great ac-Cassivellaun count. Cassibellaun hearing this, and knowing the defection of the Tringbeggeth peace bances and the reft, sent, and begged peace of Casar, who being resolved, for fear of infurrections in Gall, there to vvinter, for that Summer was now aland Cafar returneth into most spent, commanded him to deliver in Hostages, ordered what Tribute Gall. Britain should pay yearly to the People of Rome, commanded him not to offend Mandubratius nor the Trinabants, and then drew down his Army to the Sea, which he wafted over at twice, for that he had many Prisoners, and many thips had perished by Tempest. The season being very good they came all fase to land, and he quarrered them about in leveral places, because Provisions were very scarce in Gall. This second expedition of Cafar into Britain hapned the next year after the former ; L. Domitius Anobarbus, and Appius Clandins Pulcher being Confuls.

Julia dicth.

Revolters.

20. This Winter did most of the Galls revolt. First, the Eburones (now The Galls reinhabiting the Bishoprick of Liege) by the instigation of Ambioria their volt. Prince, who by treachery circumvented two of Cafar's Officers, O. Titurins Sabinus, and L. Arunculeius Cotta, with a whole Legion. He also belieged Identifid. Q. Cicero, who commanded the Legion that quarrered amongst the Nervii, who had their feats about Tournay in Flanders. But Cafar came in to the Die lib 40, rescue, and overthrew the Galls. Labienus lying with another Legion about Rheimes, the Treviri and Indutiomarus came to his Camp, intending to de- Orofins lib. 6. Aroy him; but he took his opportunity, and powred out his men upon them, capto. willing his Soldiers to be fure that they killed Indutiomarus, which being done, things again were a little feeled. Whilest Cufur was thus imployed arial) with her. Hereby was the bond of friendship betwixt them two broken, and their mutual envy, which thereby onely was restrained, now wanted but an occasion to vent it self. But Cafar foreseeing great stirs in Gall, in- Cafar commit. creased his forces, subdued the Nervis, brought under the Senones and Car-lib. 6. nutes (now changed into Chartres) the Menapii also; whileft Labienns reduced such as inhabited about Triers. Then did he again crosse the Rhine, because of the Conjunction of the Germans with the Galls, and attempt-Cafar reducething fomething upon the Suevi to no purpose, turned against the Eburenes. Whilest he harrazed their Territories, the Sigambri set upon the Camp of Cicero then ablent, which they could not florm, though they caused great consternation amongst his men, and killed many. After this he wasted again broad, in the Citie, this year died his daughter Julia, Pompey's Wife, in Child-bed, and the Infant (whether Son or Daughter, 'tis as uncertain, fo immate-

Winter quarters. Stirs in the Citie.

Cledius.

the grounds of the Enemy, then called a Council in Gall for the punishment of Revolvers, and Providing the Army of necessaries drew it into its 22. The following year produced great stirs in the Citie, and those no leffe in Gall. For now were the times to altered, as that Rome could not be Lege Appian de found in Rame. Nothing was managed by ancient equity and moderation, bello civil. 1,2. all Offices were purchased by Money, or else by Stones, Clubs, or Swords, and the inconveniences of popular Government now grew ripe, the name of a free State, or Commonwealth, covering the greatest injustice, disorder, and oppression of the peoples liberty. The Confuls being debarred by the nower of the Tricipisina from leading out Armies, or Waging Wars according to the autient right and cultom, made up their markets out of the publick Revenue, or their Offices by indirect practices, and therefore none of honour would feek after the Confulthip, Pompey connived at this, hoping this a necessity of affairs would draw upon him the Diffatorship, as some of his Creatures, though not in his name, did not flick to bint. This year especially was there such an horrid contention amongst the Canditates (all or most then of large consciences) as for a long time no Consul could be elected; and this heightned the matter, that T. Annius Milo, one of them, being at great samity with Clading, killed him as they met in the way not far from Mile killerli the Citie, This fact the people ill resented, and naughty, and dissolute perfons, under pretence of featching for Milo's friends, committed many outrages in Rome. This runned indeed all men's eyes upon Pampey, as the fit-tell person to redresse those evils, and whilest they thought of making him Diffarar , Care drew the Senate to this resolution , that he should be made Conful alone, that he might be called to an account for his male-admiffra- A. M. 3953. tion if need were, and to he was made fole Couful, without any President V. C. 702. Pompey made rion if Conful alone, at all. 22. First, he sate in judgement alone, and examined Mile's case; he also His Acts made inquisition after such as had by indirect means procured Offices. Mile Idem ibid. was defended by Cicero, or rather should have been; for the Orator was so Plutarch in terrified with Pompey's Soldiers, and Clodius his friends, that he could not Pompeio. proceed, and is therefore said to have written that Oration afterwards, which is now extent. Mile then was banished, with several others for other Crimes. Livii spiton, Pompe, having hitherto as it were executed the Office of Diffator, took to lib. 107. him a Collegue, Q. Scipia Metellus, whose daughter Carnelia he had married. These things being heard in the further Gall, and a rumour spred that Cafar who now was in Isaly, would be there retained by the motions in the Citie, many of the Natives conspired for the recovery of their liberry, and chose thefe firs re-Verging ergtix for their Captain. 23. Cafar, though in the midft of Winter, and forced to make his way through depths of Snow, returned, and came upon the Arverni at unawares, He took several of their Towns, but besieging one that was situated upon an Cesar comment. high Hill, he fought with difadvantage, and was driven off with the losse of 16.7. 46 Centurions. From this fiege he was called by the revolt of the Hedui, and an insurrection of the Bellovasi; and Labienus, who had prosperoully managed his affairs about Paris, joyned with him. Now, most of the Galls being revolted, he first overthrew Vorcingetarix, then pursued, and were not able to relieve, Varcingenaria, according to his own offer, was de-cefareduceth belieged him in Alefia, a Town of the Mandahii, which, when the Galls livered up, with Alefia, and all their Arms, Then reduced he the Hedui, the Arveni also yielded, with divers others, which being done, he sent the Army away into its Winter quarters. In winter the Galls hatched a new confpi-Anew confpi- racy. Cafar therefore departing from Bibratte, wasted the Territories of Hirtim tib 8. the Bituriges (about Bourdeaux) and of the Carnutes; subdued also the Rellovaci with others. C. Fabius also reduced fome in the mean time, and Caninius having routed several parties, with him Casar joyned, and besieged Avelledinum, a Town of the Cadurci, very strongly fortified by its signation. kle obtained this Town without firlking and froak, by cutting theveins of SECT. 6. Fountain which served them with water. After this the Cities of Aquitaine vielded, and going to Narbon he disposed of his Army into their Winter quarters. These things hapned in the eighth year after his coming into Gall. Disappointed. Ser. Sulpitius Rufus, and M. Clandins Marcellus being Confuls, wherein also were began those contentions betwixt him and his adversaries at Rome, that shortly after brake into Civil wars, which proved deadly in the end to the heads of both the factions, and fatal to that form of Government which (though labouring under mortal distempers) was yet on

SECT.6.

24. Cafar's carriage, especially in his Consulhip, had rendred him very distastefull to the Senare. Pompey on the other fide, by his fair demeanour had of lare gained much upon it, which Cafar being aware of, defired leave to fland for a second Confulship in his absence. This was granted him ; but he fearing the malice of his adverfaries in case he were reduced to a private condition, further importuned the Fathers that he might have his Government of Gall prorogued, cashing about all manner of wayes to keep his Ar-and occasions my till he should be Conful. This was hindred by Marcellus the Conful. who had succeeded Pompey; whereupon Cefar laying his hand upon his Wars betwirt Sword, Said, that that should obtain it for him. This Marcelline was very Appian detal. bitter against him, pressing hard that a Successor should be sent to him; but lo civili like. Pompey and this was croffed by Pompey, either out of good nature, or policy. Such were Vellein Pa-Cefar. defigned Confuls for the enfuing year, as were most opposite to Cafar, viz. tere, 1,2:0,48. L. Emilius Paulus, and C. Claudius Marcellus Nephew to the former Conful by his brother: Curio alfo, an invecerate Enemy of Cafar, was made Tribune. Yet all these, except Claudins, were drawn aside by money; Paulus by 1500 Talents, and Curio, who was much indebted, by 100000 Sesterces. Marcellus then urging that a Successor was to be sent to Cafar, Curio fifly withflood it, alleging that then ought Pomper also to dismisse his Army; for that his power was equally dangerous to the publick liberty. Pompey outwardly seemed willing, and said he would disband his men: but Curio fell foul upon him, telling him, that promife without performance was nothing; and, that he might feem to stand for the good of the Commonwealth, and not carry favour with Cafar, he defired, that if they both refused to disband, they should, the one as well as the other, be declared Enemies to 25. Pompey exceedingly netled hereat threatned him; but he ceased not to urge the thing. The Senate could have wished them both reduced, but feared to disband Pompey's Army, looking upon Cafar as the more dangerous person. Pompey sent now to him for the Legion he had lent him, both of them being ordered into Syria to defend the Eastern parts now in danger by the overthrow of Craffus: he fent him this Legion, and another of his own; but there being no need of them in Syria, they wintred at Capua. Those that brought them into Italy did ill Offices for Cafar, and gave out, as if his Army at his return would all revolt, which though very false was believed by Pompey, who thereupon neglected to provide for so dangerous a War as followed. The next year C. Claudius Marcellus and L. Corn. Lentulus were Consuls, and it was propounded to the Senate, whether both Pompey and Casar should lay down all power. Though once it was carried that Cafar onely should, when the Consul propounded it severally, yet * Curio again putting it to the question, it was carried against both by * confulc for 348 voices. Hereat the Consuls inraged, left the Citie, and gave Pompey pianum debile power as from themselves to fight for his Countrey against Cofar, which countries to fight for his Countries against Cofar, which curio labourhe seemed not altogether to approve. Now Curio perceiving himself in pag.446. eth hard for danger, and that he could do no more service for Casar, sled, unto > 26. Curio being called to a Confultation, would have had him presently to invade Italy; but he chose rather first to make an overture of Peace, as 'ris faid, writing to his friends to procure, though it were but two Legions with Gall within the Alps and Illyricum, untill he should be Conful, which though it feemed fomething reasonable to Pumpey, the Confuls would not Sect. 6. admit of it." Then wrote he to the Senate a menating and bitter letter, as it's filled by * Cicero , (who now was returned from Colicia his Province, which he governed a year, and for his good service in the field was fallited * Epillol. adfa-Imperator, and had a triumph decreed him by the Senate, which thefe di- miliard, 16. thurbances quite put off, he faying, that fo'an agreement were made . he had Epif. 11. rather follow the chariot of Cular) whetein after all Honourable mention made of his own explores, he fignified, that he was willing to relign his power, Dio l. 40. ini-

Cafar.

in case Pombey did the like; otherwise he should retain his Forces, and fre- tio. fently come to revenge those injuries which had as well been offered to himfelf as his Country. Ar the reading of these last words all tryed out, that War was dehounced, and they fent L. Domitims to fucceed him in his Goverament, with four newly railed Legions! For that Witonias and Callins L. Domitius the Tribunes were of Cumo's judgement, the Confuls bade them depart our Senare to fue of the Senare, left their persons Sucrofant! (as the term Was) by their Office,

Gould be violated; who in a great rage departing that night, fled towards Cafir. So now began this famous Civil War, in the fourth year of the 182 Olympiad, the 705 of the City, 47 before the birth of Christ, A. M. 2076, the aforefaid f. Clauting Marvellus, and L. Corn. Lenendre being Con-27. The Senate did not think that Cufar would return prefendly out of Gall, as being unprepared for such an undertaking; and therefore were more flow in their Levies; but he ever judging expedition to be the greatest help Lege Applan. ubi flow in their Levies; but neever judging expedition to be the greatest unip fulfia. in his undertakings, refolved with five Legions to begin the work, and take Cafar de bello in the commodibus places in lowly, and so did he with admirable speed Ari- civil Lt. minum and others. This unexpected thing certified the Senate, and the Peo- Diol. 40. Cefar invadple, which called to mind the find effects of the Civil Wars betwirt Sylla eth Italy, and Marias, Cicero would have had them feet to Cafar, but the Confuls withflood it. Then departed Pompey to the Army at Capua, whom the Confuls presently followed. The Scharors being at their Wits end, spent all than night in their house, and at length followed Pompey to Brundafium. Cafur A. M. 3956. at Corfinium met Domitios who was sene to succeed him, whom he diffile. 01.182. ann. 4. fed, after he had received his Boldiers, that flow revolved to him. Then follow- V. C. 701. ed he Pompey to Brundusium, who had fent over the Confuls with part of the Legions into Epirus, which he intended to make the Year of the Warre, staying in the Town till the return of the ships, to traffport the relt of the Polloweth. Pompey to Brundusium, Army. Cafar attempted to florm the place, but he withflood him, rill fuch time as he had fhipped his men, and so passed over to Dirrhachium. 28. Cafar knew not well now what to do. For hearing fuch concourse to be made to Pompey (who drew to his parry all the forces of the East) and knowing his old Army to be in Spain his Province; he reared to follow him over, left he should expose It yro it, and have an enemy at his back. He Appian utorius therefore returned to Rome; having in the space of 60 dayes got all Iraly in- Casaris de bet to his hands Without blood, and breaking open the Treatity rook out the inoney wich had layth there ever fince the taking of the City by the Galls, being referred for such another case of extremity. For the Arabium or Treasury Pompeio, Returneth to in the Temple of Saturn was three-fold. One whetein the tributes or cu- Sucton in Julio. froms gashered from Chizens and afformer was kept, an alfo boory got by Generals, which was referred for the ordinary expenses of Warre. Another more private, wherein the Videffine, of twentieth parts gathered from them that were manualized, were faid up for extraordinary chiles. And there was a third yet more private and facred, wherein money was tre-fured up for any extremity that might happen from the Galli, and upon ho other occasion might it be rouched, birter curfes being thid upon him or them thu should do A. M. 3957. or fuffer it. But Cafar did it Cthough L. Metellus the Tribune did all he V. C. 706.

29. Then went he into Spain, where in a short time he brought all under, could to hinder it) pretending that the People was discharged of the curse, for that nothing more was to be feared from the Galls, whom he had through-ly fubdued.

Rifleth the Treasury.

Goeth into Spain.

Pompey.

SECT. 6. though Pompey had there a firong Army under three Captains, Potreius, Afrains, and Varro, whom yielding, he permitted to depart with all their Forces. At this time he loft two legions in Africk under Curio, and Antonius was overthrown in Illyricum by Dolobella one of Pompey's Officers. But now M. Lapidus the Prator of the City pronounced him Distator, and therefore he returned to Rome, where the People being struck with fear. he took upon him the Office, and held the Comition. But finding it to be odious, he laid it down again after eleven dayes, and procured himself to be chosen Conful, with Servilins Hauricus. Then about the midle of Winter did he Diffator for e- order all his forces to meet him at Brundusiam, expecting in the City the leven dayes, beginning of Japuary for his entring into the Confullip. When he came Cafar debello and then Con- to Brundnium, though his forces were not all come together, defiring to let upon Romper at unawares, he passed over with all he had, vit. five Legions, and 600 Horse, although in the depth of Winter and without provisions; Pompey now having eleven Iralian Legions, and 7000 Horle, befides other supplies out, of Greece and Asia. But , those five Legions and two Paffeth over that followed being landed, he rook Oricum and Appollonia without fighting into Epirus. one froik, and then marched freight to Dyrybuchium, the magazin and granity of Pompey. Both of them fare down by the River Apis, Cafar expecting his other forces, which at length Amony brought over, though the eas were watched by the other party, and Pompey exercifing his men who were raw and unexperienced. Pomper hearing of Antonie's coming. depart ted with his whole Army to the River Asparagus. Cafar followed him, and would have fought; but he not firring out of his trenches, he marched back to Dyrrbach am, which having on one fide and Pompey on the other, he was grievoully traiting for provisions, and above all things defired to fight. In feveral skirmithes he had the better; but in another confiderable ingagement was threwdly bearen, and chased to his Camp, which might have been taken, and a period put to the Warre, as he himself confessed, had the Enemy known how to improve the Victory; Pompey neglecting the advantage, either through the advice of Labienus, or his own inadvertency, for that providence had otherwise determined. Though some now advised Casar to make use of the shame and anger of his Army, which defired again to be led out to bat-tel, to redeem it's credit, yet he thought it most convenient to depart thence,

Cometh to and so went into Thefaly, whither Pompey followed him, and pitcht his the plains of Camp on the faral plains of Pharfalum, not of Philippi, as * Flores fally *L.4.c. of. Phaifalum. relateth, and with him Manilius and Virgila

20. Betwixt that Town and the River Enipeus, was fought that great and famous battel betwixt these two great Captains, who both of them are said to have wept in the heads of their Armies, confidering that so many of the Vide Plutarth same Country and Nation should be slain, brother fighting against brother, in Casar, & to fatisfie the ambition of two men. The Armies food for some time gazing Pomptio, & on each other, both being unwilling to begin, till Pompe,'s Auxiliaries, whom Appian at Jupa. he had commanded to stand aloof off, till such time as the Enemy should be broken, and then give the chase (as unwilling to have them ingage in the battel) being wearied with expectation, began to break their ranks. Fearing they might cause his main body to do so too, though he was unwilling at this time to fight, and managed not his command with wonted alacrity, he caused a charge to be founded, his word being Unconquered Hercules, and Cafar's Victorious Venus. The battel was fought with great courage and admirable filence on both fides: bur Pomper's Army, though greater by far, being leffe ex-Where he operienced, was at length broken and put to flight, at the beginning of which verthroweth fight all his Auxiliaries, though great multitudes, ran away as fast as might be, whom Cafar onely suffered in the pursure to be slain, commanding that all upon honoured at Rome.

On Pomper's fell ten Senators (among it whom that Domitins who had been SECT. 6. fent to succeed Cafar) with about 40 Equites or Knights; and of the common fort, they that fay most, 25000; but Afinius Pollio who was in the Fight, and one of Cafar's Captains, in his Commentaries wrote but of

31. Pompey thought first of flying to the Parthian, then to Tuba into Numidia; but being diffwaded by those about him, he resolved upon Egypt, Plutarch is as a Country at hand, powerful, and the King whereof was ingaged to him Pompeio.

in way of friendship as his Guardian. Thither when he came and sent to be Applian whi fureceived, the King being a boy, Achillas, Pothinus the Eunuch, and Theo-Livii Epitom. down his Schoolmafter confulting about the matter, one would have him re- 1,112. ceived, and another not, but the last, to shew his eloquence, declared both Paterculus 1, 2. their waves to be bad, and that he was to be received, and then flin, subjoy- 6.53. ning, Morenum non mordere, that the dead bites not, which faying long after Patrick Grey traiteroufly suggested to Queen Elizabeth, perswading her ropur to death the Oueen of Scots, though he was fent from King Tames this Queen's fon to work her deliverance. This was resolved, either out of fear, as they pretended, that he should get Agpt into his power, or because they contemned fo great a person now unfortunate, or rather to curry sayour with Cafar. Pompey then being received into a little boat, as though to come to the King, who flood on the other fide of one of the mouths of Nile with his

Is treacheroufly flain.

Pombey flying

into Agypt

Army, was treacherously flain, when he could neither flye nor defend himfelf. He covered his face with his gown, and neither speaking nor doing any thing unbecoming him, with a group patiently received the stronks. So fell this great man, being in War a most able Captain, and in Peace (except when he flood in fear of a concurrent equal) full of modesty, in the 58 year of his age, and the very day preceding his birth-day, and the third year of these unhappy differences. His head was cut off, and reserved as a present for Cafar; his body was cast upon the shoar for every one to gize at, and afterwards being washed with Sea-water by Philip his Libertus or Freed-man, (who flood by it till all had looked their full) he wrapped it in his own coat, and burnt it with the rotten pieces of a Fisher's boat which he there 22. Cafar having staid two dayes at Phar falum, on the third pursued Pompey, lest he should renew the War, and so came to Alexandria, where his offended at the fight of the head, and weeping (which Lucan accounteth but Dio lib. 42. feigned) commanded it to be butied. The news of Cafar's successe was not believed at Rome till he fent Pompeys ring thither. Then was power given him by them there, to determin of his Enemies as he pleased, and to make War where he would without asking leave of the People. They voted him Conful for five years, and Distator, not for half an one (as was the custom) but a whole year, with the power of a Tribune for his life, which thing was never granted to any before him. He accepted these honours, and entred upon his second Dittatorship. But ere his departure out of Agypt he was put to much trouble and danger. For, there being at that time a difference head and ring were prefented to him. He rook the ring, but was grievously betwixtt young Ptolomy and his fifter about the Government, he flood much her friend, which favour the is faid to have purchased with the losse of her chastity. His endeavours for her Pothinus the Eunuch, who now feared to be Cafar de bello punished for the sedition he had raised about Pompey, interpreted as finisherly civili i, 3, meant towards the King, and thereby raised a dangerous War, which yet Dio 1, 42. though in Winter, was prosperously ended by Cafar, and the young King Hirlius de bello Alying from his Camp was drowned, too many of his followers preffing into Alexandrino. ceffarily drawn another way by the means of Pharnaces, who now had in> and finking the boar. Cafar then gave the Kingdom to Cleopatra, and to colour the matter, caufed her to take as an husband her younger brother bur eleven years of ag2. But the brought the Dillator himfelf a fon not long after, who by his permission she named Cafario; and had kept him longer with her thin nine moneths, or elfe had followed him to Rome, but that he was ne-

The Alexandrian War.

Italians should be spared. Pampey betook himself to his tent, and sate silent, thinking of Ajax, who was thus ferved in the fiege of Troy, till Cafar bringing his Legions to fform his Camp, he rook Horse, and with four in his company rode as far as Larissa, ere he stopped. On Casar's part were said to be flain 30 Centurions, and 200 common foldiers; but as others affirmed, 1200.

Aaaaa

vided

SECT. 6. vaded Pontus his father's Kingdom. Yer this woman after his departure is Plutarch, in faid to have been as familiar with his Enemy Cn. Pompey the elder fon of Antonio. Pompey the Great.

22. Cafar then went against Pharnaces, and taking Syria in his way, vifired the Cities. He restored Hyrcan is to the Priesthood in Judaa, though Toscobi Ani Antigonus the fon of Arthobalus (who being let out of Prison by him, and quit, lib. 14. fent home, had been poyloned by Pomper's party) fued to him for the Govern- cap. 15. ment. He made also Antipater (whom Hyrcanus had sent to joyn with Mithridates of Pergamus with 2000 horse, and who did good service in the Hirling. Alexandrian War) Governour of Indea. He promoted his own Kinsman

Sexius Cafar from a Quafter thip to the Government of Syria, which Scipio A. M. 1918. father-in-law to Tompey had enjoyed the year before. From Sprin he fayled V. C. 701, into Cilicia, and thence marched with all freed against Pharnaces, who our of fear fent feveral times to him about a Peace, but he returned him onely good words, that he might surprize him. At length he gave him conditions, which he neglected to perform, hoping Cafar would be called away, and therefore he fell on, and overthrew him at the Hill Scotius (where formerly Mithridates defeated Triarius) within five dayes after his arrival, and four Cafare.

hours after he had got a fight of his Army, so that writing to a friend at Rome, Appian billi is to note the celerity of this Enterprize he expressed it in three words, Veni, Vi- vil. lib, z. di, Vici. Then receiving such places as Pharnaces had seized on, and setting things in Alia, as he passed, exacting much money of the people, he was called home into Italy by stirs which hapned in the Citie.

34. He quieted the Seditions, and the mutiny of his own Soldiers, who Plutarch.ie Returneth to flew high in their demands for a dismission, and a payment of what he had Cestive. promifed them. Then being declared Confut for the following year, for that Dio lib. 42. the year of his Diltatorship was out, he passed over into Africk, where Scipio , Cato , Labienus , Petreius , and others of Pompey's Captains were with A. M. 2919. Tuba. He got the better in several battels. Juba caused his slave to kill V. C. 708 Suppresseth him, and his young Son Cafar led in Triumph, who being brought up in Italy Lege Plutareby Pompey's proved an excellent Historian. Case at Usica stabled himself, having read incatonemifriends in Africk. over Plato his Phado of the Souls immortality. The wound not being deep enough he died not prefently, but strugting betwixt life and death, cast himfelf off from his bed, and threw down a Geometrical Table, which making a noise, his son and servants rushed in, and finding him in that condition, his Freed-man, who was a Physician, began to put in the bowels which were untouched, and fow up his belly. But he coming to himself pushed him from him, and tearing out his bowels, inlarged the wound and died, being a man of wonderfull Justice, Severity, and Magnanimity. Cafar hearing of his death let fall some expressions, which signified a great defire to have got him into his hands, and hinted (as was thought) an intention of dealing mildly with him. Petreius and Scipio affo perithed in Africk. After these things returning to Rome he Triumphed four times, over Gall, Ponius, Alexandria, and Africk, it being unlawfull to do it over any Roman; although he carried in Tables, a representation of what he had done in the Civil Wars.

had fled out of Africk, where coming to fight near Munda, his Army was 01, 183, 400, 4 firuck with fuch fear, as it was never nearer running. It had fled, but that V. C. 209. he snatching a Target out of a Soldier's hand, went, and ingaged the Enemy Hyreani 20. himfelf, & had 200 Darts thrown at him, wherear his Officers being ashamed came on, and he got the day, 30000 of his Enemies being flain, with two of their Captains, Labienns and Varus. Cn. Pompey also, though he fled, was taken, and his head fent to Cafar.

Then went he once more into Spain against Pompey's sons, to whom several A M. 2460.

35. This year being that of his third Confulfhip (which he exercised with Julio, Plutanth. M. Emilius Lepidus) being Pontifex Maximus, or High-Prieft, he in Cefae. Dis amended (a) the Roman year, which reformed by him to use the little of the Roman year.

amended (a) the Roman year, which reformed by him, is yet after him called censorinus de Julian. Herein he used the skill of Sosigemes an excellent Mathematician die natalic.20. of Alexandria (where he learned this account, though the Alexandrian Macrobius Sa-Moneths confished of 30 dayes apiece, and five dayes were added at the end plin. 1.18.635.

dict none of his decrees.

far.

detended by

Cicero.

(a) Sueton, in of every year) in Aftronomical Calculations, and of Flavius the Scribe in rectifying the Calendar, Whereas now in the Moneth of February were inrerealated 23 dayes, he intercalated betwixt November and December two (b) Din ut (iother Moneths containing 67 dayes: so that this present year had fifteen pro p 236. c. Moneths and 445 dayes. But this work feemeth to have been done be- 1.7 soilt, 30. fore his last expedition into Spain. After his return he (b) laid down the Caning consule Conshulship, and bringing in a new mode of creating honorary Consults soito arminem for three moneths, made O. Fabius Maximus, and C. Trebonius, whereof the peandiffe, mbil. former dying in the last day of the year, Caninius Rebilus obrained to fucceed tamen to confule him for the few hours that remained, whereupon Tully (c) calls him the furt enim mirimost vigilant Consul, for that he never slept during his Office. Now were fica vigilantia, vast honours decreed him by the Senare, (d) as that he should be Dictator in qui fuo toto cor decreed to Ca. perpetuum, and have the stile of Imperator, not in that fense as Generals were sulatu someon wont to have it given by their Soldiers after some worthy exploit, but whereby (d) Dio ut suthe greatest Authority in the Commonwealth was signified. For the Militia was prato be wholely and folely at his disposal, as also raising of money; and all forts Living lib. 116. of Magistrates, even Plebeian, were to be subject to him, and swear to contra- Appian belli

SECT. VIII

From the absolutenesse of Julius Casar, to the end of the second Triumvirate, and the absolutenesse of Octavius Casar, or Cæsar Octavianus, the space of 15 years.

A S A R being now Conful the fifth time, with M. Antonius (whom he much favoured, and promoted, for that in his Tribuneship he fo much flood for him) to shun (a) envy in the Citie, thought upon ma- (a) Sueton in king War upon the Geta and Daca, which had made inroads into Pontus and Julio. Thrace. About this time young Caffor, the fon of Caffor (by (b) St. abo cal- Appian belli ciled Saocondarius) by the daughter of Desotarus the King or Tetrarch of Ga- vil. lib. 2. latia (to whom Pompey gave Armenia the Lesse, which gift the Senate ha- (b) Lib. 12. ving confirmed was taken away by Cefar, because he took part with Pomper) Suidas in voce came to Rome to accuse his Grand-father. He was sent by his father and mo- Kasae. ther, together with Phidippus a Physician & Deiotarus his slave, who was cor- Vide Gerard. rupted by their promises to feign an accusation against his Lord, that he would Vassium de Hihave killed Cafar when he entertained him in his Tetrarchy. Deiotarus, fa- lib.1, cap. ult.

ther, and son, who reigned together, had at that time four Ambassadors in the Citie, vvho offered their own bodies to Cafar for the fafety of their Mafters. But Cicero being mindfull of the friendship and familiarity he had had vvith the old man, made an Oracion for him in Cafars house, wherein he premifeth, that it was fo unufual a thing for a King (a real King; for as for the Kings of Lacedamon, vvho were called to account by the impudent Ephori, they were indeed no Kings, having nothing but the title, and therefore this can make nothing against this truth) to be questioned for his life, that before that time it was never heard of. Desocarus being acquitted by Cafar, put to death his daughter as the had deferved, together with her husband Caftor Saocondarius that noble Chronographer concerning whom Gerard John Voffins is to be consulted, in his Treatise of Greek

2. Cafar in his last Consulship, to (a) gratifie Hyrcanus the High-Priest (a) Fosiph, Anand Ethnarcha of the Jews, as also the Nation, granted to him to enjoy, and tiquit, lib, 14. Govern the Citie of Ferusalem as he pleased, which he might also fortifie cap. 17. with Walls. To the Tons he granted also a freedom from the charge of Porrage and Toll, with an abatement of the publick Revenue in the fecond year of letting it out to farm. In this second Julian year his Collegue

M. An-

The Julian year.

in Spain.

Celar over-

throweth

Pharnaces.

Rome.

(b) M. Antonius procured by a Law that the Moneth Quintilis should in (b) Applicable honour of his name be after it called Faly. He now restored (c) Carebage and civil lib. Corineb (which two Cities had both in one year been destroyed) by Roman Dio lib.44 Colonies fent thither. Now (d) the people had a great defire to be revenged Conform, de lie on the Panihian, for the losse of Crasses and his Army, and to him unanimoully the War was decreed, and lest any stirs should be in his absence, he strabelike was permitted to name all Officers that should be in the Citie for three years, & 17. Tis thought he would gladly have had the title of King, though, the people (d) Dio 1844. being against it, he declined it. For, as he came into the Citie from the civil, like Hill Albanus where he had facrifized, fome falured him by the name of Plutario in King, which the people took ill, whereupon he faid, he was not King but fafor. Cafar; and all holding their peace, he passed on sad and grieving. And Suctonia Talio. when one of the multitude put upon a flatue a Lawrel Crown, sied with a kivili Epina, white Ribband Cubich was a round Enform, the Tribunes commanded in a libertal white Ribband (which was a royal Enfign) the Tribunes commanded it to be taken away, and the man carried to Prison: but Casar being vexed, either for that the motion of the Kingdom succeeded not, or, as he pretended, that the glory of refusing it was taken from him, grievously rated the Tribunes, and put them out of their Office. At the folemnity of the Luper-

which being twice fer upon his head, Cafar took off, and laid in the Chair.

Cafar feeming He answered, that Jupiter alone was King of the Romans, and sending to affect the the Diadem into the Capitol unto Jupiter, commanded it to be registred, cirle of King, how in the name of the people the Kingdom had been offered him, and he would not take it. This gave fulpition that the thing was done by agreement, and that he defired the title of King; but would be as it were compelled to accept of it. 3. A rumour was also at this time spred abroad, that the Quindecineviri had found in Sibyll's books, that the Parthians could onely be overcome by the calia (which were celebrated on the fifteenth of February) as Cafar fate in the Rostra, Crowned, in a purple Gown, and in a gilded Chair, Antony his Collegue running naked, as the custom was amongst the Luperci, came to him as a suppliant, and in the name of the People of Rome offered him a Diadem,

Romans under conduct of a King; and that at the next fitting of the Senate, L. Cotta, one of the Quindecimviri, would move that Cafar might have the title. Some gave our, that he was indeed to be called Diffator, or Imperator, of the Romans, but plainly King of the other Nations subject to their Empire. These things drew envy upon him, and the indignation of the great ones, even of such as he had (as to their particular) well deserved of. And that faying undid him, Sylla nescivit literas, non potast dictare, utterly thereby cutting off all hope that he would give over the Dictatorship. Being sensible of the envy he had contracted he defired to halte out of the Citie, but four dayes before the time appointed, he was flain in the Senate-house by a confpiracy of above 60 Senators and Equites. Though his death was portended feveral wayes, yet he neglected it. 'Tis faid, that as he went down to the house that very morning, that the names of the Conspirators were put into his hands, but he folded them up amongst other papers and never read them. The chief A. M. 2461. of them were M. Brutus, C. Trebonius, C. Coffins, and of his own party V. C. 710. Is flain in the Decimus Brutus. Coming into the Senate-house, which then was Pompey's

Senate-house. Court, thinking of the Parthian expedition, as he sate in his Curule Chair, they fell upon him, and killed him with 23 wounds. So he who had * fought * rolling lib.

fifty battels, and killed 1102000 men, in that Senate, which he himself for cap. 15. the most part had chosen, in the Court of Pompey, and before Pompey's Statue, fo many of his Centurions looking on, fell by the hands of most Noble Ci- citere lib. 2. tizens, many of whom he had to his utmost gratified, and so lay he, de Divinat. that not so much as a friend nor flave came near his body,

4. So great a man he was that Plutarch * being judge, there was none * In Cafac. of the greatest, and most admired Captains, to whom the Gallick War alone did not demonstrate him equal in commendations, both as a General, and as a Soldier. For, whether we consider the Pabis, Scipioes, Metelli, his Contemporaries, or those that went before him, as Sylla, Marina, and both the Luculli, and even him whose glory for all warlike abilities reacheth to the SECT. 7. skies. Pompsy himself, the actions of Cafar excel all their exploits. For, somerimes he obtained greater glosy, for the inconvenience of the places wherein he made Wan, formetimes for the greatnesse of the Countries which he subdued, sometimes for the multitude and strength of his Enemies overthrown, formetimes for the perfidiousnesse and barbarism of the Nations subdued, sometimes for clemency shewed to the conquered, or otherwhiles for his liberality towards his fellow-foldiers; but alwaigs in respect of the number of barrels, and of those that were flain. For having caried on the War in Gall not fully ten years, he took above 800 Cities, subdued 300 feveral fores of People, and baving ingaged at feveral times with three milhions of men, killed the third part, and took the other alive. So great was the affection of his Soldiers to him, and their care to please him, that where-

His character, as otherwise they were nothing better than others, yet being invincible for his credit, they would not refuse any danger. This disposition in them he first bred and then mintrained by conferring honours and rewards upon them. wherein he foared nothing; then by undertaking all dangers with them, and refuling no labour. His boldnesse indeed and courage, considering that it proceeded from incredible define of glory, they admired not fo much; but his labour and toil which he indured above his strength did attonish them. For, he was of a thin habit of body, pale and tender, had a fickly head, and was Subject to the falling ficknesse or Epilepsia, which first took him at Corduba. Bur he rook not an occasion of lazinesse from his want of health, but by Expeditions, most difficult journeys, stendernesse of diet, and by continuing abroad in the open air, fought to drive away his difease, and keep his body healthful. Most commonly he slept as he was caried in his charior or litter. fo that his fleep was not idle. On the day time he was earied about the Ports. Cirles and Camps, with a boy fitting by him, who wrote down what he distated, and a Soldier with a fivord standing at his back. He made so great iourneys, that in his first Expedition from Rame, in eight incampings he came to the River Rhodanue. From his childhood he had learnt and practifed riding, fo that putting his hands behind him upon his back, he would fix an horfe in his full speed, which was very much for one that had his disease. Moreover in that Expedition he exercised himself so, that riding, he would di-

> Pififiragus. 7. The confidences confcious of the greatnesse of the fact, fearing the worst, secured themselves in the Capitol, it being in the Senate strongly de- Vide Appianue bated how it should look upon the thing, and consequently upon them. Patercul. 1. 2. But for Amazine the Conful (who also resolved when he should be able, to c. 18. punish it, though now he betrayed no such intention) the fact had been ap- Dionem 1, 44. proved of, as done upon an Hiurper and a Tyrant, though they had not long before taken a folemn outh for his prefervation, and degreed fuch valt honours to him. Antonius by putting them in mind, that if he were judged defervedly flain, all his acts were to be nulled, and confequently the affignment of Etate several letters to two Secretaries or more. He was a man ambitious of power, and unsatisfied with any thing on this fide Soveraignty, but Victory pleased him, nor revenge nor cruelty, in which respect Cierra, to note his ambirion, and yet acknowledge his goodnesse of nature, compared him to feveral Offices, which he had of late made to feveral of them, effected that An Annellie no more was done than to decree an Amnellie or oblivion for all that was past, for which Cicero much laboured. The offices were confirmed with this reason entered, because it was requisite for the good of the Commanments, and the day following the Senate meeting again, decreed Provinces to the murderers, viz. to M. Bruma Crete, Africk to Caffins, to Trebenius Afia, to Cimber Bubynia, and Gall about Padento Decimus Brutus. After this, Cafar's testament was opened, wherein he made heirs three Nephews of his Sifters, C. Ottavius of three parts in four of his estate (not of half onely, as Sueton in Juit's found in Livy's Epitome) and L. Pinarius and Q. Pedius of the other lio.

voted by the fourth part. C. Offavins he adopted into his name and family, and most of Flord, 4.c.4.

SECT. 7. those that killed him he named amongst the Guardians of his son, if one fhould be born to him. As fecond heirs, if the former should not possesse the inheritance, he named Decimus Brusus and M. Autonius. He also in his will gave no small matter to the Romans, to be divided man by man, as Plutarch writeth. This moved the People out of measure to indignation against the Conspirators, Antonius the Consul vehemently stirring up the multitude in his funeral Oration. They were driven to that rage, that after the burning of the Corps they were hardly disswaded from firing their houses, and they tore in pieces one Cinna whom they mistook for another of that name that was one of them. 6. Now the series of affaires bringeth us to Cafar Oltavianus the adopted fon of Tulius. He was grand-fon to his fifter Tulia, which woman was wife Offavius his to M. Attilius Baibus, and by him had a daughter that was maried to C.Offawins. He was born in the Consulship of Cicero, and lost his father (who governing Macedonia, died fodainly before he could stand for the Confulship) Appeade belle governing Maceaonia, and todainly before he could hand for the Committee civilit. 3, swhen but four years old. He accompanied this his great Uncle in thelast Spanish school in Accompanied this his great Uncle in the Committee War, who ever kept him close to him in their travail, and was now fent by gullo, him to Apollonia to fludy, intending to take him along with him in the Par- Diol, 45. thian War. There he heard of his death, and the inheritance left to him. His Mother and Father-in-Law Marcius Philippus, were unwilling he should take the name of Casar, as subject to much envy; but after some pause he resolved to the contrary, and assuming the name of Cafar Ottavianus, made use of the good affections of his Uncles friends in Greece, who accompanying him to the City, he was met by a vast number of others from Rome, Here, after he had accepted of the adoption, and confirmed it by the authority of his friend and affiltant in profecuting his Uncle's Enemies. But afrer some waiting, he entertained him with great contempt, and though he had got a great quantity of Cafar's money, yet he denied to let him have any, fearing he should grow into too much esteem. Cafar hereupon sold his own inheritance to pay the legacy given to the People, which procured him much love, Purchafeth his Uncle's (or Father's, as now he must be called) old Soldiers slocked to the Love of him, whom he accepted of out of fear of Antony, who now became every the People.

the Prator as the custom was, he went to Antony, whom he expected to have day more odious, both to him, to People and Senate. 7. The senate suspected Amony as intending to fet up himself, and hein-Appian.

own advance.

ment.

tended nothing more, for which cause he resolved to have some Province as- Livil Esties. figned him, wherein he might get power. To curry favour then he propoun- lib. 117. ded to be confidered Sexus Pompey, who yet remained of the fons of Pompey Diol, 45. the Great (that beloved man) that in requiral for his fathers estate conficated, he might have an allowance out of the publick, and command of the Seas, with that Navy he formerly had. This being received with great applaule was enacted; and so Pompey was called back into Sicily, where he afterwards waged a great War against Cafar. Antony perswaded Dolobella his Collegue (a young man whom Cafar having ordained to be Conful after his departure out of the City, when he was dead, took the Office, and inveighing against his benefactor, would have had the day of his death stiled the birthday of the City) though he loved him not, to ask Syria, not of the Senate, but the People, hoping that after him he should not be denied such a request. The difference increasing betwixthim and Cafar; he defired to have the fix Legions which lay in Macedonia, and obtained them, deceiving the Senare by a falle rumour, that the Getes hearing of Cafar's death, had invaded that Province. He baited them, by preferring a Law against any one's being Dillator. It was his defign to bring these Legions over into Italy to awe and command all, and that he might effect this, he preferred by force a Law for changing of Provinces, and thereby procured to his brother C. Antonius Macedona, which formerly had been affigned to M. Bruens, and to himfelf the nearer Gall (or Gallia Cifalpina) which before was given to Decimns

8. The Senate would in no wife grant this, whereupon he betook himfelf

-mpercy the iviacedonians. to the People. When he had brought over his Legions, part of them revolted to Cafar, who now out of fear went up and down Italy, gathering Soldiers out of the Colonies his father had planted. With a confiderable Army at length Animy marched into Gall, whence he commanded Brutus to be gone, who gave way to him then, but departed to Muting, resolving there to flay and endure a fiege, for that he had some considerable strength, and expected affiltance. Here among straightly besieged him, which the Senate hearing of, by Cicero's working especially (who now began to speak and wrice his fourteen Orations, in imitation of those of Demosthenes, called Philipieks) declared him an Enemy to the State, which proved a means for the bringing in and profesting of Cafar Offavianus. For though the Se-The harred nate cared not at all for him, as being generally of Pompey's faction, yet Appian in Jupra. of him prothey resolved to make use of him for his Armies sake, and therefore erected Diol. 46. cureth young they recoved to make the or min for instrumentate, and therefore elected cafar's prefer-him a flattie, made him a Senator, though but nineteen years old, decreed, Autorio. that he should be considered towards preferment as ten years older, and gave Green Philip 5. him equal power with Hirius and Pausa the Consuls, whom now they sent Suction in Oda. to relieve Bruns. They took Bonmin; but Amony being bold, for that vio. he had got the better in some skirmikes, went and met Pansa, whom he overthrew, but returning catelefly into his Camp, was worfted by Hirting, A littel after, a great hattel was fought near Musina, wherein Antony was quite defeated, and fled to Lepidus then Proconful in the further Gall. Both A. M. 3962. the Confuls died of wounds; Hirring in Antonie's Camp, and Panfa at V. C. 712. Bononia. Brutas being at this time spared by Cafar, thought of departing with histen Legions to M. Brutus and Cassine, now in Greece, but his Soldiers moved by the difficulty of the journy revolted, the fix new raised Legions to Cafar, and the four of old Soldiers to Antony. He then purpoling with a small attendance to passe through Gall, was taken at Agailea, and beto Antony. Before this, Trebonius another of his Complices in Cafar's death, excluding Dolabella (whom the Senate had judged an Enemy) from Livius lib. 120. Pergamus and Smyrna, was taken by him in the later place, and after grie- cicero. vous torments, hid his head cut off, which the Soldiers kicking about as a Thillp. 11. foor-ball, did fo abuse, as no face was to be seen on it. Not long after the death of Decimus Brusus, Minusius Basilius another of the Conspiratours was flain by his flaves, whom he had gelded in a great rage. 9. Now the Senate having no need of young Cafar, flighted him exceedingly, decreaing the honour due to him unto Brutus, whom he had reno need of cafer, the Se- lieved, giving him very bitter raunts, and denying him a Triumph. Being cafer, the Se- fensible hereof, and how most of them were of Compey's Faction, he be- Appian ut su-traied by Capenus Sequanus Governour of the Countrey, who fent his head junction, and fent 400 Soldiers into the City, in the name of the Army, to Living ! 110. demand the Consulfinip for him. Hereat the Senat Ataining hard, one Sutton in An-Cornelius a Centurion laying his hand on his Sword, faid, This fhall do it, Patereul, l. 2. if you will not. Then called he Amony and Levidus into Isaly, whereat c.62. the Senate much startled, and too late blaming their own rigidity, decreed Livis Epitom. him Confut, and whomfoever he would take to himfelf. So he invaded the 110, 120, Consulship, a moneth and five dayes before he was twenty years old, and took Q, Pedius for his Collegue. Then by a Law was fire and water forbidden to all that had an hand in the death of Cafar, and their goods were fold. The Senare was now fo changed, either through good advice or fear, that in stead of slighting they advanced him above all example. They resolved that after his Consulship he should take place of all Consuls, and though lib. 46. formerly they were displeased with his levying forces being a private mans now they defired him to add to his Army, and decreed to him the Legions of Decimus Brutus. The City was committed to his care, and power given him to act what he pleased, though without the prescript of the Laws, Livii spit, which he retained fifty fix years till his death. Not long after came. Swit 1,120, Which prowhich he retained fifty fix years till his death. Not long after came Ami Appian bell. cureth the Hus Lepidus and M. Anionius into Italy, whom he met about Bononia, and civil, 4. Lumvirate.

735

fighted him, gan to tamper with Antony by Letters, as also with Lepidus, for a con- pra.

after a three dayes conference entred into confederacy with them, which is famous by the name of the Triumvirate. 10. The terms of this Combination were, That Casar for the remainder The Terms of the Combina of the year (hould leave the Consulfhip to Ventidius, who formerly in the Social War when a Boy was led in Triumph, and after that rubbed the heels of * Mules for his living. That a new anthority of three men should be erected to Idemibid.

tien.omnes Augures, take away civil diffentions; which they three should execute for five years Diolib.46. with Consular power (for, the Dittatorship was waved, because of a Law late-Arufpices. Portentum inusitatum coaflatun elt ly preferred against it by Antony) with authority to dispose of all Offices for that Term. That Antony should have as a Province all Gall , except that of Narbon, which Lepidus was to have with Spain; and to Cafar was Africk, Nam mulos qui mith Sardinia and Sicily affigned; other places beyond the Seas being left to another time. They agreed further, that their Enemies should be destroyed, fricabat Confut wherein the case of Cicero moved the greatest controversie. For Antony fatlus elt. would not meddle except he in the first place should be slain, Lepidus was were scattered content, but Casar Rood much against it, yet on the third day he affented Gollins libs.

up and down an exchange being made ; for he yielding up Cicero, Lepidus permitted his cap.4. brother Paulus, and Antony L. Cafar his Uncle by the Mother's fide to be proscribed. Lastly, it was agreed that Lepidus should be Conful the following year, instead of Decimus Brutus, designed formerly by Julius Cafar. He quarding Rome and Italy, the other two were to make War upon Brutus and Caffins, who now (though at first without any decree of the Senate) had seized on Macedonia and Syria. Caffins in Landicea besieged Dolabella, who being judged an Enemy by the Senate for the death of Trebonius, when the Citie was taken caused his. Page to cut off his head, and so ended his life, being a man of no great folidity. He vvas fon-in-law to Cicero: but after the divorcing of Tullia they fell into great enmity, vvhereupon the Orator proved a back friend to him in the Senate, reigning amongst the Fathers and the People with his Eloquence. 11. The first effect of the Triumvirate was a Proscription of some 300 Appian.

The effects of

ciccro flain.

the Citie.

persons of Equestrian and Senatorian ranks. Though the pretence was to revenge Cafar's death, yet many were murdered for their rich Estates, others out of malice, and some for their convenient Houses and Gardens. Amongst those of greatest note was Varro, who now living to see and feel a second Tricipitina, yet escaped with his life. Cicero the man most aimed at by Anony for opposing him so vehemently in the Senate, upon the Triumvirs their coming went to Sea; but the winds being contrary, and because he could not endure the shaking of the ship, he returned, faying, he would die in his Countrey often preferred by him. Being weary both of his flight and life, plutauth inch he came to a Village a little more than a mile distant from the Sea. Here his cerone. servants terrified by several prodigies, partly by perswasion, and partly by force put him again in his litter, and were carrying him back to the Sea, when hearing of those that came to seek for him, he caused the Litter to be fet down, and quietly stretched out his neck to Popilius Lana, whom formerly by his Oratory he had faved from condemnation. He ill favouredly enough cut off his head and hands, which he presented to Antony, and for so doing received a great reward. After the head had been sufficiently gazed on by him and his wife Fulvia (who fet on her knees, pulled out the Tongue, and pricking it with Needles, otherwise shamefully shewed her spire)

it was to the grief of all men fer up in the pleading place, or Rostra. To fuch an end came this most famous man, the father of Roman eloquence. He was born at Arpinum, on the third of the Nones of January, in the 648 year of the Citie, C. Atilius Serranus, and Q. Servilius Capio being Confuls, the same wherein Pompey the Great was born on the Calends of Offober. His father was of Equestrian rank, and iffued, as some said, from Tullius Anius, a Noble King of the Volfet. He first deserved the Triumph of the Gown, and the Laurel of the Tongue. And as Cafar the Distator wrote of cap.66.

him, he obtained a Laurel greater than all Triumphs (though he had one de- Plinius lib. 7. creed to him for his good service in the field) by how much the more tis a cap.30.

greater and more excellent thing to inlarge the bounds of Roman wit, than of SECT-7. Empire. He died on the seventh of December, when he had lived 63 years eleven moneths and five dayes. His brother Quintus and his fons were flain. but his own escaped; for that he had sent him beforehand unto sthems.

And many men to get

gant courfes

for Treasurc.

tics meet at Philippi.

money.

others.

12. All places in the Citie were full of flaughters. The ordinary rate of Idem. one head brought to the Triumvirs, if by a free-man, was 100000 Sefferces. if by a flave, half fo much, with the liberty of the Citie. This corrupted many, fo as forgetting both duty and natural affection, they betrayed those for whose preservation they ought to have laboured. Yet now many rare, and admirable examples, of the love of wives to their husbands, and of flives to their Masters, appeared; fewest of Children towards their Parents. Yet Opius his Act seemeth to fland for many, who Aneas like carried our his old and decrepit father, and conveyed him to the Sea, fometimes leading, and fometimes carrying him on his back, till they both escaped into Sicily, whence afterwards returning the people out of a fense of his piery mide him Adilis, and for that he wanted money to fet out the usual Games, the Arcificers willingly wrought for him without wages, and the Spectators by a contribution made him rich. Of such proscribed persons as escaped, some fled to Bruins and Cassius, who received them kindly; but most unto Sextus Pompey now in Sicily, who fent out Vessels to hover upon the Coasts for them, and fur-

The Triumvirs nished them when came over with necessiries. But the Triumvirs wanting condemn the great fums for carrying on the War against Cassius and Brutus, by reason that few would buy Confifcated Estates, condemned also, though not the persons, yet the goods of many rich vyomen, as yvell as men. 13. Cassius, after he had got Syria into his power, thought of making an Idem.

expedition into Egrpt against Cleopatra (who now was going with a great power to the aid of Cafar and his followers) but was recalled by Brutin; for that Antony and Cafar (who having attempted something against Ptolomy in Plutarch in Sicily, put it now off till another time) were coming against them with fourty M. Bruto. Legions, whereof eight had already passed the Ionian Sea. Therefore lea-And Caslins ving Spria to his brother's fon with one Legion, he fent some into Cappadoand Brutus take extrava-cia, who killed Ariobar zanes as one that had conspired against him, and brought him a masse of money. Exacting money with much rigour he came into Asia, and meeting Bruius at Smyrna, they consulted about the Warre. Brusus moved that they should passe over into Macedonia, and there encounter their Enemies : but Cassim prevailed that the Rhodians and Lycians should first be reduced, who refused to Contribute any thing, and were powerfull at Sea. It feeming good not to leave any Enemy at their back, this was performed, and valt lums of money by thir, and other means rifed. The Xanthians standing out, as they had done in former times against Cyrus Orollis lib.6.

and Alexander, were scarce any of them left alive; and the Rhodians had cap, 18.

little besides their lives lest unto them. 14. After this, both the Armies met at Philippi, that Citie of Macedonia, to which, being built by Philip to restrain the 7 bracians, as we have formerly shewn, St. Paul wrote his Epistle. Here appeared on either side 19 Legions. Appian belli Antony and Cafar brought into the field 1 3000 horse; but Bruius and Caf- civil, lib.4.

taken by Antony. On the other fide Cafar's Wing was worsted, and his Camp also taken by Brutus. Cassius departing to an Hill not far off, expected the event of the fight on his partner's fide, and because for the dust he could not discern what horse it was that made towards him; sent Titinius to dis-fins 20000. who coming thither first, incamped on an high and convenient Plutaveh. in ground near the Sea, whence they could have Provisions in abundance. Antonio. The other party was exceedingly straightned for necessaries, having onely patercullib.2. Macedonia and Theffaly open to it, for that Pompey cut off all entercourse cap 70. from Africk, as Murcus and Enobarbus from Italy, by their Navies. This Livit Epitom. made Antony defirous to fight above measure, which the Enemy knowing well lib.124. enough, refused to ingage, till Amony making a Way through a Fen to intercept his Provisions, and a work being raised by Carsius against him, this procured a fight, wherein Cassing had the worst on his part, and his Camp was cover.

Bbbbb

SECT.7. cover. He being received with joy by those that were bringing tidings of victory, flayed fo long; till Cassim, fearing the worst, and that the Messenger was cashus killeth intercepted, killed himfelf, or caused his Liberius, or Freedman, to cut off his himself out of head. Scarcely was it falln, when Titinius coming, followed him by his own misapprehen- hands, whom as he said, he had killed by loitering. 15. Brutus presently caused his Collegues body to be buried out of fight, Appian us fulest the Army should be dejected; and then had no mind to fight, desiring pro rather to starve the Enemy, who now was in desperate condition by want of Dio lib. 47. necessaries, till fearing a desection, for that some had revolted already, or M. Brato. till being forced by the earnestnesse of his Soldiers he led them out to bat- Patercul, at tel. Both parties, though Countrey-men, were so greedy of ingaging, that they prins. neglected to use any missive vveapons, and betook themselves to their Swords, Livius lib, 124, fighting with great animofity, till at length Brutus his fide was born down, And Brutus and put to the rour. He escaped to an Hill, where remaining all night, when after a defeat. in the morning he saw no way of escaping (Aniony having made him sure, lest he should renew the War) he set his swords point to his lest pap, where the motion of the heart is felt, and forcing it into his breaft, expired. This A. M. 3968; was the end of these two men, by the same vveapons as some write where- 01,181,000. with they killed Cafar, who had given them their lives, and received them V.C. 712. Cafar proviinto favour after the battel of Phar falum. While they fought liberty by his Hyrcani 22. deth for the death, by that very means they loft that which they accounted fuch, being inworft. deed no other than a liberty for the common fort to run into extravagancies, and for particular men to abuse their credulity, and by flattery to procure power, which they then would improve (even Pompey himself, as well as Sylla, Cinna, Marius and Cafar) further than their Commissions extended. With them perished the hopes of that called a Commonwealth, which thence-Antonies carforth never was more feen. As for the fucceeding bickerings which the riage in the Triumviri had with young Pomper, they were but inconfiderable in comparison of this War with Cassins and Brutus, who having under their power all the Roman Empire from Macedonia to the River Enphysics, with above 20 Legions, 20000 horse, 200 long thips, and infinite sums of money, so long as they remained, the Commonwealth feemed (though not at Rome) as yet to be furviving. 16. Cafar being indisposed (for he had not his health this expedition, and cafar return- therefore was not in the first fight) returned into Italy. Antony went into eth to Rome. Afia to gather up money for the paiment of largeffes promifed to the Soldiers. Here he squeezed out of the poor Inhabitants that little which was left them by Cassius and Brusus, the followers of whom he also restored as he met Appian bellicial with them, except such as had an hand in Cofar's death. In Cilicia he met vil lib. 5. with Cleopatra Queen of Egypt, on whom he prefently doated, having formerly had much affection for her when yet a Girle, at such time as he ac- piglib.48. Agreet follow- companied Gabinius into that Kingdom. Thither he now followed her, haeth Cleopatra ving first sent a party of horse to plunder Palmyra, a Town situate near Euinto Egypt. phrases, and laid most heavy Tributes and Impositions upon the Provinces. After Cefar had recovered, according to their agreement at parting he fet A. M. 3964." himself to divide Lands to the Army in Italy, which hereby was put into a V. c. 713. great combustion, the number of Soldiers being so great, that multitudes of Inhabitants were turned out, and many Towns emptied to give place to those new comers, who committed many outrages, and had not purchased those made. Lands by any fervice to the State (as was complained) but by ferving to inthrall it to the Dominion of three men. Fulviathe wife of Antony, and Lucius his brother now Conful, envied Cafar this popularity with the Soldiers, and contended earneftly that they ought to fettle the Soldiers of Antomy, which was granted. But herewith not contented, they refolved to profecute him with War. She, for that the defired her husband might be recalled thereby from Cleopaira, concerning whom the had too much cause to be jealous of him : and he out of defire to innovate, pretending an indeavour to suppresse the Triumvirate, and to reduce the antient form of Government, and enulting much to the thrength of his brother.

17. Much

17. Much ado was made to reconcile them, but to no purpole. The an- Sect.7. War betwire tient Possessor of the grounds slocked to Lucius, and the new ones to Ca-Cefar, and the far, to whom Salvidienus coming out of Gall with great strength, Lucius Appiav, brother and went to oppose him, but was diverted by Agrippa, and reduced to such wife of Autony, fraights betwire them two, (though Ventidius and Assimius, two of Antonie's Captains were not far off) that glad he was to betake himself for security to Perusia a strong Town, where he was closely besieged by Casar and his party. He flood out very couragioufly, till forced by famine to yield to mercy: then coming out first and casting himself into Casar's hands, he interceded for his Soldiers, and defired all the blame might be upon himself : he was received honourably, and his Soldiers were pardoned at the desire of their Enemies. The Town was to be plundred, but by a mad-man, who fet his own A M 3965. house on fire and therein perished, it was burnt down to the ground. About V. c. 714. this time was the first Ecloge of Virgil written (who now was some 28 years old) during the division of those Lands, as clearly appeareth from it: the above Vide Servium mentioned L. Antonius and P. Servilius Ifauricus being Confuls, in the 713th in locum, year of the Citie, and the third of the Triumvirate,

18. After the Perufian War (for fo 'tis called) Cafar fufpeding Ante- Appian.

nie's affection towards him; to strengthen himself seized on Spain and Gall, though his Provinces, taking occasion at the death of his Lieutenant, vvhereby being 40 Legions strong, he vvas able to graple vvith him if need should require. But having no shipping he was at a losse as to Sea matters, and therefore married Scribonia the fifter of Libo, father-in-law to Sextus Pompey, from whom he hoped by this alliance if need were to obtain peace. Antony this Spring moved from Alexandria, where he had lived all Winter very loofely with Cleopatra, as against the Parthians, who now under conduct of Labieniu had over-run Syria as far as Tyre. Though this Town was fet upon by them, and he pretended he would relieve it, yet he did not, alleging a necessity of going to the War against Pomper, who now hindred all Provisions from coming to the Citie, and thereby caused a great dearth: & he again excused himself why he came no sooner to that against Pompey, because he was retained by the Parthian War. Sayling then into Asia, he had news of the event of the Perusian War, and blamed much his wife and brother ; whence paffing into Greece he met with her, and his mother Tulia, whom Pompey having taken now fent fafe to him. Thence he fayled over the Ionian Sea, where Anobarbus delivered up all his Fleet and forces to him; and so they came to Brundusium, where they were kept out by a Garrison placed there by Cafar. 19. This made such a breach betwirt them, that Antony blocked up the

The Triumvirs Town, and procured Pompey from Sicily to invade Italy. Cafar came to Appian, Brundusium, where the old Soldiers being unwilling to fight against Antony, the Army laboured to reconcile the Triumvirs, which Cocceius friend to both at length effected with much labour; Pollio on Antonie's fide, and Macenas on Cafar's, as Delegates making up the breach. All offences were mutually to be forgiven, and for that Marcellus husband to Offavia Cafar's fifter was now dead, and also Fulvia Antonie's wife for grief that he negle-Sted her, Antony married Offavia. Then was the Roman Empire divided Are reconciled betwixt them, the bounds of their Dominins being Codropolis a Town of Illy. and a new a-ricum, all from it Westward being to obey Cafar, and all Eastward Antony. Africk was left to Lepidus, who now was even no body, and having offended Cafar had been confined by him to that Province. The War against the Parthsans was judged to Antony, and that against Pompey (who must needs now be suppressed) unto Cafar. Antony sent Ventidius into Asia to restrain the Parthi ins, who now had made an incursion as far as Ionia. But out of Sardinia did Menodorus Pompey's Admiral the second time eject Helenus Cafar's Captain, whereupon Cafar refused to hearken to Antony, when he moved him to be reconciled unto Pompey. Both the Triumvirs' (or rather now the Duamvirs) being come to the Citie, were received with most lamentable complaints of poor people, ready to starve for want of Provisions, which Poma

Bbbbb 2

A great famine caused by Sextus Pompey.

agreement

with him.

SECT. 7. per hindred from coming, from the East by Sicily, from the West by Sardidinia and Corfica, which he had in his power, and from Africk by his Navv also, which then was most powerful at Sea. Cafar could not be drawn to make Peace with him, notwithstanding the loud cries and prayers of the multitude, which obstinacy drew him, and Antony (rescuing him) into such danger, as both of them were near stoning. At length being forced to it, and Pompey being perswaded, they met, but Pompey expecting to be admitted into the power and place of Lepidus, the Treaty came to nothing. Yet the pressure of the famine brought them together again, and amongst other things it was concluded, that Pompey retaining all the Islands be had already, and Peloponnesus over and above, as long as they should hold their power; and having liberty to be Conful, and to discharge the Office by any of his friends. Procureth an he was to leave the Sea open, and pay to the People what corn was due out of Sicily. The proferibed persons, except such as were quilty of Calar's death.

had now all liberty to return. The day following, Confuls were defigned for four years. Fift Antonius and Libo, than Cafar and Pompey, next Anobarbus and Solius, and lastly, Cafar and Antony, who then (it might be hoped) might restore the Government to the People. Then did Antony and Cafar return, and were most joyfully received. And this year being the 714 Joseph Ania, of the City, did they procure Herod the Great to be declared King of Tudan, in the first year of the 184 Olympiad, Cn. Domitius Calvinus the second time, and C. Asinius Pollio being Consuls.

20. Antony departed towards the East again for the Parthian Warre, which hitherto Ventidius his Lieutenant had managed with good successe, having got feveral victories, wherein Labienus, who brought them into Syria, thicis, and Pharnapates, (or Phraates, or Barzapharnes, being called by feveral names) the greatest of their Captains, with Pacorus son to Orodes the King, Floras I. 4.19.

Ventidius profpereth against were slain. After this he repelled them in Media and Mesopotamia, and pereth against hesographics. peren aganni besieged Antiochus Comageniu in Samosata, whom he suffered, upon promise of 1000 talents, to fend Ambassadors unto Antony, who now drew near, and for that the fiege was likely long to continue, by reason of the desperat resolution of the defendants, granted him Peace for 300 talents, accepted but of two Hostages, and those inconsiderable ones; and he gave him leave to put to death Alexander, who had formerly revolted to the Romans. This by (4) some he was thought to do for fear of the Army, which was angry at his (a) Dio nt ill usage of Ventidius; though others say, he honoured him according to his prins. deserts, who though a man of an obscure extract, now first of all others tri- (b) Plataro umphed over the Parthians. Antony having fetled the affairs of Syria, de- in Antonio. parted to Athens, where he spent the winter with Oftavia. But the (c) peace bello Civil. 14. with Pompey continued but a short time. The cause of the breach (what ever secretly was aimed at) was pretended to be, for that Amony being to quit Peloponnesus, would do it but upon this condition, that Pompey should give him farisfaction for fuch moneys as was due to him from the Inhabitants. But Pompey liked not of any fuch condition, and therefore rigged a new Fleet, and provided himself of forces, perhaps giving credit to Metrodorus, who would tell him, that the present state of affairs was no true Peace, but rather a ceffacion of arms. He then renewed his Piracy, which renewed the former grievances, and made the People cry our, that the matter was onely altered from three Tyrants to four. But Metrodorus revolted to Cafar, bringing in with him Corfica, Sardinia, and three Legions, and then Antomy was called to Brundusium to consult about the War. Thirher he came at the day appointed, but Cefar keeping not his word he staied not for him, either not liking the breach of the Peace, or for that he envied Cafar all that power he faw him have; for still they suspected and grudged each other. But A. M. 1967. Cafar being provided, set outeo Sea, as to invade Sicily, and was beaten V. C. 716. back by Pompey, though he took him at unawares, who heard nothing of the Herodis 2. revolt of Metrodorus, till also of Cafars coming. Afterward his ships lying at Anchor, were extreamly battered, and most of the men were cast away.

The Peace with Pompey broken.

21. Casar

21. Cafar fortified the Coasts of Italy, for fear lest Pompey should make SECT.7. an invasion, which he, not knowing how to improve a Victory, was never wont to attempt. Then wanting all manner of provisions for the Warre, he Idem. fent Macenas to Antony, who refusing not to joyn with him, this cheared him, together with a Victory gor by Agrippa in Aquitaine; many Cities, and private persons also promising aid. Aniony came to Tarentum with 300 thips, but whether there was something else betwix them, or for that he was now furnished, he slighted his help, Cafar excused himself that he met him not, which the other took in ill part, yet fent for him again. For having laid out much upon the Fleet, he intended to exchange it for some Iralian Legions, to be used in the Parthian Wart, it being difficult for him to raise men in Italy, which was subject to Cafar, though by their last agreement both were lest free there to make their Levies. Offavia coming over to her brother, agreed them, who then made the exchange, and because the time of the Triumvirate Cafai make a fet by the Senate was almost out, prorogued their power for five years longer, without any confideration had of the fuffrages of the People. So Antony departed into Syria, Cafar deferring his Expedition into Sicily untill the fol-

22. He determined to invade Sicily from three feveral quarters : Lepidus, Idem.

who now joyned with him, was to invade it from Africk, Taurus from Tarentum, and he himself from Putcoli. Pompoy resolved to oppose him so many feveral wayes, but at this time it needed not; for Cafar's Navy was the second time wracked by a Tempest, which so puffed up Pompey, that he stiled himself Nepeune's fon. But Cafar gave not over the enterprize; for the same Summer having recruited his forces, and mended his ships, he put forth to fea, and then, though on Lepidus his part were lost two Legions, overthrew Pompey's Fleet, but was again worsted, and yet landed 21 Legions, and 2000 Horse, besides 5000 lightly armed. No great or memorable barrel

Antony and rogue their

DOWCT.

thrown by

Cafar,

was there on Land; but Pompey fent to his Enemy, to know if he would fight by Sea, fearing his Land-Forces. He accepted of his offer, and then finally defeated him, having funk 28 of his Vessels. The rest were either taken or broken, seventeen onely escaped, and at the fight of this overthrow A. M. 3969. his Land-forces yielded to Cafar, so that with his seventeen Vessels he sled to V. c. 718. Amony, from whom he expected protection, having reflored formerly his mother fafe to him, when in such a condition. Meffana still stood out, but the Garrison at length yielded to Lepidus, who granted to the Soldiers, to draw them to his party, the plunder of the Town equal with his owing Having now by the addition of those Forces 22 Legions, and a strong body of Horse under his command, he pleased himself with thoughts of getting all Sicily into his hands, to which he precended a right, as first invaded by him; and he fought to hinder Cafar all he could from the possession of it.

23. Cafar exposulated with him for his ingratitude; but to no purpose, Then found he means to draw away all his Army from him, which now was Appian in fupra. fomething averse to Civil Warrs, and satisfied of the greater worth of Casar, Appear ne jui being moreover incensed against their General, for making Pompey's Soldiers Antonio, partakers with them in the plunder of Messana. Yet though his Soldiers Dio. 1, 49. would have killed him did he fave them alive, but outed him of all power, and banished him; so that thus fell one head of this Tricipitina. Pompey the Triepining not being perfued by Cafar, craved protection from Antony; yet fent to the Parthian, in case he should not be received by him. Then thought he of seiz-

Pempey killed.

ing upon Syria, and the parts adjacent, upon a rumour of Antony's being overthrown; whereupon he was purfued by his party, and at last taken and killed at Midains a Town of Phrigia, as Dio writeth, but as Florus and Appian at Miletus, in the fourtieth year of his age, fourteen years after the death of his Pather. Cafar at his return restrained roberies in the City, setting watches therein, and administred things in the antient way by annual Magistrates. He burnt all letters written in time of War, promiting he would restore the Commonwealth as soon as Antony should return, who, he knew, wouldalso lay down the Magistracy, all Civil Warrs being ended. He was there-

SECT. 7. therefore received with luckie acclamations, and had a Perpetual Tribuneship bestowed on him, as invited by this honour to lay down his other power. Concerning this he wrote privately to Antony, who, whilft Cafar was thus imployed about Pompey, had called Cleopaira into Syria, and there given her Phanicia, Calefria, Cyprus, a great part of Cilicia, with part of Arabia Nabathan, and so much of Junea as brought Balfamum. Then sending eth on Cleopa- her home, he marched into Armenia, where yet he could do nothing (for defire of her) like himself; but ever thought of returning to her, which shortly after he did; but was much troubled in his passage by the Parthians. to whom his Army had revolted, but that they killed fuch as first passed over to them.

24. The year following, and that wherein Pompey was flain, he was foli- Plutarel. cited by the King of Media in conjunction with him to make Warre upon Dio. the Parthian; but was hindred by ftirs which hapned betwixt Cleopaira and Ottavia his wife, who now returning to him out of Italy, met with letters at Athens to Rop her there, he pretending necessary avocations by Warre. Cafar then would have had her come to his house, but she would go to her husbands, where the educated both his children and her own, as became her. Then did Antony return into Armenia, where he caught the King by a wile. and brought him in triumph into Egypt. Now would he be called Father

His extravagancies in Agypt.

Bacchus, as Cleopaira Ifis, who now was filed by him Queen of Egypt, Cyprus, Africa, and Calefyria, Cafario whom the had by Julius Cafar being her partner in these Principalities. But his own sons by her, Alexander and Ptolomy, he named Kings of Kings; betwixt whom he did not onely part what Provinces he himself had, but also Armenia, Parthia, and Media, and to Cleopaira their daughter affigned Cyrene. These things, together with the differace of his fifter provoked Cafar, who made report of them to the Senace and People. Hereby he incenfed men's minds against Amony, who shortly after went into Media, and entered into league with the King thereof. Cafar at the same time fought against several People of Illyrianm. and the next year both provided for the Civil War betwixt themselves. 25. Antony in way of recrimination to Cafar, objected his putting Lepidus besides the Triumviraie, and taking his Soldiers as those of Pompey to himself, which ought to have been equally free for both; and he challeng-merly mentioned, accused him of taking Egypt as his Province, killing Dial to Pompey, abusing Arravasdes the Armenian King, to the great infamy of the Flores 1.46.11.

Cafar and he ed his part of the Soldiers raised in Italy. For, Cafar besides what we fortall our.

> Roman State; but above all upbraided him with Cleopatra, and what he had affigned to their children, as also for that he owned Casario as begotten by Cafar, though to the Senate he had acknowledged him for his own fon, Antony, bewitched by Cleopatra so far as not to be able to rule himself, wrote to the Senate to have those things confirmed, which he had setled upon her and her children. The two Confuls Cn. Domitius and C. Sofius being much for him, were forced to leave the City, and get over to him, who now also having raifed great forces, fent to Rome, to drive Oltavia out of his house, and if taking his opportunity he had this Summer invaded Italy, he might in all probability have put an end to the quarrel. For, Cafar was not vet provided, wanting money exceedingly, which he now exacted throughout Italy. But this delay herein helped him, that men's minds were more and more bent against Antony, especially after Casar had published his Testament, where- A. M. 1973. in he disposed as formerly, to his and Cleopatra's children, and ordained, that 01.187.48.1.

it was also reported, that he meant, if his matters prospered, to give her Herodis 8. Rome, and transfer the feat of the Empire into Agypt. Hereupon the Warre was decreed against her, and he was devested of his Triumvirate, but not declared an Enemy, for fear of those with him. For then must they necessarily have been included in the same capacity, and so driven upon desperate Councils: to them therefore rewards were promised, if they would forfake him; and hereby was he thought rendred more inexcufable, in that though he should dye at Rome, his body should be sent to her at Alexandria: V. 1. 722.

being unburt he should make Warfor an Egyptian woman against his Coun- SECT. 7.

trey. Then did the one draw all the East, and the other the West to his party. Cafar had ready 250 ships of War, 80000 foor, and 12000 horse. Amony had 500 fuch like ships, very big and stately, with 100000 foot, and rations for war. also 12000 horse. The King of the Medes also fent him aid, which being not fent back, and Anony also recalling his forces he had left with him for the protection of that Countrey, the Parthian became Mafter of that Kingdom, and Armenia also was loft.

Antony wor-

26. The following year Agrippa being sent before by Cafar, took di- Idem, vers thips coming to Antony with Provisions, and molested him exceed- Plutarebia ingly upon the Sea, wherewith Cafar incouraged passed from Brundusium, Antonio. into Epirm, to a Promontory whereof that lieth near the Bry of Ambracia fending his forces, he took in Corcyra; fo did Agrippa the Island Lencas near to Allium, with Paire and Corinth; Titim also and Taurus routed Antonies horse. Then several persons of note sell off from Antony. Softw WIS beaten, and loft his life at Sea, and Antony himself was also worsted by a guard of Cafars. Being much troubled hereat, Canidius would have perswaded him to send away Cleopatra, and decide the quarrel either in Thrace or Macedonia, for that he was stronger in Land forces. But though his navy had been twice worsted, and he had lost many ships, yet she obtained of him to fight at Sea, providing withall all things as for a fight. For four dayes the Sea was fo rough with winds that it hindred them from fighting; but on the fifth they joyned, and then Cafar's ships being light could easily tack about and invade Antonies, which were unwieldly, and of little use. Cleopatra wearied with long expectation, ere it could certainly be known how things would go, with her gilded deck, Purple fayls, and fixty light how things would go, with her graded need, preferrly followed, forfa-A. M. 397.

Egyptian Gallies fled away, which Antony feing, preferrly followed, forfa-N. C. 723. king his men, and running away, who ought to have animadverted upon such Herodia 9 Overshrown as did so. His Soldiers fought most valiantly, notwithstanding the basenesse Ante Christ. 29. at Allium in a of their General (who getting into Cleopatra's Gally, went, and fate by himfelf in a deep filence, holding his head with both his hands) till at the tenth Patereul. 1. 1. hour they were partly perswaded, and partly constrained to submit, it being c. 85. confessed that in this fight they behaved themselves like to, and executed the Office of, the best General, and their General played the part of a run-away Soldier. From this victory of Cafar at Actium a Promontory of Epirm, Suctomius, Several * Authors date his Monarchy, which lasted from the second of Septem. Authors Viber whereon the battel was fought, to the 19th of August, on which he died, Elor. 44 years wanting 13 dayes. Now was hee himself the third time, and Eutropius. M. Valerius Messala Consuls, in the 723th year of the Citie, the second of the 187 Olympiad, and the feventh of Herod King of Indea, as Josephus gathereth, the 29th before the Ara of Christ, A. M. 2974.

27. His Land forces could scarcely believe his flight, having such an Army Plutareh. in test to him intire, and for seven dayes were so constant to him, that though Antonio. the thing was clearly known, they rejected Cafars messages, but being now over-taken by him, and forsaken of their Leader Canidius, who had Patercul. lib. 1. posted away after Antony, they yielded, and were taken into Casar's Army. patercular sandy. Sap. 87. His Land for. Then did Cafar go to Ashens, where he pur to death Cassin: Parmensis, one Division, of those that sew his Uncle, and setling the affairs both of Greece and Asia, determined to vvinter in Samus ; but was called into Italy by Agrippa to

ces. yield to his businesse within thirty dayes returned into Asia. Amony for some time lived disconsolately by himself. Cleopatra conveyed ships over into the Red-Sea, intending there to feek her fortune, the had thought also of flying into Spain. They both fent to Cafar, the that her Children might have Egipt granted them, and he that he might be permitted to live privitely at Athens.

quiet his Soldiers who now mutinied. He failed then to Brundafium, but the Senate meeting him there, he went no further, and having dispatched

She fent him a Golden Crown and Scepter, with a toyal feat, privily to curry favour, and he, though openly he threatned her, fecretly promifed her fafety him Turullins a Senator, and one of the murderers of Julius Cafar. He purting the man to death returned no answer, neither the second time, when he fent anythus his fon to him with much Gold, which he received. But with Diolib. 5. her he still dealt, sending Thyrsus his Freed-man to her to make her believe Plutage, in that he was in love with her, hoping the might kill Antony, and preferve Antonio. her Treasures, which she threatned to burn if she came into any danger. Now going down into Egypt he fent Cornelius Gallus before him, who feized on Paratonium the Chief Citie on that part near Africk; and Pelusium the o her strongest Town towards Syria did Cleopatra betray to him, secretly forbidding the Alexandrians to go out against him. Antony once fought prosperoully against his horse, and the second time was bearen; then he fent him a challenge, which Cafar refused, saying, that if Antony so pleased there were 1000 wayes lying open for his destruction. Wherefore bethinking himself that he could not die with more credit than in battel, he refolved to oppose Cafar both by Sea and Land; but Cleopatra procured, that both his Navy, and horse revolted. Hereupon he returned into the Citie, crying out, that he was betrayed by her for whose sake he had taken up Arms. She being afraid of him departed to her Monument, and fent some to tell him the was dead, precending fear of Casar. Upon which melfage, he resolving to follow her, wounded himself in the belly. The wound not quickly dispatching him, she sent for him up into her Monument, whither he was pulled up by her felf, and two women, being willing to live now that the was alive, and hoping he might possibly recover. But he shortly after died, willing her as well as she could to provide for her self, Autony killeth and not grieve for him, but rather rejoyce, in that he had been the most fahimfelf, mous of men, as also most powerfull, and now being a Roman was not through lazinesse overcome by a Roman. Such was the end of this man, who through defire of fame became the Author of fad Tragediesto his Countrey, who in the use of his power greatly abused it, and was not onely overcome by a Roman, but also by a Woman, and then so behaved himself, that he could not be excused from lazinesse, effeminatenesse, and luxury, all which things checked that goodnesse of disposition supposed once to be in him, and left Cleopatra little cause to rejoyce for any real glory that might accrue unto him.

20. Cefar endeavoured to get Cleopaira into his hands, that he might lead her in Triumph. He easily obtained Alexandria, the Inhabitants whereof Dio at land. he pardoned, but put to death Anyllus the fon of Antony, and some others. Suction, in He viewed the body of Alexander the Great, and out of honour to his me- Ottavia. mory fet on it a Golden Crown, and strewed it with flowers; but touching it he broke off a little piece of the Nose, and refused to see the bodies Orosus siles 6. of the Ptolomies, though the Alexandrians much defired it, faying, be had cap.19. a mind to fee the King, and not dead men. Cleopatra dealt with her Phy- Pateral, lik. fician to dispatch her, but being terrified by Cafar upon the account of her cap 87.

Children, she gave it over, and did all she could, but in vain, to work upon cap. II. his affections when he came to fee her. Then did she give him an Inventory of her goods, and he promised her fair things, thinking thereby that he lib.133. So doth cleadeceived her, though he himself was deceived. For the understanding Julian ad The patra her felf, that the was referved for a Triumph, prevented it by a voluntary death, as is milliam, and Egypt is made a Proin the History of her Kingdom related. Cafar made Egypt a Tributary vince. Province, and would have conferred the Government thereof upon Arms the Philosopher, who formerly had taught him, but he refusing the imployment, he give it to Cornelius Gallus, a manof obscure birth. Cefario the son of Cleopatra by Julius Cafar, had by his mother been fent towards India with a great fum of money, but at Rhodes his Governour perswaded him to return, as now being to expect the Kingdom. Cafar confulting what to do

" Our dy se with him, Arians, alluding to * that prudent sentence of Homer, said. Sor meduces- Oun dyadov wolvnaisagin. To have many Casars is not good; and so ganin es notes he was sent after his mother. Whilest these things were doing at Alexan- A.M. 3975. 205 stw 65 Ba dria, was M. Tullius Cicero, fon of the Orator, Conful at Rome (taken in by Ol. 187, ann. 3. Cafar to blot out the ignominy of betraying his father) in the room of Lici- V. C. 724. nius Crassus, where he published Casar his Collegue's Letters concerning the Herodis 10. overthrow of Anion, and put them up over the pleading place, where his all father's head had formerly been fet. But this overthrow and death of Clear. patra hapned in the 14th year after the death of Julius Cafar, the third of the 187 Olympiad, the 724 of the Citie, 28 before the birth of Christ, A. M. 3075. 294 after the death of Alexander the Great, under whom as the Macedonian Empire began, so now in Cleopatra (and not till now) it was quite extinct; and here the Contemporaries with it receive their pe-

Ccccc

AN

MA.

INSTITUTION

General History.

The First Part.

BOOK IV.

The Roman Empire.

CHAP. I.

From the absolutenesse of Octavius, to the death of Tiberius, containing the space of 66 years.

The Gran-deur of the Roman Em-

HE Roman Empire had now swallowed up the Maeedonian, with such Kingdoms and States as were at all considerable, and Contemporary with it (whereof though some might retain a shew of liberty, yet were they but in a condition of vassalage) except the Parthian Kingdom, which as yet acknowledged no subjection, and when it did, being forced thereto for the most part by intessine divisions, not long continued in that acknowledgement.

2. This Empire now laboured under it's own weight, and, like to some unwieldy thing, stagered, by reason of the turgency of it's inward burthen, wieldy thing, staggered, by reason of the turgency of it's inward burthen, without any extraneous violence: it was grown up to an arhietick habit, and had already sufficiently manifested the danger of this constitution. For, being all head and no body, it wanted those limbs, which by direction from a superiour sense, could secure it's progresse; or indeed being all body, and Ccccc 2

It laboureth no head, it was void of that influence which effecteth an orderly motion, and under it's own is necessary for the sublistence of life it felf. The proper fruits of Popular own weight. Government were now grown fully ripe. Every one would command, and none would be ruled, yet every man challenging a part in the Supreme powers none enjoyed it much, and therefore but few were really follicitous for the upholding of it as Popular, any further than some private interests led them. The heady multitude indeed was violently carried on in it's defires after the chief command; but some defired it rather that others might not enjoy it, holding this Principle, to oppose all rising, though excellent persons whatfoever. Others tickled with an humour of ruling, and in intellectuals above their fellows, fer themselves to please the rabble by maligning other men, crying up liberty and equality, extolling the justice of the ograrian, and vaunting of great matters intended to be done by themselves, when in a capacity. Sometimes their boldnesse and cunning procured their rise, most commonly some capitulations, and otherwhiles mony distributed to the rabble, when the step was great. For after that the Remans passed the Seas, more luxury, avarice, and corruption, than of Victory was brought home. When they came abroad, norwichltanding the repute of their abstinence, they found the same temptations as other men, and made themselves Masters of the minners, as well as the possessions of the conquered. All things were now bought and fold, from the meanest Office to the Consulfhip, and the lowest privilege to the right of Suffrages.

3. The daily higher of these things corrupted such , as essentially higher have proved just. It seemed a prudent Principle, rather to command than to be commanded; rather to buy than to be fold, and to get fomething, rather than fuffer all things to be loft. The body of the People was now grown large, the Italians being received to the freedom of the City, and liberty of Suffrages. Hence ambitious men had advantage enough to make parties, and to carry things in the Comitia or Assemblies, having once by indirect practices ingratiated themselves. Having obtained commands afar off, they had opportunity to increase their power, through the distance of place, the credit of their conquests, and the affections of their Armies. Power once obtained, is difficultly laid down, both by reason that man's nature is averse to diminution, and for that something may be committed in height of passion, or through convenience, or otherwife, whereof it might not that to give an account, as neither to lye open and naked to the malice of strongeful Enemies. The Empire being now vast, several men at the same time might be found in these capacities, so that jealousies and emulations must thence be heightned, and one strive to reduce the other into order. Further, the largnesse of Empire afforded multiplicity of places, alwayes of several, and sometimes of contrary interests or humours, which would espouse quarrels accordingly, whence never would be wanting sufficient and convenient matter for publick combuflions.

And under

pers

fuch diftem-

could onely

4. Such was the present State of Roman affairs, and such had been their constitution before the present juncture, which toudly, in the understanding As Monarchy of all prudent men, called for the help of some single Person duly qualified whose Monarchy could onely put an end to the civil differeions, by removing the loofe liberty of the multitude, which give occasion to shole differnpers, by preventing ambitious indeavours of private perfons after soveraignty, which fomented them, and by checking all exorbitant power of particular men, which effectually procured them. Cafar on the one fide confidering thefe things, as also being sensible of the power he already enjoyed, and of the danger he might incur by removing himself to a private life; and on the other, weighing the envy and odium he should contract by the establishment of himself, after he had conquered Amony and Cloopaira, and Chaving entered his fourth Confulship in the Isle Samus) returned to Rome, he asked the advice of his two most inward Counselfors and bosome friends, A gripps and Macenas. Vipfaniss Agrippa, a man of mean Parentage (which Vipfant m manifelling, he changed into Marcon) and no great endowments, except in what concerned War, though of a well-meaning mind, and a great lover in whiteconcerned was, thoughout a matter advited him to lay down his pow-of Cafar, answered him first, and eatherly advited him to lay down his powor capare, and remit the Government into the hands of the Mullistud. His arou- 152 admi-

Agrippa his advice to Ca. far for Democracy.

GHAP. I.

ments for the most part respected the danger of Cufar's person, being drawn timm p.463,80. from the averaged of the Romanico Monarchy, and inforced by examples of others, who had attempted to establish themselves. Against Monarchy it felf he could produce little of moment. He would prove that Popular Government was berter for the Greeks, who, he faid, did nothing thir was 'notable, till they but themselves into that way. He said, there were o-"thers alforthe condition of whom pleaded for this Government, yet named one. But he especially instanced in the Romans themselves, who being averseto Monarchy, had done all these great things under that form of rule " and domination which was opposite to it.

Macenas his narchy.

ble inconve-

Popular Go-

niencies of

vernment.

5. But Macton, a min, though but of Equestrian rank, yet, of (a) high (a) Meconas descent, and (b) extraordinary abilities, defired Cafar, that if he loved his atavis edite re-. Country, be would alter, correct and reduce it into a better form of Govern- gibus. Horat. ment. He faid, he would not have him deceived with a specious shew of names. and words; but confidering what should follow, to restrain the fary of the Memphes arms, multitude, and take to himfelf, all fled by excellent perfons, the Government; Rex Etinforthat the most prudent might confuit, the best Capiains have the command of rum fuit that the most prusent might conjust, the in them. Hetchy every one distinct.

Armies, and the most robust and poor serve in them. Hetchy every one distinct. minding his own businesse, and one affoirding help to another, none would with the find any defect, and the true power of the Prople with liberty and fafety cenar), fiit, would be preferred. For, the power of the multitude, he faid, being in- Magnin exemdeed the flavery of every worthy man, was most grievous, and brought plum Romanh deed the flavery of every woriny man, was most grievens, and prought from common destruction unto all: but this, wherein modesty should ever be pre-togactic da.

foread, and mens deserts considered, would make all alike to be happy. He corrussis stilling would have him therefore affifted and advised by worthy perions, to order all citas imo cashings needful, to make War, create Magistrates, remard, punish, and svallet. Sencea make Laws ; all others being obedient ; fo that Warrs might be made with Epifol. 19. fecrecy, and upon occasion, such as were preferred might be chosen, not by , lot , or through the prevalence of their ambition, but for their worth. Thus sgood men might be honoured, and bad punished without disturbance; and " fo at length things would be rightly caried, when nothing should be referred to the Vulgar, nor openly be confulted of, nor be committed to intruders, one come into danger through their ambicion. In fum, all would enjoy their own, no dangerous Wars nor wicked Seditions being made. 6. But these evils he proved to be common in a Popular Government, wherein the great ones affiring to the 'p, and with money or otherwise purchafing the help of the ordinary fort, Aurbed all things. He fald, they had now had large experience of thefe thit , and that by no other means could they be ended, than by that whereof finke; whereof this was an evident fign, that for a long time they had been vexed with Warrs and Sediti-The infuffera- ons, by reafen of the muleitude of men, and greatheffe of affaires; for that men were fo durlous in Nature and Nations; and induced with fuch diver-· fier of affections and defiret : and because things hereby were brought to that puffe, that with difficulty could they be managed. Now that he foake errue, he faid, the deeds theriffelves bore mention; for, a long at the mile siende of the Roman People was not great, nor much more confiderable than . their neighbours, the Sente was in a good condition, and almost all Italy was ! Inbanea by them. But after that paffing out of Italy, they went abroad into all Countries and I Rands, and filled all Seus and Lands with their name "and powers no good got they by it: but first of all, at home and within the malls, riots being made, they (book the Commonwealth, and afterwards pro-4 s pagated the same mischief into their Enemies. Therefore their City, like to · fome great hip of barehen, filled with a various multitude, and destitute of a Pilot , having been for many ages beaten and toffed with grievous waves, now flored, and having no fray, was toffed here and there. He defixed him therefore, that he would not full neglect her thus conflicting with

Book III

'Tempells (for he faw how much water she had already taken in) nor suffer the stay to be quite broken off (for she was now battered, and could not 'long subsist') but seeing that the gods had presented him as an Overseer and Governour to his Countrey, not to cast her off; but as by his means ' she had a little recovered her spirits, so, for the ages to come, she might remain in fafety by the fame means. Having used these arguments drawn from the Thing, he took others from the Man, and shewed him his imminent danger, in case he laid down his power, in the several cases of Pompey, · Marins and Sylla. Pompey, he faid, having devested himself of his power. was con emned, and being laid at by his Enemies perished, because he could not recover it. He told him, that his father (meaning Tulius Cafar) going 'about the same miscarried. The same had hipned to Marius and Sylla, but that they were prevented by death; though some said also that Sylla killed himfelf to prevent his Enemies: 'tis certain that many of his Laws began to be repealed whilest he yet lived. In conclusion, he told him, he must expects 'many fuch as Lepides, Sertorius, Brutus, and Caffius. This is the fum of Mace-" nas his speech in behalf of Monarchy, whereof the beginning is loft, as also the conclusion of that of Agrippa. 7. These things sufficiently evidence, that it was impossible in an humane way for the Empire to subsist in a Commonwealth so called; and not onely Democratical that, but any one confiderable Nation, or more (not to speak of one, or a Government few Cities, or places at present) which must necessarily confist of malis ndes impracticable of people, diverfly qualified, variously inclined, and very unequally possessed in one or more of wealth and honours. Such having the Supream power in their own hands must needs foment several humours. The rich, and honourable, must either wealth, and of not medle, and so out of discontent watch for an advantage to after things, or various inte- if they do, they will not be content with equal imployments. When any extraordinary power is obtained, such inforcements as were formerly mentioned will happen, which being driven on by that ambition which is but natural to all minkind, will drive either fear, or defire, into Monarchy. A civil war especially produceth this, and more especially when the quarrel is betwixt single persons; and yet more especially is it inforced by a religious presence, under which Vizard the greatest deceit hath triumphed, accompanied, or ushered in by a facrilegious afferring of approving providence, whereby inviolable Majefty, O der, Propriety, and all things excellent have been contaminated, overinrned, and trampled on, and yet a structure erected at length out of the materials of those very things, which formerly were onely by the intruders accounted bad, because they stood upon another ground. But not onely in a Democratical way is it impossible for one, or more considerable Nations to be governed, but in an Aristocratical alfo. For if the wealth and propriety of a Nation be diffused, and not limited in the possessions of a few of the chiefest persons, such would find a continual repugnancy in their subjects, others thinking themselves as capable of power as they. Hence quarrels and implacable enmities must arise, and he who shall be best able will at length command the rest, though he ought to have been their fellow subject, and demonstrate a necessity of Monarchical Government.

from the Greeks.

8. The affairs of the Gracians urged by Agrippa to make against Monarchy do much plead for it, and evince the necessity of it. For after that the multitude in the several Cities had rebelliously withdrawn themselves from that obedience, which both the Law of God, and just title of succession chalgument drawn lenged as due to their Kings (who as Thucydides acknowledgeth governed them with Justice and Moderation) how miferably were they inflaved by their fellow Citizens (called by them Tyranni or Tyranti) and forced to submit to Usurpers, who punished them for their disobedience towards their rightfull Soveraigns. Never were there fuch Tumults, Seditions, Civil Wars, Maffacres, and Defolations, as in, and amongst those Cities which called themselves Commonwealths. Such were the extravagancies of the multitude, that the best men were rejected, and bold, impudent, and fawcy fellows domineered, who being corrupted with money, bought, and fold all that was of confequence, and by their quanting speeches surned, and led the rabble which way lower they pleased. As for what Agrippa urged, that they onely did things of moment after that the power same into the peoples bands; those things of moment wate amongst themselves, and such as made them miserable, they tearing one another in pieces in the Peloponnelin, and other War to breathing nothing bue rage, malice, and revenge against one another Norhing of confequence did, or could they do against the Barbarians, as they accounted all belides themselves, bill reduced under the Monarchy of Alexander they became infruments in his hands, Common danger ingaged them against Xarass, whose multitudes destroyed themselves; but had it not been for the mact wisdom of Themistocles, want of Order, of Government , and distriction, had rumed them all in departing into Peloponnesis, and facilifity applying themfolwas to the forestying of the lifthmus. Though they feveral times affilted the fonians in their rebellion, yet fill at length were their endeavours defeated. Cimos indeed got feveral victories, and did notable exploits in a piratical way, but what effects produced they? The most that was effected at land was by defilant, but he having not done much was recalled, for that many Cities having been allured with Persian Gold (which never failed to corrupt the Councils, overthrow the projects, and diffurb the affairs of these petry States, by taking off the great Leaders of the rabble) had conspired against Sparta, But what great matters they could do against Monarchy appeared; in that, first Philip, then Alexander his for, and their Successors, easily subdued, and kept them under. As for their Colonies, each one usually followed the fortune of its Metropolie; little but tumults, banishments, and Massacres do we hear of, or of private mens getting the power over them, for that wanting rightfull, and successive Princes, they lay open to the cheats of their fellow Citizens. The particular cases of Coreyra, Samus, Syracufe, and others demonstrate this, and therewith the danger, and infirmity of Antimonarchical Government,

g. But in particular, such were the several constitutions of these Cities, that Ariffords himself liked none of them, as appeareth in his books of Poli-The constituticks. The Cresian Commonwealth had its extravigancies, and if a Government may be judged from the carriage, and disposition of the people, in feveral States the opinion of Epimenides one of their own Poets, it was most naught. Lycurgus by taking away the just, and Hereditary power of the Kings of Sparsa, and contrary both to nature and loyalty diffolving the Government of his Forefathers, made but way for many inconveniences in the too great power of the Senare, and otherwise, but especially for the tyranny of the Ephori, five fellows chosen yearly out of the tabble, who domineered with unparalleld insolence over all. Solen's constitution, after so many changes and alterations wherein no rest could be procured from the time they forfook Kingly Government, gave no fuch ferlement, but that Pifffrains presently after cheating the rabble over and over, very eafily made himself Master of Athens. Their Oftracifm frighted all able persons from medling with the Commonwealth, as also did the Petalism of Syracuses whereupon their affairs went down the wind, till they were forced to recall the banished, and change fill from one conflictation to another, never being at quiet, for that the multitude tyrannized in their aflemblies. As for the learning of the Greeks whereof they fo much boafted, they had it either from the Egyptians or Caldaans who were subject to, and from the beginning flourished unders. Monarchy: and Pififiratus who was a Monarch (though of his own making) made the first Collection of books, and thereby brought learning into Athens and Greece. Finally, the Greeks in their Wars were forced to make use of fingle persons; and at home in their greatest necessities did they fly to them, as Dienysius of Halicarnassus mentioneth the Harmostes of Laesdamon, the Archus of the Theffalians, and the Afimnetes of the Misylenaans, whom he compareth with the Destator of the Ro-

16. For the Romans, 'sis a meer miltake of Agrippa. Their affairs never more prospered than under Monarchy, if we confider the small beginnings An answer to of the City: Romalia did exceeding much for his time, and so did his suc-Aguippa's Are cefforsin their feveral wayes, with fo small a power as such a Colony could produce, infomuch as revengeful and furious Brusse acknowledged, that no better way of Government could be found out than what they had chalked out to there. The faults in it feem to have been his formething too much indulg. ing at his first constitutions a popular humour which might bring flint to his end afterwards. Then Serone to dury favour with the rabble, that they might maintain him in his illegally procured power, diminished the Regal authority, and that of the Senare, which gave the multirude fuch a fcope; as after could they not be reduced into anyorder. After him Tarquihim the heir of Prifess might go about to recover this power (for, a little chariey may be allowed us, for one who lived in to dark and remote times, and whole actions were onely recorded by his Energies; feeing we have formerly related his ftory as we find it) and thereby hight incur that prejudice which, together with the fault of his fon, and the implacable malice of Bruim, procured his banishment. This may be added as an ill accident, that Romulus dying childlesse, the Kingdom came to be elective, which thing must at length bring great inconveniences; so that experience now hath taught such Kingdoms to continue the Government to particular Families, But Bratin his giving tolhis Confuls full regal power (though they were two, and Annual) and putting the fword fully into their hands, together with his acknowledgement of the good government of all the former Kings. do more than make us furpect his spleen to have acted him most in the change of the power, especially the confequences confidered. For, the power of the Confuls being fhortis after diminushed, or rather enervated by Valerius (who by flattering of the multitude got the name of Poplicols) the common fort got head, and confounded all things, nothing but changes, and re-changes hapening, till at length they quite outed the Patricians of their power, giving them leifure to repent their joyning with Bruim, and brought things to that ruine and diforder formerly mentioned, as compelled them to turn about, and by their Leav Regia (hereafter to be spoken of) to devolve all their power upon a single 11. Such and so many were these seditions and tumults, that thrice the vernment.

common fort departed from the Patricians out of the City. And no fooners was the War against their King ended, but the stirs begun; and these very The diforders stirs have we proved from Diony sizes, to have procured immediately the fetting and tumults up of another King in effect, for half a year's continuance, viz. the Dillator, artifing from to which Officer they were forced to flye in all difficulties. Now it sufficienttheir Antimo- ly appeared, that the want of a King hindred the promotion of their affaires, narchical Go for, ever when any work was to be done abroad, nay when the Enemy was even at the gates, would the multitude mutiny, and with fo much adoe at length could be drawn our, that businesse was retarded, and thereby their affairs not a little impaired, the Monarch being wanting, who fhould have kept both orders in subjection and awe. The weight of Usury and oppression was the first pretended cause of these stirs; but from it the multitude passed on from one thing to another, never refling till it had got all Offices of dignity, power, and profit, into it's own hands, as hath been at large made out. To effect this, they would one while have Confids, and another while Tribunes Military, having formerly made Decempirs for the making of new Laws; fo that within the space of $34 years, they had 37 changes in the Go-37 Changes veriment, wherof (to make it clear) fifteen were from Confuls to Tribunts Military, and from Tribunes to Confuls, the two grand ones from Kings to Confult, and from Confuls to Decembiri, and twenty Diff ator flips; befides Interreguum many an one, whereby for five dayes the chief power was in the hands of their Interreges. Thus was the Government toffed to and fro by the multitude, and little was done abroad, by reason of these confusions, nay the City was taken by the Galls, and razed, all but the Capitol, through the cowardife of their Tribunes, who also being in number three or more, by their several opinions confounded their Armies, and shewed the truth of that speech of Agamemnon in Homer. And this is worthy observation, that when Our 22000. the contention arose about the Consulfup, which the Commons would have mor uno entitle equally with the Pairitians, fo incredible were those confusions, that for five &c. vears the Tribuni Plebis (those great incendiaries) suffered no supreme Magistrates at all to be created.

of Government in 134 years.

753

quelts were

CHAP, I.

iz. All the great conquests afterwards were made by fingle persons, who abroad had alone the command of Armies. And fo far was this prefent kind of Government from being infrumental to them, that it manifestly hindred and obstructed all good procedings. For, when a Conful's year was our, then must be be recalled, and a successor sent him, though he was in never so fair a way for the conquering of any Nation, which at length began to be fingle persons, understood, and then was their command continued to them, under the name of Proconfuls, after which time it was, that the great matters were performed : before this the Generals being glad to shuffle up a Peace, lest they should be defrauded of the credit of ending the Wars by their successors. The main cause of the growth of their Empire (under the all-disposing Providence of God) was the valour and virtue of their Captains and Senators, at that time when Pyrrhus fet upon them; the courage also of the Soldiers was extraordinary, fo that (as Pyrrhus spoke of himself) a King, whose command and conduct would have been constant and uncontrolled, might have done greater wonders with such men. But as for the Government, so far was it from contributing to justice or virtue, that, even in these times, which their Writers fo celebrate for these things, the multitude having by the Hortensian Law wrested this power from the Senate, to oblige all whatsoever by their Plebifoica, decreed aid to be fent to the Mamerines, though against all equity and conscience, the Senate having utterly resused to assist those thieves, murderers, intruders. But the multitude was told of great profit which would accrue to all men in particular, and therefore profit must bear down right, and forces must be fent into Sicily to get footing there, to inrich these versuous and temperate men: and hence is to be fetched the rife of the Carthaginian Wars (which with what injustice they were managed on the Roman part, hath been feen) and indeed this was the original of all their conquests. The main things performed were done by such, as rather awed the people, than were awed by it; though to obtain their commands, they corrupted the mulestude withmoney. Mariu, Sylla, Pompey, and Cafar, after they had fucceffively ingroffed the power, made the greatest conquests. After the overthrow of Carthage especially, scarcely any great command was obtained, but by some great promises under-hand, some new attempts of innovation, or money distributed to the Tribes. So weak, imperfect, and vitious was the

Hence appea-

13. These things evidence the excellency of Monarchical Government above the rest; a neceessity of it in any considerable Nation or Nations, and cellency and 'in Cities which extend the freedom of Suffrages to their Subjects or Affociares, and are confiderable, for number, power, and interest. Single Cities have for fome time subfifted otherwise; but if we view those that have been mentioned in this Works, fome of them we shall find to have been kept in that way by fuch strange discipline, and principles of equality and levelling, as are even repugnant to Nature, and defiroy that lawful use of such things as were ordained for man's comfort and delight. Such was the conflictation of that of Sparea, which yet fecured it not from the tyranny of the Ephori, and when but the use of Gold, Silver, and other things, very lawful in themselves, came up, the Lacedamonians were sensible of their flavery to such harsh constituctions, and the Government tottered. Again, in others that were left more to their liberty, we see how impossible it was for the People to use it, but for their own destruction; so that for any one place to subfist without such miseries and disasters, is near to a miracle. Monarchy, though it may have it's defects (as all things managed by meer men) yet in it felf includes more order, certainty, and security, it's force being commonly turned outward. It's Ddddd that ty of it.

that which is most agreeable with primitive prudence, when men were not ar-The antiqui- rived at that ambition and wickednesse, which later times have produced. All Nations at first had their Kings from the very first foundation, as is clear in the case of the Greek; and others; so that they voluntarily submitted to them, at the first leading out of Colonies from the Essl, being their Captains; and thence we may see that the Government is natural, flowing from paternal rule, and proceeding from that superiority which Masters of Families, and Heads of Kindreds might well challenge over others. It's most suitable to the Government of the Universe, which is in God alone, who therefore acknowledgeth Kings for his Vioegerents, and calleth them gods, promiting And authorithey should be nursing Fathers to his Church , and taking no notice herein of other Governments. Hence our Kings owe account to him alone, are Sacrefant (which term the Romans gave to their very Tribunes who were inviolable, it being death to injure them in the leaft, and therefore we may well apply it to Kings) and that perpetually, and are intrusted by him with a Prerogative, which is necessary for the good of their Subjects. For all power flowing from them, it's contradictory for authority to challenge it felf, as unnatural and violent, for a derived fream, to oppose the current of the Foun-

14. But (to return from this requisite digression, whereby an answer is given to Agrippa's arguments, and Students are directed to make the right and natural use of thirtory) after that Maccoust had pressed Cafar with these urgent reasons, to take the Government upon him, he gave him directions for *the management of his affaires. First he advited him to regulate the Senate, Confule Disam advice to Ca + placing and displacing according to the worth of persons; and to have a special regard to Nobility and Gentry, to gratify them with imployments. To admit none into the Equestrian rank before eighteen years of age, and none "into the Senate till 25, before which time the Romans were never accounted of full age. When there had born the Offices of Quafter, Edilis, and Tribunas plebis, then being thirty years old, he would have them made Prators, all which at first were to be Romans alone, left he should feem suddenly to change the customs of his Country. All these Magistrates he would have of Cafar's making, and not this power to be left in any cafe to the Senave, or People. He counselled him by all means to diminish their antient spower, which else might procure trouble and alteration; but leave them

Maoiftrates of Senatorian dignity.

dering of his

affaires.

their whole honour and dignity. The way to this was to make them execute their Offices in the City, and not fuffer them then, nor presently after, to have any Military command, but for some time to live privarely. He would have these Magistrates, to celebrate games, and exercise judicial power in all cases, except that of murther; for some Judges were to be chosen from amongst the rest of the Senators, but the chief power to re-"main in these. Then he said, a certain Governour or Mayor of the City was to be made out of the most principal men, who had born these Offices, to joyn with the rest in governing the City, to receive appeals, and judge 'capital causes, except some afterwards to be spoken of, both in the City, and 8r miles round about. Another of the fame rank was to be chosen, who hould make inspection into the stock, estates and manners of Senators, and Knights or Equites, both those of under age and others, and as well of women as the other Sex, to correct such things, as being not worthy of punishment, yet being neglected might occasion great inconveniences; and refer the greater matters to Cefar himsef, who was to bear the name of Cen-" for, and the other being a Patrician, and the next in dignity to the Mayor, but that of Subtenfor. Thele two Officers might be, for life, except they committed some fault, or by old age or ficknesse were rendred unserviceable; for no dammage could thence arife, the one having no Soldiers, and the other but a few, and who should execute his Office before Cafar's eyes, for the most part. The other Magistrates, would fear to do any unjust thing, being presently to be reduced into a private condition, and others to succeed them in their power. He added, that the Provinces were onely to be com"mitted to men of Pratorsan rank; the reft being Proprators in order once and again, should arrive at the Confulibip, (if they well exercised their former Offices) and then be preferred to greater commands.

15. He further advised him to divide Italy, for 94 miles round about the City, and all the reft of conquered Countries after fuch a manner, according to People, Nations, and Cities, as if they were to be governed by fingle men with absolute power. In each of these Soldiers were to be plaeed, overwhom was to be fee one person of Consular dignity, and two more of Pratarian rank, from those therelying appeal to the other, in all gafes, except when Officers of the Army were to be animadverted on, who were to be punished by none but Cafar himself, lest they should thereby be brought by ferring some one more, to attempt something against the Prince. All those who had any command out of the City, were to have their salaries set as was suitable to the imployment, for that they could not ! live of their own, and it was not convenient they should spend what they "lift, as they did at present. They were not to hold their imployments under the term of three years, nor longer than five, for in fo short a space they could but learn the interests of places, and how to behave themselves. and longer commands made men but proud, and provoked them to attempt 'new matters. And one great command he faid, was not to be given them presently after another, for this would amount to as much, as if they had one continued to them; but after they had been reduced to a private condition, and therein lived at home. Thus much for Senators.

Of Equeftrian rank.

GHAP, L

16. From amongst the Equites, he would have him chuse out two of the most excellent, and make them Captains of his Guard. For to commit that trust to one would not be safe, and to more than two, would not want trouble. Being two in number, if one should be treacherous, the other would preferve him. They were to be fuch as had been trained up in the Wars, and much exercised in Offices, and to have the command not onely of his Guard, but of all Soldiers in Italy, foas to punish and reward them. except Centurions, and fuch as belonged to Senatorian Magistrates. These * Captains of the Guard ought to have their Deputies, and hold their places for their lives, as also the Mayor of the City, and the Subcensor. Besides, out of the next rank of Equites, one should be chosen for Captain of the Watch, and another to take care for provision of Corn, but these for a limitted time. The care of the Treasury, Exchecker, and other matters, as well at Rome as throughout Italy, was to be committed to those of Equefixian rank, who were to have falaries suitable to their condition, being poorer than Senators. He told him the reason why he would have these Offices 6 committed to them, was, for that it was inconvenient to have both the fword and money in the same hands, and better that publick businesse should be managed by many, both that more might reap benefit from it, and learn experience; and hereby his Subjects would love him more, and he would have a sufficient number fit for employment. One Eques would be sufficient at Rame for gathering money, and one in each Province, who might have affiltants out of the Equites, and Cafar's Liberti or Freed-men. For he told him it was convenient to joyn those with them, that his servants might get something, and he receive certain intelligence how matters should go. Now if any Eques (or Knight, if we may so call him) should grow so fa-"mous by bufineffe, as to be thought worthy to be received into the Senatorian rank, his age ought not to be any obstacle : and sometimes some Officers of the Army were to be received into the Senate, provided they had never been ordinary Soldiers, but from the beginning Centurions at the cleaft.

17. He further advised him to educate all of Senatorian and Equestrian rank, whilst they were boyes, at School in humanity, and when grown up, in Education of fencing and riding, by Masters hired publickly in both places. Forasmuch 'as it is the part of an excellent Prince, not onely that he do well himself, and Equites. but rotake caret har all elfe do fo. This would be effected, not by permit-

Ddddd 2

BOOK IV.

sting them to do ill, and then correcting them, but teaching them beforehand such things. And he added, that he needed not to fear, that such as were so excellently educated, would attempt innovation; forasmuch as fuch as were not cultivated by any discipline, but dissolute in breeding and carriage, were hereof to bee suspected, who easily would commit the most wicked and abhominable things, both against themselves and cothers.

756

48. ' Forasmuch as by reason of the largenesse of the Empire, and nearnesse of Enemies, it was necessary to have a standing Army, he would have le-'vies made out of the porest and lustiest young men, who being continually exercifed and trained up in Military discipline, all others were to be forbidden the use of Arms. Then for money, which he shewed to be necessary for carying on of affaires, in all Governments, as well as under Monarchy, he advited him to make money of all publick things gotten in War, and let it our upon moderate interest: to look well to the Mines, and impose Tribute upon all Subjects, it being reasonable that all should contribute to the expense of that, which tended to the protection and good of all. But there was no danger he faid, but men would be willing to pay, feeing most of them 's should receive it back with advantage; either, by bearing Offices of Magistracy or Government, or serving in the War, especially when they understood that Cafer himself lived soberly and frugally, not improving the · publick expence to any private excesse. 19. ' For the rest, he would have him adorn Rome with all magnificence, and fet it out with all forts of folemnities, to make it in great reverence and effeem abroad. No Nation was to have any power in it's own hands, nor meet in any publick Assemblies of debate, for that would procure disturbance, liar coin, weight, or measure. None were to send any peculiar message to him, except the matter required his inspection, but have recourse to the Goveronour of the place, who was therewith to acquaint Cafar. Ambassadors either from Enemies or confederate Kings or States, were to have audience from the Senate, that the power feeming to be in the Senate, they might ters being disparched by consent of the Fathers, the Majesty of the Em-fee how many Enemies they should have if the case so required, and mat-

Rome to be adorned.

for which reason neither was the Roman People, he said, to be permitted The Provinces ceither to come together for passing of Judgement, to the Comitia, or any other Council, for the enacting of any thing. No City or People was to be suffered to use any excesse in buildings or in games : none to use any pecupire would be the more established. All of Sonatorian rank he would have impeached before, and judged by the Senate, that Cafar might escape the envy of condemnation, and others by so formal proceedings, might be kept in awe. As for any scandalous words against himself, he told him he cd.

The Senate to be made ule of.

How feanda- (fould neither hear any accufation, nor punish them. For it was not good, lous words to he faid, that he should believe, that any one would injure him, who hurt 'no body, but did good to all; for, faith he, bad Princes onely do this, whom their guilty consciences make credutous. Neither is it fitting to take those things ill, which if true ought not to have been done, and if false ' should be neglected and dissembled: for that many by punishing them, minister greater occasion of worse discourse. His sense therefore of scan-'dalous words was this: that' he ought to be higher than all injury, and 'neither himself to fancy, nor make other believe, that any one durst be so fawcy, but that the same opinion of veneration was had of him, as of the How Traitors eternal gods. If any plotted his destruction, he would neither have him to be punish- himself to judge, nor sentence him, but refer him to the Senate, and if he were convicted, to punish him as lightly as might be, that his crime might gain belief. But he here excepted such, as having command of Armies, ' made open infurrections, who were not to be formally arraigned, but pu-' nished as Enemies. to. There things, and most of the rest which concerned the Commonweilth, he would have him propound to the Senate, wherein all the members should have equal power of voting, except any of them were accused. If the party indeed were not as yet a Sanator, or but of the rank of a Quefor, all might have voices; but it was against reason that he . who never had been a Tribune of the People, or Adilus, should passe sentence upon him that had born these Offices, or that those should do it upon one of Prate-" niam rank, or fuch an one upon a Confular person : but it was fitting enough that those of Consular Dignity might judge all the several forts, and the rest their equals or inferiours. Cosar himself was to be Judge in all Appeals made from the greater forts of Magistrares, his Procurators, the Governour of the Citie, Subcenfor, Chief Juffices, Overfeers of Provisions or Proveditors, and Mafters of the weatches : for none ought to have fo absolute a power, but that appeal ought to lie from him. Of these he ought to rake Cognifance, as also of the causes of Equites, Centurions, or prime Officers, In what Cases when the controversie is about life or reputation. For these Cases queht Appeals ought , to be referred to him alone, and for the fore mentioned causes none other ought to Judge them. Yet to the hearing of them he might nominate ' fome of the principal men of Senatorian or Equestrian rank, or of Confu-"lar, or Pratorian Dignity, that he and they having had hereby experience one of another, he might imploy them in other matters abroad. In the Cases of greatest consequence he would not have him ask their opinions openly, lest favouring their friends they might not speak freely their minds: but their opinions were to be written down, and then presently blotted out, which secrecy would procure them to use all freedom. He advised him in his affairs of Caufes, Letters, bufineffe of Cities, and Petitions of private men, and in other things of Government, to use the affishance of the Equites. To refuse to hear no mans advice, and to look at the Will. and nor at the successe, both of Councillors and Soldiers; as, neither, to envy the glory of military men. For, many fearing the envy of Princes and States, have rather chosen to lose than gain in the Wars, to provide for their Military men own fafety. Wherefore he would not have him (whom especially the event. not to be en- either as to profit or disprofit would concern) in word others, and indeed, to envy himfelf.

Deferving ded above then below their merits.

21. He defired him speak and do such things, as he would have his Officers to think and practice, for this would more easily reach them their duty, e men being led more by example than precept, and the actions of Princes being especially pried into, and more imitated than their threatnings feared. The lives of others he should look into, but not greatly enquire : what fal's General . Crimes by others were detected he ought to punish, but diffemble fuch as had no accuser, and know how to correct mildly, which in some cases doth more good than rigorous proceedings. Then as for rewards, he told him, he was to require deserving persons rather above than below their persons rather merits; for this was the way to win upon them, and to make them virtue ous. He then advised him not to admit of any extraordinary honours from "Senate or others, for this would be needlesse, chargeable, and dangerous, He bade him by virtue feek for immortality, not by Temples built unto his name. The gods he told him he was ever, and all over to worship, according to the cuftom of his Countrey, and compel others fo to do t and to punish Authors of strange, religions, not onely for reverence to his gods, but also because such things draw men to the use of forein customs, whence conspiracies, and bandyings arise, which are no whir agreeable with the Government of a fingle person. Neither was he to suffer any Magicians. and to have a care of Philesophers also, who by their foretellings often raised Seditions. He was to be studious of peace, content with present enjoyments, and yet to be ready for War upon all occasions. Though he must use Intelligencers and Spies; yet he ought not to be too credulous, and not indulge his fervants, or Dependents too much, for all their failings would be imputed to him. He was to right inferiour and private men, incourage arts, and profitable occupations, as to punish idle, and vitious persons; nor to fuffer contentious, or animofities to grow, nor peculiar names to be affuBook IV.

' med, nor any other thing whence discord might arise. He was to keep an equality in his granting requests as much as could be; and therefore not to Guffer any to ask him what he should not grant; but to indeayour that none fhould petition for any thing forbidden. In fum, he advised him never to 'abuse his power, and not to think this a diminution of it, if he did not do 'all that he might : but by how much the more he could do what he would, by fo much to take care to will all things that became him. He bade him alwayes confider whether he did well or ill: whether by fuch an action he procured love or ill will, that he might do and forbear accordingly. He told him, that though he heard no body blame him, yet, ought he not to conclude, that therefore he did well; nor to expect that any should be fo mad as openly to upbraid him. This no man would do, though most extremely injured. Nay, many, faith he, are constrained openly to commend those by whom they have been wronged, lest they should be thought to blame them. But tis the duty of a Prince not to gueffe at the affections of others from their words; but from those things which? cis most probable that they chink of. 23. 'These, and other like things he would have him do; for many things he faid he passed over, because all could not be spoken at the same time. One thing he would fay, which was the fum of all, either faid or to be faid. If he would do all those things, which if he were a subject he would have his Prince do to him , he (hould in nothing offend, profper in all things, and e lead both a lafe, and most happy life. For how could not all but look upon him, and love him as a father, and preferver, when they should see him 'modest, of unblameable life, and excellent both in Peace and War; when he should neither diffrace nor injure any one, but carry himself humbly: not exact money from others, whileft he himfelf flowed with wealth; not af-' flicting others whilest he was luxurious; not punishing others whilest he 'himself was loose and licentious; but in all things as it were sharing with them? Therefore relying on that defence which would be great in thy felf if thou hurtest no man; believe me, faith he, thou wilt have no body, neither have thee, or devise any thing against thee, which being so, thou must needs lead a pleasant life. For, what can be more sweet, what more happy, than for one with virtue to enjoy all humane good things, and to be able to confer them upon others? In conclusion, those, and other things heretofore spoken being considered, he bade him yield to him, and not contemn Fortune, which had preferred him, picked out from amongst all others, to be chief. Now, if taking in reality to himfelf alone the Soveraign powers 'he feared the name of a Kingdom as odious he might omit that, and order This matters under the other of Cafar : if he defired other titles they would give him that of Imperator, heretofore given to his father: they would adorn him also with some other venerable note of honour, so that he might injoy all the Privileges of a Kingdom without the envied name 23. Macenas concluded with these words, whose advice Casar followed,

The fum of all Meccans his advice.

cefar followeth the advice of Mace.

Taketh the title of Impe-

though he greatly commended them both, for wildom, copiousnesse, and freedom of speech: yet he did not presently set upon all those things which he offered, left if on a sudden he should accempt to change the constitution of the Seare, he might fail in his indeavours : therefore fome things he changed out of hand, other afterwards: and some things he left to be perfected by his Successors, which he thought might be better settled through the advantage of time and opportunity. He used also the industry of Agrippa in the prosecution of these designs no lesse than if he had advised him to this course. In this same year, and his fifth Consulfhip, he took the name of Imperator; not dereth several in that sense wherein antiently it was wont to be given for victories obtained (for so he had it given him often both before this and after) but in respect of chief Command, or Authority, as it had been decreed to his father Julins, and his fons, and posterity. Then was he made Cenfor with Agrippa, and amongst other things belonging to that Office, purged the Senate, into which many Equies and unworthy Phehoians had crept during the Civil Wars: and increased it to the number of a thousand. Two persons, viz. C. Clustins and C. Farnin he put into the rank of Confulares, because being defigried Confuls they had been prevented by others. He also ranked certain families amongst the Patricians, because most of those had perished in the Wars. He commanded that no Senatour without his leave should passe beyond linky, which is at this day observed, faith Dio, it being unlawfull for any of that rank to travel, except into Sicily, or Gallin Narbonenfis, whither any that have Estates in those Provinces may go without leave, because those Countrevs are in quier, and defiture of Arms. Cafer also considering that many Senators and others trufted him not , left they should attempt new matters, he gave our that he had burned all the Letters found in Anieny his Coffers : and indeed some of them were lost, but most of them he very carefully kept, and afterwards made use of them as he had occasion. He sent for Antiochus Commagenus, who had treacherously killed his brother, sent on an Embaffy to Rame, and put him to death, being condemned by the Senate.

24. Cafar in his fixth Confulship, together with M. Agrippa his Collegue Maketh a Lu- made a Lugrum At years after the last Celebration of one (by Cn. Leniulus and L. Gellin) and herein were cessed 4062000 Polls of Roman Citizens. He celebrated Games also, which had been decreed in memory of his victory at Attiam, and it was ordered they should be renewed every fifth year . four Colleges of Priests taking care of them, viz. the Pontifices, Augurs, Septemvire, and Quindeciarvire by courses. He caused other forts of Games and Exercises to be made at his own cost, borrowing money; ordered that two perfons of Praiorian rank should yearly overfee the Treasury, gave to the people four times as much Corn as they were wont to have, to some Senators he gave money, some of this rank being so poor, that they could not bear Offices belonging to them. All ingagements and debts to the Exchequer he made vold that Rood good before the battel at Alliam, except what concerned buildings. He suffered no sacrifize to be offered to Egyptian gods within the Pomarium, took also care for repairing of Temples. And because many unjust things had been ordained during the lare Seditions and Civil Wars, especially in the Triumvirate, he made them all void by one Edich, and caused them to cease from his fixth Confulhip. Being in the eyes and mouths of all for these things, he considered how he might increase his reputation. and confirm his fingle power by the confent, and without the conftraint of the people. Being then Conful the feventh time, when he had prepared every Senator before-hand, whom he knew to be well affected towards him, he came to the Sonate-house, and there read a set speech which he had written down firly for this purpose.

Pretending in defire to lay down his power.

25. "Herein he first exceedingly magnified with much affected art, the things a fet speech to " he was about to do and then signified, that though he had such opportunity to establish himself as no man ever had more, yet did he now devest himself of 'all power, & restore all unto them, Arms, Laws, and Provinces : and not onely · fuch things as he had been untrusted wish, but he gave them besides what he bimfelf had further acquired. This then his gift he much illustrated by his felf denial, shewn as well formerly as at present, being very forry that ever there had been occasion for the Commonwealth to use him. He spake of the ' justice and prudence of this refignation, and boasted of the glory of it, which he avowed to exceed the Conquests of Gall, Mysia, Egypt, or Pannenia, the , victories over Pharnaces, Tuba, or Phraaces, the expedicion into Brisain or the passage of the Rhine, and all the difficulties of the Civil Wars. He demanded if any could be found that excelled him in greatnesse of minds who had so many Cities, Nations, and Soldiers at his back, and whom none durst oppose? Horacius, Mucius, Curcius, Regulus, and the Decii, who " ventured their lives for glory were not comparable to him, for as much as by this refignation he exceeded both them, and all others in glory. And shewed hence that the gallantry of spirit found in the antient Remans was not exstinct. Having discoursed much in this vein, he concluded with his advice to Book IV

If the Senate how to manage publick affairs, telling them, that if they fol-*lowed it they would be happy and thankful to him, who refcuing them from feditions, had brought them into that effate: but if they did not punctually observe it, they would make him repent of what he had done; and cast themfelves again into manifold Wars, and great dangers. 26. Cafar having read his writing, the minds of the Senators were marvailoufly affected. Some there were who knew his design, and therefore agreed with him; the rest either suspected his intent, or believed him. Of these fome admired his craft in concealing his purposes; others were troubled at his design: some at his cunning; and others at his refusal of the Government. For there were some who hated the Popular form as turbulent; and approving of the change, were well pleased with Casar's administration. Yet the product of these several affections was the same; for neither they that believed he spake as he thought, could rejoyce; those that wished he were reduced to a private condition, being yet fearful how things would go; and they that defired he might keep his power, being forry for the losse of their hopes. Neither could they that believed him not reprehend him, because to some will, and to others courage was wanting. No man yet, whether he believed him, or believed him not, durst commend his speech, for that some liked it not, and others feared to do it. Wherefore having often interrupted him whilst speaking, when he had done, they all befought him with many words, that he would alone undertake the Government, and by many argua ments compelled him ar length to accept of the Soveraignty. Then that his Thereby con- person might be preserved, they presently decreed the pay of his Guard to be double to that of other Soldiers.

firmeth it.

himfelf.

27. Cafar by this artifice pretending that he would lay down his power, effected that it was confirmed to him, by Senate and People. Yet that he might feem to be Popular, he faid, he would not governall the Provinces, nor obtain perpetual power over such as he should take care of ; therefore the weaker, because they were more quier, he left to others: the most powerful which had appearance of most danger (having an Enemy near at hand, or likely to be turbulent) he kept himfelf, under pretence that the Fathers might enjoy their power fafely, and he himfelf undergo labour and dangers; but by this device he rendred the Senate really helplesse, and weak, and en-Divideth the groffed to himself the Militia. To the Senate and People was left Africk. Principalities Numidia, Asia, Greece, With Epirui, Dalmana, Macedonia, Sicily, Crete, bethist the Libya called Cyrenaica, Bithynia, with the neighbouring Pontus, Sardinia, and that part of Spain called Hifpania Batica. Cafar kept the reft of Spain, Senate and all Gall and Germany, as also Colesyria, Phonicia, Cyprus, and Egypt. Over these Provinces he assumed the Government but for ten years, within which time he undertook to reduce them into order, adding with a certain juvenile kind of boafting, that as foon as ever he could quiet them, he would quie his power. Then did he fet over the Provinces of both forts, men of Patrician dignity, but over Agypt one of Equestrian rank onely, for the causes above rehearfed. To Senators he allotted by themselves Africk and Asia, and the rest of the Provinces to Pratorians. He forbad either to take this employment within five years after they had born Offices in the City. They held their Governments but for a year. And as foon as successors were sent them, they were presently to depart the Provinces, and not loiter in their return, but come to Rome within three moneths. The distribution of the Prowinces, was made on the Ides of January, as may be gathered from Ovid, who thought also that Cafar Ottavianus had the Sirname of Angustus given him the same day, which indeed was the fourth day after, as appeareth from Cen-

> 28. For, the Provinces being divided, and all things feeled, it was debated in the Senate, whether he ought not to be called Romulus, because he had founded the Empire; but the other more venerable name of Augustus, propounded by Manacius Planaus, at length feemed best; for, sacred placasand Temples confectated by Auguristhe Romans termed Augusta. Ca

Sirnamed Augustus.

-far though he much defired that of Romana (faith Dio) yet perceiving he should be suspected of affecting the Kingdom, omitted it, and was surpamed Augustin, as greater than the nature of man could make him. For those things are called Augustin, which are most worthy of honour, and most facred ; wherefore the Greeks expresse it by 266050, as if shou shouldest fay Venerable. Thus Cafar alone got the whole power into his hands, having both money (for though he had his own separate from the Treasury, yet did he use this at his pleasure) and the Militia in his own hands. When his ten years were our other five, and when they were expired five more, and thefe ended, ten more, and ten more after them were added; lo that he had his authority fill continued for his life; for which cause his Successors, though they had the power fetled on them for life, yet at the end of every ten years, folemnized as it were the renewing of it. As foon as Cafar had but made his Oration about refigning his command, and distributing the Provinces, many honours were conferred on him, as that Laurel should be planted before his gates in the Palatium, and upon those trees Oaken garlands hung, as for him who was a perpetual Conquerour of Enemies, and preferver of Citizens. The house of the Emperour also was wont afterwards to be called the Palarium or Palace; not for that it was ever fo decreed; but because Cafar lived in the Palacium or Palacine bill, and there was his Pracorum; his house also received some dignity from the Mount it self, because Romulus there lived : therefore though the Emperour, faith the Historian, live elsewhere, vet is his house called the Palatium or Palace. But after he had done those things which he promited, then was he called Angulius by the Senate and People. From this day forward began the foveraign power and authority to be in the hands of one man, which the Greeks called Monarchy. Yet the Romans derived the Epoche of their Augusti from the Kalends of January of this year, as Cenforinus writeth, who compareth with the 265 year of this Fra, the 283 of the Julian ordinacion. This seventh Consulfhip of Angullus Cafar , and the beginning of his Monarchy, fell out in the 727 year of the City, the second of the 188 Olympiad, the thirteenth of Herod the Great, 25 before the birth of Chriff, A. M. 3978, he himfelf; as it's faid, the feventh, and M. Vipfanius Agrippa the third time being Confulz.

By a Law

19. On this manner all the power of the People and Senate was transferred Libs 5.9.5.17. All power of "non Augustus, faith Dio. For this notable translation and change in the A. M. 3078. Government there was a Law made, which is famous by the name of Lex Ol. 188. an. 2. People tranf-Regia, after which it's convenient to make a little enquiry, for the better in- V.C. 787. formation of Students in this great affair. A Law may be fo (and is fo) called , wither for that a King made, or preferred it, or because it was made landienatted concerning a King or Kingly power. In the first fense, such Laws as were made by Romalus and his successors the antient Kings of Rome, are try Dawyers called Liges Regia, whereof Disnyfins Halicarnaffen, hath'recorded many, and of which several have been already mentioned in their due places; and in the (a) Code is yet extant a Liaw called Lew Regia, concernang the burial of a woman with child, so called, because enacted by some an- (a) Tit, de morcient King! But in the later acceptation is to be understood this Law, where- two inferende by Regali (and that absolute) power was conferred upon Augustus by the Roman Reople: The Law it felt is not now extant in terms, nor exemplified an any Author Mill remainings yet it is mentioned by Infinian in his (4) Inan any Authorstill remainings yet it is mentioned by Jastiman in his (4) In-flitations of Law, who there write the flipsaking of several forts of Law, that 2, de June mbai pleafethebelPrince, baib the viedir of a Law; forafmuch as by the Nat. &c. hex Regia, which was made concerning this power, the Reople granted to him all it's command and authority in the CyPandetts he also mentioneth it, well- (1) L. I. Tit. called Lex Re- nigh in the fo very words; in a chird (d) place also expressing it to the same pur- de Constit Prin-place, that by an antion Line called Lex Regin; all the right and all the power of (d) L. 1. 65. shi Roman Bople was transsuled une and Emperoure authority : therefore it is cum itaque c.

otherwise castled Law impetit; and Augostum privilegium. As for Com- tir, de Vet, Tumentators upon both Influsions and Pandell's, with other parts of the re Enucleando,

But in vain.

rour.

thew ir.

Civil Law, nothing is more acknowledged by them all, as they have oc-

30. But as for the interpretation of this Law, some difference there hath been amongst Expositors, who lived since the Civil Law was restored in the West. For some there have been ever fince that time, who rightly undermanner of ex- flood all manner of power and authority, to be so by the Roman People transferred upon the Prince by that Law, that they affirmed the People thereby deprived and made deflitute of all power and authority. Others thought power and authority indeed was given to the Prince to make Laws, but so that by this concession the power of the People was in no fort diminished, and the force of Plebifciums and Senatufconsultums, as well future as past, was the fame as formerly; fo that Prince, People, Senate, and Commons, had equal authority in this matter: both these opinions being held, as appeareth from Accurfius, Hoftienfis, and others. But the later of them feemeth thence to have rifen, that they mistook this Lex Regia (called also corruptly

The Reafon.

Lex Remnia) for the Hortenfian Law, or rather thence, as a late (a) learned man judgeth, that the Professors and Students of the Civil Law, which was (a) Joh Stdde newly restored, were searful, lest by afferting the true power of the Emperours, they should give offence to such People and Cities, as then lived in fett. 3. a course contrary to such a prerogative, and thereby injure their newly restored profession. And hence might that most known controversie arise, concerning the power of the Prince, from this Law, betwirt the Martinians and Bulgarians. But as for that conceit about the Hortenfian Law, it was enacted by Q. Horsensius the Diltator, in the 468 year of the City (not the 422, as that fame learned man hath it) and the 284 (not the 330) before the birth of Christ, upon the third separation of the Commons, and 259 before the enacting of the Regal Law. The purport of it was, that all Quiries or Romans (hould be bound by the Plebifeita, or the Decrees of the People. Hence, as we formerly observed out of Pomponius, concerning the Original of the Roman Laws, the authority of making Laws was the same, though the fashions differed, although the same thing in effect, was done long before the Horsen- . V. C. 205. fian Law, viz. by L. Valerim and * M. Horatim the Confuls, who got it enacted by a Law in the Centuriata Comitia, that what the Commons resolved on in their Tribes, or Tributa Comitia, faith Livy, but in their Curie or Curiata Comitia, faith Dionysius, should bind the whole People, which tor, ill years after the other, to the same purpose, and 211 before the Lex fell. 2. par. 46. 31. Now strange it is, that Accursing and others, should wrest any thing of the Hortensian Law, and apply it to the Lex Regia, or rather make them all one, as he doth, expounding the Regia thus; Scil. lata ab Hortenfio mirabili Oratore, although he acknowledgeth, as necessarily he must, that the Hortensian Law made onely expresse mention of the power of Senate and Commons. It's not easie to guesse what he meant by so strange a conceit ;

thing we having formerly omitted in it's own place, here supply, having yet

* observed, that a Law was also preferred by Q. Publim Philo the Ditta-

The Hortenfian Law Brangely wrested by fonte.

but this interpretation is made of it by * one as able to judge as any, that as the Horsensian Law concerning Regal Right, that is, the Right of Regiment or Government, gave to the People and Senate (of which two orders Seldems Mi or estates then the Roman body politick confished) equal power and authority 3 supra. fo when the Prince came to be joyned as a third party, in like manner an equal power should be granted to him, as to the other two, and that from the sence of the same Law. And those of this opinion interpret Justinian (who faith concerning the Plebifeita, that from the Hortenfian Law they began to be of no leffe value than Laws, and also the same of the Senatusconsulta, that because the People was so increased, that it could not easily meet together for making of Laws, that therefore the Senate was confulted) as though the fame power remained to Senate and People fill under the Emperours as before. They strangely disputed also, whether the power so granted by the People to the Emperour, might not be revoked, as that which is given to Delegates Delegates from the Delegators. And this is all that can be imagined, as meant by those men concerning the Hortenfian Law, as to the subject in hand, though it be strangely wrested to their design, and maketh nothing for their purpofe.

32. For nothing is more certain than the former opinion, viz. that the people by the Lex Regia were wholy deprived of all Power and Authority in making Laws. This is clear from the words of Justinian formerly cited, which clearly fignific that the whole Power and Authority of People and Scnate was transferred upon, and yielded or granted to the Emperours by this Law. And he (a) elsewhere declareth, that his sentence standeth for Law, (a) L. 12. C. and bindeth all under his command, which indeed the very composing of tis. de Legibus, the body of Law, as from him it is transmitted to us, sufficiently demonstra- &c.

teth, wherein he by his fole Authority repealeth what he pleafeth, and enacteth anew what feemeth good to him, without interpolition of any other Authority; which he could not have done (nor his Predecessors) as to the Plebifcita and Senatufconfulta, though he might as to the Principales Conflictutiones, except he had had that power which formerly belonged to People For the whole and Senate, and they were develted of all. (b) Contrastine challengeth to (b) c. Tit. de power of peo-himself alone Authority to judge betwixt Law and Equity. Hipian wrote, Ligib. 1.1. ple and Se-that all the Power and Authority which they had, the People placed upon, and in the Emperour, by the Lew Regia, and the most learned, and accurate (c) ex- (c) confude inven up by the Lex Regia to the Empcpositors of more later times agree with him herein, rejecting the Hortensian to also Fran-Law utterly, as having any thing to do in this matter of the Regal Law, cife de Amaya In the Laterane Palace at Rome, or the Capitol, is extant (d) a Table of obf the car. In the Laterane ratace at nome, or the Laphon, is extant (a) a lable or (d) infinite braffe, wherein is to be feen a fragment of this Law renewed, as to Vefpa-Gritoup, 142. fran, confirming many things of Soverain, and fole Authority, as defeending & usinus 80upon him from his Predeceffors, and enacting, that what he had done, decreed, tis ad Leges or commanded, before this ratification, should be held and taken for as good & Senatur-Law , as if the People it felf had done, decreed, or commanded it. For, though confulta. he might make use of this ratification, yet his right was as strong before; there being no fuch custom as some have thought, that particular Princes had particular and feveral Laws made for their Authority, that one for Angustus respecting himself, and Successors, as is clear from Fullinian, who never mentionerh any other, nor fpeaketh in the plural number,

33. If we fetch an explanation of the Lex Regia from Historians, we shall find that though they mention it not in words, yet they give that Supream and absolute power to Angustus, which develleth the Senate and People of all Legislative Authority, and sheweth that his command (and that of his Successors) was as large as could be transferred upon a Prince that was to govern persons of free condition without Tyranny. Suetonius faith, that he received perpetual Tribunitial power (which could obstruct all proceedings of Senate and People) and perpetual regiment of manners, and of the Historians Laws. Die faith expressly, that * all the power of People and Senate was * Octopus & transferred upon him ; and that all things were managed meerly as the Em- 10 70 76 8h.

perour pleased, though all other Magistrates, except the Cenfors were pre- un kladais ferved. And that the Emperours may appear to have fo great power, faith 2 agustas newhe, me by force but from the Law; all things which under the Popular Go. 20 marks verment were of greatest force (and that by Unive Sal consent transfer with 11 Aryous verment were of greatest force (and that by Unive fal confent) together with Ptosis. the names, they take upon them, except Dillator (hip, For they are often Confuls, and when without the Pomarium, are called Proconfuls ; and they bear the name of Imperator, (not onely such as have obtained victories, but all of them) to fignific their plenary and absolute power; in the room of King and Dictator, which being taken away they never affume, but confirm the force and matter of them by the title of Emparour. "Accordingly they have the power of raising men and money, making War and Peace, commanding all things effectually, both at home and abroad, putting to death Equitas and Senators, even within the Pomærium, and doing all other things, which a Conful and other Magistrates who had absolute power might do. As Cenfers also they have Authority to inquire into our life and Maners, to make the Con-

Ecece 2

fus , admit persons into the Equestrian or Senatorian rank , and remove thence according to their pleasure. And in as much as they are inaugurate in all Priesthoods, admit Priests into the Colleges, and ever one of them (if there be two or thees Emperours at one time) is Chief Priest, it is that they may have all religious things and facred in their own hands. As for the Tribunitial power, which every eminent Emperour was wont to have it inableth them to interpose against any thing that may be done contrary to their pleasure, and they are thereby Sacrofanct, or Inviolable, fo that if any one injure them by the least, not onely deed, but word, they may put him to death without processe 45 Piacularly Criminal. The Emperonrs connt it unlawfull tobe Tribunes, because they are Patricians, but they receive Tribunital power as luive as ever any enjoyed; and as venewing it yearly with the annual Tribunes, the years of their reign or power, are counted accordingly. These things, as they were oftablished in the Popular Government, do the Emperours, together with the names, take unto thim, that they may appear to have nothing but what was

freely conferred on them. 34. But they have another privilege (so Dio proceedeth) which never was univerfally granted to any Roman. For the Emperours are loofed from the Laws; by which thing alone liberty is given them to do those which we have related, and all other things. After this manner, with thefe names which were used in the Popular State, they receive all the power of the whole Commonwealth, and the Kingly alfo, shunning onely the name. For the titles of Cafar and Augustus add nothing of peculiar power unto them: but the one fignifieth the Jucceffion, and the other the Colondour of their Dionity. As for the name of Fathers, though it giveth them fuch right over their Subjects. as Parents have over Children; yet at first it was given onely for honour. and to admonish them to hold their Subjects as dear as Children, and these them as Parents. Thefe are the titles which the Emperours according to the Laws and Customs use even in our dayes and in our age, all these are at the same time given to them, except that of Cenfor; but in times past they were feverally according to the Laws decreed to them. The name also of Centor, some of them according to the antiene custom have received, and Domician bore is all his life; but now it is not f. For, the Emperours of our time having the thing it felf, are neither chosen to the Cenforship, nor bear the name of the Office, except during the Cenfus. But * thus the Commonwealth was changed * H who ove into a better form and order; for it was utterly impossible it should subsist monstravio under the power of the people. Thus far Dio, excellently, according to his more arises under the power of the people. Inus far Dio, excellently, according to ms. 78 glarury, custom of relating the principal matters of State. It clearly appeareth from Ted 78 outs. him, how absolute the power of the Emperours was, and how without any etabliscopy co-ordinate power of People or Senate in any respect. The main of their Marakaguisa Authority lay in the title of Imperator ; affifted by the Tribunitial power, & yagas & which two, (nay the former of them) make good our exposition of the Lix arianaon Regia, without the other titles which they might take upon them for populariev, and to prevent the pretences of others, though their Authority was large, ves duriss onand ftrong enough without them. Our Author concludeth this discourse with office. an Attestation to that truth we formerly afferred against Agrippa.

35. The same night that Casar received the sirname of Angustus, a con- Div lib. 53. siderable sign (as it was accounted) of his confirmation hapned. For Tiber pag. $10. so overflowed, that all the lower parts of Rome were Navigable, which the Fortune tellers interpreted to fignifie his great advancement, and that he should have the whole Citie in his power. Now many fought to flatter him, but the indeavours of Sexens Pachvins (or Apudius) exceeded all, who being Tribune of the People, after the cuttom of the Spaniard, confectated himself to him, and caused others to do so. Having now obtained the Government by consent of the people, he fet himself more effectually to look after it, and made several Laws. Yet did se not all on his own head, but propounded many things to be debated in publick, that if any were displeased he might amend them: he defired all, freely, and openly, to deliver their opinions, and being moved by their reasons changed something: but he especially defired to be advited by the Contuls, or his Collegue, if he himself bore that The general Office. Of the other Magistrates he made choice of one out of each fort, and out of the Senate fifteen chosen by lor, who were for fix moneths to be gultus his adhis Counsellors; that hereby he might feem to communicate his designs to the ministration. rest. Some things he brought down to the whole senate; but he thought it fitter to consult with a few persons at leisure about the greatest affairs. He called also these men sometimes to decide causes: although the Senate still heard certain matters, and gave answer to the Ambasiadors of Kings and States as formerly. Although the Comitia, or Assemblies of the People were fometimes held, yet nothing was done but according to the pleasure of Augustus. He partly named Magistrates, and lest others to be created by the People; onely taking care that no unworthy persons by indirect practices advanced themselves. This was the general course of Augustus his admini-Stration, Saith Dio.

36. The year following Augustus made an expedition into Spain, which Oresins lib.6.

He reducerh fecond time.

Virgil dieth.

Augustus his wives and

illue.

the Spaniards, never had been well quieted fince the Romans first fet footing there; but now cap. 2. and shutteth the Cantabrians and Astarians were not onely ready to defend their own lithe Temple of berty, but endeavoured also to lay the yoak upon their neighbours. Yet he sutton, in Oligreduced, and brought all under, and being then at Tarrason, came Ambasia- vio. dors from India to beg his friendship. Returning home, he shut the Temple of Janus the second time, having somethy so done after his Triumph over Antony, and his return out of Egypt, which shutting was the third from the foundation of the Citie. But after his return out of Spain it conti- Strabolib, 2. nued not long thut. For Alius Gallus made War against the Arabians, and piercing far into their Countrey, had lubdued all Arnbia Falix, but that he was betraved. At the same time also Candace, Queen of Ethiopia, fent her Captains to invade Egypt, but they were repulfed by Petronius Governour of that Countrey (for Cornelius Gallus having bespattered Augustus, and for that being condemned by the Senare had killed himfelf) who also pur- Lib. 17. fued them, and taking divers Towns, forced the Queen to beg peace, and returned inriched to Alexandria. Augustus some rime after went into Diol. 17. Greece, and thence into Syria, whither the Parchian tow affrighted, fent the Enfigns taken at the overthrow of Craffus, and flight of Amony; and now again did the two Kings of India, Pandion, and Porns, fend Ambaffodors with presents. As he returned home, Virgit the Poet met him at Athens, who now out of a defire to finish his Enciados had resolved to withdraw himself out of the way into Greece and Afia; but meeting here with Augustus, in who'e especial favour he flourished, he was drawn back with him, and viewing Megara in a very hor feafon contracted a diffemper, which was to much increased with fayling, that growing still worse, he died at Vide vitam Brandusium within a few dayes after his landing, in the 52th year of his Virgilii.

age, on the 12th of September, and the 735th year of the Citie, C. Sextins A. M. 3990.

37. Augustus his first wife was Scribonia, which had been married to two persons of Confular Dighity, and by one was a Mother. Of her he begat his daughter Julia, but within a short time divorced her, as he pretended, be- sueton in Off.

and Q. Lucretius being Confuls.

cause of the perversity of her disposition. Then did Noro, who had followed vio cap. 62, 63, L. Amonius to Parusium, but afterwards was reconciled, freely yield unto 64. him Livia Drufilla, though he had had one fon already by her, named Tiberins, and the was big with another, which being born three moneths after the had married Cafar, was cilled Drufus. By Livia, Augustus had no Children but abortive. His daughter Julia he married to Murcellus, his filter Offavia's fon, and after his death to Agrippa, making him put away his wife, the daughter of Offavia; for in a consultation Macenas took the liberty to tell him, that he must either marry his daughter to Agrippa; or take away his life, there was no third way, he had made him fo great. By Agrippa the had three fons, Cains, Lucius, and Agrippa Posthumms, and two daughters, Agrippina and Tulin. The three fons were adopted by their Grand-father, but the two former died before, and the later was Killed by Tiberius after:

The death

of Agrippa,

the death of Augustus. Tiberius and Drusus subdued the Rhatians and Vin- Die lib. 54. delicians, People of Germany, and afterwards the Pannonians and Frisians apart. Agrippa was made partaker of the Tribunitial power by Augustus, amongst other honours, and ruled Syria by himself and Agents ten years. Being sent into Pannonia (of which Hungaria is part) he stilled the Natives by the rumour of his coming, and returning into Campania, died shortly after. Then was Tiberius compelled to mary Julia, although he had already to wife Agripping the daugher of Agrippa. Within two or three years after, Sucton in Class-Drussus having pierced very far into Germany, and entered his Consulship dio. together with L. Quintius Crispinus, died also, leaving two sons, viz. Germanicus and Claudius, in the 746 year of the City.

38. The same year that Drusar died (by a fall from his Horse, as Livy wrote, who intended his Hiltory jult fo far) Augustus being High-Priest Suction in Otta-(which Office he took not upon him till the death of Lepidus) amended the vio. Calendar, corrected formerly by his adoptive Father. For in those 36 years Plinius 1, 18.

He amendeth there had been made an intercalation of twelve dayes, whereas there of opinion lib, 6. the Calendar, ought to have been but of nine, therefore he commanded that the twelve cap, 21. years following should passe without any intercalation at all, that so the three Diol. Sec. D. Sec. dayes might be swallowed up. Now he named August after himself the A. M. 3996. moneth, Sexilis, because in it he entered his first Consulship, and had the V. C. 745. first enfigns of Victory and Power , rather than September wherein he was Sutton in Tibe-born. Not long after did Tiberiut, rather by craft than force of Arms, Somea de beac-Sexuilis called again subdue the Germans, who maintained a most difficult Warre. After his ficits, 1,32. Triumph he withdrew himself into the Island Rhodes, either because of Cains Tacitus Avaal. and Lucius, or by reason of the intolerable dishonesty of his wife Julia; for lib. 1. August. the was so abominably wanton, that her father at length banished her into the Island Pandataria, and very imprudently in his anger, revealed her naughty cariage in way of complaint to the Senate, of which indifcretion being afterward sensible, he would often say, that if either Agrippa or Macenas had lived, no such thing had hapened to him. 39. Agrippa, as we faid, having quieted Pannonia, died after his return into Campania, in the 743 year of the City, three years before Drussus. A. M. 3993. Pliny telleth, that they were first called Agrippe, which were born with the V. C. 743.

feet forward, as if a man flould fay, born hardly, or with much adoe. And Lib. 7.6. 8. in this manner, (faith he) as they fay, M. Agrippa came forth of his mothers womb, the onely man almost known to have brought any good fortune with him, and prospered in the World, of all that were in that fort born Yet he was much pained with the Gout, and passed all his youth, and many a day after in bloody Wars, and in danger of a thousand deaths. Unfortunate he was in his children, and especially in his two daughters the Agrippina, who brought forth two children pernicious to the whole Earth, namely C. Caligula and Domitiu Nero Emperours. He died in the 51 year of his age, A. M. 3997. tormented and vexed with the adulteries of his wife, and oppressed with v. c. 746.

the intolerable servitude in which he lived under her father. Four Velleins 1, 2. years after him, and the year after Drusus, died Macconas, the other favou- c.88. rite of Angustius, and the great Patron of Learned men. He was in as great Dio 1.55. grace with Cafar as Agrippa, though lefte honoured: for he contented himfelf with the Equestrian rank; neither could he not obtain greater things, eques Hetruste but he would * not. He had great power with Augustus, which he impro- de Sanguise ved to the allaying of his passion, and doing good offices for others, as one viguon example flows above the reft. On a time, as Augustus face in Judgment, qui cupis est and was about to sentence many to death, he perceiving it, and not able to summer. come at him for the croud, wrote these words, Rife up at last Executioner, Proposities 1, 3. in a table, and cast them into Casar's lap as some other matter, who having (a) Claims Ac read them, presently departed without condemning any. Neither did this rei tradent offend Augustus, but he was glad that he had one who would be fo free with plant mount him, and curb that arger, which either his inclination or the urgency of but read. finesse moved him to. (a) Cilniu was the antient name of his Family, and silius Italius.

Arretium in the Lyrbanian Coalis the place of it. (b) Pliny telleth strange (b) L.7.6.5t. passages of him, as that he never was without an Ague, and for three years before his death, never slept a quarter of an hour together. In the same year (which was that wherein Angullus mended the Calendar, and called the moneth Sextilis after himfelf) Horace the Poet also died, in the 57 year of his age. His familiarity with Cafar and Macenas is sufficiently known, His life is written by Suctonius.

40. Augustin having again quieted all Nations, and shut the Temple of Janus the third time; having ordained a general taxation throughout the Empire, that he might know the State and worth thereof; having also refufed the name of Dominus or Lord with great earnestnesse, which he forbad even his Children and Nephews by an edict to use towards him, the Lord and Heir of all things came into the World, in the fulnelle of time, revealed by the Angel Gabriel to the Prophet Daniel, for the fulfilling of the promifes The birth of made concerning the feed of the woman, which should break the ferpents our Lord Jesus head. Great difference there is in assigning the year of the World wherein A.M. 4002 our Saviour was born, by reason of the difficulty of computation arising from 01, 194, an. 3. the several versions of the Scriptures, the intricate and uncertain successions V. c.752. of the Judges, the variety of the forms of years, and the feveral reckonings Cefare Augusto as to parcels of such as are related in Scripture. A great help for the regula- M. Plautio Sition of these things is afforded from prophane Histories. But it beginneth but lane cost. with Cyrus, whose History, as to the restauration of the Tems, presenterhus with the first certain note of conjunction (he being so named both by holy and prophane Writers, but not Nebuchadne (ar) and yet the duration of his reign is also uncertain. Yet as from all these opinions weighed together, a good account may be given in another place, more proper for the length of ir. as to the year of the World, so the Evangelist teaching us, that in the fife teenth year of Tiberius, Christ was about thirty years old, it must needs follow, that Augustus reigned fifteen years after his birth; so that if we count (as some do) the reign of August as from the death of Julius Calar, it lafled 57 years, and then must Christ be born in the 42 of it. But if we follow them (as the order of this Work doth) who with more reason fetch the beginning of his Empire from the death of Antony, and the conquest of Egypt, then Christ's birth fell into the 28 year thereof, and according to the computation which we most approve into the 4003 year of the World, the 752 of the City, and the third year of the 194 Olympiad, wherein Cafar Augustus himself the thirteenth time, and M. Plausius Silanus were Confuls. Although Cyrenius (who was Conful ten years before, and is called elsewhere P. Sulpicius Quirinus) might not formally be President of Syria (which Office as others fay, was now obtained by Quintilius Varus, who fuc- Josephus Antia.

ceeded Saturninus, who as yet was not departed out of the Province) yet being fet over this taxation by Augustus in that place, this ricle might well be given him, though he then governed Cilicia, as Herod is by Tefephus faid to be constituted Procurator of all Syria, though it had it's Officers, who and odd moneths, and being deluded by the Wife Men (whom he willingly fuffered to fearch out Christ, that he might destroy him) killed all the children in and about Bethlehens of two years and under; which cruelty was but Matth.2. 16. agreable with his disposition and constant practice. Here, that we may describe his affaires, we must make a little digression, and take them where we formerly left them. 41. After he had obtained the possession of his Kingdom, he put to death A digreffion to the affairs 45 of Antigonus his friends, having procured him to be beheaded, as we forof Herod.

merly shewed. Then did he prefer to the High-Priesthood one Ananel an obscure min, neglecting Aristobulus the son of Aristobulus the King, and brother to his own wife Marianne; and Antony desiring to see this youth, for the fame of his beauty, he fearing the Roman might advance him, to flay him at home, gave him the Priesthood, and excused his neglect to send him, by the inclination of the Fews to rebellion. Perceiving him then to be in extraotdinary favour with the Tems, and that his mother Alexandra (which he were to act by his affiltance and direction. Herod had now reigned 27 years and fon into Egypt, a year after, as he was swimming, he caused him to be drowned, and though Cleopatra accused him hereof to Antony, yet by presents he made his Peace. In the Civil Wars he fided with Aniony, who having away Anflobus forces sufficient, defired him to chastize the Arabians, that denied the Tribute imposed on them. This he did, and though at first his attempts miscaried, yet in another battel he quite overthrew and brought them under. After the overthrow of Antony, he had little hope that his own matters would go well. He murdered Hyrcanus, who onely furvived of all the males of the Royal Family, and whom he had recalled from Babylon, whither he was Idemibid. caried by the Parihians. He took the advantage of the old man's intent to 6.9, &c. flye into Arabia, through the importunity of his another Alexandra, who promised him great things, if Herod should miscary under the power of Augustus. Then providing as well as he could for the work, in case it should happen, he went to Rhodes to visit Cefar, from whom he concealed not the love he bore to Antony, but with notable courage declaring it, withall fignified that he was ready to serve him as faithfully, which so wrought upon the magnificent Prince, that he liked him extremely, and confirmed him in his estate. After Cafar's return out of Ægypt into Syria, he entertained him, and as he thereby procured the reputation of a noble and heroick spirit, so also an addition to his Kingdom. Yet was he unfortunate at home, having commanded feveral times, that if any thing hapened in his absence, they should make away his beloved wife Marianne. She flearing of it used him frowardkept very close because of her restlesse spirit) plotted the escape of her self

Is reconciled to Cefar, ha-

ly, whereat being inraged, he was throughly perswaded to put her to death by his fifter Salome, which envious woman feigned certain acculations against 'her. But after the deed was done, having extraordinarily loved her, wife Marianne, he fell even mad, and thereby into a great ficknesse, so that casting off all Government, he departed to Samaria, then called Sebaste, in honolir of

A2. Alexandra in the mean time endeavoured to get the fitong places of Terusalem into her hands, wherewith he being acquainted, ordered her to cap. 11, oc. Groweth cru be put to death, and then returning to the City, grew exceeding cruel and diffasteful. The prejudice was increased by his making Games in honour of Cafar, and hanging his Theatre with Trophies, which the People forely diflasted, as being by their Religion principled against Pictures. Ten men confipred against him, but were discovered and put to death. Not long after he redeemed his credit by liberality in a great dearth, and maried the daughter of Simon, whom he preferred to the Profithood, having displaced Hars the son of Phabes. Then did he imploy his time and treature in sumptuous and royal buildings, as that of Celara, among the right, formerly cal-ledthe Tower of Strain; and he built a Temple to the honour of Augu-flus, who had again inlarged his Dominions, and beflowed a Tetrarchy at his defire upon his brother Pheroyas. To the People, which was ready to murine, because of his idolarry, he released the third part of their Tributes to please them, forbad all their meetings, punished severely such as were obtained. and bound the reft to him by an oath. After this, taking down the old Teraple of Jerusalem, he built another much more flately and magnificent Oc-ple of Jerufalem, he built, another much more stately and magnificent. Octing a Work of most admirable beauty), in the space of nine years and fix moneths, during which time, it's faid, that it onely rained on nights, left the Repaireth the Work should be hindred. In the dedication he factified 300 Oxen, said the respective to the People according to their abilities. He made a Law that thieves which broke walls should be sold for slaves, out of the Kingdom. Which which be people ill resented, as against their Resigion, which not onely brovided the People ill resented, as against their Resigion, which not onely brovided to otherwise concerning theves, but would be proken also by the must needstarily serve Idolaters. Now he himself section from some Alexander and Aristophius his sons by Marianne, whom having sent thirser to be bred. An antisus had kindly entertained. These youths were feared by Salome and Pherora, as intending to revenge their mothers death, and therefore they resolved they must not live, especially she that was incouraged by the successive their mothers death, and therefore successe she had had against their mother. And they presented her with an opportunity of accusing them, seeming indeed not to be well affected toward their father, defiring the Kingdom, and exclaiming greatly against the authors of their mother's death, Herod troubled hereat, called to Court Antipater his ion, begotten when he was a private man, that opposing him against them he might make them more carefull of their behaviour. But thereby were they more incenfed, and Antipater making use of his time got more and more into his father's affections, who commended him in especial manner to Cafar (though he had not a thought at first of making him his Heir) and fent him to Rome to procure the Emperour's favour.

After his ri-

fling of Davids Sepulchre his affairs decline.

CHAP. I

42. Anupater improving his father's displeasure against his brothers, effe- 1dem ibid. ched that he carried them to Augustus then at Aquileia, and grievously ac-cap7, &c. cused them of an intention to poyson him. Yet the young men by their tears, and Alexander's refutation of the calumny, fo moved Cafar, that he recongotten of Ma-ciled them; and for that Herod had given him 300 Talents, and been very liberal, as his custom was to be in all places, unto the people of Rome, he beflowed on him half of the profits of the Mines in Cyprus, and gave him liberry to leve which of his fons he pleased his Successor, or if he would to distribute his Kingdom amongst them all, which Herod presently would have done, but Cafar would not permit it. In his absence the Inhabitants of Trachonitis a confiderable part of his Kingdom rebelled, and were reduced by his Captains. After his return he made a speech to the people, and named to succeed him first Antipater, and then his sons by Mariamne, which naming a Succeffor beforehand, when the inheritance is uncertain, hath ever wrought great inconvenience to both parties. After he had opened David's Se-cap.11.01. pulchre to search for Treasure, (as John Hyrcanus had done before him) where he found none except very costly Attire, and Ornaments of Gold, "tis observed that his family fell into a very sad condition, nothing being heard but complaints & accusations one against another. The greatest part of Antipater's milice fell upon Alexander, and the Court hereby was filled with tortures and flaughters. Herod suspecting all, and trusting none, put many to death, and those of his most intimate friends, and committed Alexander to prison, being captivated by fo great a fear of an untimely death, that he was almost ready to run mad. These things were diverted by the rebellion of the Inhabitants of Trachonitis (which Countrey Cafar, having taken it from Zonodorus, gave unto him) who again revolting, were protected by Syllaus and Arabian, that being to marry his fister Salome was rejected, because he would not turn Jew. Saturninus and Volumnius Presidents of Syria, tefolved he might by force of Arms chaftize these Rebels, whereupon he entred Arabia, and having formerly destroyed their families, which they left in their Corn Countrey, took a Castel they held there. Syllaus now being at Rome accused Herod unto Casar, as having wasted all Arabia, and he so far believed it that he twice denied his Ambassadors audience. The Rebels and Arabians hereupon did him much injury, which he was glad to put up for the prefent, but sent Nicholaus Damascenus to plead his cause. 44. He first joyned with the Ambassadors of Aretas King of Arabia, in cap. 16. de. acculing Syllaus, thence came to lay open his forgeries against Herod, to whom Augustus was throughly reconciled, and had given him Arabia too, but that he received from him other Letters, containing another complaint against his fons. For whilest he was thus out with Cafar, the former stirs were renewed in his house by means of Eurycles a Lacedamonian, who winding himfelf into Alexander's acquaintance, betrayed him first to Antipater, and then to Hered himself. He denied all accusations, except that he intended with his wife to fly to Archelans King of Cappadocia her father; but Cafar being consulted, as we said, willed Herod to gall a Council at Berytum with the Roman Presidents, Archelaus of Cappadopia, and the rest of his friends and Nobility there abouts, and do as he should be advised. He called all but Archelaus, and in an Assembly of 150 men declaimed most furiously against his fons, not producing any proof at all, further than that they intended to ons to death.

Putteth his

A grievens

Conspiracy

against him.

He fickneth.

BOOK IV.

fly, and not suffering them to be present to answer for themselves ; He onely required the suffrages of the Assembly to countenance his private resolution, which the major part giving (though Sazurninus and his fons gave an indifferent sentence) he acted by fury, and unnatural madnesse, caused them to be Joseph Amig. strangled at Sebafte. Antipaier, after the death of his brothers, quickly plot- lib. 7, cap. 1. ted the destruction of his fathet, and for that he was hated by all men, pro- or. cured some esteem by his gifts, and drew Pheroras into the conspiracy, to the issue of whom the Pharifes promised the Kingdom. For resuling to take the Oath of Allegiance, they were fined by Herod, to whose Kingdom they prophefied destruction, and happinesse to the samily of Pheroras, because his wife payed their fine. Herod getting out these things by the means of Salome, put the principal of the Pharifes to death, withothers, and urged his brother Pheroras to put away his wife, which he refusing to do, he banished him his Kingdom. Phereras then departing into his Terrarchy, died fhortly after, being visited by Herod, who buried him honourably at Jerusalem. Anupater standing in fear of his father, wrought by his Creatures at Rome to be sent for by Cafar. But this availed nothing; for in his absence all came out, which consistence Saloma's words (to which the King in this matter had given but little credit, knowing her to be too free in acculations) and brought vengeance upon him, notwithflanding all his craft, for the murther of 45. Pherora his wife being accused of poysoning her husband, her maids cap. 6. &c. his brethren.

were tortured, and in their pain gave some suspition of the conspiracy, which was more cleared by one Antipater that had the ordering of Antipater's affairs, who confessed that his Muster had compounded a poyson, and delivered it to Pheroras to be given to the King in his absence, and that it was kept by Pheroras his wife: She confirmed the same, declaring that the poylon was bought in Egypt by Anipater's procurement, that it was committed to her charge, and how, that when her husband was fick, and Herod came out of kindnesse to visit him, being overcome with his love he forbade her to give it him. Amongst the accessaries was Herod's own wife, the daughter of the High-Priest; she was put away, her father deposed, and Mathias the son of Theophilu: preferred to his place; Herod also her son was put out of the Kings Testament, wherein he had bequeathed the Kingdom to him after his death. In the mean time Bushillus the Freed-man of Antipater returning from Rome was cortured, and confessed that he had brought with him a poyfon to deliver to Pheroras, wherewith the King might be certainly and speedily dispatched in case the other should fail. Antipater returned ignorant of these passages, for that almost every one was his Enemy, and before his father and Quintilius Varus, though he fought to cover his wickednesse, all things were made plain against him, whereupon he was committed to close prison. Shortly after Herod himself sickned, and became exceeding reasty and wrathfull, as well for these things as for that he thought the people was glad of his misfortunes, having at the infligation of the Doctors of their Law cut down an Eagle of Gold of great value that flood over the Portal of the Temple. But his sicknesse more and more in-

46. His difease was strange and fearfull. For he burned with an inward creafed. heat, which pierced and cormented him in his bowels. He was also vexed with a ravenous and infatiable appetite, and an Ulcer in his Entrails, with a strange and furious Colick. His feet were swoln with moissure, and a shining kind of flegm, his stomack being no lesse afflicted. His body rotted, and was full of crawling Worms , which afforded an intollerable stench; His Strange besides, he was held with a fifthy and troublesom Priapism, a strong Con-Difeafe. vultion of his Nerves, and shortnesse of breath, being generally judged thus to be punished for his infinite impieries and fins committed against the Majetty of Gods& doubtleffe his intention to kill Chrift, with the innocent bloud of the Infants cridd loud. He used all means for recovery, and went over Jordan to the hot Baths of Callirhor. Thence returning to Joricho, a melancholick humour feized on him, which rendred him unfociable, and diffileafed with all men. Perceiving now that he should die, and supposing that the Tows would much rejoyce in his death, he shut up many of the chiefest of them in the Hippodrome, and gave in charge to his fifter Salome, and her husband Alexas, that as foon as he was dead they should cause them all to be killed, that a lamen tation might accompany his funeral. Before his death he received Letters from Cefar, who gave him leave to deal with his fon as he faw occasion. Antipater yet believing that he was dead, plotted how to escape and seize on the Kingdom , but his Jaylor with whom he dealt revealed it to

He killeth his Herod, who commanded one of his Guard inflantly to kill him; and to fuch fon Antipater, an end came he for the murther of his brethren, and the fad Tragedies he who had pro- had raifed in his father's house. Herod having attempted to kill himself, died some five dayes after his son, in the 72 year of his age, 27 after his getbrothers, and ting possession of the Kingdom, and 29 after he had been declared King by the Romans; 'tis uncertain how long after the birth of Christ, but as is suppoplotted a gainst his fa- sed not above two years, in the first of the 195 Olympiad, the 754 of the Citie, ther's life.

Cains Casar, and L. Emilius Paulus being Consuls.

Salome and Alexas 01,195.0m.1,

And dieth.

in Judea.

Seditions in 10 1 by 31.20 mmie.

Judaa.

before his death was throughly known, to their great honour discharged those V. C. 754. that were locked up in the Hippodrome. 47. Herod not long before his end renewed his Tellament, wherein he or- cap. 10, 11, 6 dained his fon Antipas Terrarch of Galile and Peraa, having before this ap- 13. pointed him his Succeffor in the Kingdom, for that he was incenfed against Archelans and Philip, by the means of Antipater. Now he made Archefon being left laus King, gave the Province Gaulonitis, Trachonitis, Batanea, and Peneade his Successor to Philip, left Salome very well, and gave great Legacies to Casar and Livia his wife. Archelaus at first was much cried up by the people; but afterwards the multitude calling to mind the death of Mathias, and his Confederates whom Hood had flain for breaking down the Eagle, fell into a Sedition (many flocking out of the Countrey to the Paffeover) and demanded iustice against divers of his Officers; but this tumult was setled by the slaughter of 2000 about the Temple. Then went Archelaus to Rome, not daring to take upon him the title without the leave of Augustus, to whose dispo-fal his father had referred his Testament. Many followed, and spoke against him , being affected better towards Antipas , the Fews also fent their Ambassadors, with whom joyned 8000 of their Countrey-men then living at Rome, in a Petition to Cafar, that they might be joyned to Syria, and live August gi. under Roman Governours without any King. At length Casar came to this veth him half resolution, to give half that Dominion, which Herod injoyed, unto Archelaus, of the King- viz. of Iduman, Indan, and Samaria, with Cafaren, Sebafte, Joppe, and dom, and the Terusalem: the other half he divided betwixt Antipas and Philip. The forother half mer had the Countrey lying on the further fide of Fordan and Galile, with to his two 200 Talents of annual revenue. Philip obtained Bathanea, Trachonitis, brothers. and Auranitis with 100 Talents. Archelans had 500 Talents of yearly rent out of his Countrey. Whilest these things were in hand at Rome, grievous Seditions tore the Tems in pieces at home; for they being now destitute of a King, several took upon them that title, Sabinut, who superintended the af- cap. 12.

fairs of Cafar there, gave the occasion, by pilling the people, which now at the feast of Pentecoste gathering together from all quarters, sought to shake off that voak. After great flaughters, at length all was quieted by the coming of Varus from Antioch , who left the first Legion in Garrison at Ferusa-

48. The succession being setled by Augustus, a young man, and a Tem, Cap. 14. born at Sidon , counterfeited himself Alexander the fon of Herod by Mariamne, affirming, that both he and Aristobulus were delivered by a friend, One counter- who had it in charge to fee them executed, others being killed in their rooms. He deluded thousands of Jews inhabiting Melus, as also them at the fon of He-Rome, by whom he was received as their King. But he could not deceive Cafar, who made him confesse the forgery, and because he had promised him pardon, if he would acknowledge the deceit, for that he had formerly Ffffff 2 laboured

And is dete-

Acd by Au-

cains fafar

guftus.

The Roman Empire.

laboured with his hands, he condemned him to the Gallies, and put the man to death who had perswaded him to turn counterfeit. As for Archelaus, he Cap. 15. tyrannized for ten years, and then being accused by the Jews, Augustus fent for him to Rome, where his cause being heard, he banished him to Vienna in Gall, and confiscated his goods. After this Cyrenius being fent into Syria to succeed Varus, valued the goods of each Inhabitants, and seized the estate of Archelans. This cusse or valuation of their estates, gave occasion to a great Sedition, by the means one Judas a Ganlonte, Sodoc a Pharife, lib.18.c.1. & 2. and his confederate, alleging that this description was no other than a mini- Att. $. 37. fest token of their servitude, and exhorting all to maintain their liberty, to no purpole. For Judga now having no more Princes of it's own, was go-Judea gover-ned by Deputies, of which Coponius being the first, was shortly after suc-ned by Deputies, of which Coponius being the first, was shortly after succeeded by M. Ambivius, and he by Annius Rufiu.

49. Augustus (that we may return to Roman matters) adopted his two Diel 45. Grandsons Cains and Lucius, having got them to be called Principes Tuventures, and defigned them Confuls. It havned that the Armenians cast out Arravasdus, whom he had placed as King over them, and were in this Sedition affilted by the Parthians. This troubled him exceedingly; for he grew oldhimself, and his adopted sons were too young on the other hand. Yet fent he Caius with Proconfular power to compose these troubles, giving him for a greater grace Lollia Paulina to wife, the daughter (or niece) of M. Lollins, who went with him as his Governour. Tiberius met him at Samus, but Sucton in was flightly looked on, being little better than a banished man. But Cains A.D. 2.

the Armenians. falling our with Lollins, who had incenfed him against him, he had leave to re- v.c. 355. turn home, in the eighth year of his retirement, Augustus giving way to it, Idemin Tiberio through the importunity of Livia, but denying to do any thing without the 6, 12,13. consent of Caius, and then recalling him with this condition, that he should not at all medle with affairs of State. As for Cains, he prospered at his first entrance into Armenia, but not long after received an hurt in a rash and unadvised conference, after which he grew littlesse and sluggish, and this distemper was increased by flatterers, so that he desired to stay in the East, and lead Paterent, 1, 2, there a private life. His Grandsather vehemently urged his return, with con- c. 102,00 103. dition also, that then he might do what he pleased, so that unwillingly jour- Floras LA.C. us. nying for Italy, he died at Limyra a City of Lycia. His brother Lucius Dieth 18 moneths after going into Spain, was dead eighteen moneths before, after whose decease Augustus would have adopted Tiberius; but he (if we believe Paterculus an egregious flatterer of him) fearing the envy of Cains, vehemently withhis brother flood the attempt. But now both of them being dead (and it's thought hel- A.D.4. ped away by his mother Livia for his sake) he was adopted, together with V.C. 756.

Agrippa Posthumus, who had been born of Julia after Agrippa's death.

And left he should attempt any new matters, he was constrained to adopt Germanicus, one of the fons of his brother Drufus, though he had a fon of Dio ut fugue. his own called also Drusus, in the 757 year of the City, Sexius Elius A.D. 5.

Latus and C. Sexius Saturnium being Consuls, the fifth after the birth of V.C. 757. Christ.

50. Tiberius was presently sent into Germany, where three years before a famous War had broken out ; and with him Velleins Paterculus the Historian (formerly a Tribune in the Army) in quality of General of the Horfe, as fucceeding his father in his places; and for nine whole years was he, as he tellethus, *the fpettator of Tiberius his heavenly attions, either in that place, or as Lieutenant, and as far as the meanne fe of his faculties could reach, an + videl, 2.C. affiftant in them. This Summer he passed over the River Viturgis, and re- 104, 105,106.

duced divers Nations; but in the next even all Germany. For, the Roman Tiberlus fub- Army was led 400 miles upwards from the Rhine, as far the River Elbe dueth Gennany, which runneth by Sons, now the feat of an Archbishop, and a people then called Hermundurians, and was met there by the Fleet, which having failed through the British Sea (till then unknown and unheard of) having conquered many Nations, and brought infinite provision of all things there joyned with it. Now nothing was left unconquered, except the Marcomanni, who under conduct of Marobodunus quitting their former feat, had feeled themselves upon these grounds surrounded by the Hercinian Wood, and through his order- Identified c. ing were raifed to a confiderable and emulous greatnesse. Tiberius intended 109, 110, to fet upon them the next fummer; but was diverted by the rebellion of all Pannonia and Dalmatia, which not farisfied with the benefits of a long A.D. B. Peace, and grown in frength, drew into fociety all the Nations about them, V. 760. and flew to arms, to the number of 800000 fighting men.

(I. Augustus himself was much affrighted at this rebellion, and well he might, for the Rebels having raised 200000 foot, and 9000 Horse, all select men, they ordered that part of this Army should make for Italy it felf, Diel, es. under expert Captains, that part should break into Macedonia, and a third Paterculus 1. 2. band be left at home to defend their own. Levies therefore were carefully a 110, 111. made, all the old Soldiers recalled from every quarter, and such men and women both, as were found within the ceffe of Freed-men, were compelled to find Soldiers, the Prince himself being heard to say in the Senate, that except they took good heed, within ten dayes the Enemie might face the walls of Rome. Tiberius was appointed General, and amongst other Officers Paterculus went his Quaftor; Germanicus also is said to have deserved well in this Expedition. Though the War at first was full of difficulties, and the more through scarcity of provisions, yet was it in the space of three years Reduceth the concluded by Tiberius. Pannonia first submitted, Baro and Pinetus their Pannonians & most famous Leaders being taken off, for the one was made a prisoner, and the other yielded himself. And though the Dalmatians were hard to be overcome, through the difficult fituation of their places, the fierceneffe of their natures, and their wondrous abilities in matters of War, yet not long after they were reduced, being almost totally ruined. During these troubles abroad, Agrippa the other adopted fon of Augustus lived as a banished per- Tacitus 1.1.c.3. fon . being by him confined to Planafia an Ifland near Corfica, for his Sueton in Tibegreat folly and rudenesse, though he was not found guilty of any notable crime. 110 c. 20. To Tiberius a Triumph and other great honours were decreed for reducing Illyricum, but he put off the Triumph as very unseasonable, the City being now in great heavinesse for the losse of the Legions, and Varus in

52. Quintilius Varus formerly President of Syria (which being rich he entred poor, but left it poor coming away rich, as one expresset it) was fent into Germany, which he governed with great negligence and fecurity, as not Paterenlus ut confidering that he lay in an Enemies Country, but administring Justice as if suprace, 217, he had been in the Forum at Rame. Against him thus secure did the 118,119,120. he had been in the Forum at Rome. Against him thus secure did the Germans conspire at the instigation of Arminius, son to Sigimerus Prince of that Tacitus Annal. Nation, and a young man of excellent parts. The plot was revealed to Va- 1.1.

rus by Segostes, but he refused to give any credit to the relation. They left The over- no room therefore for a fecond discoverer, but intangling the best Army the Diol. 56. The over- no room therefore for a containing the valour, and experience) amongst bogs, Suction in throw of the Romans had (both for discipline, valour, and experience) amongst bogs, Ostavio. Legions under woods, and ambuscadoes, cut in pieces three Legions, with as many wings, and fix cohorts. Varus killed himfelf, Volumnius his Lieutenant most base- Florus 1.46. mlf. ly leaving the foot, ran away with the horse; yet he overlived not those whom he had forsaken, but died a betrayer of his Country. Lucus Asprenas A. D. 9. who commanded two Legions under his uncle Varus preserved his party in so great a calamity, and by coming down in a feafonable time to the lower Wintering quarters, fetled the wavering minds of fuchiPeople as inhabited on this. fide the Rhine. L. Sedijius the Camp-Mafter, and others with him , being thut up in Alifone, and belieged by innumerable forces, when they wanted > nus being Confuls. 53. Augustus was out of all measure troubled at so dishonourable a losse, suctonius in fo that counting it as full of danger as difgrace, he appointed watches about Offavioc, 23. in the City, prorogued the commands of Presidents over the Provinces, that by them who were experienced and well known to the people, they might the necessaries, brake through and came to their own party. This disafter fell out in the 762 year of the City, Q. Sulpicius Camerinas and C. Poppaus Sabi-Tiberius fet-

leth that Country.

better be kept in order, and he vowed to celebrate Games in honour of Jupiter, if the Commonwealth should recover it's former and better condition. Nayhe was fruck with fuch conflernation, that for several moneths he never cut the hair of his head or beard, and sometimes would he knock his head against che dores, crying out in a kind of distraction * Quimilius Varus restore * Redde Ligithe Legions: he also observed the day of the defeat, as unluckie and dismal ones Quintils every year. He sent 7 iberius into Germany, who setling the affaires of Gall, Van. passed over the Rhone, and wasting the Country defeated all he met. Per- Paterni, 1 2, 1 ceiving the former miscariages to have happened through the negligence and 1221, temerity of the General, he took good advice, though at other times wont to Suction in act things on his own head, and exacted Military discipline according to the Tiberio e. 18, most antient strictnesse thereof. For two years he managed this War, being 19, 0%. once in danger of his life, and then returning to Rome, triumphed three times, whereas if we believe Velleius, who served under him, he deserved feven. The year following Germanicus Cafar, after the end of his Confulfhip, was sent into Germany. Tiberins was well rewarded. For Auguflus procured him equal power with himself over Provinces and Armies, which he held for two years, and then arrived at the Monarchy of the Ro-

54. Angustus in the year preceding his death, when his sourth ten years Government was now expiring, unwillingly, as he ever pretended, accepted of the fifth, and prorogued to Tiberius the Tribuneship for other five years. Dio 1.56. The year wherein he died he made his third Cenfus with Tiberius his Col- Inferior. Gruten legue, and in this Luftrum were found 4137000 polls of Roman Citizens. p. 230. Celebrating the Lustrum in the Campus Marsins, and with great concourse of People, an Eagle flew about him feveral times, and directing her flight to a Chapel near adjoyning, fare down over the name of Agrippa, at the first letter. Which confidering, he commanded Tiberins his Collegue to make Sueton in Office those vows, which it was the custom to make for the following Lustrum. vio c. 99, 100 For though the tables were written and ready, yet he refuled to undertake that which he should not perform. About the same time, the first letter of his name on his statue in the Capitol was stricken out by a Thunderbolt. The Fortune-tellers answered, that he should onely live 100 dayes longer, which Patereul, I, 2. was fignified by the letter C: and must be reckoned amongst the gods; for 6, 123, AESAR the rest of the name in the Herruscan language signified a God. In the mean time he wrote a breviary of his actions, which he commanded to be cut in braffe, and fer before his Manfolenin. Then fending Tiberius into Illyricum to settlemetters there, he followed him as far as Beneventum; but returning back indisposed by a Dirrhea, he came to Nola, whither he also recalled Tiberius, and had long discourse with him in private. His last day being come, he called for a looking-glasse, caused his hair to be combed, and his wrinckled cheeks smoothed up. Then asking his friends if he had not acted his part well, upon their answer yea, he said Plaudite, and so died in the imbraces of his beloved wife Livia, bidding her remember their Mariage A.D. 15. and Farenel. He died in the same rome as Ottavins his Father had done, V. c. 767. and on the same day (August 19) on which he entred his fift Consulship, Augistus dihaving lived 76 years all but 35 dayes, in the 767 year of the City, the fecond of the 198 Olympiad, the 57 after the death of Julius Cafar , and the fifreenth afret the death of Chrift. Sextus Pompeius and Sextus Apuleius being Confuls. He was the founder of the Roman Monarchy, his Uncle having been rather the chalker of it out. Having obtained it with the destruction of many, he managed it with great prudence and moderation. His publick demeanour was with modefly, and his private with temperance, altogether void of luxury; for though his fortune was high, his fare was but mean, and his apparel fuitable, being made of cloath wrought in his own house by his wife, fifter, and durchter. He was most unfortunate in his first mariage, through the incredible wantonnesse of his daughter Julia, which died at Rhegium in confinement not long after him. And he was not much happier in his second mariage, except his dearly beloved Livia was much wronged.

For 'tis reported that the (fearing Agrippa Posthumus might be received into favour again, whom Angustus had lately visited) fet him foreward to his long home, by poyloning some Figs as they hung on a Tree, from which she knew he was wont to gather that kind of fruit.

55. Tacitus maketh it a doubt whether Tiberius found him alive or dead. Sucton in Tibefor Livis kept all things close, gave our words fometimes as if he recovered, in Capp. 22, & fecured the High-wayes, denied all accesse to the house, and fent for her son 24.

ceedeth him.

(her felf) when he had scarcely entred surricum; so that by their practices Agrippa Posthumus was first taken out of the way, and all things ne- Tacitus Annal. ceffary being provided, the very fame report gave information that Angustus lib.s. was dead, and Tiberius possessed of the Soverainty. For he had secured it to himself by frength, though he played the diffembler most egregiously, refuling the Government to long as till the Senators fell down at his feet. and befought him to accept of it, whom he answered with ambiguous words, and at length complaining that a miserable and intollerable servitude was imposed on him, received it as by constraint, and yet so as he feemed to fignifie that he would again relinquish it. Indeed there was cause for him to say, as he did, that he took a Wolf by the ears. For Clemens the flave of Agrippa had got a confiderable party together under pretence of revenging his Lord's death: Scribonius Libo fecretly plotted his own advancement, and the Legions both in Germany and Illyricum murined, the former chusing Germanicus for their Prince, who earnestly refused to accept of their offer, and at length quieted them with much ado, as Drusus did the other in Pannonia, they being frighted into obedience by a total Eclypse of the Moon, which fell out on the 27th of September, five hours after midnight. Clemens was apprehended, and Libo not effecting any thing was in the second year accused to the Senate. Tiberius in the mean while looking carefully to himself, notwithstanding these motions obtained the Supream power, betwixt which and his rule with Angustus for two years there was this difference; that his former command extended onely to the Armies and Provinces Subject to Augustus; but this to the Citie it self Mistresse of all. Formerly he had Tribunitial and Censorian power : but now he became Monarch, and was loofe or exempt from all power of Laws, as Augustus before him. For he had not together with him when living so equal authority as afterwards L. Verus had with M. Antoninus the Philosopher, which two first governed the Commonwealth upon equal terms: but such like as Amoninus Pius had with Adrian, who also adopted him. and made him his Collegue in the Proconfular power as to Provinces, and in the Tribunitial power at home. And therefore Succonius tellerh us, In Tiberia that Tiberius first assembled the Senate by virtue of his Tribunitial Office cap, 23. onely. 56. Tiberius at first carried himself (as ever in some cases) very cunning- Suction in Ti-

his vices.

ly cloaking with marvelous diffimulation those enormities which afterwards berio Capp. 26. Tiberius at first appeared. For some time he counterfeited incredible patience, stooped too 27,28, &c. low in his complementing of Senators and Magistrates, rejected all high Tacitus ut futitles and honours (not enduring the name of Dominus or Lord) and con-prafulred the Senate continually, not doing little or much without its confents: nay, fuffering somethings therein to be carried against his mind; he was alfo at first very temperate in his diet, and exact in reforming manners, by degrees falling into his natural humour. From the beginning he was much afflicted with the fame of Germanicus, his brother Drusus his son by nature (begotten of Antonia the younger, daughter of Antony the Triumvir, by Offaviathe lifter of Augustus, concerning which Antonia, Pliny reporteth that the never space) and his own by adoption, who now prosperously carried on the War in Germany. Within two or three years a very plaulible occasion presented it self for the calling of him back from those Legions which were fo much at his devotion. For it hapned then that the Parthians were in great commotions about their Kings. Phraates had 27 years before for Envieth Germanicus.

> his own security sent four of his sons as Hostages to Reme, through the procurement

curement of his wife I hermusa an Italian woman, which having been for- fosephus Anmerly his Concubine had then a fon by him, and that this her fon might ob- tiquit, lib, 18. tain the Crown, got the rest to be sent out of the way, and then they two cap,3. murdered the King. This Baftard called Phrantaces reigned; but being hated by the people for his paricide, was not long after flain, and then was fet up one Orodes of the family of the Arlacide, who being also hated for his cruelty came to the fame end. Then fent the Parihians for one of the Ho- Tacitus Annal, stages, and Vonones the eldest was dismissed by Tiberius. But they counting 1, 2. it a disgrace for any to reign over them, who (as they termed it) had been a flave to Cafar, rebelliously cast him off, and called in Artabanus, who then reigned in Media, and was also one of the Arfacida or the blood royal of Parthis. He at his first entrance was repulsed by Vonones; but the second time overthrew him, and got possession of the Kingdom. Vonones retiring into Armenia fent to Tiberius for aid, who, for that Artabanus threatned hard, and the principal of the Armenians were of his faction, did not think fit to make War upon him: therefore Fonones yielded himself to Creticus Silanus, who governed Syria, and Ariabanus fet Orodes one of his own fons over Armenia. At the fame time Antiochus King of Commagena dying, a Sueton in Ticontention arose betwire the Nobility and Commons; the former would berio cap.49. have the Countrey reduced into the form of a Roman Province, but the people were for a King. Now also Philopator King of Cilicia being dead, his subjects were divided upon the very same grounds. Syria also, and Judan being weary of their burthens, defired a diminution of their Tributes.

57. Tiberius now perswaded the Senate that the abilities of Germanicus Idem cap A2. were requifit for quieting the East, whereupon the Provinces beyond the Seas were decreed to him, with larger power than had been granted to any that governed them, either by lot or the gift of the Prince. Germanicus was often importuned by Tiberius upon this ground to return, yet intent upon his bufinesse he first subdued several Nations in Germany, and by the overthrow of Arminius obtained great glory, which was fomething obscured at last by a shipwrack. It was the design of Tiberius to expose him unto danger and treachery; therefore he removed Silanus his friend, and put Cn. Pijo a fro-

ward man into his room, to whom he gave in charge some secret thing, as many believed. Germanicus, being thus expelled to compose the affairs of tence of quie- the East, as * one truely termeth it, placed Zeno the fon of Polemo King of * Sueton in Ca-Pontus over Armenia. Q. Veranius a Knight had the overfight of Cap- ligula capa. ring the East exposeth him to danger and padocia, which was made a Province; for Archelaus the King thereof courted to danger and padocia, which was made a Province; for Archelaus the King thereof courted cap, 16. ted not Tiberius enough when he was at Rhodes, and therefore was called to Rome, and there kept till his death. Q. Servans also was fet over Comtreachery. magena. Artabanus sent to Germanicus about renewing the league, and good correspondence, desiring that Vonones might not be kept in Syria, nor fuffered by his Messengers to sow discord amongst the people, offering him also leave to come to the bank of Euphrates; to which he answered, as became the State and himself. This year died Livy the Historian, who was Eufsh in Chreborn at Padua; and also Ovid the Poet, having remained a banished man in mico. Tontus several years, whither the displeasure of Angustus confined him, ei-. ther, for that he had feen him do some unseemly thing which he would not A, D, io. have known, or for publishing his wanton books concerning Love, as he hints V. C. 771. himself. This was the 771 year of the Citie, the 19th after the birth of Christ, Lib. a. Tiberius Augustus the third, and Germanicus Cafar the second time being De Tristibus.

58. Germanicus the year following made a voyage into Egypt, to view it Tacitus lib. 2. Confuls. 58. Germanicus the year following made a voyage into Egypt, to view it Capp. 99.66, for the rarity of its Antiquities, for which he was chidden by Tiberius, as &c. going without his leave. Thence returning into Syria, he was most shame- A. D. 20. fully, and without any measure affronted by Pifo, and at length died of a V.C. 772. Who dieth of lingring difease at Anioch, being thought to miscarry by the fraud of Tiberint, Suttonin Cali-Who dieth of lingring disease at Antioch, being thought to miscarry by the trade of siering, gula cap. 1,2,3, a lingring disease in the Ministry of Pise, who plainly faid, that he must either displease Fa- 4,6.6.

case at Antioch, ther or Son. But the fruit he reaped in pleasing thus the Father was but un- Josephus Antipleafing; for returning to Rome the year following, he escaped narrowly quie, 1,18 6.8, rearing tearing in pieces by the people, and being condemned by the Senate killed himself. For Ge manicus there was an universal mourning, not onely in Rome and the Provinces, but also amongst Barbarians and Enemies themfelves. He was a person excellently accomplished, and of a most sweet disposition, whereby he became the love and delight of the people, and Angustus long debating with himself whether he should not leave him his Succeffor, at length caused Tiberius to adopt him, who, 'tis thought, being restrained by fear, and reverence of him, after his death broke our into such courses as made the other more missed and glorious. By his wife Agrippina (the daughter of Agrippa and Julia) he died father of three fons, viz. Nero. Drusus, and Cains; and of as many daughters. He died in the 34th year of his age, and that which followed his fecond Confulship, M. Tunius Solanus, and C. Norbanus Flaccus being Confuls. 59. Three or four years after was Tiberius punished in his own kind by the povioning of his own fon Drufus, and that by his greatest favourite . Alins Scianus. This man being the fon of Seins Strabo a Roman Knight, when Tacitus Annal. very young followed Cains the Nephew of Augustus, and afterwards by di- lib, 4. vers Arts wound himself into the affections of Tibersus, who used him as his most inward Counsellour, or Minister of State, and erested to his honour his statue of brasse in the Theatre. Now he thought of no lesse than the Em-

Tiberius pu-Seianus, who poyloneth his

His isfue.

nished by the pire it felf, as a step to which, he poyloned Drasas the son of Tiberius, harreachery of ving brought Livia the young man's wife to a compliance with him by his filthy dalliance, and corrupted Lygdus the Eunuch to betray his truft. Drufus had the year before the Tribunitial power conferred on him; but for that he was none of the most towardly was little regarded by his father, who as foon as his Funeral was over, returned to his wonted employments, forbidding any longer vacation upon his account. The Inhabitants of Ilium fending their Ambassadors something too late to condole his death, he answered, beito cap, 52. that he also was forry for the death of Hettor their excellent Countrey-man Tiberius after this commended the two fons of Germanicus, Nero and Drufus, to the Senate, which done, Scianus began to strike at them, though at first through the sides of their mother, labouring to bring them all into suspition and hatred. This first advantage he rook was from the prayers of the Priests, who made vows for their health, as for that of Tiberius; for he took Tacitus ut suit hainously that they herein should be made equal to him. Then did he pro- pravoke them, and never ceased till he caused them to be declared Enemies by the Senate, after which he starved them to death, using also their mother most iniuriously, for that the was not sparing of her tongue in reprehending and upbraiding him. Now was Tacfarinas, who had maintained a redious war in Africk, flain by Dolabella. As for Tiberius by the perswasion of Seianus he withdrew into the Isle Caprea, and thence forward minding nothing gave up Suction in Tib, himself and Island and Caprea, and thence forward minding nothing gave up Suction in Tib, himself to all forts of enormities. 60. For, casting off all care of the state, being out of fight, he returned to Idemibid.

his natural disposition, not looking to the supply, either of Army or Provinces; Capp. 41,44. suffering Armeniato be seized on by the Parthians, Masia by the Dacians &c. and Sarmatians, and Gall to be wasted by the Germans, He instituted a

His Charge Acr given

him by his

School-ma-

Tiberius re-

linesse as is incredible, and not to be mentioned. He was excessively covetous, both as to getting, and keeping what was unjust. He was so unducifull to his mother, as he refused to come at her, when living, and when dead, he neglected to bury her; neither would be perform her will, but perfecuted her friends; but the was justly rewarded (though as to him unjustly) having over and above other wicked practices been suspected to have had an handin the death of Germanicus. So cruel, and filthy he became, that he verified the Character given him when but young, by Theodorus Gadarens his Schoolmaster, that he was σηλον αγματι σεφυραμένου, or Dirt mingled with blood. Having chosen twenty of the principal men of the Citie to be his Counfel-

Knight, T. Casonius Proseus: he held such in greatest esteem, & bestowed Offices on men that were most for his turn that way, being given up to such beastturneth to his new Office for the management of pleasures, unto which he preferred a

Ggggg

CHAP. IX.

lors, he scarcely left two or three of them alive, Stianus being found out, and punished justly for his wickednesse, amongst others that were innocent. He fpared not the familiar friends of his mother, nephews, Agrippina or Scianus. No day either holy or prophane was free from flaughters. Every offence little or great was Capital. Many were codemned with their wives and children. Rewards were proposed to informers, and all testimonies taken for true. Simple death he accounted nothing, and therefore invented painful waies : especially after he knew how his fon Drusas died , he neither foared any person nor fort of torments. Cam the son of Germanicas he cared not for, as suspecting him, and Tiberius his grandson by Drusus he despifed, as conceived in adultery.

61. In the twelfth year of Tiberins was Poncius Pilate sent into Judea to 61. In the twelfth year of Tiberius was Pontius Pilate fent into Judea to Joseph, Aniq, succeed Valerius Gratie, the fourth Governour after the banishment of Ar- 1, 18. c. 3. 6 dea.

Fohn Bantift

beginneth to preach and baptize.

Ponius Pilate abelans the fon of Hered to Vienny. Coponius was the first, M. Ambivius Euseb, Ecclef. the second, Annins Rufus the third, and Grains the fourth. Pilate at his Hift. 1.c.9. Gratus in Ju- first entrance fer up the Images of Cafar at Jerusalem, which moved the Luc, 3. Tems to sedition : but overcome by their intreaties, he removed them to Cafarea. He being now Governour of Indea, Hered Amipas Tetrarch of Galile. his brother Philip Tetrarch of Isuran and Trachonitis, and Lylanian of Abilene; Annas (who, formerly having had the Office, though displaced by Gratus, yet for his authority still caried the name) and Carphas (otherwise called Joseph, whom lately Grains had placed in the room of Simon, by him devoted alio) being High-Priefts, in the fifteenth year of Tiberius entering, John Baptist began to preach and baptize in the refemblance and spirit of Elias. Amongst others he baptized Christ himself, of whom he was the forerunner. His ministry is thought to have commenced on the tenth day of the feventh moneth, which was Penitential, and so great a Fast, that the foul which did A. D. 29. not afflict it felf, was to be cut off from amongst it's People; and was also 01, 201, 47.4.

Explainte, wherein the High-Priest (the Type of him before whose face V. C. 781. Tobn was fent) entred into the Holy of Holies alone, with blood expiating the fins of the People, this being also the same day wherein by trumper the Fubile was proclaimed. 62. Tofus now about thirty years of age, being baptized of Tohn in Fordan (and owned for the Miffish and fon of God, by the descending of the Holy Ghost in the form of a dove, and resting upon him, as also by a voice from Heiven) was led of the Spirit into the Wildernesse to be rempted of the Devil. After his temptation he returned in the power of the Spirit into A. D. 30. Galile. Going into Galile he received Andrew and Simon his brother, the Ol. 202.005. day following called Phlip of Bethfaida the City of Andrew, and Simon little named Cephas or Peter by the Lord. On the third day being invited to a mariage in Cana of Galile, he turned water into wine, this being his first miracle, and by it his glory was manifested, and his Disciples believed in him. Afterward he went down to Capernaum with his mother, his brethten, (or The Lord Je-kinimen) and disciples, where they abode not many dayes. Then came he to his Ministry. the exercise of his Ministry, the acts whereof are distinguished by four Passeovers. Amongst the four Evangelists which describe them, Matthew alone shereof.

The first

Paffcover

except in the History of John's casting into prison, as Luke hath recorded it. 63. Jefus having ascended to Jerusalam at the time of the fi st Passeover, cast buyers and sellers out of the Temple, wrought miracles, and instructed cast buyers and sellers out of the semple, wrought miracles, and introduce Exussion ArNicodemus in the mystery of Regeneration, and Faith in himself. Leaving machanoutisilthen Jerusalem he went into Judaa with his Disciples, where abiding, he le ex Richardbaptized by the ministry of them ; John then baptizing in Enon ; for he sono spissopo was not yet cast in prison. A certain question arose about purifying betwixe Ardachadess some of John's Disciples and the Jews. John instructed now his Disciples in provincia concerning Christ the last time, as they told him of his acts with fome emulation, and not long after he was call into prison, for reprehending Herod the Tetrarch his incest with his brother Philip's wife. Jefus hearing of his captivity, and that the Pharifees took notice that he baptized more by the hands hath neglected the order of time, which is constantly observed by the rest; of his Disciples, departed out of Judan (wherehe had remained some eight moneths) and came into Galile. In his passage through Samaria he discourfed with a woman at a Well near unto the City Sychar, the Inhabitants of which by her means he brought to the acknowledgement of himfelf, four moneths before harvest, or the Passeover, about the middle of the ninth moneth called Ab. Having stayed two dayes at Sychar, he proceeded, and returned the second time into Galile out of Judea after his baptism, being received with great respect by the Galileans, who had seen what he did at Ternsalem. Preaching in their Synagogues here, he also healed at Cana, the son of the Noble-man that was fick at Capernaum, which was his fecond miracle in Galile, Having wrought miracles at Capernaum, he went to Nazareth, where he had been brought up, and expounding the Prophet Efar concerning himfelf, they first admired, and then cast him out, and would have thrown him down headlong, but he passed away through the midst of them.

64. Leaving then Nazareth, he taught at Capernaum, where they were aftonished at his doctrine, and cast out an unclean spirit that was first commanded filence. Departing out of the Synagogue into the house of Simon and Andrew, he cured of a Feaver Simons wive's mother. At Sun-ser he healed fick folkes brought to him, and cast out Divels, first put to silence. In the morning he went out into a desert place to pray, and the multitudes endeavouring to detain him, he answered, he must also preach in other places: and coasting through Galile, he preached in their Synagogues, and cast out Devils. Then taught he the People out of Simon's ship on the Lake of Genefareth, and helped them to a miraculous draught of fifthes, whereupon Simon Peter, Andrew, James, and John, being commanded to follow him. he maketh fishers of men. Then going through all Galile healing and teaching, his fame spred through Syria, and multitudes flocked to him. In a certain City he healed a Leper, which though forbidden, yet noised his fame. and such companies now followed him that he could not enter the City, but taught without in defert places, and prayed. After a few dayes he returned to Capernaum, and teaching in his own house he healed the Paralitick, who was let down in a bed, and forgave him his fins before the Pharifees. Thence going towards the Sea he taught, and passing by called Levi or Matthew, then fitting at the receit of custom, by whom being feasted, he defended his disciples against the Pharisees, for eating with Publicans and sinners, and for not fasting. And it came to passe, that on the second Sabbath after the first (that is, on the second Sabbath of the new year, instituted after their return out of Agypt, and beginning with the moneth Nisan or Abib) Tesus pasfing through the Corn-fields, defended his Disciples, who plucked and are ears of Corn, against the Pharifees, and explained the Doctrine of the observation of the Sabbath.

The fecond Paffcover.

65. After these things there was a Feast of the Jews (that is, the fecond Job. 5. Paffeover of his Ministry) and Fesus went up to Ferusalem, where on the Sabbath-day he healed one who had layn 38 years diseased at the Pool of Bethefda, for which thing, and because he had called God his Father, the Tems went about to kill him, and he opposed against them his most divine apology. Departing thence, in the Synagogue, on another Sabbath, he healed a man that had a withered hand, for which the Pharifees and Herodians presently fought to kill him. Jefus knowing this, departed to the Sea, where teaching the People, he commanded a little Vessel to wait on him, because the multitude crouded him. In these dayes he spent a whole night in prayer upon a mountain, and when it was day, made choice of twelve, whom he called Apostles. Going down into the plain he healed the fick, and coming home, fuch was the prefie, that they could not eat, whereupon his friends came to take him, supposing he had been besides himself. When he had seen the multitude he ascended into the mountain, and his Disciples coming to him, there he preached his long Sermon, first speaking to the Apostles, and then to the multitude. Having ended all his words in the audience of the People, he entred into Capernaum, and healed the Centurions servant ready to die. The Ggggg 2 dav day following he raifed from the dead the widdow's fon in the City Naim. whence his fame was spread abroad. Then sent John his Disciples from prifon to him, to ask whether he was the man, or they must look for another. who being departed with an answer, Christ took occasion to speak of Tohn, and upbraided the Cities, aquiescing in the Will of his Father as to the reyealing or hiding the things of falvation. Then Simon the Pharifes inviting him to dinner, a woman that was a finner washed his feet with her tears, which defending against Simon, he forgave her her fins. And it came to passe afterward, that he preached through every City and Village, his Diciples being with him, and certain women ministring to him, among t which was 30anna the wife of Chufa, Herod's Sreward. Then healed he a man poffeffed with a dumb and deaf Divel, and defended himself against the Pharifeet, who faid, that he cast out Divels by Beelzebub Prince of Divels. To the Scribes and Pharifees demanding a fign, he onely giveth that of Jonas, and his mother and brethren asking to speak with him, he declareth who are his nearest relations. On that day going to the Sea, he taught the People from the ship in the Parable of the Sower and others. On this same day when it was evening, he would they should passe to the further side, and having dismissed the multitude, when in their passage a great Tempest arose, he chiding the winds filled the Sea, and faved his Disciples then in danger. Coming unto the further fide into the Country of the Gaderous, or Gergasens, which lyeth over against Galile, two Damoniacks met him, exceeding fierce (whereof Mark and Luke mention but one) out of which he casting the Divels, permitred them to enter into the Swine. The Gaderens hereupon defiring him to depart out of their Coasts, he (having dismissed the man who desired to be withhim, and upon refusal, preached throughout Decapolis what things Jefushad done for him) returned by ship unto the further side and so to Capernaum his own City.

66. And it came to passe, that when Jefin was returned, the People gladly received him; for they were all waiting for him. And being by the Seafide, he answered the Disciples of John, inquiring why his Disciples fasted nor, feeing they, and the Disciples of the Pharifees fasted often. Whilst he spake, he was befought to heal the onely daughter of Fairus; and as he was going down, a woman that had had an iffue of blood twelve years, was by touching the hem of his garment made whole. Passing thence, he cured two blind men, whom he charged with threatning to fay nothing of him; but in vain. As they passed away, a man possessed with a dumb Divel was prefented unto him, whom he healed, the company admiring, and the Pharifees blaspheming. Then going about to all the Towns, he taught and healed, and coming into his own Country was contemned again by his Country-men, as he taught in the Synagogue on the Sabbath-day, they calling him Carpener, though they admired him. Going about the Villages he taught, and pitying the multitude because the Harvest was great and the labourers few, he bade his Disciples prayfor labourers into the Harvest. Then sent he out his twelve Disciples two and two, commissionated with power to preach and heal. Having made an end of commanding them, he went and preached in their Cities: and the twelve went about the Villages, teaching and healing every where. Now about this time was Fohn Baptist beheaded, through the procurement of Herodian, which being told unto Jesus by his Disciples, who buried him, after the return of his own, he went with them by ship into a defert place called Bethfaida. The multitude hearing of it, got thither before him, where he taught and healed them. And Jefus went up into a mountain, and there fate with his Disciples, and the Passeover was nigh. It being late, he having compassion on the multitude, fed the number of 5000 men (besides women and children) with five barly loaves, and two small fishes, whereof twelve baskets full of fragments were taken up. When they would come and take him by force to make him a King, he caused his Disciples to passe over to the other side opposite to Bethfaida, and towards Capermanm. Having prayed in a mountain apart, he came towards his Disciples, and walking upon the Sea, when they had now rowed 25. or 30 furlongs, and were croubled with a contrary wind. They being affrighted at him, he made known himfelf, and fiving Peter (who had defired he would bid him come to him on the water) when he was finking, he passed over with them. Coming into the Land of Genefaces, they brought all forts of diseased persons to him, desiring they might touch but the hem of his Garment, which as many as touched were made whole. The day after his passage came the people which he had lest on the further side to Capernaum to seek him, where in the Synagogue he preached concerning the bread of life, asserting himself to be it against the murmuring of the Jens. Many now of his Disciples departed from, and walked no more with him. And though the 12 resused to depart, yethe declared that one of them was a Devil, meaning Judas Iscariot, who should betray him, being one of the tweetwe.

The third

67. After the third Paffeover of his Ministery, the Scribes and Pharifees that were come from Jerusalem came to him, and complained that his Disciples are with unwashed hands, to whom he answered concerning their abolifting God's commands by their Traditions, and taught the multitude what he declared to his Disciples, that not what entreth in, but what cometh out defileth a man. Departing into the Coasts of Tyre and Siden, he cast the Devil out of the daughter of the Syrophanician woman, because of the grearnesse of her faith. Passing thence to the Sea of Galile through the midst of Decapolis, he healed a deaf man, who had an impediment in his speech, and ascending into a Mountain healed many. In those dayes a great multitude having flived with him three dayes, he fed them to the number of 4000 men, besides Women and Children, with seven Loaves, and a few little sishes. and feven baskets full of fragments were taken up. Taking ship presently he came into the parts of Dalmanutha, or the Coasts of Magdala. The Pharifees aking a fign, he fighed deeply in his spirit for that these Hypocrites could discern the face of the sky, and not the figns of the times; and refusing to give them any other fign than that of Jonas, he left them, and returned by Thip to the further fide. His Disciples having forgot to take bread, and brought but one loaf with them, he bids them beware of the Leaven of the Pharifees and of Herod; and expoundeth his meaning to be of the Leaven of Doctrine. Coming then to Beth [aida, he cureth a blind man by degrees without the Town. Passing thence into the Towns of Casarea-Philippi, he asked his Disciples concerning the opinion which men had of him, and then what they themselves thought, to which for themselves Peter answered, that he was the Christ, which thing he forbade them to declare, foretold his death and refurrection, called Peter Satan for checking him about his fufferings, and foretold his transfiguration, which after some fix dayes was fulfilled. The day following coming down, he cast out a Devil out of the Lunarick, which his Disciples could not eject. Passing thence, they journeyed through Galile, which he would not have known, and taught his Disciples that he must die, and rise again, which they understanding not were troubled. and afraid to ask him. Being arrived at Capernaum, the Lord paid Tributemoney, and taught his Disciples humility by the example of a little Childspeaking also against offending one's weak brother, and forgiving one another seventy seven times by the Parable of the Kings two debtors. 70hn telling him that they had feen one casting out Devils in his name, he said he was not to be forbidden, and again spake against offending weak ones, and bade them beware that no Member offended them. After these things Telus walked in Galile, for he would not walk in Tury, because the Tens sought to kill him. Now the Jems feast of Tabernacles (the Scenopagia) was at hand. His brethren, or Kinf-men willed him to go up that his Difciples might believe in him; but he refused to comply with them therein who themselves believed not, and went up after them, not openly, but as it were in fecret.

68. When the time was come that he should be received up, he stedsastly set his face to go to Jerusalem. The Samaritans not receiving him he checked.

782

Book IV.

CHAP. I.

his Disciples, who would have had fire called down from Heaven upon them. Several in his passage desiring to follow him, he gave answer to them all. After these things he sent out 70 Disciples before his face, two into every Citie and place where he would come. And in the midft of the feaft when the multitude was buffe in inquiring about him, he came, and taught in the Temple. Some were fent to lay hold of him. On the last, and great day of the Feast, when he spake of faith in himself, a great difference arose, and the Messengers that were sent to apprehend him, with Nicodemus, defended him against the Pharifees. Departing into the Mount of Olives, he returned early in the morning, and refused as a Judge to condemn the vvoman taken in Adultery. In the Treasury he spake much concerning many truths, concluding with before Abraham was I am 5 whereupon the Fews took up stones to cast at him; but he hid himself, and passed away through the midst of them. Paffing by, he faw, and cured a man that was born blind, who for vindicating him was call out of the Synagogue. He then preached concerning the true sheepherd, Sheep, and Door, as also of Thieves and Mercenaries, which caused a diffention amongs his hearers. The 70 then return with joy, and a certain Lawyer asking him what he should do to inherit eternal life, he sendeth him to the Law, and to declare who is our neighbour, speaketh the Parable of the man that fell amongst Thieves. After this he was entertained in the house of Martha, which ministred to him, while her fister Mary hearing his word was preferred before her. And it came to passe that after he had done praying in a certain place, one of his Disciples desired him to teach them to pray, as John also raught his Disciples, therfore he prescribed the second time the same Lords prayer, adding arguments for constancy and firmnesse of faith. He cast out a Devil which was dumb, & proved against the blashhemers that he did it not by Beelzebub. While he faid these things a certain woman said, Bleffed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps that gave thee fuck, to which he answered. The multitude gathering about him, he said, that Generation sought for a fign, but no fign, but that of Jones the Prophet should be given it, faying, that the Queen of the South, and the Ninevites should condemn it in judgement. Dining with a Pharifee who had invited him, and wondred that he washed not, he spoke against their Hypocrisie, and denounced also woes against the Expositors of the Law. He bade his Disciples beware of the Leaven of the Pharifees (Hypocrifie) and not fear those that could kill the body. He refused to be a Judge betwixt a man and his brother about the inheritance, and thence took occasion to speak against anxious cares of the World, bidding them be ready against the uncertain time of their Lords coming.

69. There being some that rold Jesus of the Galileans, the bloud of whom Pilate mingled with their facrifice, he took thence occasion to presse repentance, and spake the Parable of the barren Fig-tree. On a certain Sabbath healed a woman that had a spirit of infirmity 18 years, which act he defended against the ruler of the Synagogue, and compared the Kingdom of God to a Grane of Mustard seed, and to Leaven. Journeying towards Jerufalem to the Feast of the Dedication he taught through the Cities and Villages, and answered that question whether few shall be saved? To certain Pharifees, who bade him be gone for fear of Herod, he gave a couragious answer. Being invited to eat in the house of one of the chiefest Pharifees, he healed one of the Dropfie, defended it, and spake the Parable of those that were invited to the feast, instructing the Pharifee who had invited him. One of the Guests, saying, that Bleffed is he that shall eat bread in the Kingdom of God, he took occasion to speak the Parable of the great Supper, and the excufes of such as were invited. To the multitude following him he preached concerning the denial of life it self for his sake, propounding the Parable of one who was to build a Towr, and the King going to bastel. Upon the Publicans and sinners their coming to hear him, the Pharifees murmured, and he spake to them the Parables of the lost sheep, the groat, and the Prodigal Son. To his Disciples he also spake that off the unjust Stumard, which applying, the Pharifees who were covetous derided him, whereupon preaching against them, amongst other things he spake the Parable of the Rich-man and Lanarus. Speaking to his Disciples against offences, he also reachest that we must forgive our offending brother. The Apostles defiring him to increase their faith, he speaketh of the power of that Grace, and by the Parable of the fervant theweth, that when we have done all we can we are unprofitable fervants, having done but what we ought. Paffing through Samaria and Gait'e, towards Ferusalem, he healed the ten Lepers, whereof one onely returned and praised God. To the Pharifees asking him when the Kingdom of God should come, he answereth, and declareth to his Disciples, that the day of the fon of man should be like to those of Noah and Lot, but he must first suffer many things. To incourage his Disciples to pray, he spake the Parable of the unjust Judge, and to some that thought themselves righteous and despised others, that of the Pharifee and the Publican, 70. At the Feast of Dedication, when it was Winter, Jesus walking in Salomons Porch, to the Tems, who hade him tell them plainly whether he was Christ or not, he answered, that He and his father are one, whereupon they taking up stones to throw at him, he defended his Divinity by his works, and the Scriptures, and escaped when they sought to take him. Passing beyond Fordan into that place where John baptized, he taught and healed, many believing on him, and answered the Pharifees, tempting him, that it is unlawfull for a man to put away his wife, except for Adultery. Now admitted he Infants, though his Disciples rebuked such as brought them, and as he was passing thence to come into the way, he answered the young Rich man that asked him what he should do to inherit eternal life; and bade him fell all he had, and give it to the poor, then to follow him. Hearing that Lazarus was fick, he abode in the place where he was two dayes, and then coming to Beshany, after he had been dead four dayes raifed him from the dead. Hereupon Caiphas Prophecying that he was to die for the people, they resolved to put him to death, which he understanding, went into the Citie Ephraim, and there taught. Afcending towards Jernsalem, he went before his Disciples, who were amazed and afraid. He now told them of his sufferings, which they did not at all understand; and the sons of Zebede asking to fir on his right, and left hand in his Kingdom, he give them a repulse, and improved it to the teaching of them all humility. Coming near to Tericho he healed a blind man. In Jericho he called, and was entertained by Zachaus, and passing thence restored fight to two blind men, whereof one was Bartimaus; when they drew near to Jerusalem, they thinking that the Kingdom of God was near, he spake the Parable of the King, who going a journey committed ten Talents to his fervants to be improved till his return, The Passeover being now at hand, many went up to Jerusalem to purific themselves, and Fesus six dayes before it came to Bethany, where they made him a Supper. Lazarus fate at Table with him, but Mary anointed his feet, and wiped them with her hair. Many of the Jews came not onely to fee him, but Lazarus also, upon whose account, for that many believed on him, the Chief Priests confulted also to kill Lazarus. Going towards Terusalem, when he was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the Mount of Olives (on the 29th of March) he fent his Disciples for the Asse's Cost whereon he rode to Terufalem. When he came near the Citie he wept over it, foretelling its final destruction. Out of the Temple he cast buyers and fellers, where the Children cried Hofanna, and many believed on him, the great ones Rudying how to kill him. Certain Greeks who were come to the Peaft desiring to see him, he preached concerning his passion, and had a voice from Heaven answering his prayer, which some thought to be of an Angel, and others of Thunder. It being late, he went to Bethany with the 12. Notwithstanding, the multitude had seen so many works, yet they believed nor, that the faying of Efaias might be fulfilled. Yet many of the Chief Priests believed on him, but durft not confesse him for the Pharifees. Telus cried, and fpake concerning faith in himfelf. 71. The next morning as he returned he hungred, andcurfed the barren

CHAP. I.

Fig-tree. He cast buyers and sellers again out of the Temple, and suffered nothing to be caried through it. Whilft he taught concerning Faith in himfelf, the Chief-Priests consulted how to kill him, fearing the People. At evening he went out of the City, and returning in the morning, they found the Fig-tree withered; whereupon he took occasion to preach concerning the power of Faith. As he taught in the Temple, the Chief-Priests, and Pharifees, and Elders, asked him by what authority he did thefe things? to whom he answered, with another question concerning John's authority, spake the Parable of the two fons, asking them, whether did the will of his father? and that of the husbandmen, who killed the beir of the vinyard, applying them to these men, who now studied how to apprehend him, but feared the People. Again, he spake to them the Parable of the mariage of the King's fon, and the excuses of the invited, with the want of the wedding garment. Then the Pharifees fent some to intrap him in his talk, who asking him whether it was lawful to give tribute to Cafar? admired his answer, and left him. On that day the Saduces asked him concerning the woman maried to feven husbands, whose she should be at the resurrection? to which having answered, and afferted the refurrection, a Lawyer tempted him, asking him which is the greatest Commandement? Having answered him, he asked the Pharifees whose son Christis? and no man could answer him any thing, nor durst thenceforth ask him any more questions. Then speaking of the Scribes and Pharifees, he pronounced eight woes against them, and upbraiding Jerusa-Jem with her cruelty and obstinacy, foretelleth her destruction. Sitting over against the treasury, he saw a poor widdow cast in two mites, and going our to his Disciples, who admired the structure, he foretold it's ruine. His Disciples asked him on the Mount of Olives when these things should be, concerning the fign of his coming, and the end of the World, he answered largely, adviling them to watch, for they knew not what hour their Lord would come, illustrating his doctrine by the Parable of the Ten Virgins, and the talents committed to the servants to traffick. And he described the last Judgement by a severing of goats from the sheep. By day he taught, at night he went to the Mount of Olives, and all the People came in the morning to hear him in the Temple. When he had ended these sayings, he said to his Disciples, You know that after two dayes is the Feast of the Passeover, and the son of man is betrayed to be crucified. The great ones affembling in the house of Caiphas the High-Priest, consulted how to kill him; but they faid, not on the Feastday, left there be an uprove among ft the People; Jefus being in Bethany in the house of Simon the Leper, a woman poured oyntment upon his head, which he defended against his Disciples, forerelling his burial. Then entred Satan into Judas, who offered himself, aed covenanted for money to betray him. 72. In the Fourth Paffeover Fesu himself, Our Paffeover, was offered, crifize, because hehimself was now to be offered. That he did not do it, appeareth, because as soon as he came into the house he sate down; and this many of the antient Greek Fathers did believe. These words of Christ, with defire I have defired to eat this Paffeover with you before I suffer, the fame learned man expoundeth as meant, that he hafted to that Supper be-

and an end thereby was put to all Sacrifices, which were but types of this. The Fourth Some think that he did not this time ear the Paschal Lamb, but onely unlease Paffcover vened bread, and bitter herbs, fuch as were used by those that could not come wherein Christ the true Paffeover himfelf was offered.

up to the Sacrifice, being in another Country. For a (4) learned man di- (a) Grotius Hinguisheth betwixt wooxa Nosimov and unmovertines, which later was per- Amoria Matth. formed by those that were a far off, in memorial of the thing, it being un- 6.26. lawful to kill the Lamb any where out of Judaa. Now Christ would not sa-cause the time of his death was at hand, which would take from him the liberry of celebrating the wood Submov. It being granted that he kept the perty of celebrating the works, 90byton. It being granted that he kept the (b) Possius de Passouer a day before the few observed it, (b) another contendeth that facre came do-Christ kept it on the true day , and that the Jews receding from the Law , minica Symbolis put it offitill the following day, or the 15 of the moneth Nifa, being the Diff. 1.

Sabbath,

concerning

Chrift.

Sabbath, left they should be debarred of working for two dayes together. But the other opinion is more probable, which holdern that he anticipated it, being as the true Paffeover, to be offered up on the true day of killing the Passeover, which fell out on the day preceding the Sabbath, and not on the Sabbath day. It clearly appeareth in Scripture, what things our Lord did and fuffered for unworthy finners, after he had eaten this Supper, though the order of the former passages concerning his preaching be obscure, and therefore we have more largely described them. Being betrayed by Judas into the hands of the Chief-Priests, and by them delivered up to Pilate the Governour. he being convinced of his innocence and their malice, fought how to deliver him, till they told him, that if he did it he was not Cafar's friend; whereupon fearing to be accused to Tiberius, of protecting one who affected the King- A. D. 22. dom, he condemned him, and delivered him to the Soldiers to be crucified. 01, 202, 42, 4. This was about the fixt hour, or a little after noon, at what time a great dark. V. C. 787. nesse arose, for that the Sun was obscured, and continued till the ninth hour, or three of the clock. Then Christ to shew the bitternesse of his torment cried (yet) with a loud voice, Eli Eli Lamasabachtani, and receiving the vineger, after he had commended his foul into the hands of his Father, gave up the ghold. Thus he who was in the form of God, and counted it no robbery to be equal with God, made himself of no reputation, and suffered death, even the (most ignominious) death of the Crosse for ingrateful 73. Some think that the darknesse which hapened at our caviour's Passion.

Universal, Luke expresly saying, that the Sun it felf (the eye of the whole of the whole World) was darkned. Some conceived that the Sun was darkened by the 2". Marc. & inverpolition of the hadrof the Moon whereast (1) Discount to be the Luc. interposition of the body of the Moon, whereof (a) Dionysius the Arcops- (a) Epst. 7. The miracugite (as he calleth himself) was an eye witnesse, at what time he and Apollous Eclypfe lophanes the Philosopher being at Heliopolis, observed the Moon suddenly to at our Savicast her self before the Sun (though it was not the time of conjunction) and our's death. again from the ninth hour to the evening, opposing herself to the middle line of the Sun. If fo, it was an extraordinary miracle, the Moon being nowat the full (as (b) Augustin observeth it to have been ever at the Passever) and (b) Decivitat, besides the Evangelists, mentioned the greatnesse of the Eclypse. And (d) Tertullian Writing to Pagans faith, You cannot make this wonder suspe- (d) Apologic. Eted, feeing your own Calendars have remarked it, and your felves retain the 6, 21. testimonies thereof in your own registers. Amongst Greek Author: , Phlegon Recorded by (e) Trallianus the Freed-man of Adrian the Emperour, in his Work of (c) And Eufeb, the Heathen, Olympiads or Chronicle, which confifted of fixteen Books, clearly spoke of inchronica, esthis Eclypse, writing in his thirteenth Book, that in the fourth year of the Orig conna feem to have held, that the Sun was darkned, not by the interpolition of that luminary, but the retention of his beams. That the darknesse was universal, 202 Olympiad, the greatest Eclypse hapened that ever was known; for, at Celjum.l. 2. & the fixth hour of the day it was night, fo that the Starrs were feen in the in Matth. Heavens. 74. That Christ was put to death in the reign of Tiberius by Pontius Pilate (a) Cornelius Tacipus writeth, an Author guilty of Ethnick ignorance, and (a) Annal.

prejudice. But (b) Josephus the noble Jewish Historian giveth him an ho- 1. 15. 6.44. nourable testimony, writing, that At the fame time there was one Festus a (b) Aniq.1.18. The testimo- wiseman, if it be lawful to call him a man. For he was a worker of wonder- c.4. ful works, and a teacher of those which willingly receive the truth. He had also many followers, not onely Jews but Gentiles: and he was believed to be Christ. And whereas by the malice of our Princes, Pilate condemned bim to be-crucified, yet notwithstanding they who first loved him have persevered. For he appeared so them alive the chird day; the Prophets having foretold in their writings, thefe, and many other wonderful things concerning Hhhhh was onely in the Land of Judaa. But others, finding that the Evangelists * end πάσαν mention * the whole Earth, conclude that this Eclypse was Occumenical or The 2011, Mat, confequently at the greatest distance from the Sun, out of which respect others Dail, 3, 6,15, appeareth from the records of Heathen Writers, which, as (c) Orofius faith, (c) Lib. 7.6, 4.

CHAP. I.

100

Christians.

This he relateth, after he had spoken of that Sedition which hapened because of Pilate his bringing in of Cafar's Images. Some from amongst our felves have not given credit to this relation, thinking it to be foisted in by some Christians, for the greater honour of our Religion. But as the pia fraudes supposed to have been used by the Primitive Christians, are rather increased than otherwise, by some, who either pedantically, and out of oftentation seek for applause from the prejudice of their own cause (as one hath done of late in reference to the matter in hand) or as out of a melancholick and distrustful humour question the evidence of the truth; so is there no reason that this restimony should be condemned amongs them. For Tosephus maketh mention of Fohn Baptift, giving him large commendations, and relateth also that he was beheaded; though he affigneth the cause to have been but of jealousie of him, and lest he should make some commotions through his popularity. which likely enough might be some cause, especially the malice of Herodian confidered, which woman would not be wanting to fill his head with suspition, although the main reason was his reproving of the incest. He also maketh mention of James the brother of Alpham, whom he calleth the brother of Tefus Christ, how he was put to death at Jerufalem, faying, that all good men were forely troubled at it, and clearly expresseth himself distatisfied in it, writing, that Ananus, who commanded the murder to be done, did ill, and this he faith not onely because the Judicial power was taken away from the Jews, as is evident from the course of his words. 75. It is hence clear enough, that Josephin was not in the number of those

The Roman Empire.

him; and to the day the People from him called Christians hath not ceased.

whom Herod Agrippa could have pleased in the killing of the other James the brother of John; and truly amongst the Jews, such as were not extremely malicious against Christ, were something inclining to him, if we consider Defended to not feigned by the temper of that People. It cannot therefore be faid, that Josephin was fo inveterately despightful against Christ and Christians, that, as some have thought, he utterly passed over the story of Christ upon that account. This Principle would have induced him to rail rather than to be filent, to bespatter the Christian generation, rather to say nothing, or rather to seem displeased at their sufferings. It'strue, he was with the younger Agrippa, but almost a Christian, and therefore we rather follow the translation of Jerome, which rendereth his words credebatur effe Christius, than to take them as Eufebius and Rufinm have them, and as they are found in the present copies, o xers os out on, Christu bic erat. But some there were amongst the learneder fort of Fews, who knew not really what to blame as to Chrift, nay they believed inhim, onely they defired fill to * keep the Law, fuch were their tenaciousnesse at oit. It's true, they stumbled at the meannesse of his outGalat. 1. 23.
ward condition, and expected a Messiah to reign at Jerusalem. But Jose 4, 5. phus lived to see Jerusalem utterly destroyed, and thereby an occasion for fuch an advantage taken away; and affliction maketh men more feriously to confider things; fo that he might be favourable enough towards Christ himfelf, though as to the Law he might still be pertinacious, as many of them were. Eusebins writeth, that the Verses of Sibylla were accounted by some as feigned by the Ecclesiasticks, but not a word of this matter. 76. The Jews had great expectations of the coming of the Meffiab, at that very time when the Lord Jesiss was upon Earth. They knew that the Prophecies of old respected that season: they understood well enough the weeks of Daniel, and that the Scepter was departed from Judah, when they percepturat had no Judiciary power as to life and death left amongst them. This expe- oriente toto ve-Etation was fo great, that it possessed the whole Eastern part of the Empire, tus & constant though it was understood in the same sense onely, as by the carnal fort of Jews, opinio, effein amongst whom how many counterfeits do we read of, which at that time pre- faits, ut to temfumed upon it? Hereupon, though Christ came in an humble way, yet his professional Miracles caused a reverence and esteem of his person, nay they durst not but positionary. think well of him asthe Meffiah (how long doft show make us to doubt?) Sueton in till confounded by the spiritualnesse of his preaching, offended at his oppositivespas.

tion of their Traditions, and Pharifaical Tenents (as contrary to their Lawwhich they thought must necessarily indure for ever) and especially moved (the greatest of them) by their corrupt interests of profit and applause (which made them deny him, though they knew the refurrection, and to fin against their own consciences, and the holy Ghost) they rejected, and pur him to death. That faying amongst the Talmudifts, and ascribed to the house of Elias (whom some will have to be John Baprist) is commonly known, viz, that the World fould continue 6000 years, whereof 2000 belong to Tohis or Inane (that is the void space of time betwirt the Creation and the Law) 2000 to the Law, and 2000 to the Mellian; that then it (hould be destroyed." Now as the first division lighterh well, if the Tohu be taken as ending at the birth of Abraham, the father of the faithfull (or those in Covenant with God) so the second endeth much about the birth of our Saviour (reckoning as to both those accounts the years of the Patriarchs, according to the Hebrery Text) and pointeth out the time of the Meffiah. Suidas mentioned out of Theodofins a noble Tem, that before Christ did rebuke the Scribes, they marvelling at his wife answers and questions made him one of the Priests, and entred his name, 'Iwoss o vio des in Magias, Jefus the fon of God and of Mary, otherwise he being of the Tribe of 3 deh could not have been suffered to preach at Nazareth and Capernaum as he did. 77. But (that we may improve those things as to Josephus) it doth appear that not onely before Christ gave them offence, and that before he died. fome had honourable thoughts of him, but also after his death they accounted him the very Melliab, though they would not part with their old way of worship. Their * Talmud, like to Augeas his stable, is full of filth, amongst * Babylonian. which but a few Granes of Corn do appear. It was not finished in leffe time then 100 years, being written with this defign, to contain all the sayings of their Elders which were not expressed in Scripture, and was compleated (fuch a Fardel as it is) about 500 years after Christ. Yet speaking of that place of Zechariah (Chap. 12. vers. 10.) And they shall look upon me whom they cans, fol. 52. have pierced, after it hath reprehended a certain exposition of it, addeth, Videlis Ia-Peace be to him who hath faid that thefe things are to be understood of cobum Cappel-Messiah the son of Joseph, who is slain. There is nothing in the whole Tal- lum. In Hist.

mnd more worthy of observation. For so we have him whom both the blef. facts & croite, fed Virgin her self, and Nathaniel calleth the son of Joseph, and whom the Fews put to death, to be the true Messiah, and to have been born about the 4000 year of the World. 78. There are not wanting Testimonies concerning the truth of Christand'

his Doctrine from the Heathen. Rhodiginus and Volateran deliver it as a from the Hear matter of credit, that there was an Altar in Egypt Dedicated unto a Virgin that should bring forth a Child, and Postellus, that there was another intituled Primogenito Dei, to the first begotten of God. Upon the Star which appeared at his birth (which some think the same mentioned by Pliny, and called Stella crinita fine crine) many meditating turned to the truth, as Charemon amonest the Stoicks, and Challadius amongst the I latonists, who thereupon went into Tudes, and became Jews. It is also reported that the Romans called their Temple which they had built to Bacchus for victory, Templum pacis aternum, the everlasting Temple of peace, because the Oracle at Delphi told them it should stand dum peperit virgo, till a Virgin brought forth a Child: but as foon as Christ was born it fell. The Oracles generally fell in Lib, de defetta

The Oracles the reign of Tiberius, when the time of Christ his preaching was come, Oraculorum, who was the eternal word of his Father. Plutarch of this subject wrong a Tract, fearthing much as a Philosopher what the cause of this strange change should be. After his acute fearch after fundry causes, and accurate Philofophical disputes, he refers it partly to the absence of the Demoniacal spirits, which he thinks might die, or remove from place to place, either hanished by others more notent, or upon some other dislike; and partly unto the alteration of the foil wherein Oracles were feated, which yielded not exhibitions of fuch Divine temper as in former times it had done; for, without a certain temperature of exhalations, or breathing of the earth. Herthought: that spirits could not give their Oracles, more than a Musicianican play with out an Instrument. Accordingly he expected that Oracles should either come in ule again in Greece, or elle burft our in some conveniente soil. But where have they thus burft our? Christianity chafed them away wherever in cames. and put those spirits to silence, which were afraid of the Christians in the primitive rirmes, fo, as those holy men could make them confesse they were Dec. vils, and chase them out of such bodies as they had possessed, son the truth whereof Tertullian in his Apology appealeth to the confciences of the Heav then themselves, and therefore he would not in its publick a defence produce an untruth which must have been notoriously known. Therefore the filence of the Oracles was not from any of those causes (which to one that hath opportunity are in themselves easie to be consuted); the rruth was, the wime was come wherein the strong mans house was to be entred, his goods spoiled, and himself bound; now the Prince of this morla was to be cast out : Suran fell like lightning from Heaven upon the approach of that true light which lightneth every man that cometh into the world. 79. That notable flory which Platarch bringerh for confirmation of his herd.

Hhhhhh 2

788

opinion, concerning the Mortality of those Damoniucal sparity, maketh exceeding much for our purpole; if we confider the rime thereof. Thamons the Egyptian Mafter, as he fayled, was requested by an uncouth voice uttered three times from land, to proclaim the news of Great Faw's death as he passed by Palodes. Thamous, whose name was unknown to his Passengers, Parthar died till he answered to it at the third cast, was resolved to have let all passes a was Christ fancy or idle message, if the wind and tide should grant him passage by the the true thep- place appointed : but, the wind failing him on a sudden, at his coming this ther, he thought it but a little loffe of breath to cry out aloud unto the floar, as he had been requested, Great Pan is dead. The words, as Platareb relateth, were scarce out of his mouth, before they were answered with a huge noise, as it had been of a multicude, fighing, and groaning at this wonderment. Now, if these spirits had been by nature mortal, as the Philosopher thought they were, the death of their Chief Captain could not have seemed fo strange : but that a far greater than the greatest of them, by whose power the first of them had his being, should die to redeem his Enemies from their thraldom, might well feem a matter of aftonishment, and deep forrow unto them. The circumstance of the time will not permit us to doubt, but that under the known name of Pan was intimated the great shepherd of our Souls, who had then laid down his life for his flock; not the feigned fon of Mercury and Penelope, as the Wife-men foolishly refolved Tiberiui, who having had the truth of the flory confirmed to him by ear-witnesses, called a convocation of wife-men to refolve him who this great Pan lately deceased should be. The Scriptures fer forth unto us the true cause, why both the wild goarish Pan, and all the rest of that Hellish true should at that time hows and mourn, feeing by our great shepherds death they were become Dead in Law; no more to breath in Oracles, but quite to be deprived of all such strange motions as they had seduced the ignorant World with before. All the Antick tricks of Faunus, the Satyrs, and fuch like Creatures were now put down; God had resolved to make a trabilation of his Church; and for this cause the Devils were forced to dissolve their old Chapels, and seek a new form of their Liturgy or Service. These passages are pregnant enough, though we allege not what Nicephorus reporteth, that the Oracle at Delphi (perhaps not just then extinct) faid that this Pan was Ilois Espaio, an Hebrew Child; and though we omit what Suidas writeth, that Augustus fending to Pythia to inquire who should succeed him, had answer, that an He> gustus erected an Altar in the Capitol Primogenito Dei, To the first born of 80. But amongst other restimonies of the Themben concerning Christ, that brew Child, Lord of the Gods, had commanded him to be gone down again to Hell, and therefore he must no more enquire there. Whereupon An-

ON MPL IX.

The Testimo- of the Sibyll's must not be omitted. These women were indued with extraordinary gifts of Prophecy, as certain previous pledges, that the Gentiles should alfo drink of the true heavenly, and eternal Bountain. Like to those was Balaam the Midjanite, an Idolater, yet called a Propher by the Scriptures, who among to ther things forerold that a Star bouldrife ont of Jacob, and a Scepper from Ifrael. There were many, of these Sibyl's as we have already shown, and several of them Prophecied of Christ. Their savings were made much use of by, such antienn Gerissians as had to do with Pagans, and steamer the philosophers, (a) Justen, Marry relight such that the old, and very antient Sibylla, of which Plate, Aristophanes, and others have mide men. tion, feahe of one God, and against Idolaters, as also of the coming of our Sa- ad 37. vide. viour Felus Chriff, plainly, and manifeltly, and of his works. (6), Clemens alfo (b) Strom, 1.6. writeth of Hydaspes, an antient King of the Medel, who, clearly foretold that the fon of God should come. Concerning the Verses of Sibylla Erythran many have written, and many of them are produced by Eufehins in the Oration (e) of Constantine to the Clergy, the Aeroflicks, whateof make up the? (c) Cap. 18. Words. * Inses XAIS @ BES, Sec. Jefus Christus Des Filius, farvaige, crux. Day allowed and foresell the last Judgement and Authority of Christ. There are others generalist, also cited by (d) Lastantius, which speak of Christ his * coming into unjust bands, his being fricken on the head, and meaning a Crown of Thorns & (d) L.14.c.18, Posts Bariyeipas, Sec.

Coultantine

confuteth fuch as ac-

the giving of him Vinegar, the renging of the veil of the Temple, and his being dead three dayer. Now some were of opinion of old, that these were * Ess avenus feigned by Christians, as appearerh by what Constantine (or Eulebius for bim) subjoymeth. But there are many that give no credence, faith he, theremnto, although they confasse that Sibylla Erythiza was a Propheteste: yea, they suspect that some of our religion not ignarant in Postry, made these Varies, and that they are fally injeribed, and reckaned among the Oracles of Sibylla: feeing they commin very profitable favernces, both to, reftrain the li-cention fee fe of immoderate pleasures and so personale to a modest continency of life. But the sem h of this master doth manifeltly appear, for our men have wish great fludy to accurately compared the times, that none can sufpett that this Poem was made, and came forth after Christs coming, and therefore they counted them are convinced of fallhood, who blaze abroat that these Verses were not made by this Sibylla. For it is manifest that Cicero, having read this Poem, did translate is into Latine, and joyned it to his works, who was afterward put to death by the Triumvir Antonius, and Antonius was overcome by Auguttus, who reigned fix and fifex years; Tiberius sacceeded Augustus, in whose reign our Saviour came into the World, and the myftery of religion began to flourish, and the people were changed. Of which I suppose the chief of the Italian Posts hash thus fung. 81. He meaneth Virgil, whose Poem he reciteth concerning the Golden Eclas, 6. dayes foresold by Sihylla Cumas (by which name the Romans called all the Sirblis, because of the old Cumana or Cumana, whose Verses were burnt in the Capitol, in the 671 year of the Citie, and were supplied by other ferchet from Erythra, and elsewhere) as also concerning a Child that was to be born. He ascribeth to this Child such Divine things, as none can doubt, but that he must be above a man, whom Sibylla described by such expressions. Now that fuch Verses could be feigned by Christians none can affirm, but the grosly ignorant, who know not that Virgil died several years (2)2. 18) before (brift was born. Neither can it be thought he feigned it on his own head, afthough we cannot lay with Constantine or Eusebins, that be did thus mystically involve, and cover the truth, lest the Emperour should be offended with him for writing that which was contrary to their Laws, and Statutes established, concerning their Gods; or that we do believe that he forefam the happy and glorious mystery of our Saviours coming a but that he might avoid their cruelty, and speak his audience in the accustomed manner. Some of late al-To have rejected the Poams afcribed to these women as seigned by Christians, because they seem to speak more plainly of Christ, than the true Prophets do. and exhibit rather an history of Christ already come, than a Prophecy of his

CHAPLE.

Chrift.

have also questioned them.

But in vain.

coming. They think it contrary to the Word of God a to think that thefe and That Some of late profound mysteries should be more clearly propounded to the Gemiles than to the Jews. This also much moveth them (for we will confesse the utmost) that they perceive many of the antients in the most primitive times, to have counted it the choicest work they could perform, to help the heavenly truth by their fictions, whereby the new doctrine might more easily be admitted by the Pagan wife men. And as they cannot but most grievously reprehend this thing, fo not sufficiently can they admire the judgment of those Fathers, who with such facility received these writings, and as doubt not to produce testimonies from them, to underprop the heavenly truth.

82. But it is answered by way of utter denial, that there were many in the Primitive times, who fought to establish the truth by fictions and lyes, and by challenge made for them to produce any one lye or fiction made or used by the most antient Fathers, though for a good end. Certainly they which in their disputations with the Pagans, appeal to the restimony of the Sibylls, udeferve great commendations for their prudence. And hence may it be proved, that those testimonies were not forged, because they in all conflicts more willingly had recourse to them than to any other. For, can we amagine them fools, with whom these Fathers had to do? They were as cunning and knowing as the best; they were Philosophers, Rhetors, Professors of Arts, States-men, and most commonly such as enjoyed the greatest honours. Where is it objected by any of these in the most Primitive times, that these testimonies were feigned by Christians? This answer would have been easie and ready; and such as would instantly have stopped the mouths of Primitive Saints. But the wifest and bitterest of the Enemies of Christians, do not make any fuch reply, in the most antient times, knowing well enough these Oracles, to which the Romans had ever recourse, and which were known sufficiently to the whole World, through which it ran for current, that in the Books of the Sibylls was held forth, that one should reign who came out of the East. The clearnesse of these testimonies concerning Christ, can make nothing against them ; for Esa as spake nor more evidently of Christ than Balaam, who said, that a Star should rife out of Jacob. Who dare prescribe to God a manner of prophecying? as if it were not free to him to speak plainly or obscurely to Jew or Gentile, or as if there were not in the Scripture most clear predictions concerning Christ. But grant that the Sibylline Oracles are clearer. Ought not those things which are predicted to the Gentilles concerning Christ to be clearer, because they wanted Moses, and the rest of that learning, which should direct them unto him, that what here was wanting might be supplied by the perspicuity of these Oracles? Although we ought not to judge of these Oracles, by that light which at present appeareth. For what things are most evident tous after the accomplishment, were most obscure when they were predicted. If any one had feigned them, he would have made them industriously more obscure, that they might seem written before the things were done, and like to those Prophecies which are contained in the Scriptures. These Heathen Prophets spake sometimes clearly, according to the intention of God, who overruled them; but often abruptly. It's thought they prophecied as of old Balaam's Affe spoke, and nor otherwise did Hydaspes and the Sibylls speak clearly of the coming of Christ: the Holy Spirit moving them, and governing their tongues. It appeareth (a) from Justin Martyr that it was forbidden upon pain of death to read Hydaspes, Sibylla or (a) In Apolog. the Prophets, left the People flould attain to the knowledge of good things. 2. P. 82, tolina To these (b) Clemens bringers in S. Paul himself. To these (b) Clemens bringerh in St. Paul himself referring the Greeks: (b) Strom. 1.6. Take ye also the Greek Books, acknowledge Sibylla that she manifested one God, and things to come. Take ye also Hydaspes, read him; and you shall * Vide August.

find the Son of God more clearly and openly deferibed. 83. To omit what might be (and by others hath been) produced out of 1. 10. 6. 23. * Heathen Writers concerning the bleffed Trinity (for we may eafly admir, that God, who was ever the God of the whole World and defined to in Lotum. that God, who was ever the God of the whole World, and designed to do Testul. Apolthe Gentiles good also in the knowledge of himself, might give to them such logic, 21.

hints of the truth, as afterwards might be improved for their welfare) we shall come to the last testimony concerning Christ, and that such an one, as will reduce us to the course of our design. After that Christ was rifen from Pilate made the dand, and had fent bis Descriptes about to preach and work miracles for the Plate made the seem, and refurrellies to Tiberius and the governed in Judea, reported his reporting of the Passas and Resurrellies to Tiberius and the Senate, with the miracles done by him, or by them in his name, and how the multitude of believers daily increasing, he was accounted a God. Tiberius bereupon reported the matter to the Senate, with his favourable fuffrage, that Christ might be accounted a God. Bur the Senate because they were displeased that they had not first moved it, refused to canonize bim, and by an Edit commanded that Christians should be banished she City; especially by reason shat Scianus the great minister of State most obstinately contradited this Religion. But Tiberius by amother Ediff threasened death to the accusers of Christians. These things thus related by (a) Orofins, are also witnessed by (b) Eusebins, Tortullian, (a) Eib.7.c.4. and Justin Marrys, whereof, the testimonies of the two later are incontrol- (b) Ecc. Hist. able; for in their Apologies they durst not mention such things, and cite such (. 2. c. 2. testimonies as they must needs know would be easily consuted.

84. (4) Tersullian Writeth, that Tibertus referred it to the Senate, with (a) Apologic. the prerogative of his own suffrage, but they having not approved the thing; c. s. refused it. Caclar normith standing remained firm in his resolution, and threatned such as should accuse the Christians. This he openly afferteth in his Apology to the Pagans, writing also in another (b) place of the same excellent Work, that Pilace, who in his bears believed in Christ, at the same time wrote all the History of him to the Emperour Tiberius, whereupon the Cafai's themselves had worshipped our Master , if their Government in so doing had been consistens with the men of this World, and Christians permitted to have been saluced Cæfars. He giveth another reason, why Christ was not at first worshipped as a God. There was an antient Law that forbad introducing new ceremonies into Religion, as worshipping strange Deities, unlesse approved by the Senates and this was an unviolable and unalterable Law, to which the Prince himself was subject. He instanceth, that Marcus Amilius would have bad divine honours rendred to his Idol, called the god Albarnus, but could not obtain it. As for Justin Martyr, he maketh it more evident, telling plainly the Pagans in his second Aplogy, that they may know these things thus to have been, in the Acts which were written under Pontius Pilate, and again, that they might know, that Christ wrought fuch miracles, from the Acta (or Acs) made under Pontius Pilate. Now the word Atta fignifieth fometimes the Journal Book of the Senate, then called Alfa Senatus, and otherwhiles the powers more of the comme, then cancel sales sensins, and otherwines the Records of the People, or of the Publick, then named Alla Publica, Diarna, and Urbana. In the former fort was contained what foever was done plant omains or fail by the Faibers. In the later things concerning the People as Publick Trioner Julium Judgments, punishments, Affemblies, buildings, nativities, the death of Linguismin eminent persons, mariages, and divorces. These afforded matter for Histo- Comment, ad rians to digeff and adorn. Now Justin Martyr either meaneth those Asta Taitu Annat. Publica, wherein might be recorded what notable things hapned in the Provinces; and fer under the administration of the several Deputies or Governours: or rather those Atta which Pilase himself composed in his Province. For we cannot but imagine, that care would be taken for the recording of things memorable, as well in other places as in the City it felf. The Provinces had their Subcenfors and their Tables. And the Presidents and Deputies not onely certified by letters occasionally what happened, but, as we may eafily apprehend, did refer in Alla all memorable things; which were fent to Rome, and there, it's probable, either transcribed into, or laid up with, the Alla Publica. But, thus much of the celtimonies of Jews and Heathers

85. the Lord Jefin having risen the third day from the dead, and after his refurrection given commission and instructions to his Disciples, whom he ordained his Ambaffadors to the whole World; forty dayes after he arofe, ascended

Caiphas depo-

Tiberius dieth.

BOOK IV The Roman Empire. The Ascensi- ascended into Heaven, and sent down the Holy Ghost upon his Disciples, acon of Christ. cording to his promise, for the furnishing of them to the Work, ten dayes after his ascension. Many being converted to the Faith, the Church increafed, and living in Love and Unity together, they had all things common, Land none calling any thing his own which he possessed. About the end of the year, who to as is rationally computed, the Greeks or Hellenifts (Fews which living out of the many Judea spake Greek in a peculiar dialect, which is called Hekenistick, and used box to the Scriptures in their Synagogues in that language.) murmured against the Hebrews (or those who both read and spoke Hibrew) for that their wid-

The feaven Deacons made.

rufalem.

dows were neglected in the daily ministration. Hereupon the Apostles committed it to the number of the faithful, to chuse seven men who should take care of what was gathered for the poor, and these Ecclesiastical Writers call Deacons. About this time Fames the Apolite the fon of Alpham (who is also called the brother of the Lord, and was firnamed Just) was created the first Bishop of Ferusalem. For thus Clemens wrote in the fixth Book of his Hypotypofewn, as he is cited by Eusebins. Peter, and James, and John, though they were preferred, after the afcension of the Lord, contended not among st themselves for glery and honour ; but with one consent appointed Tames the Just Bifhop of Jerusalem. The same Clemens in his first Book, diftinguished thus concerning the two which bore the name of James. There were two James the first James, the one termed Just, who was thrown down headlong from the pinacle, and brained with a Fullers club, the other beheaded. Of him that was Bishop of Fe-called Just, Paul made mention, faying: I faw none of the Apostles save Tames the brother of the Lord. In the year following Christ's refurrection, a great persecution was raised by the Jews against the Church, wherein Stephan one of the feven Deacons and the Protomartyr was stoned to death, by the procurement especially of Saul a Jew of Tarfin in Cilicia. But in this fame year as this Saul was journying to Damafeus to make havock of the Church, he was converted, and called to the Apost less after which he went 01.203.07.1. from Damascus into Arabia, as he himself testisieth in his Episle to the V. C.787. Galashians. Enfebius in his Chronicon placeth the conversion of Saul (afsaul conver- terwards called Paul) in the nineteenth year of Tiberius.

Pilate making the Samaria tans,

86. About this time it happened, that a certain man who fought by all a flaughter of means the favour of the multitude, drew the Samarstans to Mount Gerizim Joseph, Anig. which they accounted holy above all other mountains) promifing to flew 1. 18,6.5. them there the holy Vessels buried in a certain place by Moses. Many had gathered themselves to the foot of the hill, where staying for more company that they might ascend all together, Pilate prevented them, and killing some, took many, dispersed the rest, and put to death the chief of those he had taken. Hereof the Senate of Samaria complained to Vitellius Prefident of Syria, who fent Marcellus his friend to take charge of Judaa, and commanded Pilate to go to Rome, there to answer before Cafar what should be laid to his charge. Hereupon he departed, after he had governed Fudea ten years, Is fent to Rome but ere he reached Rome, Tiberins was dead. About the fame time that thefe to give an ac- things hapned in Samaria, the Tens were banished Rome by the Emperour upon this occasion. A certain Jew flying his native Country for breaking of the Laws, came to the City, where he professed himself an expounder of them, and drew to him two or three no leffe reprobate than himfelf. They count of it.

made a Profetyre Fulvia the wife of Saturninus an honourable person, and perfwading her to fend some Purple and Gold to the Temple of Ferufalem, con-The Jews ba- verted it to their own use. Saurninus complaining of this to Tiberius, he nished Rome, thereupon commanded all Jews to depart Rome. Of these the Confuls chose out and lifted 4000 men, whom they fent into Sardinia, and punished many that refused to bear arms, upon no other account, than because they would nor transgresse the Ordinances of their Country.

87. About two years after the deach of Christ, died Philip the Tetrarch, fonto Herod the Great, a man of a modest and quier disposition, whose Philip the Te- Principality, for that he died without iffue, Tiberius laid unto the Province Idem ibid. & trarch dieth. of Syria. By this time Artabanus King of Parthia prospering against his cap. 6. neighbours, neighbours was much puffed up, and despising the old age of Tiberiue, when Tacing Annal, his son Areamas was dead made his other son Arfaces King of Armenia in 1.6. c. 31. The Parthian his stead. He also reviled Liberius by Letters, objecting particide, murthers, Suction in Ti-King revileth lazinesse, and luxury to him, and willed him by a voluntary death to satisfie being 6.60. the most just harred of his subjects, as soon as possible. But many Noble men of Parthia, to escape his cruelty came to Rome, and defired a King from Tiberius, who thereupon gladly named Phranes the fon of Phranes that had been of a long time Holtage at Rome, and he dying in Syria, he commended to them i iridates. Mithridates brother to Pharasmenes King of the Hiberi was also ordered to get Armenia, who breaking into it joyned the Albanians to him, and procured the death of Arfaces; for the Parthians were eafily overthrown, being discouraged by a false rumour of the death of Orodes their Captain, another of Ariabanus his fons. Ariabanus having before this attempted Cappadocia, fent also to demand the Treasure which Vonones had left in Syria and Cilicia, and that had been seized by Tiberius * who with great perfidioninefic killed the owner at Antioch; and he further * Identity Tib. demanded the antient Borders of the Persians and Macedonians, bragging c. 49. that he would invade whiteoever had been possessed by Cyrus and Alexander. But Vitellius the Prefident of Sycia having drawn many of his fubjects from Tacitus at futheir truft, his mind to changed, that he fled away cowardly with a few to pra cap.41. the confines of Scythia. Vitellius taking the opportunity carried I iridates in- Dio l. 59. to the Kingdom, but he by delaying to feize on the chiefest places, and hastning his Coronation, gave occasion to some of the great ones again to fly unto Artabanus, who coming on, the other fled as fast back into Syria; fo

> 88. Tiberius hereupon wrote to Vitellius to make a peace with him. Vitellius about this time was come to Terufalem after the expulsion of Pilate. where he celebrated the Paffeover, remitted to the Citizens the Impost upon fuch fruits as were fold, and deposed Joseph, firnamed Caiphas, from Josephus Antithe High-Priesthood, to which he promoted Jonathan the son of Annat, quit, lib. 18.

that he recovered his Kingdom, with Armenia, and refolved to fer upon

He met with Artabanus upon a bridge built over the River Euphrates, where cap.6. they concluded a peace, and afterwards they were feafted by Herod the Tetrarch. Davius the fon of Artabanus was sent an Hostage to Rome with many prefents. But Tiberius died before, (March 16) having fince the sueton at fue death of Scianus cruelly raged against many, and lived dissolutely from his prd cap.73. death of Scianus cruelly raged against many, and fived dimension from the Circle, &c. retirement to the Island Caprea, whence he never returned to the Circle, &c. though he was twice on his way. The people ran up and down, over the factors and the control of th come with joy upon the report of his death. Some would have had his body cast into Tiber, and others prayed that no other place might be as-figned him now dead than amongst the wicked. He reigned 22 years, A. D. 48. feven moneths and odd dayes, and died in the 78th year of his age, Ol. 104, ann. I. and the 790 of the Citie , Cn. Acerronius Proculus , and C. Pontius Nigri- V. C. 790. nus being Consults.

CHAP. II.

From the death of Tiberius to that of Nero, the last Emperour of Cælar's family, containing the space of 20 years.

TIBERIUS left behind him a Grand-fon of his own name by his (a) Josephus fon Drufus, yet he preferred before him Cains the fon of Germanicus, Antiquit, 1, 18. caius the son either for some reason fetcht (a) from Astrology to which he was much gi- c. 8.

of Germanicus ven, or through the means (b) of Macro his Freed-man, and greatest favou- (b) Suction in Children of Germanicus. of Germanicus ven, or through the means (0) of Macro IIIs Erece-man, and greaten, ravou-fucceedeth Ti-rite, who being a loofe and vile person, Cains infinuated himself into his Tacitus Annal. favour by the procurement of his wife. With her Cains was wantonly famile 1.6. c.50.

Iiiii

liar.

794 liar, and promised her marriage by an Oath, and under his hand, if he could compasse the Empire, wherewith Macro was well pleased, if so be he could but therewith purchase greater preferment. 'Tis reported that he helped his Mafter forward by stiffing him in the bed-cloths. Others have thought (c) that (c) Suction ut a flow-working poyfon was given him by Cains; fome that meat was denied wins, him. & others that when he demanded his Ring which they had pulled off from his finger, they choked him with the Pillow. However it came to passe, Cains fucceeded him, and some (d) judged him willing that so It should be because fucceeded him, and tome (4) judged him witting that to it inollid be, because (4) Xiphilinus he knew he would prove a very bad man, and hoped that thereby the faults of ex Dione. his own reign might be something covered. He was received with great ap- (e) Fosebus plause by all men. By the Army, for that he had been brought up conti- ut supra. nually amongst them. Some fay he was born in the Camp; 'tis certain that the firname of Califula he had for that reason, because he was wont (f) to (f) suction ut wear that habit of the ordinary Soldiers. By the people he was gladly enter- prius. tained out of their affection to Germanicus, and commiseration of his family so grossy used by Tiberius, whose cruelty he escaped meerly by his, great diffimulation, and taking in good part every thing; so as it was said truely of him, that never was there a bester fervant, nor a worfe Mafter than Caligula. 2. Cains, within a few dayes after the fumptuous funeral of Tiberius, Fosephus Anigi grippa.

Preferreth A- This Agrippa was the Grand-son of Herod the Great by his son Aristobulus whom he put to death, being begotten of Berenice the daughter of Saliene. Having run through many fraights for want of money by reason of his great profusenesse, he became at length very dear to Cains, who restored him to liberty (being imprisoned by Tiberius for wishing his death, that Caligula might succeed him) and then set the Diadem on his head. He had a fifter named Herodias, married to Philip Herodes (not Philip the Testarch) his, and her Uncle, and brother to Philip Antipas on the father's fide, his mother being daughter to Simon the High-Prieft. This woman Herod Antipas was so taken with, that though he had already to wife the daughter of Aretas King of Arabia Petraa, yet he divorced this, and married her, upon which account Aretas made War upon him, and defeated his forces, which * was taken by the people as a judgement of God upon him for put- * Identified. ting to death John Baptift. Now Herodias envying exceedingly the pro- cap, 7, motion of her brother Agrippa, importuned her husband to go to Rome and beg, or buy the title of King. Agrippa smelling out their design before- Identibid. haird, wrote to Cains, and accused him of having heretofore been of Scianus cap. 9. his conspiracy, and of favouring at present the party of Artabanus King of Parthia, whereof he faid his Magazines could testifie, being furnished with Provisions for 70000 men of War. This furniture he could not deny, and therefore Cains banished him to Lugdanum (now Lyons) in Gall (whither Herodias would needs accompany him) and gave his Principality and estate unto Agrippa. Thus were these two punished for the death of John Bap-, tiff; and fo was Pilate for that of Christ. For, being also banished by Cains Euseb. Eccles. to Vienna, two years after he killed himself (whereof the Gracians are Hift. 1.2. 6.7. witnesses, saith Eusebius, who commit to memory in their Histories the Olym- & Orosius piads of times) and so became the revenger of his wickednesse upon himself. as 1.7. c.s. he who berrayed Christ into his hands had been before.

Pilate killeth himfelf,

Caligula be-

Herod Anti-

pas banished

to Lyons.

3. Though the disposition of Caligula was from his Childhood tending to intemperance and cruelty, yet at his first coming to the Government he used Suction in Camuch moderation and equity, as well towards publick as private persons. He lig. capp. 15, 16,17, 6c. would not hear any acculations, though faid to be for his own fafety, permit- Tofephus Antited free and antient Jurisdiction to Magistrates, attempted to bring in again quit lib.18. the Comitia, and restore the privilege of suffrages to the people, payed the cap. 9. Legacies given by Tiberius, though his will was nulled, and those given by Livia also, though her for would never discharge them : he remitted part of the Taxes to Italy, relieved the necessities of such as received losses by fire, and to fuch Kings as he restored, he gave the Tributes collected in their ab-made Agrippa King of that Countrey whereof Philip had been Tetrarch, 1.18, c.8.

CHAP. II. The Roman Empire.

fence. At first he appeared a great Parron of virtue, but degenerated into a Monster, so that as far as a min could go in luxury and cruelty he seemed to Bur turneth a proceed, which made Seneca * fay, that nature feetied to have brought him * De Confolat. forth to thew what the greatest vitiousnesse backed with the greatest power ad Albinim could be able to do. We may be more favourable to this opinion, if we con- cap, 9. fider that the greatnesse of his estate made him so far surpasse the limits of all modesty, as challenging to himself the title of Divinity, he governed all things in contempt of God

4. He thought at first to have taken a Diadem, and changed his Principa- Sueton ut sulity into a Kingdom, till by his flatterers he was told, that he was above all pra cap. 22. Affumeth die fuch, titles. At length he began to take to himself Divine honour. For he &c.

vine honours, caused the images of their Gods 13 be brought to Rome, whereof the heads being taken off, the image of his own was placed upon each in their flead, He would offer himself to be adored amongst his brother gods as he called them, and ordained Temples and Priests with facrifice of no commoner things than Peacocks, Turkies, and Pheafants, which were to be offered every day; and he invited the Moon to his imbraces. He could not endure to be accounted the off-spring of Agrippa, because of his ignobility; but gave our that his mother was conceived of the incest of Angustus with his daughter Julia. He himself committed incest with all his sisters, and spared not the chastity of either Sex. So imperious he was, that he would make persons of greatest rank run by his Charior, and stand girt with Towels when he was at meat. So cruel, that he killed his Grand-mother Antonia by unkindnesse, he His Vices. murdered his brother Tiberius, though he had adopted him, with all his kindred, except his Uncle Claudius, whom he preserved for a laughing stock : and he forced Macro and Ennia to kill themselves. As for others, he made havock of them, causing some to be knocked in the head with Clubs, if he were but disturbed in the shows. He would cast old men, or infirm, to wild beafts, and shutting up the Barns and Store-houses proclaimed a famine. Many of quality being first stigmatized he condemned to the Mines, or to repairing of High-wayes, thut them up like beafts in a Den, or fawed them afunder; and that for no greater matters than if they had not high thoughts of his gifts and shews, or had not sworn by his Genius.

5. He forced Parents to be present at the death of their Children. To Idem ibid, one that excused himself by sicknesse, he sent a Litter to carry him. A cer- capp. 27, 28, tain Knight whom he cast to wild beasts, crying out that he was innocent, he &. caused to be taken our, and his tongue to be cut out of his head, after to be cast in again. Demanding of one whom he had recalled out of baninment what he did all that time? upon answer that he prayed for the death of Tiberius, and that he might succeed him, supposing that all whom he had banished prayed also for his death, he gave command that they should all be killed. He would inffer none to be put to death but by degrees, that so as he faid they might feel themselves die. He forely afflicted the order of Knights, and being incented against the multitude for favouring a party against him, he wished that the People of Rome had but one neck. He was wont openly to complain of the condition of his time, because not fignalized by any publick calamity, and how by the ferenity thereof he should be buried in oblivion (his being herein contrary to the disposition of Phalaris) in fo much as he would wish for some overthrow of the Armies, some Famine, Pestilence, Fire, or Earth-quake. He purposed utterly to destroy the works of Virgil and Livy, and take away the Law. He took away honour from families, and when he mer with any beautifull person made them as deformed as he could. He was so prodigal that he would drink most precious Pearls diffolved in Vinegar, and inventall forts of delicacies, by which course he spent infinite sums in the space of three years, which Tiberius had hoarded up; and to recruit his Coffers raifed unheard-of Tributes. Amongst other means for increasing his revenue he fer up stews in his Palace, and some were fent about to invite all forts of men to them, fuch as came being commended for increasing Cafar's revenues. He purposed to depart to Antium

Iiiii 2

Uncle fue-

CHAP, II.

Putteth to that killed Cains, as a means to secure his own person; but in reference to the Senare buried all things in oblivion, and behaved himfelf moderately and civilly! He confirmed Agrippa in his Kingdom, and inlarged his dominions by an addition of Judaa and Samaria, which heretofore belonged to his grandfather. And he further bestowed on him Abila, and the Principality of Li-

Banus, which had belonged to Lyfanias; moreover upon his desire he gran- fosephus ut su-death chareas. defend his person and authority. Then put he to death Chareas and others and thence to Alexandria, but first to kill all the chief both of the Senatorian and Equestrian ranks and answerably hereunto were there found after his death two Books, whereof the title of one was Gladius, or Sword: and the other Pugio, or Dagger, wherein were written the names of fuch as he intended to murder. A great cheft also was found full of divers poisons, which being by Claudius his appointment cast into the Sea, the water is reported to have been so infected, that the fish was therewith killed, and was castup by the ride upon the shoar. These things are reported by Sueconius, concerning which Author yet it is observed by some, that he wrote the lives of the Emperours with as great liberty as they lived them. 6. Many defired to have an hand in removing him, yet durst not attempt any thing. But Cassins Chareas the Captain of his Guard being grievously affronted by him (for ever when Cains gave him the watch-word, it should

The Roman Empire.

He is flain by be some effeminate or obscene name, and he continually charged him with Caffus Chartes cowardize) fully refolved to kill him, and broke the bufineffe to others, whom the Captain of the control of th

he thought to have the same defire with himself. They killed him as he returned from the games of the Palace to refresh himself, Chareas giving him the first wound. His guard of Germans (which loved him exceedingly, because of the profit they reaped from the execution of his cruel commands) in a great rage killed all they could meet in the Palace, and with much adoe were kept from putting thousands to death, that were 'now assembled in the theatre. Nay the common People allured by his shows and largesses, endeavoured to find out the authors of his death, to whom Valerius A stations (who had been Conful) coming forth whilst they were in an uprost, and every one inquired who had done the deed, O, faid he, I wish I had done it. Being once advised to beware of a Cassius, he suspected Cassius Longinus the Proconful of Afia (of the same samily with Cassins one of the murtherers of Julius Cafar) and fending for him, put him to death, never thinking that Charess had also that name. Having reigned three years and ten monerhs with eight dayes, and lived 29, he thus died, on the ninth before the Calends A. D. 42

Christ, hee himself the fourth time, and C. Sextins Saturninus being V. C. 794. 7. The Senate now, as Josephus tellerh us, thought of refuming the antient form of Government, though it was utterly impracticable, Saturninus the Conful especially stickling for it. But the Soldiers rightly judging, that such Vide Foscob. an Empire could not be ruled in a Popular way, and especially looking at Aniqui, 19.63, their own advantage, resolved the contrary. Tiberius Claudius Drushi, bro- & 3. ther to Germanicus Cafar, and fon to Drufus (by Antonia the younger, the Suction in Class daughter of Antony the Trimmvir and of Ollavia the fifter of Augustus). was yet living. Him they judging most fir to succed his Nephew, pulled him Claudius his out of an hole where he had hid himself to save his life, and straight-way declared him Emperour. He was at first discouraged by the messages of the Senate, but again took heart, at the counsel and directions of King Agrippa, ccedeth him. fo that the Senators despairing of successe, gave over their enterprize, but not without (some of them) seeking the Soveraignty for themselves, which would have produced as great flaughters and defolations as ever, had any of them obtained liberty to profecure their defires. The People were for Clanding his preferment, envying the Senate it's antient power, and making account by the Soveraignty of one to be sheltred from it's avarice. Hereby also they thought to avoid such Civil Wars as fell out amongst the great ones in the time of Pompey. The wifer fort knew that it was impossible the Commonwealth should subsist but under Monarchy: some onether were sure would establish himself, and that through desolations, confusions, and slaughters, they must come to it at last. Self-preservation therefore and publick interest easily led them to the next heir, who by his birth could challenge an interest. For hereditary Monarchies, by proferving due reverence, excluding emulations and contests amongst equals, by preventing numerous protentions, and the extravagant grandeur of divers families, can onely fecure the Peace and prospe-8. Claudins rity of their Subjetts.

of February, in the 794 year of the City, and the 42 after the birth of ol 205. an. 1. tumultuous.

James.

This Island

from Julius

the Romans.

Inlargeth the ted to his brother Herod the Kingdom of Chalcis; and at the request of both, prac. 4,5. Dominions of published favourable Edicts in behalf of the Jews, who groaned under the perfecution of Cains. This Agrippa (called also Herod by St. Luke) labouring all manner of wayes to gratifie the Fews, killed James the brother of John, and shut up Peter in prison, intending to bring him forth to the People All. 12. after the Passever, but he was miraculously delivered by an Angel. A just punishment from God overtook Agrippa nor long after : For having begun to build the walls of Jerusalem, when upon complaint of Marsus President of Syria, he was forbidden by Claudins, he descended to Cafarea, there to celebrate games in honour of Cafar. Being clothed with a robe of filver, which glittered exceedingly by the reflection of the Sun-beams, he rejected nor the flatteries of those who ascribed to him divine honours, and was prefently feized by a pain in his guts, and being eaten with worms, gave up the Whom venghost within five dayes, after he had reigned seven years in all, and three over A. D 45. gence over-Judea. His Kingdom was not committed to his fon by reason of his youth V. C. 797. death of

(for he was but seventeen years old) and therefore Cuspins Fadns was sent to 9. Claudius reftored also Mithridates the Iberian to his Kingdom, whom Cains had imprisoned. On another Mithridaes (descended from Mithridates the Great King of Pontus) he bestowed the Kingdom of Bosphorus (laudius resto- (giving one part of Cilicia to Polemo in requital) and another part of this Country to Antiochus with Commagena; for he had alfobeen deprived of this his Kingdom by Caius. But the Lycians and Rhodians he deprived of their liberty. The former, for that they had raised a Sedition, wherein some Re-

mans had been flain, and the later, because they had crucified some of them. About this time the Britains were very tumultuous, for the reducing of whom to obedience, he sent A. Plantins in his second year, with an Army out of 10. Since the time of Julius Cafar, the Romans had attempted nothing upon Britain. Augustus seemeth of purpose to have neglected it, counting Lege Cambdeit policy to keep the Roman Empire within it's bounds; to wit, the Ocean, num, the Rivers Ifer and Emphrates, limits fer by nature, to the end it might be a State Adamantine (for so he himself speakerhin Julian) or invincible, and not micrary through it's too great bulck and burthen. Strabo is of opinion, that he despised it, seeing no cause to fear, nor hope of much profit from the Total parises Britans; and yet it feemed that no small danger would be presented from opeditions, un- ther Nations lying about the faid Island. But at length he departed from Rome with a purpose to transfer the War into Britain; but when he was come into Gall, the Britains pacified him by Ambassadors, and having obtained his amity, dedicated prefents and oblations in the Capitol. They brought the Island now familiar to the Romans, and endured taxes and imposts, which faith Strabo, are now nothing grievous to them, being raifed out of fuch marchandife and commodities as are shipped to and fro out of Gall and Britain; those be Ivory works, bits and bridles, chains and wreathes, Vessels of Eleetrum and glasse, with other base and common wares of like forc. And therefore there needs no Garrison for that Island. For it would require one Legion at least, and some Horsemen, if cributes were to be levied from thence, and the faid tributes would but countervail the charges of maintaining a Garrison there; for of necessity, by imposing a tribute, the revenues coming diversed from by sollage and poundage, and suchlike imposts, would be lesse: and if any violent course were used, some perit or other must be expetted. The year following exploits

798

Red it.

Britenhuis.

Book IV!

following also Augustus intended a second Expedition into Britain, because there was some variance about the Covenants: but by occasion of some insurrections made in Spain by the Cantabri and others, that journey was

11. Tiberius nothing transported with an inordinate defite of inlarging the Empire, seemeth to have rested in that counsel of Augustus; For he brought out a Book written with Augustus his own hand, wherein was contained the whole wealth and estate of the Commonweal, what number as well of Roman Citizens as Allies were in Arms, how many Navies, Kingdoms, and Provinces, what tributes and imposts belonged to the State, with a resolution annexed thereto of containing the Empire within the same bounds. Tiberius negle Garrison or Deputies there. For, whereas Tacitus reckoneth up the

Which advise and resolution of Augustus contented him so well, that, as Tacitus reporteth, he would attempt nothing in Britain, nor maintain any number of Legions, and what Coasts and Countries they defended at that time, he maketh no mention atall of Britain. And yet it feemeth, that the Britains entertained amity with the Romans. For when as at the same time Germanicus failed the Ocean, some of his Company being by force of Tempest driven to this Island, were by the Princes thereof sent back again. That

Caius Cafar cast in his mind to enter this Mand is certain : but by his shittle brain, sudden repentance, and wonderful attempts against Germany it came to nothing. For to the end that he might terrifie Britain and Germany (over which he hovered) with the fame of some mighty piece of work, he made a bridge between Base and the Piles of Puteoli, three miles and 600 paces in cains his rare length. But having atchieved no greater exploit, than received to grace Adminius the fon of Cynobelliuus King of the Britans (who being by his Father banished, had fled over Sea with a small power and train about him) he sent, magnificent and glorious letters to Rome, as if the whole Isle had been yielded up into his hands : warning and withing the Pofts to ride forward directly into the Forum and Curia, and in no wife to deliver the faid missives unto the Confuls, but in the Temple of Mars, and that in a frequent Affembly of

12. After this to the Ocean he marched, as if he minded to translate the War over into Britain. There upon the shoar he embattelled his Soldiers: he himself took Sea in a Gally, and having lanched forth a little from the Land, returned again. Then mounting an high feaffold, he fate him down, and gave his soldiers the fign for battel, and commanding the Trumpets to found, archievement, on a sodain charged them to gather Cockles, Muskles, and other small shelfishes. Having gotten these spoils he waxed proud, as if he had conquered the Ocean: and having rewarded his Soldiers, he brought some of these shelfishes to Rome, to shew the booty he had gotten. In token and memorial of this great atchievement, he caused to be built a brave high Turret, out of which as from a watch-tower, there might blaze all night long lights, and fires, for the better direction of Sea-men. The ruines hereof are some times

feen at a low-water on the shoar of Holland, by the People inhabiting thereabouts, called Britenhuis, that is, the British house, who also find oftentimes stones ingraven with letters: of which one had these characters, C.C. P. F. which they expound thus, Caius Caligula Pharum Fecit, that is, Caius Caligulamade this Pharus (or Watch-tower) fo called, I suppose, from that notable one, and one of the Worlds wonders, built by Prolomy Philadelphus in the Island Pharos , from which * fome would have the antient * Vives in Philadelphus in the Island Pharos, from which some would have the antient Aug, de Civit. Kings of Egypt called Pharaohs. It is probable, that this Watch-tower Dei. 1.6. c. ult. afterward being repaired by Septimus Severus, became a Granary for reception of Corn, which was brought out of Britain, whence it might take it's name of Britenhuis. For Zonimus writerh, faith Cambden, that Corn was wont to be brought out of Britain by thips to this place, and thence with barges and boats haled up the Rhene against the stream, to serve the Roman Garrisons : seeing that Fulian the Emperour built Garrisons, as Marcellus faith, wherein might be inued and kept the Corn, that the Britains usually transported thither.

13. But, afterwards the inland parts of Britain wasted rather with Civil Wars and Factions than by the force of the Romans, came by little and little subjected to them. Some making choice of their protection swore allegiance to them, and practifed by all means to subject their Native Countrey unto their government. The principal of these fugitives was one Bericus, who moved, and perswaded Clausius to give the attempt upon Britain. which none assayed to do since the time of Tulius Cafa, and which then was up in a broil and commotion, for that the faid Fugitives were not renclaudius fend- dred again unto them. Claudius therefore in his second year ordered A.Planeth Plantius time the Prator to passe over out of Gall, who having by the means of Narciffus quieted the Soldiers that refused to make War without the compasse of the World, overthrew feveral times the fons of Cynobellinus. His Lieutetenant was Flavius Vespasian, who behaved himself very gallantly in the service. But Claudius in his fourth year being very ambitious of a triumph (as not contenting himself with triumphal Ensigns decreed to him by the Senate) without a just cause pitched upon Britain as yet seditious, because their Fugitives were not restored. Sayling from Ostia, he was twice in danger of shipwrack, once near Ligaria, and again near the Islands Stachades (four or five in the French Sea near Languedoc and Provence) wherefore from Maffilia (now Marfeils in Provence) he went by Land as far as Gefforiacum (now Bologne) and thence passing into the Island subdued part of it, and amongst subdueth part other Towns (amalo lunum (now Maidon) the regal feat of Cynobellinus, with the Orcades. Die writeth, that at his first landing he defeated the Barbarians in battel. But Suetonius faith, he performed these acts vithout a bartel, and the losse of one drop of bloud. Having been divers times faluted sueton ut sue Imperator (a thing directly faith Dio against the Roman custom; for lawfull pra cap. 17. it is not in one War to assume that title oftner than once) he disarmed the Britains, and committing as well the government of thefe, as the War with the other (not yet subdued) to Plamius he hasted to Rome in the fixth moneth, sending before him Pompey and Silanus his sons-in-law with tidings 14. So great a matter it was, and of fuch confequence to have Conquered even fo small a parcel of Britain, that the Senate thereupon decreed in honour of Claudius, yearly Games with triumphal Arches, bothat Rome, and also at Gessoriaeum in Gall, and a most honourable and stately Triumph. To Extraordinary the beholding hereof Governours of Provinces, and some banished persons expressions of also were permitted to come to the Citie: a naval Crown was fixed on the joy at Rome. loover of the Palace, as the Enfign of the British Sea subdued by him : the Provinces brought in Crowns of Gold, and Gallia Comata one above the rest weighing nine pounds : and the hither part of Spain, another of seven pound weight. He mounted up into the Capitol by the flairs on his knees, fupported, and heaved up by his fons-in-law on either side. He entred in Triumphing wife the Adriatick Sea, embarked in a Vessel more like some exceeding great house than a ship. Unto his wife Messalina was allowed the highest place to sit in, as also to ride in a Carroch or hanging Coach. After this he fet forth triumphal playes and Games, being made Conful for that purpose. The folemnities were exhibited at once in two Theatres, and many times > out of Afia, danced the warlike dance in Armour. Upon Valerius Afiaticus, Julius Silanus, Sidius Geta, and others, in regard of this Conquelt, he heaped triumphal Ornaments. He suffered Licinius Crassus Frugi to follow after himself in this triumph, mounted upon a trapped Courser with a rich caparison, and arrayed in a Robe of Date-tree work. Upon Posidius the Eunuch he bestowed a spear staff without an head : upon C. Gavins chains, bracelets, horf-trappings, and a Coronet of Gold; as is to be seen in an antient Marble at Tanrinum.

of the victory.

when he was gone afide from the fight, others had the charge thereof. Horse races for the prize he promifed as many as those dayes would admir. Howbeit, above ten there were not; for between every course of Horses Bears were killed, Champions performed their duties, and choice boyes fent for woman presently as soon as she perceived her strength procured his daughter 1.12. c.1. &c.

Offavia to be given in marriage to Domitius Nero her fon by her former husband Cn. Domitius Anobarbus. The maid was formerly contracted to

L. Silanns an eminent young man, but he accused by Vitellius was put asked a Prince from Rome. Claudius fent them Meherdates the fon of Vo-nones, and Grandson of Phrastes; but he was presently betrayed into the

15. In the mean time Aulus Plantius went on with the reliques of the War in Britain, and sped so well that Claudius passed a decree that he should enter Rome in Quant I riumph; and when he was entred into the Citie, he Plantius himself went to meet him, giving him the right hand all the way. Vespasian, sucton in Ve-And Vespasian partly under Claudius, and partly under Plantius, sought thirty battels with the spasian. prosper in Bri- Enemy; subdued also two most mighty Nations, and above twenty Towns, together with the Isle of Victus or Wight. For those exploits he received triumphal Ornaments, and within a short space two Sacerdotal Dignities, with a Confulfor which he bore the two last moneths of the year. Titus Idem in Tito. also served in quality of a Tribane under his father with exceeding commendations for his industry and valour (for he valiantly delivered his father when befieged) and no lesse repute of his modest carriage say some, as appeareth by a number of his images and titles to them annexed, throughout the Provinces of Germany and Britain. About this time a new Island appeared Orosius lib 7. in the Egean Sea named This near to Hiera, which 110 years before it can. 6. first also sprung up : And both of them lay betwixt Thera and Therasia, Plin. 1.2. c.87. which in like manner 130 years before the Original of Hiera were first feen A. D. 46.

amongst the Cyclades. 16. Two or three years after this, Claudius being certified that his wife Messalina (the most unchast of all women) had openly married C. Silius, Lege Tacir. upon his wife he animadverted upon her and her minions. About the same time Herod the Annal, 1, 11, Marrieth Agrippina his Niece.

Claudius ani-

madverreth

Meffalina.

Stirs in Parthia,

The Britains rebel,

17. Now was P. Offerius Proprætor there, upon whose first coming the Tacitus Annal, Britains grew confident, as contemning him for his want of experience. The lib. 12. Winter being begun they made excursions into the Territories of the Allies of Capp. 31,32. Rome. He knowing that the first event would either incourage or amate &c. them, set upon, and scattered them, then went about to disarm all such as he had reason to suspect; but the Iceni (inhabiting those parts now called Suffolk, Norfolk, Cambridgshire, and Huntingtonshire) a strong Nation, refuling to submit, drew others in to them, and pitching upon a very convenient ground gave battel to the Romans, who by reason that they despaired of pardon, had much ado to overcome them. By this foil of the Iceni, others before unserted were contained in obedience, and Offerius led his Army against the Canst (a people living towards the Irish Sea) and wasting their grounds had passed on well night o the Irish Sea, when he was recalled by the hands of Getarzes. At this time also the Britains rebelled.

King of Chalcis dying, he bestowed that Kingdom upon Herods Nephew c. 26. &c. Agrippa the younger, for Judea his father's Kingdom was fill governed by Deputies. Tiberius Alexander, who succeeded Fadus, now gave place to Tolephus Anti-Cumanus, under whom the Tems, being affronted at the Paffeover by impu- quit. lib. 2. dent and fawcy Soldiers, mutined, but now, as ever, came to the worst : and Capp. 3,4. not long after their Countrey-men that dwelt at Rome were expelled thence by Claudius, and under their name as many think the Christians also. In Sueton at the the nineteenth year of his reign he married Agrippina his own Neice by his pra cap. 25. brother Germanicus, through the perswasion of Pallas his Freedman, which Tacitus Annal, out of his Prator ship, and the match was broken betwirt him and the Princesse, whereupon he shortly after killed himself. And a year after was Claudins perswaded by Pallas to adopt Nero his wive's son, though he had a son of his own, by name Britanicus, but two years younger. Pallas was so high Felix fent Go- flown in favour, that he procured his brother Felix to be fent Governour into Samaria, and afterwards got his power extended to Judea, Galile, and Perea, where he acted the part of a Tyrant, and having married feveral great Ladies, obtained also Drufilla sister to Agrippa. The Parthians now again at variance amongst themselves, and wearied with the Tyranny of Gatarzes, discord of the Brigantes (people inhabiting the North part of that now called England) the Ring-leaders of whom, when he had taken off, the rebellion was extinguished. But the Silures (inhabiting Southwales) would by no means be either allured or discouraged from waging War, trusting to the frength of Carattacus the greatest Prince amongst the Britains, who excelling as well in policy as the knowledge of the Countrey, transferred the War into the Territories of the Ordivices (now Northwales) as more convenient for him by reason of the Mountains and Rocks. Here he made a speech to his Officers, putting them in mind how their Ancestors had repulsed Casar the Dillator, and willing them to behave themselves at this time as the beginning of their liberty or eternal flavery. Till they came to strokes the Are reduced. Romans had the worst of it; but afterwards breaking into the Rampires they easily routed the Britains, and got a great victory, wherein the wife and daughter of Carattacus being taken, his brethren yielded them-

18. Carattacus committing himself into the hands of Carsifmunda, Idenibid. Carattacus be- Queen of the Brigantes, was treacherously bound, and delivered up to the cap 36.60. trayed is car-Conquerours in the ninth year of the War, wherein he had got himself an exceeding great name. Being carried to Rome, the people was called together as to some famous show, and the Pratorian bands were placed along for the reception of him. The prayers of the rest were by reason of fear, base, and nothing favouring of Nobility : but Caraltacus, neither hanging down his head, nor craving any mercy, when he stood before the Emperour's Tribunal spake to this purpose. If my moderation in prosperity had been as great as my Nobility and Fortune, I had come rather as a friend into this Citie. than a Captive: neither would you have disdained to receive me with Covemants of peace, being a Prince descended of Noble Progenitors, and a Com-His speech to mander over many Nations. My present state is, as to me dishonourable, so to you mainificent. I have had horfes, men, armour, and wealth: What the Empemarvel if against my will I have lost them all? For if you will rule over all men, it followeth that all men must abide servitude. If presently I had yielded, and been delivered into your hands, neither had my Fortune nor your clory been very remarkable: and oblivion would have followed my punishment. But if you save me alive, I shall be an example of your elementy for ever.

ned.

19. Upon those words Cafar pardoned him, his wife, and brethren. And He is pardothey being all unbound did their reverence likewise unto Agrippina (who fat aloft not far off in an high seat to be seen) giving her the like praises, and in the same degrees of stile as they did the Emperour himself. Surely a strange precedent without any example, faith the Historian, that a woman should fit and command the Roman Enfigns. But the carried her felf as a fellow and affociate in the Empire gotten by her Progenitors. After this the Senate was called together, and the Fathers made long and glorious discourses, as touching the Captivity of Carattacus. Neither was this leffe honourable, as they affirmed, than when Pub. Scipio shewed Siphax, L. Paulus, Perfes, or whofoever else exhibited Conquered Kings to the view of the People. As for Offerius, it was decreed he should be honoured with triumphal Ornaments. But his Fortune soon changed, either for that he grew secure upon the Captivity of fo considerable a man, or the Enemy was highly moved to revenge it. For a party left to awe the Silures was incompassed by the Brisains, and if again are up, help had not presently come in from the adjoyning Villages and Fortresses, had been utterly cut off, besides, that the Commander in Chief with eight Centurions, and many others were flain. Not long after fuch as went to gather forrage, and several Companies sent into their aid, were also routed, and the Enemy was hardly restrained at length by the help of the Legions. After this hapned many skirmishes, as they met by chance, or were desirous of booty, and two Auxiliary Cohorts were intercepted, with the spoils of which other Nations were drawn to revolt, and not long after Offerius frent with care and pensivenesse died. To his place Claudius preserred A. Didius, who Kkkkk found things but in a bad condition, through the boldnesse of the Silures. But Subdued. the Britains falling out amongst themselves were several times overthrown. and then kept under.

20. Claudius, the twelfth year of his reign ending, bestowed on Agrippa Topeth. Antithe Tetrarchy of Philip, as also that of Lysanias, taking Chalcis from him quit, lib. 20. after he had governed it 4 years. After this he restored the Rhodians to their cap.s. former liberty upon their repentance, and eafed the Inhabitants of Ilium of lib.12, cap.64, all charges and tributes, as being the Authors of the Roman race. Noro 67, 68. pleaded the causes of both Cities, whose mother Agrippina now began to be discovered to her husband. He chanced in his drink to say that it was fatal to bim first to endure, and then to punish the wickednesse of his wives, and he repented of his folly in preferring her fon before his own. She berhinking her felf how to escape the danger, first gave him poison in Mushrooms his beloved meat , but it passing through him, she used the skill of Medophon the A, D.'ss.

Claudius poy-Physician, vyho as it vvere to help him to vomit put something down his V. c. 807. foned by Agrippina his wife, throat dipped in a most violent poylon, and so he died, who within a small time upon a very small account had put to death 35 Senators and 300 suction in clasacr.

His Chara-

Knights. He vvas a manithat before his coming to the Government vvas de- dio. spised by his relations as some imperfect thing, and afterwards vvas but counted blockish, and despicable by others, yet sometimes he would judge very vvilely and circumspectly, and so far profited in liberal studies (which he very much plied) that he verote divers things, and amongst the rest a learned defence of Cifere in answer to the books of Afinine Pollio. He vvas fearfull above measure, so that (amongst other demonstrations) when Camillus, who attempted a Rebellion, fent to him a reprochfull, and menacing Letter, willing him to lay down the Government, he was in doubt, and feriously consulted whether he should not do it: and this made him put many to death upon idle and malicious accufations. He was the very flave of his Freedman (vyhereof Narciffus and Pallas vvere chief) vyhorather reigned than he; for, they managed all things according to their pleasure or luft, be-flowing favours upon vyhom they pleased, and killing any though never so vyorthy, or nearly allied to him. He excused his anger and previshnesse by a Du-blick Declaration. He was so forgetfull that he would several times ask for such as he had put to death. He would eat and drink at any time, or in any place: he vvas a great player at Dice, of which Art he fet forth a book. He died on the third before the Ides of October, in the 64 year of his age, when he had reigned thirteen years, eight moneths, and twenty dayes, in the 807 year of the Civie, the 55 after the birth of Chrift, M. A finius Marcellus and M. Acilius Aviola being Confuls. 21. Now that we may note briefly such Ecclesiastical matters as fell out Ecclesiafical in the reign of Claudius. In his first year James the brother of John was, as matters in his vve faid, put to death by Agrippa, and Peter being cast by him into prison was delivered by an Angel. In his fecond, Paul returned out of Arabia to reign. Damafons, vvhence he came to Jerusalem to see Peter. Hence he vvent to Tarfus, and not long after to Antioch, being fent for by Barnabas, who had been sent thither by the Apostles. In his third year Paul preached for a vyhole year at Antioch, together with Barnabas. In his fourth, Paul carried - the Almes of the faithfull from Antioch to Terusalem, because of the Famine foretold by Agabus. Thence returning to Antioch, he was fent with Barnabas to preach the Gospel in Asia. In this fourth then, and the fifth year of Claudins he preached Christ in Cyprus, Pamphylia, Pisidia, Iconium, Eystra. and Derbe, and returned to Antioch. In the fixth he was fent from Antioch to Jerufalem to the Council with Barnabas, whence returning to Antioch he reprehended Peter, who came thither a little after him, for his diffembling, and not long after event with Silas into Afia to confirm the Churches he had founded. In the seventh of Claudius he preached Christ in Crese, and through Pisidia, Pamphylia, and Phrygia, visited the Churches, converted the Galasians to the Faith. In the eighth he came to Treas, and thence into Macedonia, Where at Philippi, as also at Theffalonica, at Beraa, and then at Ashens he preached the Gospel. About the end of the ninth year he came to Corinth, where he found Aquila and Pricilla, with whom he stried half a year preaching the Gospel, and thence wrote both his Epistles to the Thessa. lonians. In the eleventh year he came from Corinib to Ephesus with Aquila and Prifeilla, whom there leaving, he went to Jerusalem to the Feast, Thence he returned to Antioch and Ephefus through Phrygia, Galatia, and the higher parts of Afia. Being at Ephefus in the twelfth year, there he continued two years till the tumult railed by Demerrius. Hence he wrote his Epiffle to the Galatians; the former alfo to the Corinthians, and to Titus, but about the end of the following year; as also the first to Timothy. About the end also of the thirteenth year, or the beginning of the following, he came into Macedonia and Achaia, to receive the collections to be carried to Forusalem. And hence (from Corinth) being to passe into Asia, he wrote his Episse to the Romans about the end of the following year. About the end also of the fourteenth year he was imprisoned at Jerufalem. And being caried to Cafarea was there kept prisoner by Felix for two years. Concerning the Chronology of these accounts, Ludovicus Cappellus is by Students to be confulted, in his Historia Apostolica Illustrata.

22. St. Peter the Apostle is reported in the second year of Claudius to have come to Rome, having been formerly Bishop of Antioch, in which Sea he was succeeded by Evodins one of the 70 Disciples, of whom also Paul maketh mention: some say that he continued Bishop at Rome 25 years, viz. Of St. Peter his twelve under Claudius, and thirteen under Nero. Perhaps he might come to Di st. Peter nu-being at nome, Rome at this time, but that he staied there 25 years is but to be taken as a fable. For we read that Claudius banished all Jews from Rome, and he being a Jew, must needs give place, or abide the danger. We do not find he had any trouble, and this was by reason of his absence. It's probable that he went away when Aquila and Pricilla departed Rome, and met St. Paul at Corinth. Eusebius indeed often mentioneth his being at Rome, and writeth, that he suffered Mattyrdom together with Paul under Nero. This might be at his second return unto Rome, so that we may count 25 years from his first coming under Claudius unto the end of his Mattyrdom under Nero; it being, to say truth, better thus to reconcile Writers, than flatly to deny all, or to fay, he never was at Rome. Here he met with Simon Magus again, and confounded him, as it's reported. This man being a Samaritan of the Village Gitton, was baptized by Philp the Deacon in Samaria. He would have Fully bought of Peter the gift of the Holy Ghoft; and thence of him arofe the Eufeb. 1.2.c.1. word Simony. He came to Rome in the time of Clandius, where calling himself a God, he was honoured with an Image, having this inscription, Simoni Deo Santto. He had to his yoke-mate one Helene, by froncing called Iden c. 12,13, Selen, a Witch and a common Harlor, whom he called the Principal understanding. He said unto the Samaritans that he was the Father, unto the Ireneus I, I. Jone, that he was the Son descended from Heaven, and unto the Gentules, Cao. that he was the Holy Ghoft. Peter foiled him in Samaria, whence for shame Epiphan.l. t. he fled, and leaving Samaria and Indaa, he failed from East to West, and tom. 2 heres, 21. came to Rome, under Clandius, where Peter mer him. Peter it's faid had much to do with him in the presence of Nero. Some write that he had three conflicts with him, and in the end Simon feeing himfelf foyled, and his witchcraft not at all to prevail, told them he would leave their City, and flye up into the Heavens whence he came. Whereupon at a certain day appointed, he climbed up into the high Capitol, whence he took his flight by the means of witchcraft, and the spirits that bore him up in the air. The People at the fight hereof wasamazed. But Peter fell down and prayed God that bly died. Now again to the course of our History. 23. The death of Clandins was kept private by Agrippina, till such time as the Empire could be secured to Nero her fon, who then, at noon time of Tacitus Annal. the day, the doors of the Palace being opened fodainly, accompanied with 1.14.c.ult.

his witchcraft might be revealed to the World. He had no sooner spoke, but down came Simon Mague, and was broken to pieces, fo that he there mifera-

Kkkkk 2

Burrbus

Burrhus Captain of the Guard, went to the watch, by which at the instance of the Captain, he was received with lucky acclamations. Being pur into a litter, he was thence caried to the Camp, where speaking as the time required, and promifing a donative to the Soldiers, after the example of his Pre-de effors, he was faluted Emperour, and presently owned by the Senate, and in the Provinces. Claudins his testament he never published, lest the deed some of the Soldiers at first paused, and looking back, asked for Brita-

New fucceed-People should be moved by the injury offered to Britanicus, to whom his fa-eth Claudius. ther was fo superlatively unnatural, as to prefer his wives son before him. In-years after he had been adopted by Claudius.

him to the Camp.

ielf.

Now falleth

to Vologe sus the Parthian being resoled to fight for the Diadem, the Armenians also inclining to him, Corbulo took several Forts, and besieged Artaxatathe Metropolis, which, though the Inhabitants opened the gates, and for this were spared, yet because it could not be held for the greatnesse of it, was burnt and razed. Nevo for thefe things was faluted Imperator, puffing great honours were decreed to him, and a far greater stir was made by the slat-of his reign, Nero fell in love with Poppea Sabina, the daughter of P. Ol-line, though she named herself after her Grand-father by the mother's side, because more eminent. He came first acquainted with her by the commendations of Otho her husband, who also had been too familiar with her in the in tore with Poppea, which dayes of her first husband Rufus Crispinus: She incensed him more against

27. The same year that these things were done by Corbulo, being the fifth bited with them, about the right and privilege of the City. They pretended that Hered the founder of it was a Jew, and those answered, that ere he named it Cafarea, it was called the Tomer of Straign, at what time none of the Jews inhabited it: and the Syrians by a great fum of money procured Beryllus (who had been Nero's School-mafter) to get them the Emperours letters, whereby was abrogated that Privilege which the Jews had formerly enjoyed with the Syrians. Herewith the fews incented, were still seditious till the beginning of the Warre. Great motions at this time fell out in the East. The Parthians had set upon Armenia, having driven away Rhadamiliu nephew to Minbridates, whom Glaudius had fet over that Kingdom, Tacitus ut fu-and who was killed by the other, that he might succeed him. Nero sent to preserve that Country Domitius Corbuto, who for two or three years had little to do, because the Parthians deserred the War. But now Tiridates brother nicus; but finding no body to stir in his behalf, joyned themselves to the militude. Nero came to the Government, being seventeen years old, six yone c. 7. 24. Nero at first caried it exceeding well towards People and Magistrates, Idem c, 10. governing according to the pattern of Augustus, whose prescript he profesfed he would observe. He omitted no occasion of shewing liberality, clemency, and mildnesse, insomuch that Trajan himself admiring his first five years, averred, that All Princes came short of them. Heavy tributes he either Aurelius Vicame thort of took off or leftened, distributed money to the People, gave annual stipends stor. to impoverished Senators, and to the Pratorian bands Corn every moneth freely. Being defired to subscribe to the execution of a condemned person, Oh, faid he, I wish I knew not letters. But this good beginning is rather to be attributed to Burrhus and Seneca (the later of whom, after his adoption, was his School-mafter) who being in power mutually helped each other.

Book IV.

A grippina thought by virtue of his name to rule indeed, and at the beginning Tatitus Annal. poyfoned Silanus Proconful of Afia, and made away Narelflus; without his 1.13.6.1, 6.6.

knowledge the former, and the later without his confent; and had gone further, but that Burrhus and Seveca interposed. Not long after, jealousies arose betwirt them, for he falling in love with Aste a Freed-woman, and distasting such as the leaned upon; removed Palles her Minion from publick imployment, which to far exafterated her, that the upbraided him with Britanicur, as most fit to enjoy his Fathers seat. This seat she told her son he now His Mother enjoyed by her means, and not sparing to lay open all the evils, as she said, of and he fall at their unhappy Family, her own mariage and forcery; the took it as happy for the gods and her, that Britanicus was living, and protested the would go with

25. This, rogether with Britaniens his frowardnesse (who being fourteen Identified als years old, began to be fentible of his condition, and to move compaffion towards himself) made Nero resolve to dispatch him out of the way, and for that he could not do it openly to his brother, he procured poylon to be given him, which working downwards without any great incommodity, he caufed to be boiled to that height, that it instantly killed him the second time, whist He poyloneth he himself face at supper with him, as knowing nothing. He made him be buried the same, though a very rainy, night, his mean furieral being provided beforehand. Agrippina very much troubled that her refuge was gone, was Britanicus. shortly after accused to her for, as intending by a mariage with Rubellins Planim (who was as near to Augultus as Nero himfelf) to invade the Soveralgn-Being something gone in drink when he heard of it, 'he would have had her killed out of hand, which being hindred by Burrhus, the next day she flourly defied any such design, and the wound of jealousie for the time was skinned over. After two years, Nero began to discover what his Nature Iden ibid. 15.

Beginneth to prompted him to Difguifing himself in a servile habit, he ran about the discover him- City by night to Taverns and Stews, accompanied with such as himself; where taking away things by force, as also cutting and slashing such as they mer, he 26. A little before those things , he sent Porcius Festus into Judaa to suc- Josephus Anhimself came into danger of life.

ceed Felix, who being out of his office, was accused at Rome by such Jaws tiquit. Lao.c.s. as dwelt at Cafarea. Nero pardoned him through the interceffion of his brother Pallas, who was as yet in favour. About the fame time hapned a great ceedeth Felix diffention betwirt the Jews of Cafaren and the Syrians , which there inhaincenfeth him his mother, because she feared, that as long as she lived, he would not dirmisse Off avia and marry her felf. Sometimes she laid at him by divers crimimother. nations, as otherwhiles jeered him as a Pupil, who not not onely wanted command and authority, but also liherty. Some have suspected, that Agrip- Tacitus Annal. pina fought to commit incest with her fon. How true foever this was, he now 114.6.1,3,006. began to be absolutely weary of her, to shun her company, and within a while resolved to make her away, though solicitous how to do it. At length Suction in Me-Anicetus his Freed-man and General of the Fleet at Misenum, acquainted ione 6.34. him that a ship might be so framed, as to break into pieces and let her fall into the Sea. This ship was thus made, and she brought into it by her son, under colour of doing her honour, but the upper part of the ship falling chanced to misse her, though it killed one of her attendants. One of her maides knowing nothing of the design, cried out, that the was Agrippina, hoping thereby to fave her felf, and was thereupom killed by the Oars; but she her felf being filent, escaped them, and swom to Land. Her escape struck Nero with great consternation, who called up Burrhus and Seneca to give their advice. Whether they knew of the thing before or no is uncertain. Some fay, Seneca asking Burrbus whether the Soldiers should not be commanded to kill her, he tering Fathers than was convenient.

the lay. One of them first bruised her head with a club, another drawing his fword, the ftretched out her belly and bad him ftrike that, and fo died of many wounds. Some report, that her fon viewed her dead body exactly, and He causeth his mother to paffed his judgement upon every part. She had been a very lewd and ambi- A. D. 60. tions woman, and now reaped the fruit thereof, according her own defire. V. C. 812. For confulring on a time about the fortune of this her fon sithe Chaldeans told her, that He should reign, but kill his mother, to which she answered, Occidat modo imperet: Let him kill me fo he but reign. After this wicked fact he was continually tormented in his Conscience, consessing often, that he was haunted by the Furies, which did beat him with fire-brands.

28. He excused himself to the Senate, laying great loads of heavy accusa-; tions upon her. But the Fathers not onely excused but commended the deed, answered, they would do no such thing to the daughter of Germanicus, and that Anicetus, rather should perform his promise of disparching her. This he readily undertaking, accompanied with two others, went to the Village where and People flacter hm.

The Senate nay to such fordidnesse of spirit was both Senate and People degenerated. Tacitus ut suthat returning to the Citie, they met him with as great Pomp, as if he had Pra c.12,13. come from some notable victory; for the several Tribes, and the Senate received him, their Wives and Children being placed according to their Sex and Age. Hereupon he grew excessive proud, as Lord over so many slaves, and prefently unmasking himfelf, without any care of his actions, fell into fuch disorders, as he appeared rather a Devil incarnate than a man. He became a Stage-player, learning that arr, and exercifing himself therein in publick continually. He ordained Games to be folemnized at Rome every fifth year, in imitation of the Greeks, and called them Neronia; persons of all forts, and degrees, being conftrained to be actors. These being continued night and day, most horrid things were committed, Prince, Senate, and People, either through affection or fear, not onely giving way, but compelling to fuch to Archelans King of Cappadocia, with whom having left a Guard, and fettled matters, he departed into Syria to succeed Viniaius the Governour.

lator of Corbulo for Military glory, had the chief Command, and fought to equal the acts of the other in Armenia, by chastizing and taming the Britains.

He fet upon the Isle Mona (now called Anglesey) peopled with strong Inhabitants, and the receptacle of all Fugitives, where he was received with multitudes of men on the shore, & with women running about like furies with fire-brands in their hands, having their hair spred about their shoulders; the Druides also, the antient Sear of whom that Island was, powring out plenty of curses.

The Soldiers fomething terrified at first, being exhorted by their General, eafily broke through, and diffipated this furious Company: then placed he a Garrison in the Island, and cut down the Groves where they were wont to His enormi-

Corbulo prosper filthinesse. Corbulo at this time prospering in Armenia had Tigranocerta reth in Armenia had Togranocerta reth in Armenia had to him, and then placed in that Kingdom, Tigranos Grand-son

The year following, being the $14 of the Citie, wherein Casonius Pains and Petronius Turpilianus were Consuls, the Romans received a sad defeat in 29. Of late the Lieutenants of this Province had made but small pro- confule Tacigresse in their Conquests; A. Didius Avitus the Successor of Plantius contenting bimself with what was done before, and Verannius, who followed 31.6 Xiphihim, making onely fome excursions upon the Silures; for he was prevented lin. in Exceptis by death from any further fervice. But now Paullinus Suetonius the Emu- ex Dione,

Suetonius in Britain Subduing the Si-

revolteth

offer mans bloud, and confult their Gods by the entrails of some Captive. But whilest these things were adoing, news came to Succonius of the revolt of His Province his Province. For, Prafatagus King of the Iceni, that his Kingdom and family might be freed from molestation, left Cafar his Heir, together with his two daughters. But it hapned far otherwise, his Kingdom being wasted by A.D. 62. Centurions, and his house by Slaves: his wife Boadicia (otherwise called Ol. 210, ann. 1. Boodicia, Boudicia, Voudica, and Rundnica), was whipped, his daughters de- V. c. 814. floured, his chiefest subjects spoiled of their Goods and Lands, and his kindred counted no better of than flaves. Provoked by these things, and fear ofworse when they should be reduced into the form of a Province, they took Arms, stirring up the Trinebantes to rebellion. Others also joyned with them, having he retofore combined to recover their liberty out of hatred to the old superannuated Soldiers, who being planted as a Colony at Camalodunum, committed grievous outrages against them, and these were rather cherished by the Army than otherwise, in hope of the like liberty for the time to come. But this Colony not being fenced by any fortifications, the founders having rather looked at the pleafantnesse of the situation than commodiousnesse of the ground, the Britains accounted it no great matter to de-

> 30. The Camalodunians being terrified by feveral prodigies, defired aid Tacitus ut fuof Catus Decianus the Governour in Suetonius his absence. He sent them pra capti 22 but 200 men, and those but meanly Armed, and they neglected fill to raise Sueton, in Naany fortifications, their Counfels being confounded by such as were ingaged rome cap.39. in the plot. Being then befer round by the Natives, all things were burnt and destroyed,

And Wirulamium.

CRYS, II.

destroyed, and Petilius, Cerealis coming to their relief with the ninth Legion Camalodunum the Colony was utterly defeated, all the foor being cut in pieces, and the horse with himfelf glad to run away, to the Camp; whereupon, Catus passed over into Gall, having by his avarice been the great cause of this desection. The same defeat was given to Verulamium (out of the ruins of which role St. Albani) a Town free of the Citie of Rome; for the Britains, patting by Castels and places of defence, fet upon such as were most obnoxious to their fury. Ar both places, were maffacted, 70000 persons, none being taken or fold after the cultom, of War, but, either put to the fword, hanged, burnt, or crucified as Malefactors. Succonius passed through the midt of his Enemies to Londinium (now London), a Town not then notable in respect of the Colony, but for multitude of Merchants, and plenty of Traffick very famous. Perceiving it but badly provided of Soldiers, although he once thought to make it the lear of the War, he lest it, being not prevailed with to stay either by the prayers or tears of the Inhabitants. For, resolving with the loss of one Town to preserve the rest, he took all along with him that could go and all others, whom either Sex or Age, or the pleasantnesse of the places detained were destroyed by the Enemy. Having got together an Army of 10000 man, he refolved to venture a battel with all expedition; and for that purpose made his choice of convenient ground. Beadicia carrying her two daughters in the Chariot with her about to the Companies, told them it had been usual before for the Brigains, to fight under the condust of women, but the was now in another capacity than her Angestors, being not to fight for a Kingdom, but as one of the ordinary fort to revenge her loft liberty, her own firipes, and the violence offered to her daughters. As for her felf she said she was resolved to win the field, or die; as for men, they might live if they pleased, and be slaves. Succonius on the other side confidering the weight of the Enterprize, was not filent. 21. The Romans, though far inferiour in number, yet in Military know- Tacitus ut lege and Discipline for exceeding the Britains, put them to the worlt, and prins capp. 37, made of them areas flaughter by reason of the difficulty of flight; for those 38. having brought their wives to behold the battel, and be eye-witneffes of their valour, they had placed them in Waggons about the Army, Some reported that fearcely fewer then 80000 of the Conquered were flain, and of the Conquerors about 400, and Beadicia ended her life by poylon. Afterwards, the Army being increased by a great supply sent over by Casar, wasted

the Countrey with fire and fword, which was also forely oppressed by famine; for being intent upon the War, the Britains had neglected the fowing of Corn, hoping also to enjoy the Provisions of the Enemy. For all this they were not forward to ask Peace, being incouraged by fulins Cassilianus, who being sent to succeed Casus, disagreed so far with Sustanius, and so illed him to those at Rome, that he wrote they must not expect an end of the War

till some one was sent to succeed him, attributing all mishaps to his unfitnesse, and all successe rothe good Fortune of the Commonwealth, To Turpilianus fucceeding him is flothfull.

feareth the Britains in barrel.

Albinus Succoedech Feftus.

view then the condition of Britain, was Polyclatus the Freed man of Noro fent over, who coming in with a great train feemed terrible to the Roman Soldiers, but ridiculous to the Britains, who burning with affection to liberry, and as yet ignorant of the power of fuch, wondred that the General and Army (which had put an end to fuch a War); would obey flaves. Sustantus was communded to deliver up his Army to Turpilianus, who was even now out of the Confulfhip, and neither provoking nor being provoked covered flothfull idlenesse, as Tacione telleth us, with the specious, and comely name of Peace. 32. The year after was Albinus fent into Judga to succeed Fosius, who died in his Government. About the same time Agrippa (who had power Fosephus Antiafter his Uncle of Chalcis to bestow the High Priesthand on whomfoever he quit lib.20. pleased) gave it to Ananus son of that Annas or Ananus, who beyond ex- cap.8. ample having himself enjoyed the Office, had five sons, who every one of them executed the same. This young Ananus being a Sadduce, as also very Poppaa.

newed.

kednesse.

bold and cruel, conceiving he had got a convenient opportunity (Festivs being dead, and Albinus not yet arrived) called a Council, and condemned James the Just James the brother of Jefus Chrift, as Josephus writeth, with some others, as fames the Juni suilty of impiery, to be floned. This att displeased, faith the Historian, all A.D. 63: procurement good men, and especially such as were most studious of the Law, who delired V. C. 815. of Agrippa that he would command Ananus to forbear the like for the time of Anamus the to come : fome going also to meet Albinus, told him that the High-Priest had no authority to call a Council, whereupon he wrote to him very angrily,

High-Prieft. and threatned him, upon which account Agripps the King removed him from his Office after the third moneth. At this time died Burrbus at Rome, Taising Annal. not without suspicion of poylon, and Seneca's power was weakned by the losse tib.14. capp.51, Burrhus dieth. of that conjunction, whereby they had mutually strengthned the hands of 52,000. each other. Seneca was now backbited, and by Nero fleighted, of whom he defired leave to withdraw himfelf, having been with him fourteen years, and he offered to give up his great effate into his hands (for that had brought him

To far into envy ;) but Nero having learnt, and practifed diffimulation, under Mere marrieth colour of respect denied his Petition. Now did Nero marry Poppas, whom all this while he had kept as his Concubine, and dismissed Ottavia loaded with acculations of barrennesse and greater Crimes; and when the people troubled at it grew seditious, he caused her to be put to death in that fatal Island Pandateria. The same year also as 'tis believed he poysoned the Chief of the Liberti or Freed-men, Peryphorus, because he was against his marrying Poppaa, and Pallas, for that living very long, he had scraped together a vast sum of 33. At this time were the firs renewed in Armenia. For Vologefes fee- Tacitus Annal.

ing his brother thus beaten off, and Tigranes fet up in his flead, had invaded lib 15, cap, 1, the Countrey to revenge the injury offered to the line of the Arfacida, Cor- 2,3,60. bulo, though very warily, yet refifted and repelled him, when Celennius Pasus was fent to defend that Countrey, who by his ignorance in Military matters and rashnesse undid all. Being besieged, he was glad to Covenant for his preservation to quit Armenia, and remove the Garrisons thence, which done, The ftirs in Nero was to be sent to. Yet so ridiculous and degenerate were they at Rome, Armenia 10-

as to erect Trophies over the Parthians, though they knew nothing of the fuccesse, either one way or other. The Parthian Ambassadors came to Rome to defire that (as they hinted) which had been gotten by force, but without effect, for War was decreed against them to be managed by Corbulo; yet were they dismissed with gifts, so as there might be hope, that, if Tiridaies himself would intreat for the Diadem, it should not be in vain. Corbulo again invaded Armenia, at which the Parthians affrighted came to a Treaty, wherein it was agreed that Tiridates laying down his Diadem at the feet of Nere's Statue should not receive it without his leave. Nere now growing now worse and worse, broke out into most horrid impieties, well nigh beyond all belief. 4. The next year being the 817 of the Citie, the 65th after the birth Idem ibid.

of Christ, and of his own reign the 10. C. Lecanius Bassus, and M. Licinius Cap 37,38, Crassus being Consuls, acting the common Stage-player, and giving up him- . felf to all luxury, and unheard-of pollutions, amongst the rest he married him- Sueton in No. 1 felf as a woman to one of his filthy crue, called Pythagoras, all things being rone cap. 38. provided and celebrated as at a marriage. He made himself also the husband of Sporms, from whom he took as much of the Male as possible, and ordered him to be brought to him in a Veil as a Bride. Being offended at the defor-Mero's wic-mity of the old buildings, and the narrownesse of the streets, or else to feed his cruel eye with so sad a spectacle as he had read to have hapned at the fiege of Troy, he caused the Citie to be set on fire, which burning fix dayes and seven nights, of the fourteen divisions four onely remained whole, the 4.D. 65. and feven nights, of the fourteen divinous four oneity remained whole, the Villar, other being washed, or defaced, with the sury of the flame. He beheld the Idem ibid. fire from the Tower of Macenas, and very merry at the beauty of it, as he cap. 16. termed it, in a Player's habit fung the destruttion of Ilium. This calamity Tacitus at fabeing generally attributed to him as the cause, he accused the Christians tra cap.44.

Setting Rome thereof, and raised the First Persecution, corturing them with most exquisite on fire, he ac- kinds of punishment. About this time he sent Geffius Florus into Judaato fucceed Albinus, who defiring to gratifie them of Ferusalem, for all the mispersecuteth chief he had done, ere his departure, brought out all the prifoners, whereof the Christithose that were committed for any capital offence he put to death, but the rest he fined onely and difmiffed; whereby all the Gaols being thus emptied, the Country was filled with thieves more than before. The year following was discovered a conspiracy against Nero, which gave him occasion further to indulge his cruel humour.

25. Who was the Author of it is uncertain, as also upon what particular grounds it was hatched, though all the persons bore him malice, as they thought Iden ibid. 49, they had reason. But Lucan the Poet (who wrote the Civil Wars betwixt of the Cafar and Pompey, and was nephew to Seneca by his brother Annaus Mela) A confpiracy was aggrieved that Nero envied him the glory he had got by his Verses; and against him. feveral others joyned with them out of love to Cn. Pifo the head of the party. It was discovered by Milichni the Freed-man of Scenimus, who had commanded him to fcour his dagger, and provide necessaries for wounds; whereupon some would have had Pifo to have gone to the Rostra, and laid open the Tyrant to the People, to obtain their help; but he refused. The next after A. D. 66. him that was put to death was Annaus Seneca the Philosopher and Nero's V. C. 818. School-mafter School-mafter, not being convicted of any treason, though accused by one Natalis, as it's thought, to please Casar, such an earnest desire his Scholar had to dispatch him, having formerly without effect attempted it by poyson. Being commanded to dye, he did it very chearfully, though he was forced to feek for death several wayes. For, he had so starved himself with abstinence, that he could not bleed, and poyfon would not work upon him; but at length entering into a bath he was stifled with the sume of it, having all this while discoursed, even to his last, according to his wonted elegancy, such excellent things, as being then taken from his mouth, came afterwards abroad, Such was the end of this excellent Philosopher, concerning the character of whom, Students are rather to truftto Cornelius Tacitus than to Dio, if Tuffus Lipsius be a competent Judge. Dio accuseth him of extortion, adultery with Agrippina, and what not? He maketh him a Sodomite, and to have taught his Scholar that wickednesse, as also the cause and procurer of the death of Agrippina, and a cart-load of other Calumnies, faith * Lipfins, doth * Quam confiathe idle man heap upon him, contrary to the vettef and mina of au men, what ad Taciti An-cause was there of this harred? or what reward had he for lying? for Senc-mal.l. 14.6 the idle man heap upon him, contrary to the belief and mind of all men. What le in Comment. him against ca lived fo long before him, that he neither could injure him nor oblige him. omnino ad lis. I believe, faithhe, it was a certain perversity of judgement and manners, which also set him keen against Cicero and all good men. I desire that youth may take heed, and so to gather the flowers of Antiquity from these fields, that they do not also gather poison. But as for what concerneth the riches and galantry of Seneca, see Reader, and read his excellent Treatise De vita beata, which he wrote with no other design, than to stop the mouthes of these Calumniators, especially from the seventeenth Chapter. Thus hath Lipsus prevented us in our Apology for this excellent person, in whose vindication much might be faid. 36. Pompeia Paullina the wife of Seneca (Dio calleth her a most noble woman, perhaps the daughter of Pompeius Paullinus, to whom Tacitus givet h the title of Consularis, and who was fer over the publick customs or imposts) cut also her veins, that she might die with him, but Nero beafing her no malice as it happened, fent some to stop the bleeding, and recover her. Seneca had another brother besides the father of Lucan, who was also put to death. This was Annaus Novasus, otherwise called Junius Gallio from his adoptive Father, being also mentioned in the Alts of the Aposties, and then Governour of Achaia. Their Father was M. Annieus Seneca a Rhetorician of Coruba in Spain, whose Suaferies and Controversies are yet extant, joyned to his fons Works. Nero proceeded in his madnesse and cruelties. Acting the Stage-player still he was reviled at his return home by Poppa ah iswife, LIIII

Lipfius his

Dio.

The heighth

of his wickednesse.

Poppea.

811

for which he kicked her great with child, and thereupon she miscaried. Then Were killeth raged he against many of greatest note, amongst whom was Mela the father of Lucan (who had formerly perished for the conspiracy) and this allaied the grief which was conceived for the death of many others, by the pellilence that now raged, because they seemed thereby well delivered from the surv and rage of the Prince, who now neither used choice nor measure in his slaughters. Being puffed up with the successe of his cruelty, he said, that None of his Predeceffors knew their power, hinting also, that he meant to destroy the remnant of the Senators. It was believed he had a great defire to deliver up quick men to be devoured of an Agaptian, a monstrous eater of raw flesh, or any other thing that was given him.

37. Neither was there wanting to him luxury and effeminatenesse. suitable to his cruelty, nor any other vice, whereby the truth of that faying of Domitius his father might appear, who hearing of his birth, faid, that Of himfelf and Agrippina could proceed nothing but accursed, detestable, and to the dammage of the Commonwealth. For in him feemed to meet and be conjoyned not onely all the vices of his own family (which of late had been too pregnant of them?) but all the corruption of his Country, from the beginning to his very time. He lengthened his feafls from Noon to Midnight, accounting no use of riches but in the abuse of them. Such he thought to be fordid and base, as took account of their expenses, and he extolled and admired his Uncle Cam, for spending in so short a time so vall sums, as had been hoarded up by Tiberius. To Tiridates that came to Rome to take the Diadem from his hands, he allowed an incredible fum for his daily expenses, and as profusely gratified him at his departure. He put on no garment twice, plaid for vast sums at dice, fished with a golden net, when he journyed any whither, he never had leffe than 1000 Caroches in his train, and he caused his Idem ibide. 31, mules to be shod with Silver. But his house exceeded all belief, having built 4 $2.

promises of discovering a vast treasure in Africk, which Dido the Queen flying out of Tyre should thence bring with her. But being deceived, as was likely, with so foolish a project, he took such courses as became Nero to recruit his coffers. 38. When Tiridates was departed into Armenia, he went into Greece, there to act Tragedies, to fing, and run races in the Chariot. Running in the Olympick Games, although he fell from his Chariot, yet he was rewarded with a crown as Victor. He took from Apollo the Cyrrhaan Territory, and defaced the place whence they were wont to receive Oracles, killing men at the hole whence the blaft came. He attempted to cut through the Isthmus of Peloponnesus, digging first himself, and carying out the first basket of Earth upon his shoulders: but with the same successe as others had before him. When he was in Achaia news came from Ceftius Gallus President of Syria concerning the rebellion of the Tews. Being long vexed with the injuries of fish-ponds it was incredible, garnished also with Gold and precious stones.

To the madnesse of this expence he was incouraged by one that made him fair

the Deputies and Governours, they could no longer contain themselves. Christ's blood lying heavy upon them, and crying for vengeance, they them-The Jews re-felves executed part of it. For such robberies in the Country, such and so A. D. 67. many murders in the City were committed, and such delusions by false Pro- V. c. 819. phets prevailed amongst them, as after a wonderful manner turned their estate upside down, drew upon them the malice of their enemies, and demonstrated the high displeasure of Almighey God. The particular occasion of their rehellion was from Florus their Governour, who through the infinuations of Vide Josephum his wife into Poppas having procured that Office, caried himself as worthy of de bells Judais fuch a Master. He slew to that height of impudence and wickednesse, as by col. 2. c. 13. The occasion a publick Crier to give free leave to rob and steal through the whole Country, on condition that he might have part of the booty. It was his defign to provoke them to rebel, that his impieties might thereby be covered. After he and the Townsmen of Casarea had grievously abused such Jews as there lived, ir our of the ruines of the City. For length, for pleasantnesse of groves and lib.15, 6,42.

They chuse themfelves Captains,

he came to ferusalem with an Army, rifled the Forum, plundred the houses, killed the Inhabitants, whipped and hung up feveral, who, though Tems born, were made Knights of Rome, and all under presence that fome had reviled him for his cruelty. Not content herewith, he perswaded the People of Ferusalem to go out to meet, in a courteous manner, certain Soldiers that, were coming thither, to whom he fent, that they should not return their civility, that so they might be oftended, and give out words, which advantage he commanded them to take, and fall upon them. This was performed, and many perished, whom the Chief-priests and others with lamentable intreaties had perswaded to go forth, hoping thereby to please the Tyrant, and prevent the mischief. From this violence sprung the War, in the twelfth year of Nero's reign, the seventeenth of Agrippa, the second of Florus his Government, the 819 of the City, and 67 after the birth of Chrift, C. Suetonus Paulinus and L. Pontius Telesinus being Consuls.

- " INOMAIN LINDITE.

39. Some of those that were most eager after rebellion, assaulted a Castle Idem ibid.6.17, called Massada, and killing the Romans placed therein a Garrison of their 18, own. And in the Temple Eleanar the fon of Ananias the High-Prieft Captain of the Guard and a forward young man, perswaded the People no more to offer the facrifices which were wont to be offered for the good of the Romans. The Chief-Priest and Nobility distinated them all they could from rebellion, but profiting nothing, befought Agrippa and Florus to come and suppresse the sedition betimes, Florus glad to hear such news, gave no answer. Agrippa sent 3000 Horse, which being received into the upper part of the City, the Rebels took the lower part with the Temple, and after some adoe brake also into the upper quarters, burnt divers Palaces and publick houfes, and then befieged the Tower of Antony, which having taken within two dayes, they put the Garrison to the sword. After this they laid siege to the Kings Palace, whither Agrippa's Souldiers being retired, upon their desire they were dismissed. But the Romans yielding upon the Faith of Eleazar, were all cut in pieces contrary to his word, except Metilins their Captain, who begging hard for his life, promifed to be circumcized and turn Jen : and this was done on the Sabbath-day in September. On the same day were all in feveral pla- rm, and brought out bound to the People. Throughout all Syria the flatighters of the Tens were renewed. At Alexandria also a sedition being raised, 50000 Fews were flain in one day by two Roman Legions. 40. Cestius Gallus as soon as he heard of these motions, came with an Army into Indea, wherein taking some Towns he sate down before Jerusalem, at the Feast of Tabernacles. But though he might easily with a little patience have taken the City, yet raifed he his fiege, having neglected many opportunities. He departed to Amipatris, lofing many of his men by the way, that were cut off by the Jews who followed him close in the rear. With this fuccesse the Jons being elevated, created two Commanders to govern the City, viz. Joseph the fon of Gorion, and Ananus the High-Priest : and they fent several Captains and Governours into the Country, amongst whom

Great flaugh, the Jews of Cafarea maffacred by the inhabitants, to the number of above

ters of them 200000, not one being left alive; for those that escaped were taken by Flo-was Toseph, who wrote the history of this War. He fortified the several Towns of Galile, and indured as great a conflict as to his own person, with divers, both there and at Jerusalem, (who envying him the honour of his command, would have had him turned out) as he did afterwards with the Romans. But Cestim fent to Nero then in Achaia, as we faid, to let him understand the state of affairs, laying all the blame of the rebellion upon 41. Nero deliberating whom he should fend into Judaa, wanted Corbulo whom he had killed. At length he pitched on Vespasian, who having been trained up in Martial mattersall his youth, he thought him onely capable of fuch a charge, though a little before grievoully offended at him, for that he little regarded his finging (either departing from off the stage, or sleeping if there) he forbad him not onely his prefence; but also publickly to falure the meannesse of his birth and name, gave him this imployment. Vefvalian disparched away his son Tims to Alexandria, thence to bring forces into Vespasian sent Fudea, and he himself passing the Hellespont into Syria gathered together against them, the Roman Soldiers with Supplies from the Princes, and came to Ptolemais, where Titus teached him fooner than was expected for the Winter feafon. Nero returning towards Rome in Triumphant manner, after he had been two years in Greece, C. Julius Vindex a Gall by birth, but of Senatorian degree him. Hereupon he withdrew himfelf, and lurked out of the way in fear of his life; but Nero having now need of him, and not fearing him, because of .

amongst the Romans, incensed his Countrey-men against him, for that they groaned under his intolerable exactions, yet firiving not for the Principality himfelf, he offered it to Ser. Sulpicius Galba an old Soldier, and now Go-Vindex and vernour of the Tarraconian Province in Spain, who, as well for his own Galba conspire safety, as to gratifie ambition, accepted of it. Nero being come to Naples against 26%. heard of the conspiracy on that day he had killed his mother, & was then little moved at it; but feemed rather to rejoyce for the occasion that was thence offered to spoyl the rich Provinces of Gall. For though the Mathematicians had told him that he should be forsaken, yet he interpreted it of the losses fultained in Britain and Armenia; and some also promised him, though in this condition the Empire of the East, and some by name the Kingdom of Terusalgm; but most affirmed that things would go well at this time. He took nothing so ill in all the opprobrious speeches of Vindex, as to be called an unskilful Musician, &c, after the name of his family, Enobarbus; yet at length terrified by many melfages he returned to Rome. Now had he most horrid projects in his head, as of killing the Captains and Governours of Provinces, with all the Exiles, and all of Gallish Original at Rome; of poyloning the whole Senate in feafting, burning the Citie, and letting loose wild beafts upon the people, thereby to hinder the quenching of the flames. From these things he was thought to be terrified more by despair of accomplishing them, than out of any repentance concerning his purpole. In preparing for his expedition his especial care was for the choice of carriages wherein to convey his Concubines and inftruments for the stage. 42. When he heard of the revolt of the rest of the Armies, in a great rage taking some poyson with him in a Golden box, he left his house, and sending some of his trustiest servants to Oftia to make ready some ships, moved the Tribunes and Censurious of his Guard about flying with him; but fome flaggering at it and hanging backwards, others flatly refused it. Then he confidered whether he should not fly to the Parthian, or in an humble manner to Galba; or whether going to the Roftra in a mourning habit, he should not there ask pardon in as dolefull a manner as he could for what was pall? but he was fearfull to be pulled in pieces ere he could reach the publick meeting-place; and put off those thoughts till the next day. At night finding his Guards withdrawn, he started out of his bed, and sending his friends about to their Lodgings, went also himself; but none would answer; so that he returned to his Chamber, whence his attendants also were now fled, having taken away the furniture, and removed out of the way the box of poylon. Then defired he that some one would kill him, but none attempting it, Then, faith he, I have neither Friend nor Enemy, and run down as to throw himself into Tiber. But stopping ere he came there, he defired some turking hole wherein he might recover this spirits, and Phaon his Freedman offering him his assistance, he went with him to a Village four miles diffant in a disguise, hearing as he passed the prayers of the people for his destruction. Here being called on A.D. 69. to rid himfelf out of the way, and prevent the abuses which else would fall Ol, 211, anna. upon him, he ordered things to be prepared for his dead body, weeping, V.C. 821. and adding, Qualis Artifex perco? How excellent an Artift do I die? Understanding at length that he was declared an Enemy by the Senate, and how he was fought for to be punished, more majarum, or after the custom of their Ancestors, and upon his enquity hearing that this kind of death was to be stripped, and having his neck made fast in a Pillory to be whipped to death,

He killeth himfelf.

he called for two Daggers, the points of which he onely felt, and put them up again, pretending that his fatal hour was not yet come : He bade Porus lament and weep, and wished that some would help him by their own example to kill himself, chiding also himself for his backwardnesse. Certain horf-men now drawing near to fetch him alive, he at Venoch effected it by the help of Epaphroditus his Freed-man, on the fourth of the Ides of June, having reigned 13 years, seven moneths, and 28 dayes, in the 32th of his age, and the 821 of the Citie, An. Dn. 68. C. Silins Italiem, and M. Valerius Trachalus being Confuts. Vefpafian asked Apollonius what was Nero's overthrow? He answered, Nero could touch and tune the Harp well (noting his excessive delight in that Instrument) But in government sometimes he used to wind the pins too high, fometimes to let them down too low. The unequal, and untimely Enterchange of power Pressed too far, and Relaxed too much, destroyeth authority above all things.

Ecclefiaftical

43. About the later end of Nero's second year St. Paul was sent bound to matters in his Rome by Festus, where he continued in durance two years. In his third year living at Rome in free custody, he wrote to the Ephesians, Philippians, Colosfians, and Philemon. About the end of the fourth he feemeth to have been confule Lud. fet at liberty, and thence to have returned into Greece and Afia, where for Cappellum in' five or fix years he established the Churches he had founded. In the ele-Histor, Eccles. venth year of Nero he is faid to have suffered Mattyrdom at Rome. For, Mulbrata. Nero having for the Civil on five accounted the Cheilitian on Tairium An-Nero having set the Citie on fire, accused the Christians, as Tacitus writeth; nad, 1.15,044. and exposed them to ignominious deaths. Some he caused to be covered with Eufeb Eccles. the skins of wild beafts, that they might be devoured of Dogs, others to be Hist. 1.2. 6, 25. Crucified, and others burnt alive, and that in the night, that they might give & 1.3.c. I. light to passengers. He offered his own Garden for this show, and celebrated the Circenlian Games amongst the common fort in the habit of a Chariot driver, who could not have raged against Christianity as Tertullian observeth, but that some excellency was in it. In this First persecution, besides Paul, who was beheaded, and many others, Peter also was Crowned with Martyrdom; being Crucified as 'tis reported with his head downward, which kind of death himself desired, because he would die in a more dishonourable fort than his Lord and Master. But some will have St. Paul and Peter to have fuffered Martyrdom in the last year of Nero's reign, and that on Tune the 29, infomuch that Chryfostome faith, that the day of Pauls death was more known than that of Alexander.

4. After the Martyrdom of Fames firnamed Just the First Bilhop of Jerusalem (whom Eusebius (a) from Clemens reporteth to have been thrown (a) Eccles, Hish. down from a Pinacle of the Temple, and brained with a Fuller's Club) who 1.2. c.23. governed that Sea thirty years, Simon (b) Cleopus the Lords Cousin German, (b) Idem 1,3; one of the 70 Disciples, and which saw Christ with his eyes, was chosen into capital his place by the Apostles, and Disciples themselves, being gathered together for this purpose. After the Martyrdom of Peter, (c) Linus one of the 70 (c) Ident. 3. Disciples, of whom Paul made mention, succeeded him in the Sea of Rome, c. 2,13,19. 19. where he continued Bishop twelve years, though some place his Martyrdom in Chros. also in the last year of Nero, and the ninth before the Calends of Ottober. Evodius one of the 70 Disciples, whom St. Paul remembred in his Epistles. was Bishop of Antioch, being by Ensebius said to be the first known to govern that Church. Him succeeded Ignations (d) the Disciple of John , who (d) ident. 3 wrote as they fay to Mary the Mother of Chrift, and Mary unto him again. 6. 19.32, 6 He wrote unto John the Evangelist, and to Polycarpus his Disciple. Belides, in Chron, he wrote fundry other notable Epiffles, yet extant, and in the eleventh year Tritem. of Trajan was brought to Rome, and torn in pieces of wild bearts, as will be shewn. Eufebius writerh that he was the fecond Bifhop by faccoffion after Peter in the Church of Antioch, When Nero hadreigned the space of eight years, Lib, 4, 24, faith the Historian , first after Mark the Evangelist, Anianus took the government of the Church of Alexandria, a man both virtuons, and renomned in all respetts.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

From the death of Nero to that of Domitian, the last of the family of Velpalian, the space of 27 years.

Galba Succeederh Nero.

I. ALBA after the death of Noro obtained the Principality, yet not Jlong; for being Emperour, the maintained not the opinion which had Tacitus Hifter. been conceived of him whilest a private man; for that he gave way to a cruel lib. a. and coverous humour, acting all things according to the will and luft of backers men whom the people thence called his School masters. But his seven rity towards the Soldiers, especially that speech Legi à se militem non emi, procured his ruin, who upon the revolt of the Armies in upper Germany betraved him to M. Salvins Otho, notwithstanding he had adopted Pifo. He was mardered by them in the Forum near the place where Curtius rode into the hole, and his head being cut off, for fome time was carried up and down on a spear, till his Enemies had with the fight satisfied their flouring appetite, and then it was buried with the body. He died on the 17th of the Calends of February, in the 73th year of his age, having reigned feven moneths,

2. Otho feized on the Empire by the help of his Soldiers, having refolved as murdered by his Soldiers.

on the Empire,

Otho Seizeth it after he saw Pife preferred before him. He was Noro's great friend and Identified. companion, and now refused not to be called by his very name, suffered his Tacitus Hillor, Images and Statues to be reflored, as also his Officers and Freed-men to their lib.2. feveral places, and the first thing he subscribed to was for money to finish his Plutarch, iz golden house. But A. Vitellius was shortly after faluted Emperour in Germamy by the Army there, being fon to L. Vitellins, who governed Syria. Being fent into German, by Galba, he denied nothing to the Soldiers, but granted them their wills, with impunity in all things, and for that was rewarded with this Election. Hereupon Otho defired the Senate that they would fend to him, to acquaint him with his Election, and to perswade him to be quiet; but he himself by Letters offered to be onely partner with him in the Soveraignty. and to be his fon-in-law. The Enemy drawing near, the Pratorian bands Being opposed flood very faithfully to him, even so far, that with much ado, and with the flaughter of some of their Officers, were they kept from destroying the Senate, which they suspected to be salle to him. His interest was to draw out the War in length, having the Enemy at advantage, who was straightned both for necessaries, and by reason of the narrownesse of the passage : But he rashly and imprudently resolved on a battel, either for that Vitellius was not yet come, or urged by the earnoftnesse of the Soldiers. They had four ingagements, whereof in the first three he had the better, but in the last at Bebriacum (a Village in lealy betwixt Cremona and Verona, now called Labemein) was worked; yet so as he might without difficulty have recovered himself, though taken at unaware, and deceived by presence of a parley. But being alhamed to feek his own establishment with the hazard of so many mens lives. rather than out of any desperation, he killed himself. He was much extolled for his generous death (as it was accounted) which rendred him so much more defirable than his life had done, that many thought him to have killed Galba, Hekilleth bimiclf.

of his age, and the osth day of his Empire. 2. Otho being dead, though Vitelius was detelled by those at Rome, yet when they heard how things went they began to flatter, and gave him the Tacitus Hiffer. title of Emperour. The Army of upper Germany which first mutined a- 1.2. c.3. gainst Galba curning to him, he gladly received the firname of Germanicus, Suction in Vi-8 Vitellius own but deferred the title of Augustus, and unterly refused that of Cafar. cd as Empe-When yet in Gall he heard of the event of the battel at Bebriacum, he prefently cashiered the Praterian bands, as giving a bad example of revolt, and 120 which had demanded a reward of Otho for killing Galba, he commanded to be fought, and put to death. Hereby he much commended himself to the not somuch out of the defire of rule, as to reflore liberty so called to the Commonwealth. He died on the 12th before the Calends of Marsin the 28th year people,

People, and gave hopes of an excellent Prince; but carrying on all things afterwards according to his natural inclination and former course of life, he deferved to be ranked amongst the worst of Governours.

4. He returned to Rome in a triumphant manner, and gave up himfelf to luxury and excesse, wherein he also tolerated his family and Soldiers, as in all manner of wickednesse. Coming through the fields where the Armies fought, when many loathed the noisomnesse of the carsseises, he stuck notto fay, Optime olere occifum bostem, & melius civem; that A stain Enemy smells well, but sweeter a Citizen. He drunk much wine in the place before them all, to prevent any hurr that might proceed from the stench, and caused this liquour to be distributed to the Soldiers, with the like vanity and insolence. Entring the City as into a field with trumpers founding to the charge, with colours flying, and in his coat-armour, he fell more and more into the neglect of all Laws, divine and humane. He made himself Perpetual Conful, and that it might be seen after whose pattern he meant to govern, in the Campus Martius attended by a number of Priests he facrifized for the Soul of Nero; and at a solemn feast commanding a Musician to sing something of Domisius, he leaped up and applauded the beginning of Nero's fongs. He governed State matters at the will and discretion of the vilest Player and charior driver, especially of Asiaticus his Freed-man. He gave himself over to fuch luxury as he had been accustomed to in the dayes of Cains and Nero; especially to gluttony, the abhominable excesse whereof surned him into a very Monster. For, he would eat four or five meats a day, which that he might be able to bear, he used frequent vomiting; and inviting himself to the houses of his friends, he would, as Nero did, put themto incredible expenses. At his coming to Rome his brother made him a feaft, wherein were ferved up 2000 feveral defines of fifth, the daintiest that could be found, and 7000 forts of fowl. But he far exceeded this preparation at the Dedication of the Great Planer, which he called Minerva's Targer, in which were mixed together the livers of Guilt-heads, brains of Pheafants and Peacocks, with the tongues of Phanicopters, and the small guts of Sea-Lampries setched as far as the Carpathian Sea and the Straights of Gibraltar. He would also eat meat taken from the hearth in time of facrifice, and fetched from Victualling houses,

And ciuel.

CHAP. III.

Is very vici-

either smoaking, made ready the day before, or half earen. 5. He was prone to the killing of any person and for any cause whatsoever: Noble-men, his School-fellows and contemporaries, he deceitfully made away by degrees. To one in a Feaver, defiring a draught of cold water, he gave poyfon in it with his own hands. He scarcely ever spared any of his creditors or others that asked him the money he ought. One of them faluting him, he fent away to be put to death, and prefently again calling him back (for which the by-standers commended his elemency) he caused him to be killed before his eyes, faying, that he would fasiate his eyes with the flaughter of him; and another that interceded for him, he put to death with his two fons. A certain Knight whom he commanded to be flain, to fave his life, told him he had made him his heir, whereupon he commanded his will to be produced, in which finding that the man's Freedman was made coheir with him, he caused them both to be put to death. He was most cruel towards Mathematicians, because they foretold his reign would be but short. And to complete all, he was suspected to have killed his mother. These vices onely feemed to put him in mind of his condition, for else fo great a stupidity had seized on him, that if others had not known him to be the Prince, he himself would quickly have forgot it. He accounted all sharp that was wholefom, liking of nothing but what was pleasant; and fortifying himself onely with mirth and sortishnesse against all dangers, he forgot all things past, and regarded nothing prefent or to come: not a word of Warre proceeded from him, the rumour and talk of which was forbidden in the City. But he was within a fhort time rouzed by the coming of the forces of Vespasian, who was by others put upon feeking the Empire, being then Judan.

Vefpafian pur upon fecking the Empire.

6. Vaspasian (that we may now prosecute the History of his actions in that Judan.

Country) after Titus had brought the Army to Ptolemais out of Afre, Tolephus de with his forces united fet upon Galile, and at the first onfet took Gedara, bello lib. 3. c.s. which was burnt and destroyed. Thence removing to Josapata, on the 21 &c. day of May he took it by form after 40 dayes, though floutly defended by Foleph the Historian. Foseph was taken and kept to be sent prisoner to Nero : but defiring to speak with Vespasian, foretold him that he should loose him out of captivity, but as Emperour. After this, bestowing his Armie at Cafarea and Screhopolis, to refresh the Legions, he himself went to Casaraa Philippi, where he was entertained by Agrippa the King for twenty dayes. Then went he about to Subdue Tiberias and Tarichaa, whereof the former yielded, and was spared at the request of the King, but the later was taken by force Identia. and destroyed. After this were Gamala, Giscala, and the Hill Itabu- 2, 00. rium taken, and all Galile being reduced, Velpasian and Titus returned to

The Jews fall 7. The Jews were now imbroyled in civil diffentions, whilft some defired out amongst Peace, and others would not hear a word of it. Parties were made and fought Idemibid. c. s. in every City, and rash young men prevailed every where against the grave 6. and elder fort, who forefaw the calamity. At first they robbed one another fingly; but at length turned thieves, in whole troops committing fuch cruelties, as equalled the misfortune received from the Romans. At last the thieves loaded with plunder brake into Fernsalem, where they not onely consumed

the provisions of the People, but filled the City with slaughters, rapines, and diffentions. They can the principal of the Citizens into prison, and then Horrid our. rages com-Zealots.

putthem to death unheard, pretending that they intended to betray the City to the Romans; yet for all this wickednesse they boasted of zeal for the Law of God, and customs of their Country, and thereupon were called Zealots. The People being about to rife against them, they betook themselves to the Temple, where they made one Phanias an ignorant fellow Highmitted by the Prieft, though he was not of the order of Priefts; but they were opposed by Ananus, who procured the People to rife against them, and beat them into the inner part. Hereupon they fent to the Idumaans, accusing Ananus of an intention to betray their Country, and forafmuch as they fought for the liberty thereof, and now were besieged, they implored their assistance. Twenty thousand came, and being let into the City, together with the Zealots, committed horrid outrages against the Inhabitants. They slew 8000 the first night, and afterwards other 1200 of the chiefest, (amongs whom was Anamus) besides an infinite number of the common fort: then at length the Idumeans perceiving the wickednesse of the Zealots, and that they had falsely accufed the Nobility, fet at liberty 2000 which they had imprisoned, and returned home. After their departure the Zealots renewed their flaughters, and raged more cruelly than ever, especially against such as they had found attempting to flye to the Romans.

8. But they presently after fell out amongst themselves, by reason of one Idem 1. 5. c. 3. John, who with a feditious party holding Gifcala, pretended to receive 4,5,6, &c. the conditions given him by Titus, and stole away to Jerusalem. There becoming the great Incendiary, he now affected foveraign power; but he was withstood by such as before this had been equal to him. Though they thus difagreed, yet herein they confented, to spoil the People; and Terusalem being thus filled with tumults, those that were without the City had liberty to rob and spoil, and those whose Towns were hereby destroyed, assembled together in the Wildernesse, and uniting, brake into other Temples and Towns; fo that there was no place in Judaa, which did not languish in an unheard-of manner together with the mother City. Vefpafian excited by the feditious, and intreated by the fugitives to fave their Country, prepared for the fiege heard-of man- of Jerusalem, and that he might not leave an Enemy at his back, took in

All Judea languisheth in an unGadara (where 13000 were put to the Sword) and all other places beyond the River, except the Castle of Macheron. He built Castles at Tericho and Adida, and made all things ready for the fiege; but hearing of Nero's death, and the succession of Galba, he deferred the Expedition, and sent

DOOK IV.

Titus to know Galba's pleasure. But as Titus failed by Achaia he heard of his end, and Otho's advancement, whereupon he returned to his Father. Uncertain what would ensue, and who should be Emperour, they neglected the Vespasian sub- Warre against the Jews, for they feared their own Country, and therefore dueth all, ex- thought it an unfit time to affault strangers. Yet he drew out his Army from Cafarea, and subdued all forts of Judaa save three Castles, Herodium, Massada, and Macheron, which were kept by the thieves. Besides these Ferufalem. Fernsalem onely remained to be conquered.

9. Vespasian hearing of Otho's death, and having compassion on the State, thought of freeing the Commonwealth from the tyranny of Vitellins; but for that it was now Winter, and he was at a great distance from Rome, he strove to conceal that indignation which he had conceived. But Mucianus President of Syria perswaded him to it very earnestly: certain Soldiers also who were removed out of Syria into Masia, giving him large commendations, the three Legions which proceeded as far as Aquileia to help Otho, resolved to proceed, not withstanding his death, and put Vespalian's name into their Colours. First of all others, Tiberius Alexander Governour of Agypt, on the first of July swore the Legions to him, and two daies after the Army in Tacitus Histor. Judea, compelling him with threats to take the Government upon him, took tib. 3, & 4.

The Armies in the East declare for Vespasian.

the oath. The Armies then in feveral Provinces declaring for him, he fent tellio, or Mucianus with forces into Italy, and went himself to Alexandria, to make Josephus de fure of Egypt. The Masian Legions hearing of Mucianus his coming, bello Judaico chose Antonius Primus an excellent Soldier (who had been banished by Nero, I. S. c. 10, 12, and restored by Galba) for their Captain, and hasted for Italy, that they 13, 14. might have the plunder of the Country. Cacina (otherwise called Allienus) the General of Vitellim, made halte and got to Cremona before them; but confidering the effeminatenesse of his Army, he hearkned to the friendly advice fenr him by Antonius, and perswaded his Soldiers, by laying before them the weaknesse of Vitilius, and the force of his adversary, to revolu-They accordingly sware scaley to Vespasian, but presently repenting, cast bonds upon their General as a traytor, and exhorted even Anionius to imbrace the quarrel of Vitellius; then coming to blows, though they wanted a Leader, maintained a most sharp fight, both parties being possessed with such fury, as night it felf could not fever them. They knew and talked to one another, nay intermitting the fight for some time, give victuals one to another, and yet after their repasts tell to it again. But in a morning the Solwith diers of the third Legion faluting according to the fashion, the rifing Sun, Vitellius his men thought Mucianus was arrived, and thereupon betook themselves to Cremona, where looking Cacina, they procured him to make their Peace, and the Masian Army entering the Town made great diforder.

Vitellius is to feek what to

10. Vitelline hearing of this was amazed, and not knowing what to do, became ridiculous unto all men; for his affairs went down the wind in all places. He covenanted then with Flavius Sabinus the brother of Vespasian for his own fafety, and prefently after at the flairs of the Palace, before many Soldiers, professed he would give up the Empire, which he had unwillingly taken woon him. But the Soldiers crying out against it, he deferred the thing. and in the morning went to the Roftra in a mourning habit, where with miny rears out of a paper he uttered the same words he had before spoken to the Soldiers, who again interrupting him, the People had him he of good chear, and promifed him their affiltance. Taking courage hereat, he forced Sabinus. (who was Governour of the City) with others, into the Capitol, which ferting on fire he suppressed them, Sabinus being put to death, whose nephew Domitian (afterwards Emperour) was hid by the Priest of Jupiter's Temple and escaped. Then would he have had the Senate send Ambassadors to the Enemy with the Vestal Numr to beg Peace, or at least so much time as to consider what was to be done. But Vespasian's Soldiers inraged at the report of the befieging of the Capitol, made hafte. Petitins Cerealis being fent before with a thousand Horse set upon the City, but was forced to retreat. Antonius

Mmmmm

Primus

Book IV.

Primus coming on with the rest of the Army, many skirmishes happed, till fuch time as the Guards being beaten from off the bridge Vefpasian's men entred the Citie with great fury, wherein they committed grievous ourrages. Vitellius was pulled out of an hole in the Palace where he lurked, at first unknown; but being discovered, he defired he might be kept in prison, for that he had fomething to reveal, which concerned the fafety of Velvalian. But his hands being tied behind him, and an halter cast about his neck, he was dragged half naked into the Marker-place, and abused in the way, both by 01,213,471, many words and deeds, was killed with many blows, and cast after the fashion V. C. 822. of Traitors into Tiber. This hapned in the 57th year of his age, after he had held the Government eight moneths, and five dayes. The day following Mucianus entred the Citie, and the Soldiers being hindred from any further flaughters, the Empire was by the Senate decreed to Vespasian, who hearhis departure from Egypt or- ing these things at Alexandria, receiving congratulatory Embassies from dereth his son all quarters, and having settled affaires in Egypt, ere he set forward for Rome, ordered his fon Tuns to fer upon Jerufalem, and finish the War

Is killed.

Commorions in Germany.

Vespasian cre

Titus to be-fiege ferufa-

in Fudaa. 11. Whilest Vespasian and Vitellius were yet disputing the controverse, Tacitus Hillor. great commotions hapned in Germany, the Batavians (now Inhabitants of lib.4.

Holland in the Low-Countreys) rebelling first at the instigation of Claudius Civilus, the most eminent amongst them, who having been sent prisoner in Chains unto Nero, and dismissed by Galba, came into danger again under Vitellius, the Army requiring that he should be put to death. He drew into the conspiracy, besides the Caninafaies (a more inconsiderable people inhabiting the same Island) by secret messages the Auxiliaries of Britain, and the Batavian Cohorts, which then quartered at Mogoneiacum, now Mentz. They cast out, or destroyed the Roman Gatrisons, overthrew Aquilins Captain of the Vantguard, and after him Mumins Lupercus the Lieutenant. Herennius Gallus also endeavouring to hinder the march of the Batavian Cohorts was worsted by them. Civilis after the coming of the Cohores, to colour the matterl, sware his Soldiers to Vespasian, and besieged such as refused in the old Camp. After this the Romans mutining against Hordonius, the command was given to Vocala, and Herennius Gallus was made his Lieutenant. Vocala in his first ingagement with Civilis had the worst, but at length by good hap overthrew him, the Vizard of his friendship to Vespasian being drawn of.

12. The report of Vitellius his death through Germany and Gall doubled the Idemibid. War. For now Civilis without any pretence of friendship to Vespasian, carried himself as an Enemy to the Romans, and Vitallius his Soldiers rather wished for external servitude than his Government: the Galls also took heart, interpreting the burning of the Capital to presage the destruction of the Empire. The Treviri therefore (now Inhabitants of Triers) and the Lingones (now of Langres) revolted, when all Gall was in a tottering condition, and what was worse, and unheard of, the Legions proved unfaithfull, and were corrupted. For Vocala being flain, they took an Oath for the Empire of Gall, and to them other Legions in several places joyned themselves, some being besieged upon necessity, and afterwards cut in pieces by Civilis as they had deferved. In the mean time Julius Sabinus one of the revolters taking on him the name of Cafar, led a great and dilorderly Company against the Segnani (inhabiting the Countrey now called Lin Franche Conte) who not refuling battel routed the multitude, and put him to flight. These things being reported at Rome rather with improvement, all things feemed there to be loft, whereupon Domitian the fon of Wefpafian, and Mucianus, addressed themselves to the War, and four Legions

13. By this rime the Galls by the means especially of Fulim Vindex , began to confider of the power of the Romans, and at length approved rather of a fervile peace than a dangerous War; Petilius Cerealis also gave the Trea viri a great overthrow, and most of the revolters returned to obedience.

were presently dispatched away towards Germany.

After this he accepted of battel from Civilis and Classicus his companion. in the beginning whereof he had the worst, for the Legions began to he broken, the horse was put to flight, and the bridge over the River Mosella Composed by gained by the Enemy; but though he had now lost even all for want of heed. Petitius cerea- yet he restored all by his diligence, so as on the same day he took, and de-Aroyed the Enemie's Camp. Domitian and Mucianus heard of the successe ere they came to the Alps, and Mucianni perswaded Domitian against marching further, knowing his ambitious and naughty humour, which he had already betraved whilest at Rome; but his advice succeeding not, he went with him out of compliance to I your, whence, as 'tis faid, Domitian wrote privately to Cerealis to deliver up the Army to him, that he might therewith feize on the Empire. But perceiving he was despised for his youth, he betook himself to such courses whereby he thought that his designs might best be covered. During these stirs Vespalian was yet at Alexandria. Afterwards both Civilis recruited his Forces through Germany, and Cerealis also doubled his strength, whereupon followed several fights, the effect of which was a Peace. For the Batavians were fo challized, as glad they were to accept of it, as Civilis of pardon, both of which were offered by the Roman General

The invalion of the Sarmata.

14. With the aforesaid revolt of the Germans, at the same time, faith * fo- * De bello Insephus, agreed the boldnesse of the Scythians. For those that are called daico lib. 7. Sarmata, in great multitudes having privily passed over Ister, being violent, cap.23. and most cruel, through the suddennesse of their invasion killed many of the Romans whom they found in Garrisons, with Fonceins Agrippa the Lieutenant (who valiantly refifted them) and wasted all the adjacent Countreys with fire and sword. Vespasian hearing of this, and the wasting of Masia. fent Rubrius Gallus to chastize them, by whom many being slain, such as escaped returned home in great fear. The War being thus ended, the General taking care for the future, fortified the places with stronger Garrisons, that the passage might be utterly impassible to the Barbarians. These first eruptions of the Barbarous Northern Nations are therefore more to be noted. because at length they over-ran and destroyed the Roman Empire. Now return we to the affairs of the Fews, and the War managed by Titus.

The Zealots fall out afelves.

15. During the former transactions in the West, a faction was raised against Fosephus de the Zealots by one Simon the fon of Giora, who getting together a company bello Judaico mongst them- of Thieves and Murderers that were affembled on the Hilly Countrey, fell lib.5, cap. 9. upon many Villages and Cities, brought all Idaman into his power, wasted Judaa, pitched his Camp against Ferufalem it self, and became a great terror to the poor Inhabitants, who were most cruelly oppressed by the Zealots within. In the mean time such Idumeans as had of late fled into the Citie. and were become of John's party (whom the Zealots had now chosen their Captain) fell at odds with him, detefting his cruelty, and killing many of his men, forced the Tyrant out of his Palace into the Temple; but he, and the Citizens fearing that by night he might fall out upon the Cities they let in Simon, and then fet upon the Temple, but in vain, After this Eleazar, who once had been chief amongst the Zealots, envying John his power, withdrew some Soldiers from him, and kept the inwardst part of the Temple, whereby Tohn was forced to fight, both against Simon and him. Hereby all things about the Temple were burnt up, and Provisions destroyed, which might have served them a long time, and for want whereof they were oppressed with famine in Titus beliegeth the Citie.

15. But Titus in profecution of his fathers orders came from Alexandria Idem Ibid. to Cafarea, where gathering together some forces with aids from the Neigh- & capp. 2,3,4.; bouring Kings, he appointed the rest to follow him, and marched towards Ferusalem, accompanied with Tiberius Alexander, (who now began to be in principal favour) and Joseph the Jew being for the truth of his prediction now released out of bonds. He sate down within fix or seven furlongs of the Citie, a little before the Feast of the Passeover, and therein shut up an infinite multitude, which according to the custom flocked to that so-Mmmmm 2 lemnity :

lemnity; and hereby all Provisions were confumed in a short time. The three factions upon fight of his great Army agreed to oppose it, and issuing out, made great diforder, forcing the Romans to forfake their Camp, and fly to the Mountains; but they were repelled by the great care and industry of Time. But on the day of unleavened bread (April the 14) Eleazar, who kept the inward part of the Temple, opening the Gates to the people, which was defirous to facrifize. Tohn fent many of his party in amongst the rest with fwords hid under their Cloaths, who killing Eleazar, and many of his faction, feized also on that part of the Temple, and thereby the number of the factions was reduced to that of two. That under John confided of 8400. and Idemibid. the other under Simon of 10000 fighting men besides 5000 Idumaans. Not-withstanding the Enemy was at the Walls, and to oppose him, they a little joyned together; yet did they break out the one upon the other, and the poor people miserably suffered under both.

16. The Citie being fortified with three Walls on every fide, but where it was fenced with deep Valleys, Titus having with much opposition placed his follow, 6, c, 7,

Breaking into it,

Engines, battered the uttermost of them, and breaking, on the third of May 8, 9, 10, 11, into the Citie, possessed all the North part as far as the Tower of Antonius, and the Valley of Cearon. Five dayes after, he brake within the fecond Wall, though the befieged made divers fallies. They beat him out again, but the fourth day after he recovered the place, and prepared for the battery of the third Wall. Yet he fent Joseph the Historian to them, who exhorting them with many words to yield, was entertained onely with fcoffs and reproaches. The people thinking to escape out of the Citie, John and Simon stopped up all passages; yet the famine increasing many came out, whom being taken Titus caused to be Crucified to such a vast number that room was wanting for Crosses, and Crosses for persons. On the 12th of May he began four Mounts whereon to place his battering rams: two near to the Castle Antonia, where he hoped he might take the Temple, and other two near the Monument of John the High-Priest, where he thought he should with most ease break into the upper part of the Citie. But John, whose part it was to oppose the Romans in the former place, cast down, and burnt them two; and two dayes after Simon did as much by the other, though feventeen dayes had been spent in making them all. He destroyed also many rams and engines, and brake into the very Camp of the Romans; but was repelled by Titus from Antonia, who in a Council of Officers resolved now to compasse the whole City with a trench, which with incredible diligence and celerity was finished in three dayes, with thirteen forts to hinder the flight of the befieged, and hinder the conveyance of relief into the City.

Famine 14geth,

17: The feditious were nothing herewith moved, though the famine not only raged amongst the common fort, but themselves also were pressed by it. A certain Noble woman fod her child to eat it, and fuch a mortality enfued, that from the fourteenth of April to the first of July were caried out to be buried at the publick charge 115080 carkeises of the poorer fort, as Titus was told by one Mannans, who was appointed to pay the money. Divers Noble men that fled to him, certified him also that 600000 of the ordinary fort were cast dead out of the gates, and others that were dead besides, were innumerable; for because they could not cary all out, they laid them up in houses. A bushel of corn was fold for a talent, finks and holes were raked to find old dung of Oxen to eat, which much moved the Romans to compaffion, but the feditious were hereby nothing changed. For Simon not obstaining from murders and rapines, notwithstanding this lamentable condition, killed Matthias the High-Priest, by whom he had been let into the City, with his three fons, and fixteen others, pretending that they purposed to flie to the Enemy. Judas one of his own Officers hereupon weary of his cruelty, attempted to betray a certain Tower, whereof he had the charge, to the Romans; but being discovered, was put to death with ten others of his complices. John also being driven by necessity, converted the Golden Vessels of the Temple with the facred Money to prophane uses, and was constrained to divide the Wine and Oil, ordained for Sacrifices, to his

18. Titus cut down all the groves within a great diffance of the City, Iden 1,7,6,1, and caufing more mounts or scaffolds to be erected within 21 dayes, on the first of July began to batter the wall of Anionia, John that opposed him being beaten back, and on the fift day broke into the Cattle. At this time many false Prophets suborned by the seditions, told the multitude they must expect alliftance from God, and therefore though Tims often exhorted them to yield, they flatly refused, boasting that they would rather endure all miseries. The conrest was earnest about the Temple. The wall of the inward part thereof was too ftrong for the battering rams, and the defendants valiantly refifted at the top: the foundation of the gates could not be undermined, and therefore Time was constrained to set them on fire. Yet was it his intention to save the Temple, but on the tenth of August, a certain foldier without any command, (nay against the command of his General) moved as by an inflinct from above, cast fire into the buildings on the North fide,

Yet the de-luded defendants refuse to vield.

which cutching the flame imparted it to the Temple it felf, notwithstanding The Temple all that Titus could do to quench it, on the same day of the same moneth that it was formerly fet on fire by the command of Nebuchadnezar. The Temple thus burning Titus was faluted Imperator by his Soldiers, and the Tyrants with their companions fled into the City. They now defired a parly with the General himself, who checked them much for their obstinacy, but promifed them life if they would yield. But refufing to commit themselves to his fidelity, they required to depart the City with their wives and children, wherewith being greatly angred, he commanded to be proclaimed by a Crier, that They should not look any longer for mercy. 19. He permitted his Soldiers to plunder and burn the City, but the fedi-Iden ibid, tious wretches got to the King's house, where many had deposited their 6.14,15, 16, wealth, and thence repelled the Romans. They also killed of their own 17, 18. Country People to the number of 6400, and rifling the money got them into the upper and frongest part of the City, called Sion, where for all this danger they still most cruelly tyrannized. Titus having considered the ftrength of the place, provided engines to batter the walls, and began so to do it on the seventh day of September. Part of the wall being broken down, the Tyrants were seized with great fear and amazement, not knowing what to do. Some faid the East part of it was broken down, others that the Romans were entred, and that they faw them out of the Towers; fo that the power of God appeared in the overthrow of these wretches; for they forfook the Towers which were their onely strength, and in vain seeking to escape, hid themselves in caves and privies. The Romans entering, put all to the Sword, and burnt the houses with all that fled to them for safeguard. Tans commanded both the Temple and City to be utterly razed by a plow mandeth the brought over thein, according to the cultom; onely the West part of the wall with three Towers for their strength and beauty he preserved, to bear testimony of the statelinesse of the City to posterity. They would have crowned him 01, 212, 60, 20

the author of it, for that he onely served God herein, who by it demonstrated his wrath against the Jows. To such an end came this samous City, on the eighth day of September, in the second year of Vespafian, be and Titus his fon being Confuls, 38 years after the death of Christ, the Blood of whom now fell heavy upon them. It had been taken in all fix times; by Afochens or Shifback King of Ægypt, Nebuchadnefar, Antiochus Epiphanes, Pompey, Herod and Sosius, and now by Titus; but twice onely was it destroyed, viz. by Nebuchadnezar and Titus. It was first built, faith Fosephus, by Melchisedeck King of Salem, and afterwards inlarged by David. It was destroyed by the Babylonians 1468 years and fix moneths after the founding of it, and 477 years and fix moneths after it had been taken by David from the Canaanites, By Titus Vespasian it was destroyed 1179 years after David took ir, but from it's first founding to it's last destruction intervened 2177 years.

terly razed.

as a Conquerour for this work, but he refuted the honour, denying he was V. c. 823.

20. John and Simon having hid themselves were taken, and the former being condemned to perpetual prison, the other was reserved for a Triumph. The rest of the thieves and sedicious were discovered, one telling of another, and were all flain. Of those which during the whole War were taken captives the number amounted to 97000, and of those that perished in the siege to 1100000, so heavy was the guilt which lay on them for the death of Christ, and such were the horrid enormities committed by them, that we have reason to agree with Josephus, who thought, that if the Romans had delay- Lib. 6. c. 16.

ed to come against them, the City would either have been swallowed up of the Earth, or have perished by some Deluge, or else by Thunderbolts and Lightning have undergone the punishments of Sodom, whose Inhabitants they exceeded in wickednesse. A year after was Lucilius Bassus sent Lieutenant into Judea, who taking the Army of Gerealis Vitellianus took the Castle of Herodian and of Macharun beyond Fordan. Not long after Vespasian Ideml. 7.c.25, Wrote to Liberius Maximus the Governour, to fell all the Land of the Jems, 26, 28,29, upon whom wherefoever they lived he imposed a yearly tribute to be paied into the Capitol, it being that they were wont to pay into the Temple at Terusalem. About a year after Publius Sylva succeeded Bassus then dead, and The War fi- finished the War, taking the strong Castle of Massada from Eleazar, who held it with 960 hacksters, who upon his motion fet fire on the Castle and nished by Sylall their goods, and then killed themselves. Many such as these flying out of the Country came to Alexandria in Egypt, where they follicited the Jews to revolt, but were by them delivered up to the Romans, and those of them that then escaped were afterwards taken. Vespasian hearing of their attempt, gave order to Lupus Governour of Alexandria, to demolish the Temple of The Temple the Tems (built in Egypt in times past by Onias brother of the High-Priest) which he neglecting to do, onely spoiled it of some consecrated things, and of the Jews in thut it up. But Paulinus his Successor utterly bereaved it of all, and so shut Agypt de-Aroyed, it up, that he made it inaccessible, and without any shew of Religion, 242 years after it was first built by Onias.

21. But the Tems of Cyrene were also insected with a distemper of madnesse. There one Fonathan a Weaver led many of the simple fort into the Wildernesse, promising to shew them signs and wonders; but by the chiefest of the Jews the matter being discovered to Catullus Governour of those parts, he sent Soldiers who slew most of them, and not long after Fenathan himself was taken. Casullus a covetous man procured him and others to ac-A sedition of cuse many unjustly, whom having slain and seized on their estates, he caried the Jews in him to Rome, where following the same trade, Joseph the Historian was also accused; but Vespasian having found out the deceit, caused Fonathan first to be whipped, and then burnt alive. Caudlus at present escaped through the mildnesse of the Emperour, but not long after fell into grievous anguish of mind, imagining he saw the ghosts of those he had slain, and his bowels rotted away from him, that he died miferably. Thus far hath Fofephus communicated to us the affairs of the Jews, who being kindly entertaind by Vef 2 Vide Eufeb pasian, was honoured with a Statue, and his Books were thought worthy of Eccles. History the publick Library. For the truth of his History concerning the Wars, he had the testimony of the Emperours, King Agrippa, and others. Titus would have the certain knowledge of these Wars delivered unto the World Fosephus contra by his Books onely, commanding them to be published with the privilege of Apinum lib. 1. The end of Josephus his History. by his Books onely, commanding them to be published with the privilege of Antiquit. his own hand. And King Agrippa wrote 62 Epifles, wherein he teltified I. ult. c. ult. of the true History delivered by him. But his Fewish Antiquities he finished not till the thirteenth of Domitian, when he himself was 56 years old, as he testifieth at the end of that Work.

22. To Vespasian was renewed the Lex Regia, and the same power that renewed in Augustus, Tiberius, and the rest enjoyed was confirmed to him as hereditabehalf of Vo tr. A fragment of this Law (which evinceth that absolute power we formerly proved to have been in the Emperours) is yet extant after this manner. Spasina. Let it be lawful for him to make a League with whom he pleaseth, as it was lawfules Divus Augustus, Tiberius Tulius Cafar Augustus, and Tiberius

Claudius

The Lex Regia Claudius Cafar Augustus Germanicus, &cc. As alfo 10 hold the Senate, make report, dismisse, and make Senatus Consulta by reporting and separation, Vespagian. as it was lawful to Divus Augustus, Tib. Julius Cæsar Augustus, Tib. Claudius Casar Augustus Germanicus. Moreover, when as by his will, authority, com- Ex tabula ane mand, or mandate, or he being present the Senate shall be affembled, it shall be in bastica effectual to all ends and purposes, as if the Senate had been assembled or held Lateranens at by Law. Moreover, whom sever he shall commend to the Roman Senate and Palmos 9. la-People that Stand for any Magistracy, power, command, or charge, or to a 5, digitos whomfoever he shall give or promise his suffrage, les them be considered be- crassa in nayond the usual form in the Comitia. As also it may be lawful for him to pag 242. intarge the Pomarium if he think it convenient for the Commonwealth, so as Et ex Antiq. it was lawful for Tib. Claudius Cæsar Germanicus. Moreover, whatsoever ensumments he shall think useful for the Commonwealth, or agreeable to the Majesty of timanum l. d. it was lawful for Tib. Claudius Casar Getmanicus. Moreover, what soever Epigrammatum all shings divine or humane, publick or private, let him have right and au- Legibia Rothority to all and do, so as it was lawful for Divus Augustus, and Tiberius manis. Julius Cæsar Augustus, and Tiberius Claudius Cæsar Augustus Germanicus. Moreover, from what Laws and Plebifeisa it was ordained, that Divus Augustus, Tiberius Julius Casar Augustus, and Tiberius Claudius Casar Augustus Germanicus should be loofed, from those Laws and Plebiscica, let the Emperour Cæsar Vespasian be loofed. And what things foever, by what Law or asking foever Divus Augustus, Tib. Julius Casar Augustus, and Tiberius Claudius Cæsar Augustus Germanicus ought to do, let it be lawful for the Emperour Cafar Velpafian Augustus to do them all. Moreover, what things been done by command of the People or Commons.

The Sanction.

soever before the asking of this Law were alted, done, decreed, or commanded by the Emperour Calar Vespasian Augustus, or by any other, by virtue of his command or mandate, let them be held as just and valid, as if they had

If any one by virtue of this Law hath done or shall do any thing against the Laws, asking of Laws (rogationes) Plebiscita or Senatus Consulta, or shall not do what he one ht to have done according to any Law, asking, Plebi scitum or Senatusconsultum, and that by virtue of this Law, let no dammage thence light upon him; neither let him owe any thing to the People for this matter, neither let any have an altion against him, neither let any one judge him, nor permit the matter to be debated before him. 23. In the fourth year of Vespasian, Caseunius Patus President of Syria, accused Antiochus King of Comagena and Epiphanes his Son, as holding bello Judaico correspondence with the Parthian, whereupon order was given him to pre- 410.7. 6.27. vent what might ensue. Patus then invaded Comagena, which Antiochus quitted, being loth to fight, and fled into Cilicia. His fons also, after they had made some opposition, went to Vologesiu into Parthia. But Parths procured Antiochus to be taken and fent to him bound towards Rome, yet Vespasian caused him to be loosed, and stay at Lacedamon, where he allowed him a revenue to live like himself, and he afterwards sent for both him and his sons to the City, where they were magnificently entertained. About this time the Alani, who being Scythians inhabited about Tanais and the Lake Meetis, consulted with the King of the Hyrcanians who was Master of the Straights to invade Media, which they entred and facked at their pleafure, Pacorus the King being forced up into a strong hold, and glad to redeem his wife and concubines with 100 Talents. From Media they passed into Ar-The Alani inmenia, and wasted the Country. Tiridates the King opposed them, but was vade Media near being taken alive in battrel, for with his sword he cut in pieces the rope and Armenia. that was cast about his neck, as they were therewith drawing him amongst his Enemies, and escaped. But they inraged at his opposition wasted the Kingdom, and carying great booty out of both Countries returned home.

24. Vespasian took away liberty from Achaia, Lycia, Rhodes, Byzan- Sueton in Veof Vefpafian. tium, and Samus, reducing them into Provinces, as also Thrace, Cilicia, Spafiane.

any ever came with more fear or leffe favour to the Government.

His admirable from all vice, and adorned with so many virtues, that he became the Love

Several cala- and deftroyed all round about it; all which miferies he lessened as much as he

26. But so contrarily to expectation did he behave himself, that his former cariage did but fet him off with the greater luftre; and fo free was he and delight of mankind, and by an happy exchange was so called. His temperance he shewed in the moderation of his diet, the choice of his companions, and putting away Berenice: his moderation by abstaining utterly from other mens goods, and refusing often ordinary benevolences, although no man ever exceeded him in munificence. He was the Mirrour of courtefy, being wont to fay, that no man should go forrowful from the presence of the Prince; and on a day having done no couttefie for any man, he faid. Amici diem perdidt. My friends I have lost a day. Several sad accidents hapned in his litle time; fo great a Pestilence as seldom had been known. So great a fire there was in Rome, and kindled from Heaven, that it burnt three dayes to-could, neither sparing cost nor pains to relieve the distressed. At the same time another War arose in Britain, wherein Cn. Tu'sus Agricola harrazed all the Country of the Enemies, and first of all the Romans that we know of

27. Tisms put down informers, usually tollerated before. His mercy was too great; for he vowed he had rather perish than destroy another, as according to the judgment of some it came to passe. Amongst others that plotted his destruction, he not onely spared his brother Domitian, but had him in the fame respect as from the beginning, and owned him as his partner and suc-

ceffor; onely betwire them two he befought him with tears at length to relent to Love and Unity. He was a man of excellent parts, both outward and 824 The Roman Empire. and Comagena, the King whereof he fent for to Rome, as we faid before. Cappadocia now began to be over-run with barbarous Nations, to restrain whom he added Legions, and placed one of Confular dignity over it in room of a Knight. At lengthall Wars and tumults being suppressed both at home orefus 1,7.5.9. and abroad, he shut the Temple of Janus the sixth time from the soundation of the City. It was his principal care first to fetle and establish the asslicted and tottering condition of the Empire, and then to adorn it. Whereas the City was very deformed by reason of the burning of it, he permitted any to build upon old plots, if the owners would relinquish them: he also re-edified the Capital. As to his personal quality, he was of much temper and clemency, eafily passing by and forgetting injuries. The meannesse of his former condition he fought nor to hide, but fometimes would professe it openly. He took not the Tribunitial power, nor title of Father of his Connery for some time. If any innocent person were punished it was forely against his will, and for want of knowledge. He passed by the treason of many that had plotted his destruction, faying, They were fools, and knew not what a weight and trouble the Empire was : he weeped and groaned at the punishment of an offender. To Vologofes King of Paribia who wrote to him thus: Arfaces King of Kings to Fl. Velpasian, without any reproof he directed his answer thus Fl. Velpasian to Arfaces King of Kings. The onely vice reprehended in him was coverousnesse, and yet to that seeking earnessly for money, he was confirmined through the necessities of the State. Tis certain he nsed it well however gotten, being very liberal in seasting, relieving impoverished Senators, and others of desert. Hee incouraged learning, and gave the first stirends out of the Exchequer to the Professors thereof. He was Conful eight times (besides once before he was Emperour) and in his last Consulbip died of a flux, in the 60 year of his age, the tenth of his reign being complexed; in the 832 of the City, A.D. 79, he bimself the ninth time and Trius Cafar the seventh being Consuls. He was the first Em-perour whose successor was his own son. In his time flourished Pliny the elder and writer of the Natural History. Who also the same year that he died, whill he went to fee what might be the cause of the burning of the hill Vesu-vine, was stifled with the smooth thereof, and died, as Pliny Junior his ne-

DOOK I V

And that of Pliny.

eth him.

Titus fucceed-

ed men were famous.

His death.

phew writes in his Epistle * to Trajen. Now also Quintilian and other learn- * Lib. 6, ep. 16, 25. Titus his eldest son succeeded him (by whom Jerusalem had been taken, and destroyed) on the eighth of the Calends of June. He was born that year wherein Caiss was flain, and brought up with Britanicus the fon of Sucton in Tite. Claudius, being influcted in the fame things by the fame Mafters: he was Orofius 1,7.4

thought also to have drunk some of the poyson which Nero gave to that Prince, and that this was the cause of his want of health some conjectured. He performed the Office of Tribune both in the Wars of Germany and Britain with great commendations, and after that, being Quafter, came to have V 6 823. the command of a Legion in Judga. After his father came to the Govern- Till 1. ment he was suspected by some, when he was yet in £97ps, as intending to establish himself, whereupon he hasted to Rome to cut off all jealousies. Taking then part with his father in the publick cares, he triumphed with him over Judea, executed with him the Cenforship, Tribuneship, and seven Conful hips; nay taking as it were all upon him, he dictated letters in his fathers name, published edicts, spake in the Senate, and that in the room of the Quafter, and took on him the Government of the Palace, which never had formerly been discharged but by some Roman Knight; and this Office he executed with fuch rigor, that he contracted much envy, and was accounted cruel. He was suspected of luxury, for feeling with voluptuous persons till midnight; of incontinency also, being (amongst other arguments) too familiar with Berenice the fifter of King Agrippa, to which Lady he is also said to have promifed marriage, but refformed it not, because of the distante of the People. Moreover rapacity was laid to his charge. Hee was both accounted and openly talked of as another Mero, and scarcely did faith Dio*, knew that Britain was compassed about by the sea. For certain Sol- * Apud Xiphil. diers in a Sedition having killed their Centurions and Tribanes fled to their in except, 1,66, thips, and lanching out, failed about that part of Britain which lieth toward the West, being caried by waves and wind: when they had done this, and by chance light upon the other Camp of the Romans on the other fide, Agricola sent out others to hold the same course, from whom he also knew that it was an Island. These things being done in Britain, Titus was faluted Imperator the fifteenth time. Agricola paffed the rest of his life in ignominie and poverty, because he had done greater things than were suitable for a Prator: and for that cause he was afterwards put to death by Domitian, though by the permission of Time he had triumphed. But concerning these things > inward accomplishments; but to the great losse of man-kind, was presently taken away, whether by the treachery of his brother or no, is uncertain. In He dieth. the beginning of his ficknesse he is said to have look'd up to Heaven, as taking > it ill he should dye so soon, being not conscious to himself of any fin, save one, which as he did not expresse, so it is altogether unknown. He was with good reason sadly lamented throughout the Provinces. He died in the same Village his Father had ended his dayes, near the Country of the Sabines, in the 42 year of his age, when he had reigned two years, as many moneths, and twenty dayes; in the 834 year of the City, A. D. 81. M. Plantins Silvanus, and M. Annius Verus being Confuls. Domitian his

Tacitus is rather to be consulted in the life of Agricola,

28. Domitian (so called from Domitilla their mother) succeeded Titus, Suctor & Eubeing more like to Nero, Caligula, or Tiberius, than either father or brother. tropius. ceedeth him. His youth he passed disgracefully enough. Doubting upon the death of his father, whether he should not give a double donative to the Soldiers to obtain their good-will, he never feared to boast that he was left partner in the Empire by his father, but that his testament was corrupted. He never ceased to plot against his brother fecretly or openly, and ere he was quite dead com- A: D. 81. manded him to be caried out as such. In the beginning of his reign he re- V. C. 834. strained himself; for his cruelty was then imployed upon flies, which pri- Jii 3, varely in a room hee was wont to catch and prick with a bodkin, so that one asking whether any body was within with Cafar? it was not unfitly an-Nnnnn

ning diffem. Strove to allay the fury of his vices by some forced virtue, yet within a while bleth his Vi- he let fall also this vizard, and became in appearance what inwardly his dispofirion inclined him to be.

20. He undertook several Expeditions, as against the Catti and Sarmati-ans (People inhabiting the Northern parts of Europe) who had cut off a mitiane. whole Legion. The Dacians also put him to much trouble, and grievously Entropius ut Great diffi. afflicted the Roman State, under conduct of Diurpaneus their King: for they supra culties in his time.

overthrew first Oppins Sabinus a man of Confular dignity, and next Corne- Orosius lib.7. lins Fuscus Captain of the Guards, in several fore and bloody battels, inso- c. 16. much that the Historians of those times, have thought fittest to passe over in filence the number of the flain: Yet at length he triumphed over them all. He was also struck at by a Civil War raised by L. Antonins President of upper Germany, whom he had incenfed by the odiousnesse of his vices, and Which yet he especially by uncivil language. This he finished absent with admirable felicity; for, that very hour the fight was to be, the Rhine swelled so high, that it hindred the Auxiliaries which were fent to Antonius from joyning with him. In the second year of his reign Agricola deseated the Ordovices in Britain, Tacitus in vita and took the Isle Mona about Autumn, and that upon his first coming into Agricole. the Island. So that the years of the Expeditions which Tacius afterwards relateth, are rather to be reckoned from the Kalends of January of the former year, as Facobus Cappellus hinteth. Though Dion Cassins, as appeareth from Xiphilin , referred the discovery of that Britain an Island to the reign of Titue. Yet others unto the time of Domitian, who at length envying Agricola that great glory he had got in reducing Britain, recalled him under pretence of fending him into Alia; and he died two years after, on the tenth of the Calends of September in the 56 year of his age, Pompeius Collega and Cornelius Priseus being Consuls. Whether hee died of poyson or nor, though there wanted not suspitions. Tacitus his son-in-law dareth not affirm. 30. Domitian having suppressed the rebellion of Antonius, grew extraordinarily cruel, putting men to death upon small and trivial accounts. Those of any note that were of his party he tortured to death by waves unheard

His crucky. of, and confounded the cause of the innocent with that of the guilty, raging against the Christians with a second persecution. He arrived at that horrid arrogance, that he flicked not to fay in the Senate , that he gave the Empire to his father and brother, who did but restore it to him; and (what was worse than this) he would be called our Lord and God. Being hereby rendred terrible and hatefull unto all, he wrought his own destruction, which fearing, and being foretold it by the Chaldeans, he grew timorous out of meafure, and was ruined with the least suspition. Hence did he cause the place where he was wont to abide to be befet with the stone Phengites, that he might see if any one came behind him; and though he was sufficiently ambitious, ver did he refuse an extraordinary honour offered him by the Senate, viz, that when he bore the Consulhip, Knights should go before him with spears among ft the Sergeants. Hence also he put Epaphroditus his Secretary to death, because it was believed that he had helped Nero in dispatching himfelf: and he killed Flavius his Uncle, though he had openly owned his two fons as his Successors, whereof the one he called Vespasian, and the other Mis death.

Domitian; which hastened his destruction. Eight moneths after he was slain by his own fervants, of whom Parthenius the chief of his Chamber was principal, Domition his wife being drawn in to the conspiracy, for that she feared A. D. of to be poyloned for her kindnesse to Paris. Longinus Proculus then in Ger- V. c. 849." many is faid to have foretold the very day of his death, and Apollonius Tya- Domitima 15. naus a famous Magitian (who being convented before him vanished out of fight) spoke of it that very hour, exhorting Stephanus as it were to strike him home. The people took his death indifferently, the Soldiers heavily, which they shortly after revenged upon the murtherers; but the Senate as it were triumphed, and ordered the memory of him to be abolished. The best thing we find concerning him was, that though he was no Scholar himfelf, he took care for repairing of Libraries. He was murthered on the fourteenth before the Calends of October, in the 45th year of his age, and the 15th of his reign, in the 849 year of the Citie, A. D. 96. T. Fulvius Valens, and C. Antifius Verns being Confuls. In his time flourished Stating Papinius, who beginneth * Sum factor the fourth book of his Sylve with the celebration of his 17th Confulfhip, sum jacon full which fell in with he 14th of his reign. Jewend and Martial also flourished Callifrate parwhich fell in with ne 1440 of ins reign. In season and really though ever poor, per, at this time; whereof the later was of Egrestrian rank, though ever poor, sed non observed.

31. Now must be give a short account of Ecclesiastical affairs according notus eques. Ecclesiastical to the course of time and matter. (a) Dionysius the Areopagine being by matters in his St. Paul, (who converted him to the faith) made Biftop of Aibens, 80- (a) Eufeb ec-verned that Church in the time of Nero and afterwards. There are extant def. Hift. 13. feveral works under his name, but suspected; and sundry Epistles, whereof one to John the Evangeliff then in the Ifie Pathmos, and another unto Polycarpus, L.A. C. 22. Linus the Bishop of Rome, being Crowned with Martyrdom on the ninth of the Calends of O tober, in the last year of Nero, according to Damasu, Cletus or Anacletus succeeded him in that Sea. Some next unto Linus do place

Clemens, then Cleus, and then Anacleus. But Irenaus, Erf bins, and Epiphanius rank them thus: Peter, Lis us, Cleius, or. Anaeleeus, Clemens; for he whom Ireneus and Enfebius call Anaclesus, is by Epiphanius and Damafus cilled Cleus. This (letus according to Damafus died in the 2 year of Domitian, on the fixth before the Calends of May, and was succeeded by Anaclesus, But (b) Eufobius maketh Anaelesus to have been Biffop twelve years, and in the 12th of Domitian to have been succeeded by Clemens, whom St. Paul in his (b) Lib 3. c.14. Epistle to the Ph lippians, calleth his fellow labourer. In the fourth year of the reign of Domitian (c) Anianus the first Bishop of Alexandria (having (c) Identified, continued there 32 years) died, to whom succeeded Abilins. As for the 6, 13, Respos of Byzantium afterwards called Constantinople, we have them in this order from (d) Nicephorus the Patriarch. The first was Andrew the Apo. (d) Vide Joftle, who having preached the word at Byzantium, and built an Oratory in feph. Scaligor Argyropolis ordained Stachys to be Billion, of whom () St. P. nol maketh in Englishmis mention. Stachys governed 16 years, after him succeeded in the year of our page 313. Lord 55 Onefimus, who governed 14. then Polycarpus ruled 17. and E.eu:he (c) Rom, 16.9.

rins 7. who came to the Chair A. D. 85. in the second of Domitian. 32. Domitian having raised the second persecution against the Christian futh, St. John the Apostle, who having continued at Ephesus 27 years, was in the ninth of his reign banished into the Island (a) Pathmes one of the Cycla- (a) Eufeb. Ec-St. Folia bades, where he wrote his Revelation. In this work he sheweth both Christs etcf. His. 1.3. nished ca Pathmos. and his own hatred of the Doctrine of the Nicolaitans; for feveral Herefies c. 18. had by this time sprung up, as St. Paul had sorewarned. (b) Enfebius maketh (b) Lib.a.c.13. Simon Magus the first Author of Herefies, concerning whom we have already spoken, but as to his Heresies particularly, I He affirmed that he himself was Father, Son, and Holy Ghoft, and that he was worthipped of all people by divers names. 2. That Christ did suffer no hurt from the Jews; for he was Christ. Hæreticks. 3. That any man might ly with any woman, for this was no fin. 4. That the I Simon Ma-World was made by Angels, and that an Angel redeemed mankind. 5. He denied the Resurrection. 6. He thought that the gifts of the holy Ghost might be bought with money, and therefore that fin of him is called Simony. (c) Ni-

2 Nicholaitass, cholas the Patron of the Nicholaitans was one of the feven first Deacons. (c) cuomus

He having a fair wife, and being accused of jealousie, permitted any to marry Strom, 13.60 her, at which fact others taking occasion, thought it lawfull for any man to Euseb. 13.c.29; have the company of any woman whom they themselves could like. (d) Epi- (d) Lib. 2. phanius writerh, that they taught Venery to be so necessary, that those men Tom. 2. Her. 25. 3 Cerinthians.

who used it not every week on Friday could not be faved. Besides these Hereticks, about the year 69 sprung up the Heresie of the Cerinthians. (e) Ce- (e) Ireneus rinthus was a Jew by birth. He taught that the World was made by Angels. Epiphanius 2. That Jesus our Saviour had for his Parents indeed Joseph and Mary, and Eusch 1.3.c.18, that at his baptism Christ descended on him, who (saith he) is called the 1.4.c.14. holy Ghoft, by whom he did all his miracles; when Jefus was to be crucified Philafhing. Nnnnn 2 of the Fews, then Christ left him, and returned into Heaven. 2. That Christs Kingdom after the refurrection should be an earthly Kingdom, and men then should live in all fleshly lusts and pleasures rogether for 1000 years. 4. He denied the Divine nature of Christ, and said, that he had onely an humane narure: and that he was not ver rifen from the dead, but should rife hereafter. 5. He affirmed that the old laws and all the old Commandments and Precepts belonging to it were to be kept, together with the new Law or Gospel, and that therefore Circumcifion was necessary for every one that would be faved. Epiphanius writeth, that certain Hareticks called Alogi, affirmed Cerinthus to have been the Author of the Revelation.

Menander.

Bafilides,

33. About the beginning of Domisian arose also the Herelie of Menander Enfet, 1,3,0,26, a Samaritan, and the Scholar of Simon Magus. He taught first, that the World &c. vvas made by Angels, and that these Angels could be overcome by no means Irenano, Epibut by Art Magick. 2. He denied Christ to be true man. 3. He affirmed him- phan. August. felf the Saviour of the World, and that he came from Heaven to fave man- Philaftr. kind, & that all vyho vyould be faved must be baptized in his name. Out of his Doctrine (that vve may speak of these Hereticks briefly) budded that of Saturninus of Antioch, who not long after in like manner taught, I That the vvorld yvas made by seven Angels, without the knowledge of God the father. 2. That Christ was but the shadow of a man, for he had neither the true Body nor Soul of a man, and thus he fulfilled the mystery of our redemption. 3 He said moreover that marriage and procreation was of the Devil. Rafilides, of whom were named the Basilidians, agreed in several points with Simon, Menander, and Saturninus. He taught, that Christ did not suffer but Simon of Cyrene; that Christ taking the form of Simen laughed them to scorn. 2 He turned men avvay from Martyrdom, affirming that it was no fin to deny Christ in time of persecution. 3. That the Angels made 365 Heavens, Eufeb.1.4. c.7. and that these Heavens made the World. He vyrote 24 books upon the Gospelland seigned to himself Prophets, whom he called Barcabas and Barcoph. He commanded filence to his Scholars for the space of five years, after the manner of Pythagoras, f arbocrates and the Gnosticks his Scholars

Ebionites.

34. Irenans viriteth, that in the time of these two Carpocrates lived, the father of the Herefie held by the Gnofticks, who thought good not to make known the Sorcery of Simon privily but openly, glorying of charmed lovedrinks, of Devilish, and drunken dreams, of assistant and associate spirits, with other like illusions. They taught further, that vyho so vyould attain to the perfection of their mysteries must vvork such facts though never so filthy, other vvise could they not overcome (as they termed them) the secular Potentates, unlesse every one played his part after the same secret operation. These were the most vite Hereticks in filthinesse of all others. They held 1. That the Soul was made of the substance of God, and that brute beasts have reason as man hath. 2. That there are two Gods, a good and an evil one, and that this evil God was the Creator of all things. Carpocrates also taught I That Christ was a meer man born of Toleph, and not of the blessed Virgin, that he was a good man, and therefore after he was Crucified his Soul went up into Heaven, but his body is still in the Grave. 2. That the World was made by Angels. 2. That there is no refurrection. 4. He rejected the Old Testament as not Canonical. Besides these, at this time arose the Heresie of the Ebionites, so called from Ebion. He taught, that Christ was but a meer man. 2. That when Fesus was 30 years old there descended on him, and dwelt in him another person called Christ, and thus Jesse and Christ dwelt, and were united together. 2. He agreed with Cerinthus in the rest of the Heresies, touching Circumcifion, and keeping all the Law of Mofes. He denied the Epistles of Paul, accusing him that he fell from the Law. The Jewish Sabbath, and other Ceremonies he observed together with the Jows, onely the Sunday he celebrated as we do in remembrance of the refurrection. 'Tis reported that St. John hearing Ebion was in the Bath refrained his company, and having feen Epiphan, Heand allowed the three Gospels published by the other Evangelists, wrote his ref. 20. own to confute the Herefies of him, Cerinthus and Menander. CHAP.

Eufeb. 1.3.c.21.

CHAP. IV.

From the death of Domitian to that of Pertinax, and the exposing of the Empire to publick sale by the Soldiers, the space of 97 years.

1. T is reported of Domitian, that not long before his death he dreamed, Sueton in Dothat a golden neck and head was grown up on his shoulders, and that he mitian. Golden dayes was fully affured, that after him were thereby portended golden dayes to the Eutopius.

Sign Damitian Control of the Control of after Domitian, Commonwealth. This truly came to passe through the abstinence, moderation, and excellent government of the fix fucceeding Princes, during the reign of whom the Roman Empire (for temporal respects) enjoyed more happinesse, thin ever before or after, Strangers affording that, which the Natives of Italy would not contribute to their own Country.

CHAP. IV.

2. Cocceius Nerva, an old man, and born in Crese (fay some, though Awelius Viothers make him a native of Narnia in Italy) after the death of Domisian Gor. had the Empire put upon him, by the Legions which then quartered amongst the Sequani in Gall. After his assuming the Government, a strong rumour went abroad, that Domitian was yet living, which somewhat perplexed him, till by Parthenius, and Petronius, Captains of the guards, he was put out of doubt; and afterwards his election was confirmed by the Senate. He took down the golden and filver Statues erected to Domitian, whereof was raifed a great fum of money, and forbad any to be fet up to himfelf. He recalled Eufeb, Ecclef. fuch as his predecessors banished, and amongst others the Christian, so that Hift. 1, 3. (21) St. John the Apostle returned out of Pathmos unto Ephesiu, Calpurnius Craffus by vast promises attempted to draw the Soldiers from him; but being happily discovered, he onely banished him to Tarentum. He eased the Commonwealth of the grievous impositions laid upon it, and having conjoyned these two things, in the times of some of his Predecessors insociable, viz.

Adopteth Trajan and dieth.

Soverainty and Liberty, although he had kindred of his own, yet he adopted M. Ulpius Trajanus, a Spaniard born, who then ruled Germany, preferring Tacitus in herein the publick good before private respects. He lived with him but three Agricola, moneths. For falling out with one Regulus a Senator, he was in fo great a paffion, that it drove his natural heat into a Feaver, whereof he died on the fixth before the Calends of February, having lived 65 years, and reigned one year, four moneths, and nine dayes, in the 851 year of the City, A. D. 98, he himself the sourth, and Trajanus Casar the second time, being Confuls. 3. Trajan succeeded him, and took the Ensigns of the Empire at Agrip-

Traign Succeedeth him.

His Wars.

pina a Colony in Gall. He presently reduced all Germany beyond the Rhine into it's wonted condition, brought under also several Nations beyond the River Danubius. But Diurpanes (or Diurpanie, Decebalus, or Decibalus, for he hath several names) King of the Daci, who had formerly forced Dofor he hath several names) King of the Daci, who had formerly forced Dominian to pay tribute, held him stiffy to it for the space of five years, with A. D. 98. V. G. 851. the expence of fo much blood, that there wanted linnen to bind up the Trajan s. wounds of the Soldiers, and the Emperour tare his own robe to supply the defect thereof. But at length he brought them under, and planted Colonies in that Country. He reduced Armenia, having killed him that feized on it, conquered Parihia (whence he was called Parihicus) and passing over Tigris and Euphrates, invaded Persia and Affyria; and got into his hands Seleucia, Ceefiphon, and Babylon. Confidering Trajan as an Heathen Prince, in excellency of Government he was second to none. He extended the Empire further than any of his predeceffors; fo that now it reached from the Irish Ocean beyond the River Tigris: from the Atlantick Sea to the Persian He extendeth Gulf; from the Mount Arlas to the Calidonian Forrest : as also as far as the River Albis, and beyond Danubius. He had in his intention to invade India with a Fleet; which he ordered to be provided in the Red Sea. He was CVCr.

Book IV.

Mirigareth

the Perfecu-

830

faluted Optimus by the Senate. His moderation was exceeding great, being backed with such a confidence of his own innocence, that giving a dagger to Saburanus according to the custom, when he made him Captain of his Guard, he bade him use it in his behalf if he did well, but imploy it aperson in ci- gainst him, if he found him to transgresse the bounds of Law and equity, for as much as he that ought to look to others. Should most of all look to himfelf. He fo used his Subjects as he himself (he said) would defire his Prince should use him, were he a private person. Though he was not scarned himfelf, yet he much favoured humane and fecular Learning, converfing very familiarly and often with the Professors thereof, whom he also preferred to Church.

4. Humane and Secular Learning he favoured, and that onely. For he raifed the third perfecution against the Heavenly Doctrin and the Church But perfecu- of Christ, to which cruelty the worldly wife men feem most of all to have contributed. Being puffed up with the Victory he had obtained over the Daci and Thracians (after the ending of the fecond Dacian War, in the ninth year of his reign, Decebalus having killed himself) as he was maching against Ofroes or Choldroes the Parthian King, and the Armenians , having commanded all that would not worthip his false gods to be put to death, Ignatius the Scholar of St. John the Apolile, and Bishop now of Amioch, was brought before him, whilst he lay (in his passage) in this City. Ignatius standing in his presence, he said, who are thou Devil (Cacodamon) who His discourse makest haste to transgresse our Commands, and perswadest others to destroy with Ignatins them (elves ? Ignatius answered, No body calleth Theophorus a Cacodamon. Bishop of An- for Devils flie from the Servants of God. But I know thou fo callest me because I molest them. For I confesse I have Christ the heavenly King; and diffolve their councils. Trajan demanded who is Theophorus ? Ignatins replyed, He who hath Christin his breast. Trajan faid, Dost not thou think we have the Gods in our breast which assist us against our Enemies ? Ignaties answered, In that thou esteemest the Devils of the Gentiles to be gods, thou errest. For there is one God, who made Heaven, and Earth, and Sea, with all that are in them; and he hath one onely begotten Sonne Jesus Christ, whose friendship I have obtained. Trajan then said, Thou speakest of him that was crucified by Pontius Pilate: Ignatius replyed, Of him who crucified sin and the inventor of it; and who approve th not of him that serveth Idols, but who in his heart wifely under frandeth this. Trajan added. Doft thou then carry Christ in thy felf? Ignatins faid, Yea, for it is written, I will dwell and walk in them. Trajan concluded thus, I award that Ignatius, who laith, he beareth in himself the Crucified, be conveyed in bonds by Soldiers to the great City Rome, there to be devoured of beaft's for a show to the People. This was accordingly executed upon the most holy Marty, on the 20 of December, as it is recorded in his Alla or the Memorials of him collected by Philo, Gains, and Agathopes, who followed him from Syria to Rome : conwhom he carning which, as also three Epistles which go under his name, the Differtations of the most Reverend and Learned Arch-Bishop of Armagh are to be confulted.

cast to wild beafts at Rome.

letter to Tra-of Antioch. This came to passe whilst Trajan stift continued there, consul- Epist. Innatii ting about the Parthian War, as appeareth from Malela the Historian of that ad Philadel-Tiberianus his City. For Tiberianus the President of the chief Nation of Palestine, moved phenos. the Emperour to moderation by this letter: I am wearied with punishing and putting to death the Galilwans (who some before us under the name of Chrifrians according to your Commands, yet they ceafe not to reveal themselves for the flaughter. And although I have laboured both by exhortation and threatnings, that they might not dare to make known themselves to me as professors of that doctrine; yet being prosecused, they do not cease. I desire therefore that what your pleasure is in this kind, your Majesty would please

5. Ignatius being vexed by a tedious journey, that his constancy might be shaken, when he came to Tross (or new Troy, built not far from the place confule ufferi-where that of Prismus stood) understood that Peace was restored to his Church um in notis ad to certifie me. * Suidas mentioning also this message of Tiberianus unto * In voce Trajan, addeth, that the Emperour forbad all his Subjects to punish the Trains Christians. Yet that this indulgence was not so universal, but that it most especially concerned Palastine, Syria, and other parts of the East, where the Emperour then resided, appeareth from Ignatius his deprecation, that the persecution might cease, when he was even to be brought into the Amphitheaire ; as the Alla or Memorials concerning him relate. But besides this Letter of Tiberianus, there is extant another of Pliny the younger, who was moved to write to the Emperour upon the same occasion, and for

As also the letter of Pliny Tunior.

6. For being Proprator of Bithynia, the variety of cases in those that 6. For using expression of antiques, to comply with the iniquity of the Plia Effl. 97. times, he declareth, that fuch as food out his threatnings thrice, he com- l. 10. manded to be led to punishment. He signifieth, that out of such as had formerly been Christians, but now worshipped the Images of the Emperour, and the gods, and blasphemed Christ, he could not get any confession of any other fault or error, than that they were wont on a day appointed, before it was light, tomeettogether, and fing an hymn to Christ; and bound themselves by a Sacramentum or religious oath, not for any wickednesse, but that they Should not commit robbery, theft, or adultery, that they (hould not break promise nor cheat. Which being done, they were wont to depart, and meet again to eat, promiscuously but innocently. To get out the truth he tortured two women (ervants, but could not find any thing justly chargeable, though through his Ethnick pravity and defire to please the Emperour, he termeth lic faith Superstitio prava & immodica, or a naughty and immoderat superstition. He addeth, that it feemed to him a thing worthy of ferious confideration: especially for the number of those that were in danger: for many, faith he, of every age and order, and of both Sexes, are brought, and will be brought into danger. For not onely hath the contagion of this superstition cone through Cities; but alfo Villages, and fields, which as it feemeth might be flopped and corrected. To be fure, it's clear enough, that the Temples which were almost desolate begin to be frequented, and the sacrifices of long time intermitted to be restored, beasts for that use now going off, which till now scarcely any would buy. Whereby it is easie to guesse, what a multitude of men might be reclaimed, if there were but place for repentance : Thus Pliny, to whom Trajan answereth (that we may onely repeat the sum) that Christians are not to be sought for, but if accused and convitted, except they recant, to be putified; concerning the absurdity and injustice of which Een- "Спараз. tence, Tertullian excellently argueth in his * Apology, most worthy to be read of all Christians.

7. In the reign of Trajan died St. John the Apostle, the time and manner The death of of his death being uncertain, though all agree as to the place, which was Sr. John the Ephefus. (a) Jerome referreth his death to the 68 year after the Paffion of (a) In Josiah Chrift, which fell in with the third of Trajan, and the 27 of December, on and 1.1 the first Feria. (b) Others place it in the 71 after Christs Passion, and the (b) Arabica fixth of Trajan, Dorothaus Bishop of Tyre (in his tract written concerning Kustemi and the lives, ends, and Martyrdoms of the Prophets, Apostles, and 70 Disci. Jacob. Cappel the lives, ends, and Martyrdoms of the eropness, espoyeres, and 70 Differ from ad A.D. ples) writeth, that being 120 years old, yet living (the Lord would so have 103. is) he buried himself, (c) feromealleged out of Tertullian, that in the time (c) in sup.: of Nero (though others lay in the reign of Domitian) he was thrown at Rome of in Mat. into a tun of hot boyling oil, yet thereby took no harm, but came out after 6.20. into a tun of not boying oil, yet thereby took no main; but came out after (d) In John this trial purer than he went in. (d) Angustine calleth him a Martyr by will: (d) In John Polycrates Bishop of Ephesus (as (e) Ensembles allegeth) sticketh not to call (2) Lists (3). him a Prieft, a Martyr, and a Dottor. But that which (f) Augustine Writ- (f) abs fugas, eth of his end, is strangest of all, and let the credit thereof rest in the choise of the Reader. How John caused at Ephosus his grave to be made, and in presence of divers went in alive, and being no sooner in and to their seeming dead they covered him. Which kind of rest faith he, is rather to be termed a fleep than death. For that the earth of the grave bubleth or boyleth up after the manner of a Well, by reason of Fohn's resting in it, and breathing: a sign of his flumbring therein. Though he died at Ephefus, yet was not the fucceeding Bishop, much lesse any other. Heir of that Authority, which for so many years he had obtained in the Church, as having many years outlived the reft of the Apostles. For to the Apostles succeeded not Apostles nor universal Messengers of Christ, of which fort Tohn was for many years, and he alone, but Bithops, every one circumscribed within his own limits. In the dayes of Train, and this third perfecution was Crucified (g) Simeon Cleophas Bishop (g) Eufeb. 1.3. of Ferusalem, being 120 years old. Justus a Jew succeeded him, after whom can 22. fome place Zachaus, Tobias, Benjamin, and John in the 19th, and last of Trajan. In the eleventh of his reign was Enariftus Bishop of Rome Crowned with Marryrdom on the fixth of the Calends of November, and Alexander succeeded him, who also being Martyred in the 19th year, on the fifth before the Nones of May, (h) Ciftus had his feat according to Damasus. And (h) Eusebl.3. we must not forget that Heros succeeded Ignatius in the Sea of An- cap.35. tioch. 8. The perfecution of the Christians drew down heavy judgements upon the Empire in the time of Trajan. In the later end of his reign hapned most grievous Earth-quakes in several places, by which four Cities in Asia, three in Greece, and three in Galatia were overturned. Antioch also whilest he wintered there was grievously shaken, whereby multitudes, which for his fake had flocked thither, perifhed by many forts of deaths. He himfelf was by an unknown hand drawn out of a window, and continued in the open air till the Earth-quake ceased, not daring to venture himself in any house for many dayes. He was now marching towards the East, and not being removed from his purpole, proceeded, croffed Tigris, fubdued Adiabene, and peirced as far as Crefiphon and Babylon : but prefently it came to paffe through Orofine lib.7. the ficktenesse of such as had revolted to him, that he, who had already de- cap, 13. voured the whole East, was forced to retreat to defend his own. For the Easth, Leth, Jews 1 supposing him intangled in an inextricable Warre. 2. Perswading themselves that by the Earth-quake was portended the ruin of the Roman Empire. 3. Thinking that from the first of Cyrus to this present had but patsed 483 years, and consequently but one of Daniels weeks to be unfulfilled, entred into a conspiracy, and made incredible slaughters of the Romans, using The Jews re- in several Countreys several Captains, whereof yet Barcocab was chief. The fury of this rebellion fell upon Egypt, Cyrene, and Cyprus. The manner of the outragious Massacres they practifed both upon Greeks and Romans was as hainous as the facts themselves; though these hainous beyond all belief, if not related by most credible, and most impartial Writers. They are their Diet 68. flesh, besmeared themselves with their bloud, wore their skins, sawed them asunder, cast them to wild beasts, made them kill one another, &c. Besides the particular butcheries which they committed throughout Egypt; about Cyrene they slew 200000, and in Cyprus 250000. Trajan resolving to pursue them throughout his Dominions, not as Enemies or Rebels of the Empire, but as Creatures noxious to humane fociety, with revenge fuiting their former outrages, sent Marcus Tubero with a great power, both by Land and Sea.

Gods judgements upon Traign for his perfecuting Christians.

832

9. He neither in a short space, nor without long, and cruel hostility similard the War ; but he flew many Myriads of the Jews. Partly for the better fecurity of the Cyprians in time to come, partly in memory of their former mifery, and the infamy of the Fows it was publickly enacted : That no Jew, shough dreven by Tempefts thither, fould presume to fet foot within their Coast, upon pain of present execution, as already condemned by his very appearance on that foil, which had been tainted with the deadly venom of his countrey-men. Their carriage in the West made the Emperour suspect their brethren in Mesopotamia, whereupon he commanded L. Quintins to banish them that Countrey, and he joyning battel with them flew also a great number. In the time of Trajan was Nero's golden house burnt, and also the Pantheon by Thunder: not the Pantheon of Agrippa, as Scaliger and Cappellus note, but perhaps that of Jupiter Ultor of Minerva Medica. At length Trajan dieth. Trajan died in Cilicia of a flux in Angust, having reigned 19 years, fix moneths, and 15 dayes, in the 64th year of his age, the first of the 224 O/mpiad, of the Citie the 870. A. D. 117. Quintius Niger, and I. Vipfanius Apronianus being Confuls. He was first of all Emperours buried in the Citie, being so beloved, that in succeeding times the people in their acclamations to their Princes would wish them the felicity of Augustus, and the geodnesse of Trajan. In his time flourished Plusarch, Luciun fist a Chri- Euste in Chron. flian , and then an Atheiff ; Plinius Secundus, Suctonius, L. Florus, Cor. Tacitus, and others.

Hadrian.

The Fews again rebel.

CHAP. IV.

10. Alius Hadriamu, or Adrian, succeeded Trajan, being the son of his Coufin German, and born alfo in Spain, in the Citie Italica, near to Civil, the birth-place of Trajan. He was more ingaged to Platina the Empresse xiphilinus ex than to her husband for his succession; for she, ere his death was published, Dione, figned the Testiment whereby he was made Heir; and the Soldiers standing to him, he took upon him the government in Syria, where he was President. At his first beginning he cut off all he suspected, and restored Discipline to Aurel Villor. the Army. He crossed the Seas into Britain, where he reformed divers spartianus. things, and caused a Wall 80 miles in length first to be made to sever the Festus Tustus. Barbarians from the Romans. He took the greatest pains of any Emperour in visiting the Province's for coming into Britain out of Gall and Germany , he allo went into Spain; then did he visit Mauritania, Parthia, Asia, and Greece; and by Sicily returned to Rome. After this he went into Af ick again, and thence returning into the Ciric, ogce more into Grecce, thence into Arabia, and so into Egypt. He ever travelled on foor, and without any thing on his head, either in heat or cold. For this travelling Florus the Poet twicted him, to whom he as wittily answered,

11. He overthrew the Sauromata (or Sarmata inhabiting the Countreys now called Russia and Tartary) but the greatest contest was with the Tens. The principal cause of their rebellion was, for that he built a new Citie, and therein a Temple to Jupiter Capitolinus, where Jerusalem stood, and called the place after himself Alia Capitolina, and he forbad them to be Circumcifed. They were confirmed in their fedition by one who pretending he came down to them as a light from Heaven to fave them from flavery and bondage, faying, he was the Star forecold by Baraam, whence being called Barcocab, he was first worshipped as the Messiah, and anointed at Bitter, a Citie in Africk, but afterwards proving to be an Impostor, they called him Barcoz ba, or the fon of a lye. Dio wrote, that the whole World was in a man- Lib. 69 p. 7931 ner shaken with this Commotion of the Jews. Hadrian sent the best Captains he had against them, whereof the chief was Juins Severus, who at this time governed Britain. Albeit in the end he had the victory, yet would he not have wished for many Triumphs at the same rate. For very many of the Romans fell; infomuch that Adrian writing to the Senate, used not that beginning which other Emperours were wont : Si vos liberique vestri valeus, Bene off; Ego quidem & exercitus valemus. But the extraordinary strength which now appeared in the Jews was given them for their destruction. The greater danger their mutiny had occasioned to the Empire, the greater was the Emperours severity in punishing their rebellion past, the greater his care to prevent the like in time to come. In battels & skirmishes were slain of them 580000. befides an infinite number confumed with famine and difeases, during the time of this lingring War, protracted of purpose by the Romans, not willing to try it out in open field with fuch a forlorn desperate multitude. Dio, who fived not long after this time, emphatically notes, that they were left few in number, their Land laid waste, sifty of their strongest Municions niterly raxed, and 985 of their Chief, and most populous Towns fackr, and confumed by fire. Adrian after this strange desolation, by Publick Decree ratified by the Senates confent, prohibited any Tem to come within the view of Judaa. Before this overthrow they had manifest figns foreshewing their defolation. Solomon's Sepulchre which they held in greatest honour, faith Dio, a little before this War fell afunder of its own accord; Wolves and Hyanaes

00000

Book IV

He dieth.

Christians.

howled throughout their ftreets, and devoured them in the fields. Such Tems as Adrian took Captive, he banished into Spain his own Countrey (this was their 10th Captivity faith John * Vafaus) where they had their Sy- * chron, Hills. nagogues, till the time of Ferdinand and Isabel, and Emanuel King of Por- A. D. 137. tugal,

12. The State of the Jews from this time untill the expiration of the Roman Empire cannot easily be gathered from any Roman vyriters, who seldom youchfafe the Tems or Christians any mention, unlesse inforced thereto by fome famous year or mutiny, or by fome other event redounding to the Roman glory. Tudan after this time was not famous for any tumult till the ruin of Romes greatnesse; the Tews wanted strength, and the Gristians willing minds to procure the Emperours glory by Seditions. Hereupon whatfoever calamity either of them suffered by the Romans, was passed over by Roman veriters, as private wrongs not worthy registring in their Annals. Upon this account 'tis no wonder they took no notice of our Saviour, or his Acts, all tending to Peace and Loyalty. For as Tacitus notes, Judaa was most quiet in Tiberius his time, which was the best news the Romans cared to hear thence. Yet the general estate of the Jews between Adrians and Honorius his timesas * one observes, may be gathered out of the reverend * Dr. Tackfon Fathers of the Primitive Church; who usually stopped the mouths of Heathers, B.1. Chap. 27. or blasphemous Atheists, by proposing their condition, then known unto all the Pag. 114. upon World, for such as our Saviour had foretold it. Thus much of the Tens untill the Creed

Advians Chatatter .

834 ...

the feries of time and affairs reduce us to them. 13. Adrian, if we look at his natural disposition, was as it were compounded of vice and virtue, yet so as he seemed to have the command of them, and may be reckoned amongst good Princes. He was much addicted to studies, and well seen in most of the liberal Arts; here was his fault, that he defired to comprehend all, and did not referve himself for the most worthy, being one of the most curious men that ever lived. And in him that faving was sufficiently demonstrated, Non est curiosus quin idem sit malevolus. For he was so envious that he mortally hated all better Scholars than himfelf, and confequently the greatest Profesiors in all Sciences; but such as were unable for their Profession he would dismisse with great rewards. He killed Apollodorus the Architect for shewing him something freely the errours in his buildings. The Captain of his Guard was Similis, who as Dio writeth. getting leave to rerire, and live quietly in the Countrey his last feven years, commanded this Inscription to be fet on his Tomb : Here lieth Similis , whose life consisted of many (or 67) years, yet he lived but 7. His cruelty toward his later end we may in charity impute to his peevishnesse contracted by the Dropfie with which he was fore vexed in every part. In his time the Church was under some persecution; for Xistus Bishop of Rome was Crowned with Martyrdom in the tenth year of his reign, on the eighth of the Ides of April. to whom succeeded Telesphorus, according to Damasus; but this was rather from the malice of others, and the wicked custom then on foor, than out of his inclination. Being something satisfied with the Apologies of Quadratus and Aristides, two learned men, he wrote a Letter to Minutius Fundanus Proconful of Asia, which Justin Marryr hath exemplified in his fecond Apology, and from him as it feemeth, Enfebins in his History, after this

14. The Emperour Cafar Ælius Adrianus to Minucius Fundanus. I re-His Letter in ceived a Letter from Serenius Granianus, that right worthy man thy Pradebehalt of the ceffor, the occasion whereof I cannot with silence passe by, left thereby men be troubled, and a gap left open to the malice of Sycophants. Wherefore if your Provincials can prove ought against the Christians whereof they charge them, and justific it at the Bar, let them proceed, and not impeach them onely for the name with making outcries against them. For it is very expedient that if any be disposed to accuse, the accusation be throughly known of you and sifted. Therefore if any accuse the Christians that they transgresse the Laws, fee that you judge, and punish according to the quality of the offence.

But in plainterms, if any upon spite or malice in way of cavillation complain agasust them, see that by all means you chastise and punish him according to his malice. Adrian at length by vomiting blood in great quantity contracted a Dropfie (if Dio writeth Physician like) which so tormented him, that he defired death, but could not have it (according to the prayer of Severianus, whom, though he judged him worthy of the Empire, of late he had put to death) but at length by an ill kind of diet accelerated it, vet faving, Multi Medici Regem fuffulerunt, and enquiring " of his Soul whither it meant " Animula vato go. He died on the fourth of the Ides of July, having lived 62 years, gula blandula and reigned 21 with 11 moneths, in the 891 year of the City, A. D. 138, bafees comefance Sulpitius Camerinus and Quintius Niger Magnus being Confuls. In his corporis, time flourished Ptolomy of Alexandria, that great Astronomer, Aulus Que nunc abibis Gellins or Agellins , Justin who epitomized Trogus Pompeius , and inlocaPallidula rigida midula. 15. Adrian first adopted L. Verus, who died the year before him, on the dabis joses?

first day of his second Consulship, and the Kalends of January. He had a fon named Lucius, and was commanded to adopt Marcus, but they being both young, Hadrian adopted Pins, and commanded him to adopt Lucius and Marcus. F. Au elius Fulvius Amoninus for his goodnesse firnamed Pius.

the fon of Aurelius Fulvius, and born in Gall within the Alpes, succeeded Adrian. There was little für in the Provinces during his reign; onely fomething was done ih Britain against the Natives by Lollins his Lieutenant, and fome bickering with the Jone, the last and weakest struglings of a dying Nation. Now was another wall of turf made in Britain, and for the Victories obtained by Lollins Urbicus, the Emperour was faluted Britanicus, who as * Pansanias tellerh us, fined the Brigantes part of their grounds, because they had fallen with War upon the Genunii, the Allies of the Roman People. * In Aveadicis. And at this time faith Cambden, as we collect out of Fabelenus, Seins Saintnius was Archiqubernus of the Navy in Britain. But whether by this title he was an Admiral of the faid Navy, or a principal Pilot, or the Mafter of a ship, I would have the Lawyers to tell. Ansoninus ruled with such care. moderation, and humanity, that he was called another Nama, all things flourishing in calmnesse and tranquility. He repaired several Cities that had been overrurned with Earthquakes, in which and other respects Pausanias giveth him large commendations. He was excellently learned; a fubril and deep Philosopher. He was rendered favourable to Christianity by the Apologies of Justin Martyr, and the supplications of others in behalf of the faithful in Afia, which were grieved with all forts of contumelies practized against them by their Provincials. He graciously sent a constitution in their behalf unto the body of Asia, which was read at Ephesus in the audience of this great Assembly, and yet is preserved to our fight in the end of Justin Martyr his second Apology, and by Eusebius in his Ecclesiastical History, according to 16. The Emperour Casar, Titus Ælius Adrianus Antoninus, Augustus

Pius, Pontifex Maximus, fifteen times enjoying the power of Tribune, four times Consul (not thrice, as it is corruptly written in Eusebius) Father of the Country, to the People of Afia Health. I know the gods are careful to difclose hursful persons. For they punish such as will not wor ship them more orievoully than you do those whom you bring in trouble, confirming that opinion which they have of you to be wicked and ungodly men. It's their defire in Gods quarrel, rather to die than live. So that they become conquerours, vielding their lives unto the death, rather than to obey Editts. It shall feem very necessary to admonish you of the Earthquakes, which have and do happen among ft us, that being therewith moved, you may compare our estate with theirs. They have more confidence to Godward than you have, you during the time of your ignorance despise other gods, contemn the Religion of the imto the death. In the behalf of these men many of the Principal Presidents have written heretofore unto our Father of famous memory, whom he answered mortal God, banish the Christians which worship him, and persecute them un-

His edict in

00000 2

CHAP. IV.

in writing again, that they were not to be longer molefted, unleffe they had practized treason against the Roman Empire. And many have informed us of the same matter, whom we answered as our Father did before us, If any therefore hereafter be found thus busted in other mens affaires, we command that the accused be absolute and free, though he be found such an one, I mean as faulty, and that the accuser be grievoully punished. That this Edict was proclamed at Ephefus in the hearing of the great Assembly of Asia, wirnesse is Meliton (faith Eusebins) Bishop of Sardis (who flourished at that time) in his profitable Apology for our dostrine, delivered unto the Emperour Verus. But Antoninus died on the Nones of March, after he had reigned 22 years, seven moneths, and 26 dayes, in the first year of the 235 Olympiad, the 914 of the City, A. D. 161. In his time flourished besides many excellent Lawyers, and Fustin the Christian Philosopher (the fon of Priscus Bacchine, and born in Flavia a new City of Palastine, as he saith himself) Polycarpus Bishop of Smyrna, Galen that excellent Physician, and Elian Writer of the natural and various Histories.

Bifhons.

17. In the first year of Pius died Telesphorus Bishop of Rome, on the Nones of Fanuary; the Sea was vacant seven dayes (both the terms being excluded) and then Hyginus the ninth Bishop succeeded on the Ides of Famary, and the first feria. In the fifth of Pins died Hyginus, on the third of the Ides of Fannary, and Pins succeeded him, when Sex. Erucius Clarus and Cn. Claudius Severus, as Damains will have it, were Confuls, which if it be true, the Sea was vacant four years. In the thirteenth of Pius, died Damafus, Pius the Bishop, on the fifth of the Ides of July, and his seat being vacant fourteen dayes, Anicetus the eleventh succeeded him on the 25 of July, the first feria. (4) From the Passion of our Saviour till the eighteenth year of (a) Euseb. 14. Adrian there were fifteen Bishops in the Church of Fernsalem all Jews. In 6, 5, 6. the which year after the utter overthrow, the fiege and conquering of the City under the faid Elius Adrianus Terufalem was called Elia, and began to be inhabited of strange Nations. Until (b) wellnigh this time this Church was called a pure and uncorrupted Virgin, for till about the year 110 there (b) Idem 1.4. was no falle doctrine fown there. Of the Gentiles (c) Marcus was the first (c) Idem 1.4. Bishop of Ferusalem. After Abilius, (d) Cerdo was Bishop of Alexandria c.6. & 1.5.c.11. in the first year of Trajan, where he continued thirteen years. Him suc- (d) Idem 1,3. (e) Justin Bishop of Alexandria, where he continued eleven years. After Primis was (e) Iden 1.4. Tustus, (f) Eumenes was Bishop, and so continued thirteen years. He was (f) 1dem 1.4. fucceeded by Marcus, who governed that Church ten years. Then followed c. s. II. (g) Celadion, who continued fourteen years. And in the Sea of Antioch (g) Idem 1, 42 (g) cessason, who continued routteen years. Thus in the second survey of the two fill continue the ferries of Bishops formerly began) after Heros (11, 20, (who succeeded Ignasius) (b) Cornelius was Bishop about the twelfth of 6, 20. Adrian.

Hereticks.

18. After the Bilhops and Fathers of the Church, it's convenient to continue the feries of Hereticks formerly laid down. About the year 110, (a) Thebulis was the first Heretick in the Church of Jerufalem. It's faid, that he fell from the Faith because they would not chuse him Bishop after Si- 6, 22, meon. About the same time were certain Hereticks called Ophice, who worshipped a Serpent, and thought that the Serpent which deceived Adam and Eve was Christ: they kept a living Serpent, which with opening of the cheft and charming of the Priest came forth, licked the bread upon the altar, Epiphan havel. and wrapped it felf about it. Their manner was to kiffe the bread, and fo to 37. eat, believing verily that the Serpent had confectated it. They defended August 1, de themselves that the Nicolaitans and Gnosticks delivered them this service. harcib. About the same time there were certain Jews, which believing in Christ, called themselves Nazarai of Nazareth. In confessing Jesus Christ to be Epiphan, haves. the Son of God they contraried the Jews. But they erred in Christian Reli- 29. gion, in that they addicted themselves wholy to the whole Law. There were other Heresicks which honoured Cain, and took him for their Father, whence Aug. they were called Caini, They highly effected of Efan, Corab, Dathan, and Abiram, with the Sodomites. They called Judar the Traitor their Cofin, honoured him for betraying of Christ, affirming that he forefaw how great a benefit it would bring to mankind. They read a cereain gospel written, asthey faid, by Judas: they reviled the Law, and denied the Refurrection. There were others called Sethiani, who derived their pedegree from Seih the fon of Adam, whom they honoured, and called Christ and Jefus; they held that in the beginng of the World he was called Setb; but in the latter dayes Christ Jesus. Epiphanius saith, that he disputed with fome of them in Agypt, and that the last of them were in his time. Ger_ Epiphin, heref. don the Hererick came from Syria to Rome when Hyginus was Bistop there. 39. He raught that God preached by the Law and Prophets, was not the Darher Eufeb.L4. of our Lord Jesus Christ. He said, that Christ was known, the Father of Christ c. 10, 11, unknown. He denied the Resurrection, and the Old Testament, he held other Epiphanbares, things with the Manichies; and Marcion was his Scholar.

(a) Eufeb.l.4.

1dem haref.38.

19. In the time of Hyginus, Valentinus the Heretick came to Rome, lived under Pius, and continued till Anicetus. He taught r. That Christ brought his flesh with him from Heaven, and took no flesh of the blessed Virgin, but passed through her as water through a conduite-pipe. 2. That there travallian conare two beginnings of all things, Profundum, i. e. the Deep: and Silentium, and and the Silence these being special constant. i. e. Silence: these being maried together, had iffue Understanding and Epiphan, beref. Truth, which brought forth 300 Anos or Ages, and of these were the De- 31 vil and others born, who made the World. In the reign of Antoninus Pius, Philastrius. Marcion also the Heretick began to teach, living in the time of Justin Martyr, who wrote against him. He was native of Pontus, first a Stoick, then a Christian, he followed Basilides, Cerdon, and Valentinus, in their Hethen a Children, he rollowed Dajorner, Crown, thou wa? Polycarp answer-resies. Meeting Polycarpus, he said, Knowest thou w? Polycarp answer-ed, I know the for the sirst born of Satan. Epiphanius writeth, that being a Enstel. 1.4. Bishops son, when he had defloured a Virgin, he was by his own Farher ex- 6, 11, 14. communicated, and afterwards flying to Rome, because they there admitted Epiphan, bares, communicated, and atterwards nying to nome, occasion they there admitted him not into the Church, he began to preach detectable doctrine. He taught, Theophyl, that there were three beginnings, Good, Jul, and Evil: that the New Te-Hieron. cont. Rament was contrary to the Old. He denied the Refurrection. He baptized Jovinan, fuch as died without Baptism, saying, that Paul bade him do so. He caught Irenaus 1, 3. that mariage was unlawful, and that it was a great fin to marry. That Cain, 6. 4) 29. the Sodomices, and all wicked men were faved, because they mer Christ when he descended into hell, but the Parriarche and Prophets are ftill in hell, for not meeting Christ; for they thought (said he) that Christ came to tempt them. Under Anicetus also came to Rome Marcellina, a woman which infected many with the Herefie of Carpocrates, who called himfelf ywosuds. She is faid to have kept and offered incense to the Statues and Pictures of Christ (which the Gnofficks said, had been made by command of

20. About the nineteenth year of Antoninus Pins, the beginning also of Montanus his Herefie is placed by Epiphavius; but from Eufebius, Cappellus would gather, that the original of it was fifteen years before, because the Historian Writerh, that Apollinarie Wrote against Militades, and Montanus Hares, 48. the Hereticks, under the Proconfulfhip of Grass, who feemeth the fame withhim, whose Consulship is by Cassiadorus cast into the fourth of Pins, He thinks therefore, that in the nineteenth year some new thing might be arrempted by Montanus; as he might this year infliture his Propbeteffes. The fe were his two Country-women, Prifcilla and Maximilla, born at Pepuzaa City of Phrygia, upon which account he called Hiernfalem, by that name. Cappellas further observeth, that of such things as are attributed to Montanus, fome were truly his, some after his death were added by the Montanifts, and some fallely ascribed to them. Montanus really held, that the promise of fending the Holy Ghost was deferred till his time, and in himself fulfilled, because the Church heretofore could not bear the yoak of more severe and holy discipline, which he indeavoured to bring in, by appointing the eating of aried meass, fasting, and Monogamy, or single mariage. The Montanists, after their number was increased did those things which Hierome mentioneth, viz. they appointed themselves Patriarchs, 2 Cenona, which word feemeth of Phrygian Original, and a Bishops. That is falsty imputed to them, Ad Marcellum which Ferome faith others did attribute, but he would not believe, viz. that tom. 3, ep.9, they pricked an Infant, and with his bloud made up the Eucharist. If this opinion may be attributed to any Hærefie, or if this prejudice did not arise from the imputation of this kind of cruelty by the Heathen to Christianity it felf., the Carpocratians rather than the Montanifts were guilty of it. But because both forts were called Gnosticks (as swelling with an opinion of knowledge) what was acted but by one, might eafily be attributed to the other. So because Montanus, as full of the Holy Ghost called upon men in the name of the Father, he was believed to confound the persons of the Trinity into one, which was the invention of the Sabelliam 100 years after. 'Tis further faid of him, that he baptized the dead, and not allowing of fecond marriages permitted married persons to be separated when they themselves would. That he took away repentance, affirming that finners could never have their fins pardoned by repentance. And that the Apostles and Prophets understood not any thing they had written, but were Arreptitii. Now to return to civil

M. Aurelius. Antoninus Philofophus, and L. Verus.

838

. .

21. Pius being dead on the Nones of March, Marcus the fon of Annius Verna succeeded, who was first adopted by Carilins Serenus his great Grandfather on the mother's fide, the second time by Lucius Commodus, and the third by Pins. He made Lucius the fon of Lucius Commodus, by whom he was adopted the second time, partner with him in the Empire, as his brother, and fix moneths after having a fon born to him on the Calends of September, named him Commodus, after his faid adoptive father. Marcus and Lucius were the first two that ever joyntly, and with equal power and authority ruled the Empire, being very contrary in disposition, though through the goodnesse and prudence of the former they maintained concord betwixt themfelves. Marcus not withstanding his publick place was so in love with the liberal Sciences, that he would frequent the Lectures of Philosophers: Lucius having little capacity, and lesse affection for such matters, gave himself up to luxury and idlenesse, onely so far restraining himself; as his interest compelled him to comply with his Collegue, although he might have been diverted from such courses by the Wars. For Vologesus King of Parthia brake into Armenia, Cappadocia, and Syria, laying all waste before him, overthrew the Roman Army, and put to flight Attidius Cornelianus, who at that time governed Syria. Against him Lucius was sent, and by his Captains did very great things, not onely for the recovery and relief of those places, but also in Affria. For, he therein took Selencia, situate upon the River Hidaspes with 400000 persons, for which he triumphed with his brother. But after they had reigned eleven years Lucius died of an Apoplexy as he rode with his Collegue in the same Chariot. 22. As for the disposition and carriage of Marcus, both as a (Heathen)

Man, and a Prince; he scarcely ever had his Superiour in goodnesse and virtue. Being extraordinarily learned (upon which account he was firnamed Philosophus) he abounded according to the dictates of right reason, with moderation, justice, and clemency. For the maintenance of his Wars, that he might not be burthenfom to his subjects, he fold several things to raise money. The head of Avidius Cassius, who having rebelled against him was slain in the East, being sent to him, he caused it presently without any insulting language Marcus giveth to be buried. Aurel. Viltor telleth us that in his time the freedom of the Citie was promiscuously given to all; so that Cambden seemeth mistaken, who writeth that by the ordinance of Pins, as many as were in the Roman World became Citizens of Rome. This freedom of the Citie was wont to be the freedom of the Citie cé all.

given either with privilege of suffrage or without. The first that had it without suffrage were the Carites. We understand, faith Gellius, that the Carites Lib. 16, cap. 13. were first made Municipes without the right of suffrage : and that it was granted to them, that they should receive the bonour of the Roman Citie, but be freed from businesse, and burthens, for that they received, and kept the sacra (or idols) in the Gallick war. Paterculus also telleth us, that in the Consulthe Citic va- ship of Sp. Post humins and Veturius Calvinus, Campanis data est civitas partique Samnitium sine suffragio, and in the same place M. Curio & Rusino Cornelio Coss. Sabima sine suffragio data civitus. What Municipium was, and who Municipes is worthy of confideration. In the time of Gellius it appears from him that those words were much in use, but nothing understood. For fuch as were of Colonies would call both themselves and their Countreymen Manicipes, which, faith he, is far diffant from reason and truth. Even so what Muncipi are, and how much they differ from a Colony, we are ignorant, and we think that Colonies are in a better condition than they.

23. Of this opinion so full of errour Adrian the Emperour learnedly difcoursed in his Oration which he made in the Senate concerning the Italicenses, or Inhabitants of Italica in Spain, (as they were called) from whom he himself descended. He wondred that the Italicenses and other antient Municipia (amongst whom he named them of Wica) when they might live according to their own customes and laws, were tickled with a defire to be changed into the condition of Colonies. He faid that the Pranestines earneftly defired of Tiberius to be altered from the flate of a Colony to that of a Municipium, and that the Emperour granted it, in confideration that under the Walls of their Town he had recovered from a deadly disease. Municipes therefore (so Gellius concludeth) are Roman Citizens of the Municipia, uling their own freedom and Laws, onely partakers of honourable imployment (Maneris honorarii) with the Roman people, from undertaking which imployment (à quo munere capessendo) they seem to be named, being bound by no other necessities, nor by any Law of the Roman people, for as much as their Land never belonged to it. Then proceedeth he to distinguish in the matter of the Carites, betwixt such Municipes as had right of suffrage, and not, for if there had been no such distinction he would never have faid, The first Municipes we understand to have been made without right of suffrage were Carites. For a more clear discovery of the relations of other places unto Rome, we shall observe this four-fold distinction of privileges. There was 1 Jas Civitatio, 2 Jus Municipii, 3 Jus Colonia, 4 Jus Lasii. Jus Civitatio was freedom of the Citie, and we find in Paterculus that it was cum suffragio & sine suffragio. Jus Manicipii we find in Gellius to Jus Civitais

CHAP. IV.

Freedom of

have also been freedom of the Citie, for Municipes were also called Cives & Jus Municipes Romani, and were named Municipes, a muneribus capiendis, or capessendis; cipii.

been free of Rome. The power or right of suffrage will not suffer us to imagine that, because Gellius calleth the imployment of the Municipes, munus honorarium, therefore it was but titular. For by the right of suffrage they had power to assemble in the Comisia, and Vote in their Tribes, Centuries, and Curia, as the occasion required : and hence doubtlesse were capable of honorable offices. And the word it felf, though fometimes it may be expounded Titular, as the Confuls after Constantines time (or rather Consulares, as they are called in * Caffiodorus, and their Office Consularitas) are termed * Lib,6, epil, Confintes Honorarii, being but Titular Confints ; yet it also respecteth autho- 20. rity and power as well as meer Title, in that the Law of the Preter (whereof we have formerly spoken) is called Jus Honorarium.

there was also as appeareth from Gellius Fus Mnncipii cum, & fine suffragio, Jus Crvitatis therefore & Jus Municipii feem to have differed little ; the former was larger, respecting single persons sometimes absolutely considered without relation to any place that was related to Rome as a Municipium.

For fingle persons (Ambassadors or others) have had the freedom of the Citie bestowed on them primarily without respect to any place at all, who perhaps could not be called Municipes, because such seem to have been proper , and onely Free-men of Municipia, and not otherwise than mediately to have

24. As for the fus Colonia, it is so termed by Tacitus also in those words: Atin Italia vetus oppidum Puteoli Jus Golonia & Cognomentum à Nerone adipiscuntur. Gellius distinguisheth it from the Jus Municipii, after this manner. But of Colonies there is another relation or alliance (necessitudo.)

CHAP. IV.

The Brick

League and · Alliance be-

Romans and

twixt the Latines.

For they do come extrensically into the City, neither do they stand on their fus calonie own roots; but are as it were begutten by the State, and have Laws and Inftitutions, not of their own, but those of the Roman people. Tet this condition, although it be more obnoxious and leffe free, is accounted better and more excellent, for the amplitude and Majesty of the Roman people; whereof these Colonies frem to be certain Images and refemblances : and also because the rights of the Municipia are obscure and oblitue ared, which by reason of ionorance the owners cannot ufe. From this it appears that Colonies were free of Lib 1. 6.14. the Citie, in which respect Pater culus giving us account of the several Co- 15. lonies that were planted till the time of Marius, mixeth with them fuch places as to which freedom was given, making it as it were the fame thing. If it had been otherwise, there would not have been any comparison as to privilege berwixt Municipia and Colonies, and it would have faved Gellius the labour of proving against the common belief that the Jus Municipii was greater. Now as for the Fus Latti, Suctonius distinguisheth it from Tus Ci- Cap. 47. vitatis, for speaking what angustus did to several Cities, he hath this expresfion amongst the rest: Latinitate vel civitate denavit. Spartianus in the life of Adrian faith, Lacium multis civitacibus dedit. And Tacitus (coming up to our Term) faith of Nero : Eodem anno Cafar nationes Alpium maritima- Annal.Lis. rum in Jus Latii transtulit. The Latines were ever counted of the kindred 6. 32. of Rome, the Romans having descended from them, and upon this account Tus Latit. there was a stricter League and Alliance with them than any other people, which injoyed not the freedom of the Citie.

25. The Latines envying the rifing fortune of Rome their Colony, laboured to suppresse it, but still were worsted, and ever forced to submit. Servins Tulling the fixth King of Rome breathing after glory in future times, in imitation of the Council of the Amphylliones in Greece, and other publick conventions (as we have formerly faid) perswaded both Nations to build at Rome a Temple or Afylum out the common expense, where the Cities meet- Dionet Halis ing yearly, hould facrifize , hold a fair at certain times , and if any conten- sam, lib. 4. tion hapned amongst them, it might be composed in a religious manner by their fellow Cities. Gathering money he built the Temple of Diana in the Aventine Mount (the most eminent in the Citie) and wrote down the conditions of the League, with the manner of observing the Feast and Mart. And that they might not be abolished by the injury of time, he ingraved the Decrees of the Council in a pillar of brasse, and the Cities which were partakers of this fociety, which pillar continueth till our age, faith Dionylins, dedicated in the Temple of Diana, inscribed with such Characters as Greece antiently used, which is no light argument that Rome was not built by Barbarians. Tarquinius the last King, and Successor of Servius, renewed this League, and taking in the Hernici and Volfei, appointed another place in the midit of all those Nations, viz. a Mount near to the Albanians, called also Mons Albanus, where yearly Foria (or a Festival) were to be celebrated, and for that time, in respect of the religion of the place, and the Law made for that purpose, they were all to abstain from all manner of violence, and in common facrifize to Impiter Latialis and Feast together; it being appointed how much each people should contribute and receive. Of these Feria, and this facrifice were partakers 47 people, and in our age, faith the Historian, the Romans observe these Ferla (called Feria Latina) and Some contribute Lambs, some Cheese, some a certain quantity of Milk, and others Cakes or Wafers made up with Milk. The facrifice is one Be for all, of whose inwards a certain portion is given to every people. They sacrifize for all in general, and the Romans preside at the facrifice. Those Ferie at first confisted but of one day, which Tarquinius appointed. After his banishment the people added another. And about fix years after, when Peace was composed betwixt Patritians and Plebeians, after the Creation of the Tribuni Plebis and Adiles, a third was added; at what time the League was also renewed with the Latines, because that after the Peace made with them at the end of the War with Tarquinius (whose part they took) they had continued peaceable and faithful to the Romans during their confusions and feditions. 26. * Diony sus mentioning the renewing of this League, giveth us the * Lib. 6, substance of it, by which description our design is accomplished as to the Tus The Contents Latii. These things were contained in the League; Let there be mutual of the League, Peace betwint the Romans and Latines, as long as the Heavens and Earth keep the same Station; and let neither make War upon the other, nor procure others to do it, nor give free passage to such as would, but to the utmost help each other infested by War, and equally divide the prey and spoils. Concerning private contracts, let the controversie be judiciarily decided in the Forum of that People where the contract was made. Let nothing be added to the conditions of the League, nor taken away, without the confent of the Romans, and all the Latine People. To this purpose a League was established betwirt the parties, and sworn to by all facred things. This near confederacy is to be taken as explanatory of the Fus Latii, including such a strong alliance as was not made with any, but afterwards according to this prescript. In processe of time the Latines came to have the freedom of the City. When this freedom was given to them is something obscure. Dionysius so relateth the flory of Cassius (in whose second Consulship, according to him, this League was renewed) as if at the same time was given to them the freedom of the City; for Coffins to curry favour with the Hernici gave them the fame league, and when he would have in his third Consulship the Agrarian to passe, he caused the Latines and Hernici to be present at the Comitia, to cary it by the greater number of voices. But if any fuch thing were, it was done rather by his over forwardnesse to gratifie them, and without the consent of the State, as those Privileges were which he bestowed upon the Henrici. However , it appeareth that they had not the freedom till this time ; for Caffins in ois flattering speech to the multitude concerning the excellent acts performed Dionyl. 18.

Ppppp

by them in his three Consulships, faith, that in his third the sedition being appeased, the Commons were reduced home: the Latines kinsmen of the Romans, but emulators for glory and Empire, were received into friendship and into the City, that afterwards they might efteem Rome as their Country, and not as an adversary. Though formerly there was a League with them, yet it seemeth they were not received into the City till now, and that rather by Cajfins his flattery, fo that neither they not the Hernici retained this privilege, and we do not find that they were admitted into any Tribe, or gave thenceforth their suffrages in the Comitia. This confirmeth what we fay, that * Flo- * L.I. c.14.), rus declareth the cause of their revolt afterwards, to have been an emulation for Empire and Magistrates, and that contemning the Romans after the burning of the City, they required Jus civitatis amongst other things.

27. This they did not now obtain, being subdued and reduced by War to obedience, and punished several wayes. However the antient League seemerh to have been renewed; at least with most of them, who were still called Socii nominis Latini, Often the Jus Civitatis was promifed them, but still deferred and put off by the Fathers, who alone know the fecret of Empire, till at length they broke out into the Social War, and yet then were they subdued again, and brought under by force, and then was given to them conquered, what they could not obtain by strong hand. After this, the hedge being broken down from about the Roman State, and through the variety of the interests of Roman Citizens pareies and factions arising, Freedom came to be given to other places, one after another, though when, to whom, and by whom, we now must not inquire. Angustus was very sparing in the grant thereof; but succeding Princes spred this privilege far and wide, till at length Antonima Philosphus communicated it to the whole body of the Empire, it being now nothing material, feeing that the multitude met not together in the Comitia, to give their suffrages, which had by variety of interests, humours, and inclinations confounded all things. Now again to our matter. 28. Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, like a good Patriot, or rather Pater Patria, did not fatisfie himself in providing for the publick good for his own time only. For he took special care for the good education of his son Commodus, committing him to the most eminent men he could obtain for money to be educated in good literature and manners. To Lucius rather than him, is to be impured the fourth persecution, which in their time raged throughout the Provinces. Herein suffered Polycarpus that famous Bishop of Smyrna, as is restified in the Epistle written by his Church unto the brethren in Pontus, He was ordained Bishop by St. John and other Apostles, with whom he conversed, and his Scholar he was, as Terrullian, Irenaus, and several of the Antients do testifie, and had ferved Christ 86 years, for he was older by much than thus, as Reverend * Ufter hath evinced. He caused meat to be set before those who apprehended him, and with wonderful alacrity and refolution underwent his Martyrdom by fire, on the seventh of the Calends of in Differt, de April, the ninth of M. Aurelius Antoninus, and the 160 of the ordinary Scriptis illius Fra of Christ, which was the same wherein Lucius died as some Inscriptions & Ignatii. of Gruterus do restifie. Now suffered also Justin Martyr, who after he had published his second Apology for the Christians, through the malice of Cre- Eufeb. 1.4.c. 15, fcens the Cynick (whom railing against Christianity he had taxed for his fil- 16, 17. 61.5. thy kind of life) as he even foretelleth in his Apology. The Churches of c. 1. Lugdunum and Vienna in Gall were especially exercised in this fiery tryal, as is to be seen in the History of Eusebius.

The fourth perfecution.

29. It may without curiofity be observed, that usually the persecutions of Gods People were followed with judgements upon the adversaries, as it now through Gods providence came to passe. For so great a Pestilence sell upon 6. 16 the Provinces, that Villages, Towns, and fields in Italy, were left with- Eutrop. 1. 8. our Inhabitant or Tiller, and Galen the Physician ran away from it from Rome home to Pergamus. This was followed by a War with the Marcomanni, which could not be caried on without new levies, wich for three years together the Emperour made at Carnutum (now Chartres) in Gall. For besides the Marcomanni (a People inhabiting that now called Merhern) the Quadi (whom some will have the same with the present Austrians, others with the Saxons and Silesians) the Vandalls (inhabiting in the now Kingdom of Sweden) Sarmatians, and Snevians, and almost all Germany were up in arms. and invaded Pannonia. The Roman Army refifting these motions, peirced into the borders of the Quadi ; but there were befet by their adversaries, and encountred by a greater Enemy, being all ready to perish by thirst. At this Eufeb. Hift. 1.5. time the Soldiers of the Legion called Melitina being Christians, fell upon 6.5.6 in their knees in presence of their fellow Soldiers, and in the name of Christ fo far prevailed with Almighty God, that prefently abundance of rain fell, fuyer, and the Enemy was defeated by Thunder and Lightning. This Legion was Paul, Diacon. thence called Fulminarrix or Thundering, and the Emperour confessing the 1.8 thence called Puminarias of Thunarias, and the Empedians, was thenceforth Xiphiles Dione Victory to have proceeded from the prayers of Christians, was thenceforth Julium Copi-favourable to such and owned the deliverance in a publick instrument or let-islument. ter to the Roman People and Senate. Herein, afterhe hathrelated the flory. and improved it in the behalf of Christianity, he commandeth such as accuse Christians meerly as such, to be burnt alive, and no constraint to be used towards the faithful. This his constitution he would have confirmed by a Senatusconsulum, and proposed to be seen and read in the Forum of Trajan. He ordereth Verasius Pollio to take care that it be sent into all the Provinces, and that any one that pleafeth may take a copy of it.

The Emperour's letter in behalf of Christianity.

20. This letter is published at the end of Instin Martyr's second Apology, together with those of Antoninus and Adrian. It could not be added by Justin himself, for erethis time he had suffered Martyrdom. Perionius thinketh, that onely that of Adrian was added by him, and the other two by some other, who saw them pertinent for the place. But Enfebius in his Hiflory mentioneth that of Antonimu as well as that of Adrian, in the words of Melita Bishop of Sardis, who wrote an Apology to the Emperour, and also * exemplifieth the Epistle it self. This letter also of M. Antoninu Philo-Sophus, is extant in the most antient Copy of the Vatican library, in the end * c.13. of Justin Martyr's works, added by some studious and well-affected person, first translated into Greek out of Latin, and again into Latin out of Greek most accurately, as we are informed by Sy burgins in his Annotations upon Tustin Mariyr. But the Emperour being called into Pannonia for the finishing of the War there, and passing into Sarmatia, fell sick. Hereupon serioully bethinking himfelf what might happen to the Empire in the minority of his fon, these parts being not fully reduced to obedience, especially in case he should degenerate from the worth of his ancestors, and give himself up to luxury and cruelty, he called his friends together, and ferioufly commended him unto them, to be advised and affisted for the best. After this he lived but one day and a night, to the grief of all men. He died at Vendebona the 17 of March, in the 58 year of his age, and of his Empire the 19, the 932 of the City. A.D. 180. Arrius Prafeus the 2 time and Elius Gordianus being Confuls.

M. Aurelius dicth.

Commodus.

His difficul-

CHAP. IV.

21. Commodus his fon (for whose sake Dio maketh the Physicians to have killed him) succeeded him, having two years before been made a Conful, through a dispensation with the Lex Annaria, as Lampridius writeth, al- an A. though it seemeth something strange, that this Law could take place upon V. C. 932. those, to whom the title of Augustus was not denied. Being owned by the A. D. 180, Army, for some time he governed according to the direction of his Father's friends, but being obnoxious to flatterers by reason of his youth, who sought to make their own ends out of him, he fliotly after, contrary to the judgement of his best Counsellors, made a dishonourable Peace with the Enemy, and away he went to enjoy the pleasures of Rome, where he was joyfully received for his fathers fake, his beatury also much commending him to the eye, For a time he here also harkned to his fathers friends, but making one Perennius an old Soldier Captain of his Guards, he being excessively coverous, allured him at first by pleasures to idlenesse and neglect of businesse, then governing all himself, he falsely accused them and others of the richer fort, that he might feize on their estates. This his design was furthered by Lucilla the Emperour's fifter, who grudging that Crifpina Commodus his wife should take place of her, entered into a conspiracy against her brother, and ingaged one Quadratus a young Noble man therein, who perswaded Quintianus to kill Commodus. But he meeting him, had no power to do the deed, onely shewing his dagger, said, The Senate sends thee this, and so was apprehended and put to death with his complices. These words concerning the Senate thus foolifhly spoken, never went out of the Emperours mind, but made him suspect all the Fathers, which advantage Perennius took, and perswaded him to kill all the chiefest of them. This being performed, this man affected the Soveraignry, but was in good time discovered, both he and his fons, whom he had fent into Illyricum to draw the Legions to revolt, and received their reward. 22. Commodus to prevent the too great power of one man, put two into his place, Cleander and Niger, for the time to come; and yet presently after had more plots laid for his life. There was one Maternus, who practifing the trade of robbery, got a great company of Highway-men together, and making himself Captain of a considerable Army, wasted Gall and Spain, and thence repelled, refolved to venture for the Soveraignty it felf. Having but little hope to obtain it by force, because of the People, and the Pretorian bands, he betook him to his wits. At that time the Annual solemnity was kept in honour of the mother of their gods, wherein it was lawful for Soldiers or any other to imitate Magistrates or their Officers. Taking this opportunity, he fent some of his Soldiers privily armed to get amongst the Sargeants and Officers of the Emperour, and so to kill him; but being betrayed by his own party, he and his plot both miscaried. After this succeeded a terrible Pestilence, accompanied with a Famine, which Cleander a Phrygian, one who from a flave came into greatest power, made an occasion to advance himself. He bought up all the Corn, thinking by a largesse thereof to purchase the Empire of the Soldiers and People, but these rising against him, as the cause of the Dearth and Plague too, after that with great difficulty, by reason of his power, the matter was revealed to Commodus, he also received his reward. These things caused the Emperour to be jealous of all men. to cast off all care of State affaires, and giving ear to every back-biter, to kill any. Hence also no persons of worth being admitted into his presence, he was ruled by diffolure companions, and fell more and more into diforder.

Ppppp 2

22. He turned charior-driver, and spent his time in killing beasts with Identified darts, and other unworthy exercises. He was the best markesman that ever Orosius 1.7.c.16. was known, scarcely ever missing any mark he aimed at. He publickly killed multitudes of wild beafts upon the theatre, amongst the rest a Panthere, which just being about to devour a man, he hit and flew in the nick of time, as the was about to feize on him. In flead of Commodus the fon of Marcus. he commanded himself to be called Hercules the son of Jupiter. Casting off the usual Robe of Princes, in complyance with that name, he would lye on a Lyons skin, and have a club in his hand; yet he would wear purple parments and cloath of Gold. To his former title he added Amazonian and Conquerour : Rome he stilled Immortal and Fortunate, and the World His Colony. A great fire hapened in the City, which burned that excellent Library gathered by his Prædecessors, with the Temple of Peace, and other buildings, which accident as the People accounted an ill omen, so they laid the guilt upon him, knowing well his practices, which he never strove to conceal. Though his throwing of darts upon the theatre much derogated from the Imperial Majelty, they were indifferently pleased with it; but when he came naked upon the flage and acted the common fencer, it seemed intolerable. At length at the Feast of Janus resolving not to proceed from his Palace as Emperour, but as a Fencer from the fencing School, attended with fuch like to the view of the People, this occasioned his end.

844

34. For, this his resolution being known to his Friends, Martia his beloved Concubine, Lains his General, and Electus his Chamberlain, laboured with all increaties to divert him from fo shameful a thing. He herewith extreamly displeased, betook himself to his Chamber, where in a roule he wrote down the names of fuch as he would have killed, and amongst them those three in that order we mention them had the first places; them followed a great number of Senators, the goods of whom he intended to distribute amonest the Fencers and Soldiers, to purchase mirth and jollity from them, and defence from these. This writing he laid upon his bed, where he did not fuspe& that any would come at it. But a little boy with whom he was wont to play, coming thither, took it up, and went out with it in his hand, whom Maria meeting, and taking up in her arms, fearing it might be fomething of consequence, read it, and thereby discovered the matter, which she prefently imparted to the other two. They all concluding that hafte was to be Eutrop. 1. 8. made, Martia gave him poyfon, and when that succeeded not, they hired Xibhil. ex Dione Narciffus to Grangle him. So Commodus died, who by his Lieutenants one. overthrew the Moors and Dacians, and bridled Pannonia, Germany, and Amel. Villor. Britain, which would have thrown off the yoak. He died on the last day of the Julian year; the 32 of his age, when he had reigned almost 13 years. A. V. C. 945. A. D. 192, he himself the seventh and Helvins Portinax the third time being Confuls. 35. The Conspirators did not make known his death, till they had made means for a Successor, and then gave out that he died of an Apoplexy, which was eafily believed, because of his voluptuous life. He upon whom they pitched Herodian. 1.2. was Helvius Pertinax, an old Soldier, who had done good fervice in Britain, where he was near killing by his Soldiers, but feverely corrected their infolence. He had been thrice Conful, yet being thus delivered from the danger he was in by Commodus, confidering the meannesse of his birth, he would Helviss Peti- have declined the burthen, but it was put upon him by the Senate, and the Army acknowledged him. He gave great hopes of an excellent Prince, behaving himself modestly and suitably towards all men. He restrained Pro- olymp. 242, and moters, took away divers tolls and gabells lately imposed, and restrained the 4. rapines and insolence of the Soldiers. This troubled the guards exceeding. V.c. 445. ly, who being so much the more sensible of the change brought upon them by A.D. 192, strict discipline, as they remembred the liberty given them by Commount, resolved to make tryal of another, and an end of Pertinax. In the strength of this resolution they set upon and killed him, though he had like so excellent a person gravely and stoutly admonished them of their duty. He died in the 85 day of his reign, and the 69 year of his age. Q. Sofins Falco, and C. Julius Erucius Clarus being Confuls.

He is onedered.

BOOK IV

Blihops.

36. Now, that we may briefly carry on the feries of Ecclesiastical macters, whence we left them. In the second year of M. Aureirus Philosophus died Anicetus the Bishop of Rome and Soier being the 13th of this Sea sucsceeded him, according to Damasus. In his 10th year Soter died, and was succeeded by Eleutherius. In the 6th of Commodus died Eleutherius, on the 7th before the Calends of June, Maternius and Bradua being Confuts, in which year Commodus and Cleander to overturn the power of the Confulfhip created 25 Confuls, for which Cleander was afterwards punished, being carried to Rome amongst the worst fort of slaves. In the following year Eleutherus was succeeded by Viltor an African , Commodus the fifth time, and Glabrio being Confuls. Touching the purity of the Church of Rome at this time Agespopus thus Wrote. (a) When I came to Rome I stayed there vill (a) Eusto, Hist. Anicetus was chosen Bishop, whose Deacon was Eleutherius, whom Soter suc- lib.4. cap. 12. ceeded, after him Eleutherius. In all their successions, and in every one of their Cities its no otherwise then the Law and the Prophets, and the Lord himself preached. Ireneus also wrote: Now (6) Eleutherius was the Lath Bishop (b) Euseb. 1.5. from the Apostles after the same order, the same Dottrine and Tradition cap.6. of the Apostles truely taught in the Church at this day continued in our sime. From Marcus the first Bishop of Jerusalem from amongst the Gensiles, some reckon 13; Bishops unto Narcissus, of whom are many things reported. He (c) was accused of an hairous crime, and although he was inno- (c) Idem lib. 5. cent, yet lest he his Church, and fled into the Wildernesse, where he conti- cap. 11. lib. 6.

nued a long time. In the mean while his accusers were wonderfully plagued 6, 8, 9. from above to the example of all perjured persons. After his departure Dies was Bishop unto the reign of Severus, as is gathered from Epiphanius. (a) Idem lib 4. After Cornelius was (d) Theophilus Bishop of Antioch, he wrote of Ele- (20.24.

Teru-

refie of Hermogenes and Marcion. After him followed Maximinus, and (f) L. 4. c.20. then (e) Serapion. After Celadion in the Church of Alexandria, (f) Agrip-15.69. pas was Bishop about the 8th year of Marcus, and governed 12 years. Him (8) L.5. c.9. fucceeded (g) Julianus in the first of Commodus, and governed to years. (b) L. S. c. 22.

27. During the reign of Commodus were several Synodes or Councils held against the Heresie of Montanus, and about the Celebration of Easter. Because before this time Councils were but few, we would not give any account of them in a scattered manner; but now shall briefly repeat from the first of all such as hapened untill the end of Commodus. The (a) Apostles (a) Alls 1. immediately after the afcention of our Saviour returned from Mount Oliver to Ferufalem, and there affembled together for the election of one to fucceed in the room of Fudat the Traitor, where they chose Mathias. This is the first Council. The (6) the second was summoned of the Apostles and (b) Alts 6. Disciples at Ferusalem, about removing the tumult risen betwixt the Gracians and Hebrews about their Widows, wherein they chose seven Deacons as they are called by Ecclefissical Writers. The (e) third was held by the (e) Alliss. Apostles, Elders, and Brethren at Jerusalem, concerning circumcision and observation of the Law, where it was resolved, that the faithfull should abstain from blond, from that which is strangled, and from fornication, the which they published by their Letters unto the Churches of Anioch, Syria, and Citicia. The fourth was held by James Bishop of Jerusalem, Paul, and the (d) Alls 21. Elders at that Citie also, where for removing of suspition, and winning of the brethren, it was decreed, that Paul should clear and purific himself according to the Law, yielding for some time to the Ceremonies of it. After the death (e) Eufeb. 13: of James the Apolles from every quarter (e) gathered themselves together at cap. 11.

Councils.

Jerusalem for the Election of a Rishop, and chose Simon Cleopas. In an affembly of the apostles, certain Canons were agreed on, and published by Clemens as 'tis said. But (f) those that now go for them are corrupt, the (f) contil, corruption of the Apostolical constitutions, and of Ignatius his Epistles ha- tom. I. ving proceeded from the same hand, as reverend Usher sheweth in his Disfertation concerning the faid Epiftles, who as to this matter is therein most worthy to be consulted. About the time of Nerva the Emperour were two (g) Synods summoned in Asia for reformation of the Churches, and Conse- (g) Euseb.1.2. cration of Bishops, where St. John the Apostle being sent for was present. c. 23. About the beginning of Marcus Antoninus was a Synod at (b) Ancyra in (b) Iden I. s. Galatia, where the figments of Montanus were confuted by Apollinarius, cap. 16. And there were held in Afia fundry Synods in which Montanus was excommunicated, and his Herefie condemned. The brethren in (i) France also af- (i) Lib.5. c. 3. fembled together, and censured the opinions of Montanus, writing to Eleutherius Bishop of Rome, that he would maintain the Peace of the Church there against such Hereticks. (k) Serapion also Bishop of Antioch held a Synod (k) Lib.s. c.ig. there about the middle of Commodus his reign, where together with many other Bishops he condemned the Montanists, or their Heresie called the Phrygian Herefie, because Montanus was of that Countrey. Not long after was held a Council at (1) Rome by Victor the Bishop about the Celebration of (1) Idem 1, s. Easter, in Palastine also, in Pontus and Gall were Synods called about the cap.23.

Controversie concerning Eafter.

38. This controversie about Easter is mentioned by Eusebius not till the last year of the 243 Olympiad, which fell in with the fourth of Severus; but (appellus thinketh it first arose in the first of the 242 Olympiad, and the tenth of Commodus, whereinthis feast was celebrated by the Jews, and the Churches of Asia Minor, at a wrong time, as Theophilus Bishop of Casaraa thought, viz. by the Jews on the fifteenth of Nijan, March 20. but by the Christians of Asia on the fourteenth of Nifan, March 19. on the fourth Feria, three dayes before the Vernal Aguinox. Theophilus supposing that the A- Beda-defnatura quinox hapned on March the 25. and that fo it ever did, and for this cause resum cap. 28. that the Sun was on that day created, and that Christ arose again the same 46. & de de minnetto day, as also that the Lords Supper was instituted on the 22 of March , contended that is was utterly against reason to prevent the Epoche of the Equimox so many dayes, and the day whereon the Lords Supper was instituted. Wherefore he procured the Fathers of Palestine assembled in a Synode, to make these Canons. 1. That never, except after March 21. 2. That never but after the fourteenth Moon. 3. That never after April 24. 4. That never except on the Lords day Easter should be celebrated; on that day which next followed the fourteenth Moon hapning next after March 21. Hereby he hoped it would come to passe, that Easter would ever be observed within the moneth of Aries. In the Synode of Palastine where these Canons were made, the aforesaid Theophilus Bishop of Cafarea, and Narcissus of Ferusalem presided. Of that at Rome, Victor the Bishop was President. In that of Pontas, Palmas, as the most antient did govern. In that of the Bishops of Gall, Irenaus prefided. There was another of the Bishops throughout Ostrosna, and the Cities therein contained; and especially held by Banchillus Bishop of Corinth with many others; all which faith Enfebius with one and the same sentence and judgement ordained the same Decree. With those also consented Cassius Bishop of Tyre, and Clarus Bishop of Ptolemais. They affirmed that it was the Apostolick tradition and custom as yet retained, that the fasting dayes should be broken up on no other day than that wherein our Saviour arose from the dead. And the Church of Alexandria celebrated Easter on the self-same day with them.

39. But all the Churches throughout Afia, as of an antient tradition thought good to observe the high-feast of Easter in the 14th Moon, on which day the Jems were commanded to offer their Paschal Lamb. As much as to fay, that upon what day soever in the week that Moon fell, the fasting dayes were finished and ended. Polycrates of Ephesus, chief of these Bishops, in his

Epitle to the Church of Rome, sheweth the custom of Asia observed unto his time, in these words. We observe the unviolated day of Easter, neither adding any thing thereto, neither taking any thing from it. For notable pillars of Christian Religion have rested in Asia, which shall arise at the last day when the Lord shall come home from Heaven with glory, and restore all the Saints to joy. Philip, one of the twelve Apostles now lying at Hierapolis, and his two daughters, who kept themselves Virgins all the dayes of their lives , the third also after the end of her holy conversation rested at Ephesus, John alfo, who lay on the Lord's breast, and wore the Priestly Attire, both a Martyt and a Doctor fleps at Ephesus, Moreover, Polycarpus Bifhop of Smyrna, and a Martyr. Thraseas an Eumenian, both a Bishop and a Martyr flept at Smyrna. What shall I speak of Sagaris, both a Bishop and a Martyr fing at Laodicea? Also of blessed Papirus and Melito an Eunuch, who was led and guided in all things be did by the holy Ghoft, and now resteth at Sardis, waiting the meffage from Heaven when he shall arise from the dead. All these celebrated the Feast of Baster, according to the Gospel, in the fourteenth Moon, swarving no where, but observing the rule of faith. To be short, and I Polyctates the meanest of you all do retain the tradition of my forefathers, of which also I have imitated some. For there were seven Bishops before me, and I am the 8th which alwayes have celebrated the Feast of Eafter on that day in which the people remove the leaven from among ft them. I therefore (my brethren) who now have lived 65 years in the Lord, have conferred with the brethrenthroughout the World, and have read, and overread the holy Scriptures, jet will not be moved at all with those things which are made to terrific us. For my Ancestors and Elders have faid that we ought rather to obey God than men. Afterwards he speaketh of the Bishops that consented, and subscribed to his Epistle, after this manner : I could repeat the Bishops that were present, whom you requested me to assemble, whom also I have assembled together, whose names if I should write would grow unto a great number; they have visited me a simple Soul, and a man of small account, and have confented to this Letter. They also know that I bear not these gray hairs in vain, but alwayes have had my conversation in Christ

40. Immediately upon this, Villor Bishop of Rome went about to sever from the unity in the Communion all the Churches of Afia, together with the adjoyning Congregations, as savoring not aright, and inveyed against them in his Epiffles, and pronounced flatly all the brethren there for excommunicated persons. But this not pleasing all the Bishops, they exhorted him to seek after those things which concerned peace, unity, and love between brethren. Their words are at this day extant (faith Eufebius) that sharply reprehended Vittor Bishop Viltor. Of which number Ironau in the name of all the brethren in Gall of Rome sharp that were under his charge, wrote, and allowed the same sentence, viz. The Mystery of the resurrection of our Saviour to be celebrated on the Sunday onely. Yet as it was very meet he put him in mind at large of his duty, that he should not estrange, or cut off all the Churches of God, which retained the tradition of old custom. He told him, that there was not onely a controversie about the day, but also the kind or manner of fasting, that this variety began long before their time; yet for all this they were at unity one with another, for this variety of fasting, saith he, commendeth the unity of faith. He told him, that his Predeceffors in the Sea of Rome, Anicetus, Dius, Hyginus, Telesphorus, and Xistus, neither did so observe it themselves, neither left any such commandment unto posterity, and yet they were at unity with them which reforred to them from other Churches, and did observe the same. Polycarpus being at Rome in the time of Anicetus, they varied between themselves about trisling matters, yet were they soon reconciled, and not a word of this matter. Neither was Anicetus able to perswade Polycarpus that he should not retain that which he had alwayes observed with John the Disciple of our Lord, and the rest of the Apostles with whom he had been conversant : neither did Polycarpus perswade Anicesus to observe it , but told him he ought to keep the antient custom of the Elders whom he succeeded. These things being at this point, they communicated one with another. And in the Church Aniceeus granted the Eucharist unto Polycarpus (or as Russians understandethit, granted the ministration of the Communion to him) for the reverence he owed him, and in the end they parted in peace; and all fuch as retained contrary observations throughout the whole universal Church held fast the bond of Love and Unity. Thus Ireneus, not degenerating from the Etymology of his name, and passing all others in the gift of reconciling the brethren, practifed for Ecclefiaffical peace. He wrote not onely to Victor, but also to fundry Governours of divers other Churches, in several Epistles concerning the faid Controverfy.

CHAP. V.

848

41. Thus do we see the first controversies about this Feast of Easter. Although the hypotheses of Theophilus concerning the Aquinottial will not abide tryal, yet doubtlesse, those had more reason on their side, who intending to celebrate the refurrection of Christ, refused to do it, but on that day he rose from the dead; the other practice seeming to have risen from a custom of keeping the Paffeover at that time, by fuch as were originally of the Ten-Mation. Notwithstanding they differed about time and manner, yet before the government of Villor, we see they agreed in brotherly love. And it appeareth that the custom of observing this Feast, was most antient, even in the Apollles dayes, as appeareth from what is faid by Polycrates, and by Irenaus, in behalf of Polycarpus. Though they differed in the manner about keeping it, yet we do not find that any denied it was to be kept at all, although they were also for the true and spiritual observation of ir, and against abuses, as all good Christians have reason to be. But (that we may conclude this controversie) in processe of time both they of Asia and others, leaving their own customs, admitted of the Paschal Canons, made by the Orientals, especially by those of Palastine and Alexandria. At length few diffenters remaining, a necessity of obedience was imposed by Constantine, who herein followed the judgement of two Synods, viz. that of Arelaines or Artes, A. D. 314, and the other of Nice, A. D. 325. But (that we may note thus much by way of Anticipation) The antient British Church as it feemeth submitted not to those Decrees, observing Easter from the fourteenth to the twentieth Moon, which computation, faith (a) Beda, is conteined within the Circle of 84. years. And for this, when they would not comply (a) Ecclef. Hift, with Angustine the Monk (who had been fent from Gregory the Great Bishop of Rome to convert the Saxons, and was made by him the first Arch-Bishop of Cancerbury) who fought to draw them to uniformity, 1200 Monks of Bangor were put to the fword (whether through procurement of Augustine or no, I shall not now determin) by King Eibelfrid, A.D. 603, the Sous also then inhabiting Ireland observed Easter at the same time as the Britains did, to whom therefore Laurentins the Successor of Augustine in the Sea of Canterbury wrote, to drive them from their fingularities. But how much he hereby profised, the prefent times do yet declare, faith (6) Beda, (b) ubi fupra who lived A. D. 700.

42. And being thus occasionally brought to Britain, we must observe in behalf of our native Country, that the thick mists of superstition being scat-When Britaintered, in the reign of Commodus (not under M. Aurelius and L. Verus, as received the Beda writeth) when Eleutherns was Bishop of Rome, the heavenly light and brightnesse of Christianity, by the means of King Lucius shone upon this Christian Island. This Prince admiring the holy life of Christians, made petition unto Faith. Eleutherns by mediation of Elwan and Meduan, Britains, that both himfelf and his Subjects might be instructed in the Christian Religion. He sent forth-with Fugatins and Donaitanns, two holy men, with letters, which at this day, faith Cambden, be extent, and, as very many be perswaded, not forged, but Authentical, as bearing date when L. Aurelius Commodus the second time, and Vefpronius were Confuls. . This Vefpronius was Vefpronius Candidus, whom Onuphrius and Baronius make the Collegue of Commodus in the first year of his Fathers reign, though an Inscription of Gruterus mentions Aurelius Verus; so that to the very first beginning of Commodus the preaching of these men is to be ascribed. These holy men instructed the King and others in the mysteries of Christian Religion. Hereupon Ninnius Writeth : King Lucius is firnamed Lever Maur, that is, a Prince of great glory, for the Faith which in his time came. Now fuch as call the being of this King into question, for that they think there was at this time no King in Britain, which was wholly and fully reduced into a Province before : Cambden wisheth to remember, That the Romans had by antient custom in their Provinces. Kings, as the inftruments of their bondage, that the Britains even then refused to obey Commodus, and that they themselves possessed and held freely those parts of the Island, which were beyond the aforesaid wall, and had there Kings of their own, and that Antoninus Pius a few years before. having put an end to War, permitted Kingdoms to be ruled by their own Kings, and Provinces by their own Comises. He citeth Tersullian, who much about this time wrote, that Those places amongst the Britains which yielded the Romans no accesse, are now subdued unto Christ. Britain is inclosed within the compasse of the Ocean. The Nation of the Mauri, and the barbarous Getullans are befet by the Romans , for fear they might paffe beyond the limits of their Countries. What should I speak of the Romans, who with Garrisons of their Legions fortifie their Empire ? neither are they able to extend the power of their Dominion beyond these very Nations. But the Kingdom and Name of Christ reachesh further still, is is believed in every place, and is worshipped of all those People about named, &c.

43. But our Ecclesiastical Writers (thus Cambden proceedeth) who have imployed both time and diligence in the confideration of this point, endeayour and labour to prove, and that out of antient Fathers of credit, that before this time, in the very dawning and infancy of the Church, Britain had received Christian Religion : and namely that Foseph of Arimathea, a Noble Senator, failed out of Gall into Britain, and that Claudia Rufinathe wife of Aulus Pudens (which woman as is credibly thought St. Paul nameth in his later Epifle to Timothy) and whom the Poet Martial fo highly commendeth. was a Britain born. They cite the testimony of Dorotheus, who commonly goeth under the name of the Bishop of Tyre, who in his Synopsis hath recorded, that Simon Zelotes having travelled through Mauritiana, was at last flain and buried in Britain, as also that Aristobulas, whom St. Paul mentioneth in his Epistle to the Romans, was made Bishop of Britain (to which Nicephorus inclineth) notwithstanding he speaketh of Britiana and not of Britania. They report likewise upon the authority of Simeon, that great Metaphraft, and of the Menology of the Greeks, that St. Peter came hither and spread abroad the Light of Gods Word : out of Sophronius also and Theodoree, that St. Paul after his fecond imprisonment in Rome, visited this our Country. Whereupon * Venantius Fortunatus wrote of him, (except he speaketh of his Doctrine) if he may be believed as a Poet. But to this pur- * Translit Ocepose, saith our Author, maketh especially, that which ere-while I alleged anum e qua out of Tertullian, as also that which Origen recordeth, how The Britains facit infula porwith one confent imbraced the Faith, and made way themselves to God by tum means of the Druida, who did alwaies beat upon this Article of Belief, That tannus habet there is but one God. And verily of great moment is that with me, which terras qualitue Gildas writeth, after he had mentioned the rebellion of Boodicia, and treat-ultima Thule, ed of the revenge thereof. In the mean while, faith he, Christ that true sun shining with his most glistering brightnesse upon the universal World, not from the temporal skie and firmament, but even from the highest cope of Heaven, exceeding all times, vonchfafed first his beams, that is to fay, his precepts and dollrine, in the time, as we know, of Tiberius Cafar, unto this frozen Islandfull of ice, and lying out as it were in a long traft of earth re-mote from the visible Sun. Chrysosome likewise, to note so much by the way, writeth of the Christian Religion in this Island as followeth. The British Islands seated without this Sea, and within the very Ocean , have felt the power of the Word (for even there also be Churches founded, and Altars erected) of that Word I lay, which is blanced in the Souls, and now allow the lips of all People. And the same Chry follome in another place : How often have People in Britain fed of mans flelb? but now with fasting they refresh the Soul. Likewise St. Hierome : The Britain divided from our World, if he proceed in Religion, leaving the Western parts towards the Sans feeting, will feek Terusalem . a City known to him by form onely, and relation of Scrip.

Qqqqq

Book V

Hereticks.

1.1

44. As for Hereticks which lived in the time with the forementioned B-(hops, and the reigns of Marcus and Commodus: There were the Secundralis, calle d fo from Secundus, who together with Epiphanes and Isidorus taught the fame with Valentinus. In life they were beaftly, all women among them were common: they denied the refurrection of the flesh, Ptolomans of whom were named the Ptolomes, taught the heretical opinions of the Epiphan, Gnofficks and of Valencinus, adding thereunto of his own certain heather August. de ish dostrines out of Homer. Marcus of whom the Marcofi, Colorbafus of Eufeb. whom the Colorbafii, and Heracleon of whom the Herericks were called Heracleonites, facrifized with witchcraft; to amaze their auditory they pronounced Hebrew words. Many women coming to Church, under colour of receiving the power of Prophecy from them, confessed they were abused by them. Marcus ran away with another mans wife. They poured oyl and water upon the head of the deceased, hoping so to redeem them. They said, that the life and generation of man confifted in feven Starrs: that Christ suffered not indeed, and that there was no refurrection of the flesh. Alcibiades refraining the use of Gods Creatures, was reformed by Attalus the Mar- Euseb, 1, 5. tvr. Archonaici. Hereticks in Palestine, referred all things unto mans power c. ers. They said, the Sabbath was the God of the Tems, and the Devil the (b) L.4.6.27. fon of the Sabbath. (b) Tatianus the Scholar of Justin Martyr gave original to the Encratite, fo called from continencie. For they abhorred mariage, forbad the use of living creatures, offered water instead of wine in the Sacrament, and denied that Adam was faved. Severas of whom were named the Severians, added to the opinions of Tatlanus, reviling Paul, rejecting his Epiftles, and the Acts of the Apostles. He said, that a woman was of the Devil, that man from the midle upwards was of God', and beneath of the Devil. Apelles, Pontinus, and other Marcionites, about this time also disturbed the Peace of the Church.

45. There were also certain Hereticks of Galatia and Cappadocia called Pepuziani, as also Quintiliani and Priscilliani, because they said, that Christ in form of a woman being the bed-fellow of Quintilla or Pricilla, revealed unto her Divine Mysteryes. Women were Priests amongst them, and their facrifices were alike to the Montanists, of which Seet they feem to have been, seeing also his Prophetesses were of the Town Popuza. Afforrita were Herericks which offered bread and cheefe in the Sacrament. Alogi denied Christ to be the Word, condemned John's Gospel, and said, that Corinthus the Heretick wrote the Revelations. Theodossu a Montanist through Sorcery took his flight towards Heaven, but down he fell and died miserably. Adamites devised a Church after the fashion of an hor-house, to keep them from cold for the space of an hour or Service time: they were all naked men and women: Virgins preached unto the test: their Church they called Paradife, and themselves Adam and Eve. (a) Florinus and Blastus fell from the (a) Euseb Eccl. Church, and taught at Rome, that God was the Author of evil, whom Ire- Hift. 1.5. c. 14, naus confuted. (b) Theodotus a Tanner denied the Divinity of Chill: he 19 was the first Author of the Herely of Ariemon, for which cause Videor Bi- (b) L. S. c. 28. shop of Rome excommunicated him. Artemon his disciple accounted Christ but a bare and naked man. He lived in the time of Victor and Zephyrinus. His companions were Afchebindorns and Natulius, who repented and fell at the feet of Zephyrinus Bishop of Rome for absolution. (c) Marcianus the Heretick maintained an hererodox opinion, out of the prerended (c) Lib.6.c.12. Gospel of Peter, whom Serapion Bishop of Antioch consuted, (d) Notins (d) Epiphan, heres. 57. denied there were three Persons, saying, All three were one. He called himfelf Moses, and said, Aaron was his brother. He said, the Father, Son, and HolyGhoft, suffered in the flesh,

The Roman Empire.

CHAP. V.

From the death of Pertinax, and the exposing of the Empire to sale, to the death of Maximinus the first elected Emperour without confent of the Senate, the Space of 45 years.

THE Soldiers having murdered Pertinax, got them to their Camp, and fee the Empire to sale, proclaming, that they would prefer him Herodian, l, a. that should offer most. Two there were found who bade money for it: first Sulpicianus a man of Confular dignity, Governour of the City, and Father in Law to Pertinax, and Didius Julianus of the same degree, a great Lawyer, and exceeding rich. The Soldiers being jealous left the former should have an intention to punish them for the murther of Perunax , accepted the offer of Julianus, who promifed what they would ask, having, as he faid, trea-Diding Julia- fures of Silver and Gold. Being by a ladder received up to the wall, and nus purchaseth so into the Camp, he promised to restore the honours and statues of Commothe Empire, dus, to grant them what liberty they enjoyed under that Prince, and to give them more than they cold ask or expect, he was caried into the Palace, the people by the way curfing and upbraiding him with his purchase. Having -thus invaded the Empire, he gave himfelf up to all Luxury, but being unable to perform his promife to the Soldiers, loft their favour, and fell into the contempt of all men, the people defiring another Prince. At this time Peforminus Niger was Governour of Syria, 'who as well for the greatnesserof his place (his Province containing all from I hanicia unto Emphrates) as for his popularity, was most eminent: him did the People extol, and they implored his affiftince. He being glad of this opportunity, eafily perswaded his Soldiers to accept of him for their Emperour, and entertained Ambassadors which now had recourfe to him as the lawful Prince. But then giving himfelf up to idlenesse, he neglected to setle and confirm his estate by going to Rome, and (what was more) by drawing the Army in Illyricum to his fide,

2. At this time governed both the Pannoniaes I. Septimius Severus an African born, a man forward and crafty, who feeing the Roman Empire thus obnoxious to every man's carch, refolved to venture for it amongst the reft, especially in regard that of those two who had seized on it, the one was negligent and secure, the other hated and despised. Being also incouraged by some dreams, he first of all invested against the Pratorian bands which had killed Pertinax, whom knowing to be much beloved by his Soldiers, he highly extolled him, and easily perswaded them to revenge his death, who once was Lieutenant of the forces in Illyricum. Then prefently (though he pretended he fought it nor) was he faluted Emperour, and took upon him the name of Perinax, which he knew was acceptable to all. After this he murched with great freed to Rome, the Italians (who ever fince the dayes of Augustus had not been used to War) receiving him in all places, and Julianus his Soldiers very flowly providing for refiftince, though he had now distributed to them all the money he could by any means compasse. Severus conveyed his Soldiers in a diffuilfed manner into the City, which was full of them privily armed ere Julianus or the People were aware; whereupon Julianus wrote to him, to fignifie he was willing to receive him into participation of the Empire, and afterwards defited he might refign it. For the Senate feeing him to timorous, and the other now at hand, being called together according to the antient cuttome by the Confuls, decreed death tohim, and the Empire to Severus. Julianus held the dignity feven moneths, having purchased death at an excessive rate.

Qqqqq 2

3. Severus

852 Severus obtaineth it.

3. Severius having thus obtained the Empire, that he might not at first crack his credit by fallifying his word, got those Soldiers into his power that had flain Pertinax, & making them be fripped of their Military Cloaths, banished them 100 miles from the Citie. Then entring the Court, he promised olymp. 242. oreat things to the Senate, professing his intention was to govern after the pre- ann. I. ferior of Marcus, and not onely to take the name, but also disposition of V. 1. 046. Percinase, although there were fome who fo well knew him that they could A. D. 193. not be deceived. After this he prepared for an expedition against Niger, but fearing to leave an Emulator at his back, he endeavoured to prevent him. This was Clodius Albinus, who at this time governed Britain, was of Patrician rank, and had a firong Army at his Command. He flattered him with the title of Cafar, befeeching him, as the fittest person, to take care of the Empire, for that he himfelf grew old, and his Children were Infants. Albinus overioved that he should obtain what he had defired without any trouble, fooled himself in his vain confidence, especially for that Severus had written to the Senate in the same frain, had ordered money to be stamped with his Image, erected him some Statues, and did him honour otherwise, to deceive him.

4. Niger much troubled at his coming towards him, took care for fecuring Lege Herodian, the passages into Asia, gathered together all the forces in those parts, ob- lib.3. tained aid from the Parthian and Atrenian Kings, seized on Byzantium, Eutrop, lib.g. and fortified the straights of the Mountain Tourus. Severus therefore directed not his course towards Byzantium, but marched for Cyzicus, where Xiphil. ex Dia-*Emilianus General to Niger met him, and either for that he was over- ne. matched, or desirous to save his Children (whom Severus, as also others of Orosum lib.7. his adverfaries had got into his hands) betrayed his trust, and lost his Army. cap. 17. Then did Severus invade Bithynia, wherein they of Nicomedia revolted to him ; but the Inhabitants of Nice stuck close to Niger : thence he proceeded into Galatta, and so into Cappadocia to passe over Taurus. The passage was To fortified and defended, that no hope there was of breaking through, till abundance of Rain-water falling down from the Mountains broke down the Wall, whereupon the Defendants fled. Then came Niger with an Army very numerous, but not to be compared with the Legions of Illyricum for skill and valour, and they met at I fus, where Darius was overthrown by Alexander. Here Niger had the same fortune in a great and bloudy battel, after which going back to Antioch, and being purfued by a party of horse, his head was cut off, having brought himself to this end by his delay and idlenesse. Severus having thus removed him, now cast his thoughts rowards his friend in .

Britain. 5. He now consulted how he might secure the Empire to his family, which could not be done as long as Albinus continuing Cafar had some title to it, and to whom in his absence the great ones had demonstrated their affections, as to a man of great nobility, and far more worthy of the Sovereigney than he who at present possessed it : he therefore resolved to remove him out of the way. By open War he thought it not convenient to do it, and therefore at first attempted his defign by treachery, sending some who under colour of bringing Letters should make him away. Albinus having warning to beware of him, this succeeded not, so that he betook himself to force, and with incredible expedition returned into the West. Albinus terrified at his hasty retreat made all possible Provision for resistance, and passed over into Gaul, where after many skirmishes they joyned in a pitche battel near Lugdunum. Victory at the first so far inclined towards Albinus, that Severus And Albinus. cast off his Robe, and hid himself, but by the coming in of Laiss, who defigned to destroy them both, and fet up for himself, the fight was so changed, that Albinus was routed, and flying to the Citie, there had his head flruck off. Then returned Severus to Rome with all his Army, which to reward, he not onely bestowed money upon them, but also such privileges, which though to him they might procure respect and service, yet proved the bane of the neglect of some Emperours, contracted floth and coverousnesse, were thence more animated to violate the Sovereignty, to depose, and set upon whom they pleased. Now he adding more suel to this slame increased their allowance of Corn, gave them license to wear Rings of Gold as Knights, and to marry and maintain vives, which broke in pieces the Relicks of the antient Discipline, and effected that we shall hear more of them upon very sad occa-

Commonwealth. For the Soldiers having formerly through the loofnesse and

6. He made another expedition into the East to be revenged upon fuch as had affilted Niger. Peircing into Arabia he besieged Aira the Metropolis of the Arravi; but found such entertainment as glad he was to retreat without any thing performed, and onely by chance as some say saved his reputation.

His fucceffe in the East.

CHAP. V.

For in his return being driven by Tempests into Parthia, he was constrained to land near Ciesiphon, the chief Citie where Artabanus the King then refided. Ariabanus ftruck with the suddennesse of the thing fled amain, and Severus taking the Citie with ease, got great Treasures, with multitudes of Captives, and returned to Rome in a Triumphant manner, having more by good fortune than policy atchieved this Enterprize. When he had done these great things abroad, and (confidering the Princes by him defeated, and the wonderfull expedition he used at all times) had approached near unto the greatest Military glory of the most famous Captains, he lay idle at home, or spending his time in judicial affairs he let fall the vizard of goodnesse, which in the beginning he had put on. His extraordinary coverousnesse increased his innate cruelty, so that under pretence of taking off his Enemies, he put to death unheard 43 persons of chiefest rank. In despite of the Senate he Canonized Commodus for a God, cast Narcisus, who strangled him (as he had deferved) to the Lyons, called himfelf his brother, and to his fon Baffianus, whom he made partner with him in the Empire, he gave the firname of An-The fifth per- toninus. His cruelty was also extended to the Church, against which he rai-fecution.

His Vices.

fed the fifth perfecution in the 10th year of his reign, wherein perished Hill. 16, 611.

barians

Britain.

7. Severus after the overthrow of Albinus, fent first Heraclianus to seize upon Britain, and to rule it : then Virius Lupus as Proprætor and Lieutenant (whom Ulpian the Lawyer calleth President of Britain) who being wearied with the inrodes and insolences of the Meste, fent for the Emperour himself over. He was glad of this occasion, not onely for defire of glory, but also to draw away with him his two sons from the Citie, where they gave up themselves to licentious rioting, and exercised irreconcileable enmity betwixt themselves. The Britains sent Ambassadors to him to beg peace, but he detained them till he had made sufficient Provision for War. and then dismissed them without granting their requests. Leaving his son Geta (whom at his arrival he also created Augustus) in the hithermost part of the Province (which continued in obedience) for the civil Jurifdiction and Administration of affairs there; he himself with Antoninus went into the further parts, where being busied in cutting down Woods, making Bridges, and drying up the Meers, he fought no battel, but what with the Enemies ambufcadoes, and with ficknesse lost 50000 men, according to Die, Herodian writeth that the Britains found him work enough, being able to retreat where the Romans could not follow by reason of the Fens, which the Natives easily passed being naked, very nimble and skilfull in the places, so that by ambuscadoes laid in the Caledonian Forest, and through the unwholeformesse of the Meerish grounds he lost many thousands of his men; but he forced them to Peace with delivery of a good part of their Countrey and their Arms. For these victories he stamped certain pieces of money with this inscription Victoria Britanica, assumed the firname of Britanicus Maximus, and his fon Geta was also firnamed Britanicus, as appeareth by his Coins, faith Cambden. But shortly after they revolted, whereupon he brake out into such a rage that he gave his Soldiers charge to make a general Massacre of them all, and returning, though much tormented with the Gout, against them raised a Wall 130 miles in length croffe the Island to separate betwirt the Bar-

Suppreffeth

Here he dieth.

diffemper, as for grief, and forrow of mind, by reason of the desperate and unreclaimable demeanour of his fon Anioninus, who once or twice gave the attempt to kill him with his own hand. These were his last words: A tronbled State of the Commonwealth I found in every place, but I leave it in peace an quieinesse even amongst the Britains. He died at Eboracum, now called York (having tried as he * faid all forts of lives, and condemned all of * Omnia fui & vanity) on the day before the Nones of February, having reigned 18 years, nihil expedit. and almost lived 66. A. V. C. 964. A. D. 211. Q. Epid ns Rufus and Pombarians and Romans, which Ballianus afterwards increased. When he had in some fore repressed the Rebels, he sickned, not so much out of any bodily ponius Rassus being Consuls. 8. Severus his body was in a Military fort carried forth by his Soldiers to the funeral fire, and honoured with a folemn justing and running at tilt performed by his Sons and Soldiers. He was also Canonized a god after the ordinary manner of the Apotheolis of the Roman Emperours, which being not formerly touched its convenient in this place to describe, as we have it from Herodian. A custom, faith he, the Romans have to confecrate those Empe- Lib. 4, ad inirors that die, their fons or successors surviving. And who sover are thus tium. honoured, be canonized, and registred in the Roll of their Divi or gods. During this complenent they hold a general mourning through the whole City, and the same mixed with a festival solemnity. For the dead body they bury of the Apothe- with a sumptious funeral, according to the manner of other men. But they ofis of the Ro- frame an Image of wax, resembling in all points the party deceased, and lay man Empethe Jame openly at the Enry of the Palace, upon a most ample and stately bed of Ivory erected on high, and covered with Cloath of Gold. And verily that Image lieth with a pale colour like unto a fick man. About the bed there fits a good part of the day the whole body of the Senate on the left hand arrayed in their blacks; and on the right hand certain Matrones honorable by the Dignity of their Hubands or Parents. And there is not one of them feen to wear any Gold about them, nor to be adorned with Jewels, but clad in white and flender Garments they represent mourners. This they do for seven dayes together : during which time the Physicians resort dayly to him to feel his pulse, and consider of his disease, and thereupon as of their Patient judicially pronounce that he groweth worfe and worfe. Then when he feemeth to be dead, certain of the nobleft, and most choice young men, as > tuned to a folemn and mourufull note. 9. These things done, they take up the bed or hearse again, and carry is out of the City into the Campus Martius, where in the broadest place thereof a frame or surret four-fquare, with equal fidet, is raifed, and made in manner of a Tabernacle, of no other matter than great pieces of Timber. Now this within is all filled with dry fuel: but without adorned with rich hangings interwoven with Gold wire, with divers Ivory portraitts of Imagery, and fundry curious pictures. Over this frame stood another somewhat lesse; but in form and furniture like unto the former, with windows and doors standing open. And so a third, and fourth Turret, smaller every one than that next beneath it, and others like it still one after another, till you come to the last. which is the least of all the rest. The manner of this building you may compare to those Lanterns, or light Towers standing by Haven sides, and commonly called Phari, which give light by fire in the night time, and direct (hips at Sea in their course to fafe Harbours. The Hearse then being monnted up into the second Tabernacle, they get together spices, and odomrs of all fores, as also all the sweet smelling fruits, herbs, juyces, and liquors, that the whole World will affoard, and thereon pour them by heaps. For there is no well of Senatorian as Equestrian rank, take up the bed, and carry it through the Via Sacra into the old Forum, where the Roman Magistrates were wont to Lay down their Offices. Here on both fides are certain steps raised in manner of stairs; upon which on the one hand are placed a quire of boyes of noblest birth and Patritian dignity, and on the other a Company of women of noble parentage, finging in commendation of the deceased Prince, Hymns and Sonets

Nation, City, or State, nor any person of rank and quality, but street every one to bessew in honour of the Prince, these last gifts and presents. Now when there's a mighty heap of spices raised, and the whole room is therewith filled, then all of Knights degree first ride about the adifice, marching in a certain measure: and therewish in their courses and recourses observe awarlike kind of motion round, in just measure and number. Charists are also driven about by fach, as fitting in them are closified in purple, and represent all the famous Roman Captains and Emperours. Theje things thus performed, he that succeedeth in the Empire takes a torch, and sets it to the tabernacle: then all the rest on every side put sire under, and every place being filled with that drye fuel and odors, instantly are taken with a vehiment fire. Then prefenily from the last and least tabernacle, as from some high surret, when the fire is pur winderneath, an Eagle is let fige, which is believed to carry the Princes Soul up into Heaven. And fo from that sime forward the Emperour is adored amongst the rest the gods. 10. Severus lest his two son Antoninus Bassianus (called also Caracalla Lege Herodian, from a barbarous habit he gave to the people, as Spartianus Writeth) and Geta 1, 4. equal sharers in the Empire. They after his death left not off their former And. Vitt. equal marers in the Empire. I new after his death left not off their former contentions, but increased them to that height, that they could neither live Spatian Euclidean English Spatian Euclidean nor reign together, but thought of parting the Empire betwist them; but their Dion, lib. 77. mother Julia (Spartianus maketh her the step mother of Antoninus, and to Orofium 1.7. have loved him better than her own fon Geta, nay filthily, infomuch that the 48. maried him afterwards) by her passionate interposition hindred it. They then betook themselves to secret conspiracies, which succeeding not, Antominus refolved though it were by open force to kill his brother, whom he perceived to be far better beloved than himfelf, and either breaking into his brothers chamber, or getting in by his mothers means, under pretence of re-Baffianus haconciliation to be made, killed him in her bosom. This done, he secured the Empire to him by bribing the Soldiers, to whom he was so profitse, that in one day he bestowed on them, what his father had been unjustly scraping together for eighteen years. Then falling like a favage beaft into cruel courses, he cut off all Gera's friends and acquaintance, all the Senators of any considerable rank or wealth, the Lieutenants and Governoors of Provinces, with the Vestal Nuns, and set the Soldiers to kill the people beholding the Circum-

fian Games. After this going into Germany, to please his Army he lived an hard and labouring life; and thence passing into Thrace, he there imitated Olymp.247. Alexander the Great, whom he ever much affected to talk of, and pretended and to emulare. He went thence to Ilium, were he counterfeited Achilles, and V.C. 965. to emulare, the went thence to thum, were ne counterfeited pennues, and fo to Alexandria, where he made the Inhabitants dearly repent of their rath Balliania:

rr. Being naturally given to much tatling, they had formerly railed against him for his cruelty towards his brother, and despited him, for that being a man of to contemptible stature, he compared himself to their Alexander. Relotving then to be revenged on them, he first entertained them very plaufibly, but afterwards drawing forth all the youth by a wile, he compaffed them in with his Army, and killed them all. After this defirous to become famous by some great exploir, he sent to the Parthian for his Daughter, and pretended that he himself would come and mary her, whereby that King being perfwaded to meet him with'a great number of people, he fell upon them and made a great flaughter, for that they thought it needleffe to come armed to a wedding; and Ariabanus himself with difficulty escaped. Getting here much boory, and as he thought much glory, he returned into Mesopotamis, where he received punishment from above, for his manifold cruelty. There was one Opilius Macrinus an African born, and one of his Captains; whom he unworthily used. This Macrinus receiving a letter from Maternianus directed to the Emperour (who had commanded him to call together the Magicians, and confult them about his end; and whether any lay in wait for the Empire) wherein Anjonium was advited to cut him off, as aiming at the Soveraignty, when he had ventured to open it, perceiving that either he or ving killed his brether, crucily rageth against others.

Clemens Alex-

andrinus.

Minutius

Christians.

Felix.

holding a certain garland or crown in his hand, as if it were wickednesse for him to fet it on his head as the rest did, was asked why he did so, and answered, that he was a Christian. This was the occasion of the Emperours rage.

About the fifteenth of Severus he wrote against the Marcionites, whom he fo impugneth, as yet underhand he inculcateth his Montanism. For faith he:

Among It us spiritual reason derived from the Comforter, perswadeth in the Faith fingle matrimony. But we must not forget, that about the fourth of Severus he wrote a most excellent Apology for the Christian Faith. At the fame time with Tertullian flourished Clemens Alexandrinus, because a Philosopher of Alexandria, the Scholar of Pantenus, and Master of Origen.

Eusebius mentioneth him, and Pantanus in the second of Severus, at which time it's probable he wrote his Stromata; for not intending his Chronology beyond the time of Commodus, he seemeth not long after his death to have begun that Work. At this time also lived Minutius Felix an eminent Lawyer.

and the Author of that excellent Book intituled Offavins, which, as La-

Etansius Writeth, dosh declare how fit an affertor of the truth be might have been, had he applied himself wholly to that study. This Book being intended as an Apology for Christian Religion, acquainteth us what thoughts the Heathen at that time had thereof, as also do the Apologies of Justin Marin, the Books of Origen against Celsus, and especially that of Tertullian. We have already shewn the rife and increase of Christian Religion, we have delivered the feries of the most eminent Bishops and Fathers thereof, as also of the several Hereticks which from within disturbed the peace thereof. We have also given an account of the several fiery tryals the faithful underwent.

But what opinions the Infidels had of Christians and Christianicy, of what crimes they accused them, whence their hatred proceeded, whereupon the Emperours grounded their bloody Edicts: what the Primitive Saints did in the mean time, how they behaved themselves under these pressures, how they carried it towards their Enemies, how they flood affected in duty towards their Princes; in sum, what their conversations both as men and Christians were, is most worthy to be considered, and those things in short out of the Apologies aforenamed, and other Authors, we shall endeavour to dis-his Master must dye, and therefore procured one Martialis to kill him. This man being inraged against the Emperour, for that he had condemned his brother without sufficient hearing, slew him as he was making water, on the fixth of the Ides of April, after he had reigned fix years, and two moneths, in the first year of the 249 Olympiad, A. V. C. 970. A.D. 217, Bruins Prafens and Extricatus being Confuts. Amongst many others Caracallus put to death Papinianus the great Lawyer, as its faid, because he would not defend his paricide.

Bishops.

Tertullian,

12. In the first year of Severus (that we may continue our method concerning Ecclesiastical matters) died Victor Bishop of Rome, on the fifth of the Calends of August, and Zephirinus succeeded, the fifteenth Bishop of that Sea, according to Damafus. In the last of Amoninus Baffianus, Zepherinus died on the seventh before the Calends of September. The Sea was vacant five dayes. Then succeeded Callifui, who therefore was elected, the day before the Calends of September, on the first feria. After Dios Bishop of Jerusalem whom the Bishops of the neighbouring Churches had ordained after the departure of Narcifus, Germanion succeeded, and after him Eufet, Ecclof. Gordius, in whose time Narcissus shewed himself again, as if he had been Hift 1.6.6.10. risen from the dead, and was intreated by the brethren to enjoy his Bishoprick, being much marvelled at for his departure, for his Philosophical course of life, and especially for the vengance and plagues of God poured upon his accusers. And because for his great age he was not able to supply the place, Alexander Bishop of Cappadocia was joyned withhim, and governed alone after his death. In the Church of Antioch, Asclepiades was Bishop after Serapion, about the first year of Caracalla, and was succeeded by Philesus about the last of that Prince's reign.

13. Upon Zepherinus Bishop of Rome falleth very foul Tertullian a Presbyter or Priest of Carthage in Africk, for that he was more severe against such, as through fear had facrifized to Idols, than against Whoremongers and Adulterers, wherein not without cause truly (faith Cappellus) but yet without measure he blameth Zepherinus, and the whole Roman Clergy, the manners of whom were even now very corrupt, if we may believe Tertullian, But really not fo much out of harred to their vices, as out of prejudice to the truth he calleth the Roman Clergy Psychiam, as well in his book de pudicitia, as in that de monogamia, which he thus beginneth, Hayesici nuptias aufevum Pfychici ingerunt. He pretendeth therein onely to condemn second mariages, but indeed most of his arguments respect both first and second, although he himself had maried a wife, and retained her in his Presbytery. But mariage which he had learnt of the Orthodox to approve, he learnt of Montanue todespise, to whom he would have more revealed than to the Apofiles, because they as yet (or for certain the Church) could not bear the yoak of fastings and calibare which Momans: brought in, and he as a Montanife would inculcate. This humour at length fo possessed him, that neither content with the title of Christian, nor that of Presbyter, he put on the Philosophick Pallium, as a token of a more austere life, wherein he would be eminent not onely amongst Christians but also Montanists. The Africans either being amazed or laughing at this novelty, he wrote an elegant but most obscure Book de pallio, which before being miserably lacerated, hath been of late dayes restored by the most learned Salmasius. He wrote his Book de pra-Scriptionibus about the eighth year of Commodus, as Cappellus gathereth, because in the end thereof making a Catalogue of Hereticks, he mentioneth Theodorus (who was centured by Vittor Bishop of Rome, for holding Christo have been a meet man) but not Artemon the Heretick who appeared shortly

14. His book de corona militis acquainteth us with the occasion of the persecution of the Christians, in the reign of Severus. The Emperour ere he marched into the East (in that Expedition wherein he overthrew the Parthians) made his elder son his partner in the Tribunitial power, and by his liberality pleased the People formerly inraged by the many punishments he in-

Book IV.

2.1.

15. The first thing that the Heathens cavilled at in Christianity was the newnesse of it. (a) St. Paul seemed to them to be a setter forth of new gods. And there was an antient Law at (b) Rome which forbad introducing (b) Tertullian new ceremonies into Religion, as worshipping strange deities, unlesse ap- 4001 c. 5.

proved by the Senate, and this was an inviolable Law, which binding Emperours as well as others, Tiberius could not as he defired receive Tefus An inquiry into the con- Christ amongst their gods; for the Senate would not approve of a God they did not know. This prejudice (which yet in Idolatry often effected nothing dition of amonest the Romans) was increased by a misapprehension of our Lord and Saviours sufferings; his being crucified made them despise both him and his. Hence (c) Tacitus telling the original of the Christian, will let the World (c) Annalysis, know, that Christ from whom they derived their name , was Tiberio imperitante per procuratorem Pontium Pilatum supp'icio affectus. And hence

Trajan (d) in his discourse with Ignatius, when he would mean Christ, cal- (d) Atta Igled him Crucifixus, the Crucified, in way of contempt. This contempt was nation increased into disdain, by reason that Christ would have no other Gods (as they accounted them) tharers with him in worthip, and this diddain was heightned into rage, when Christians preaching this faving doctrine, decla-

The reason of ming against Idolls, proving the Heathen gods to be devils, and striking at the the prejudice root of Paganism, endeavoured to draw even the whole World from superof Heathens Sition and Idolatry so antient and universal. You say, we do not worship the against them. Gods, faith (e) Tertullian. This was accounted a crime of facrilege, and worthy of death; much more then to diffwade others from doing it. Quid, (e) Apol. 6. ... homines (suffinebitis enim me impetum suscept a orationis liberius exerentem) homines (inquam) deplorata, illicita ac desperata faltionis graffari in Deos nonne ingemiscendum est ? faith (f) Cacilius, as he is brought in by Minutius. (f) Minut. Hereupon the Christians were accounted Aleol or Atheifts, and it was a cu- Fal. Ottav. Rom to cry out against them where the Greek tongue was used (g) Asse Tos (g) Smyney, about, Take off the Athersts, which words they would have had Polycarp ut- Excelle only. ter as a fign of his recantation. This by reason of the malice of Devils (who De S. Polycaro) were worshipped under the names of the several gods) did render them so Martyrio p. 16. highly impious in the opinion of the vulgar, and so inraged the multitude & 20. against them, that (h) if Tiber over-flowed, if Nile watered not the plains, if (h) Tertull. Heaven Stopped its course, and did not powr its rains here below, if there Apol, cap. 40. were Earth-quake, Famine, or plaque, they would immediately sry out Christianos ad Leones, Cast the Christians to the Lions, as the cause (in their opinion) of all the calamities that arrived in the World, and all the evils that people suffered. 16. Prejudice and harred being rifen thus high invented false accusations, and caught hold of idle furmifes, nothing ill feeming incredible concerning thole that are already odious. (a) Athenagoras faith, that three things they (a) In reacobjected against Christians: Atheism, Thyestes his feasts, and the Copulation give west ran of Oedipus. The two later (whereof as much as concerneth Threstes and Oe- xpisiarar dipus we have spoken above in their due places) (b) Tertullian thus explaineth. Pag. The Crimes pretended against us (the horror of which makes us passe for wicked in the opinion of the people) are, that we meet together to facri-" fize a Child; that after we have taken away his life by a barbarous supersti- Jews ulkers. tion, we devour his body, and when we have eaten the flesh of this in- Apole 6.7. onocent, we commit Incests. They add, that we have Dogs, which serve to Malicious of ungodly, and facrilegious pleasures. Calicius maketh beginners initiaflanders con- ted by the bloud of an Infant, which they all licking up, and dividing his their worship, and the Covenant of their mutual secrecy. "These Sacra (faith he) are more overthrow the Candies, and doing the Office of those infamous Merchants of modely, make us lose all shame in taking the lights from us, and covering our actions under the veil of darknesse, embolden us to seek the use Members amongst themselves, by so horrid a Ceremony confirmed their league, abominable than all facrilege. And as for their feafting tis known fufficiently, all speak of it in all places; the Oration also of our Certenfis doth witnesse it : They meet together to eat on a fet day with all their Children, Sisters, Mothers, Persons of every Sex, and every age. There, after much eating, when the feast is now grown hor, & the heat of incestuous lust is kindled by drunkennesse, the Dog that is tied to the Candle-slick is provoked, by casting a piece of meat beyond the length of the string by which he is bound to a violent leap. Thus the confcious light being overthrown and put out, &c. so he proceedeth to the same purpose, but in worse terms. And Justin Martyr in his Conference with (c) Tryphon the Jew demandeth of him after this manner. Do you also believe concerning us that we devour men, and after meat the lights being put out, use wicked and promiscuous Copulation? Laftly, Theophylus Patriarch of Antioch in his third book (d) to Antolycus against Calumniators of Christian Religion, summeth up what we have alrea- (d) Pag. 119. dy faid, in these words. They say that our wives are common, and accuse D. us that we use promiscuous Copulation. Besides, they lay to our charge that we do not abstain from our own fisters, but rashly dare to violate those with incestuous lust. But this is most cruel and brutish of the Crimes they obe ject against us, when with an impious mouth they prate, that we cat mans flesh: neither do they cease to traduce our Religion or Doctrine as of yesterday, and destitute of all truth, which neither we our selves, if a controversie arise are able to defend with clear demonstrations. Further they say that our Doctrine is nothing but folly, and meer toys. 17. That malice which invented these impious adjuncts of Christian Religion, found out a suitable object of vvorship; for the Romans had so far forgotten their own antient cultom of ferving their Gods without Images, or refemblances (for Numa, as Plutarch telleth us, and the antient Romans for many years admitted no Images in their Temples, because the Deity cannot be made out by any external refemblance) that they thought it impossible for any Religion not to be guilty of Idolatry towards some visible thing. Hence came that fable related by (a) Facitus (an Author guilty of malice against (a) Histor. both Jews and Christians) "that the Jews consecrated the Image of an Asse, ib. 5. because (sofsooth) being pressed sorely with thirst in the deserts of Arabia, certain wild Affes shewed them the Fountains where they were wont to drink; although this Author, who faith he lies not, writeth, that Pompey having raken Jernsalem, and entred into the Temple to feethe mysteries of the Jewish Religion, saw there no Image at all. (b) Terinslian conceiveth, that (b) Apoll sap. from this rale fprung that conceit that the Christians (the Religion of whom 16. was drawn from that of the Jews , and succeeded it) worshipped the Essies of an Affe, " I hear, (faith Cecilius) that they worship a Consecrated head And the obof an Affe, the most filthy of all forts of Cattel, I know not out of what foolish perswafion; a Religion worthy of, and descended from, such manners. But he goeth further, and relateth a report, that the very object of their vvorthip was also obscene. (c) Tertulian further writeth, that some were of (c) Ibid. opinion they worshipped the Crosse, and Cecilius, from the ignominious death of our Lord, and this instrument of it, argueth to the infamy of Christian Religion in an abominable manner. Tertullian in the fame place telleth us, that fome with more apparent reason believed the Sun to be their God, and sent them to the Religion of the Persians, herein suspecting them for so doing, because when they prayed they turned themselves toward the East. [And after an answer to this Iye he addeth:] * The calumnies invented to cry down our Religion arose to such excesse of impiety, that not long ago in this Citie, a picture of our God was shewed by a certain infamous person that got his 'living by exposing to the light of the people, wild beasts: who by a strange faculty gotten by him to avoid their bitings, making use of his craft, shewed also the aforesaid picture to all comers, with this inscription thereon, This is Onochoetes the God of Christians. This supposed God of the Christians *pretended by him, had the ears of an Asse, an hoof on one of his feet; carried a book, and was clothed with a Gown: we laugh at the barbarousnesse of this name, and the extravagancy of this figure. Such were the blasphemies of Pagans against Christian worship, and as an argument for them they pro-had made necessary. They (d) talked of nothing more than the excesse of (d) Tertal, 4-the Tables of the Christians. And after all this they (e) objected, that they pol. cap. 19

They were accused of Sedigion,

CHAP. V.

ject of it.

18. As to their outward demeanour they accused them of Sedition as well 649.42. as Acheim. Let (a) Tertullian speak upon what frivolous grounds: "You say we we worship not the Gods; nor for the welfare of the Emperours offer [a-cap.10. crifices to them. The one of these two Crimes whereof you accuse us must e necessarily follow upon the neck, or in consequence of the other : for, being resolved to render no manner of vvorship to your Deities, we must necessiaerily in like manner be refolved not to facrifize at their Alcars, whether for our felves, or for what person soever it be. Hereupon you conclude us guilty of Sacrilege and high Treason. Pliny was wont, as appeareth from his Epifile to Trajan, to try Christians by supplications made to the Images of the Gods, and amongst these to the Emperour's picture, by Frankinscence and Wine. This burning incense was an ordinary tryal in all ages. They were also counted fingular and factious, for that they would not swear by the Fortune or Genius of the Emperours. This the holy Martyr (b) Polycarp was bidden to do (b) Epift. Ecby the Proconful a little before his suffering. These prejudices and false opi- eleste Supnions being heightned and irritated by the malice of Devils, who found ment de S 20mons being neightned and firstated by the manuel themselves neerly concerned therein, procured wonderfull entity and ma- lycini 30. 19-10 Ptg. 20.21.

duced the secrecy of Christian meetings, which their own cruelty and rage were not any way profitable in the commerce of the World.

19. " Is it not ftrange (faith (a) Tertullian,) that the hatred vvhetewith (a) Apol. c.3. this name is pursued, in such manner blinds the minds of most men, that when they writnesse the probity of a Christian, they mix in their discourse as a reproach that he hath imbraced this Religion. One faith, truely, he of

Rrrrr 2

Hence wonderfull hatred.

' vyhom you speak is an honest man, if he vvere not a Christian, and his life vyould be free from blame. Another, Do you know fuch a one, vyho had the reputation of a vvise and discreet man? he is lately turned Christian. [Again] "These people by an extreme blindnesse of harred speak to the advantage of the name Christian, when they strive to render it odious. Forfay they, How pleasant, and of what a good humour was that woman? How fociable and jovial was that man? Tis pity they should be Christians. So they impute the amendment of their lives to the profession of Christianity. Some of them also purchase the aversion they carry against the name Christian, which we bear, with the price of what is most precious to them, rather desiring to lose the sweetnesse of life, tranquillity of mind, and all fores of commodities, than to fee in their houses that which they have. A man who heretofore had his mind full of jealousie, can no longer endure the company of his wife, what affurance foever he hath of her chaftity, after once he perceives her to be turned Christian, and parts from her now when her actions full of modesty have extinguished all suspitions wherewith he was heretofore moved. A father who of a long time endured the disobedience of his heathenish son, resolves to take from him the hope of succeding him in his inheritance for turning Christian, when at the same time executing his commands without murmuring. A master that used his slave gently when his carriage gave him some cause of distrust, now puts him far from him for a Christian, when he hath most assurance of his fidelity. Tis committing of a Crime to correct the disorders of a man's life by the motions of an holy conversion to the Christian faith, and the good which is produced by so hapby a change works not so powerfully in the minds of men, as the hatred they have conceived against us. Indeed this hatred is strange; and when I confider that the name of Christian onely makes it to be so, I would willingly know how a name can be Criminal and how a simple word can be accused Thus much (and enough I suppose) to discover hatred it self.

The fad effects thereof.

20. And the fruits of hatred abundantly manifested themselves. " In faltning Christians to Crosses & pieces of wood. 2 Hanging them up as publick spectacles unto all men upon Gibbets. 2 Piercing their bodies with 'Irons. 4 Cutting off their heads. 5. Exposing them to the rage of wild beatts. 6. Throwing them into flames. 7. Condemning them to work in 'Mines, and 8. confining them to Islands; "all which forts are expressed in one (a) Chapter of Tertullian's Apology. In another (b) place he thus writeth. (a) Cap. 12. 'How often do those people being our Enemies, of their own accord, without (b) cap. 37. vour authority, affault us with stones, or burn us? They are verily so inraged against us, that during the furies of the Bacebinales, they spare nor even Chri-'flions that are dead, but trouble the rest of their Graves, they violate their Sepulchres which are as Sanctuaries of the dead, they draw forth their bodies not to be known whose bodies they are, after mangled by them, which with extreme inhumanity they tear, and drag in the freets. (c) [Elfewhere; (c) cap 9: How many are there among you, O ye people, that are this way greedy of the bloud of Christians? and also among you, O ye Magistrates, after you ap-'pear fuch Justiciers by the severity you treat us with, whose consciences I would flrike with true reproaches of having procured the death of your own Children ? Yet if you did but simply put them to death, it were something ; but by a strange excesse of cruelty you throw them into the water, you ex-'pose them to the rigour of cold and hunger, and the rage of Dogs; you will not take their lives away with the sword, because too gentle a death, and which men of the age of discretion had rather suffer, than any other that hath violence in it.

21, But, when the time of persecution drew towards an end, then especially did the Devil rage with variety of torments against the Primitive Saints. For besides those formerly mentioned, (d) Serapion was thrown down, and had (d) Eusteb. his neck broken. Some having their flesh rent in pieces with the lash of the Ecctef. Hist. whip were broyled upon Gridirons; others having their skins razed, and fcorched, being tied by one leg were hanged on Trees with the head down-

"Rians, as the losse of their chastity.

The un-

CHAP. V.

wards. They pulled out the right eyes of others, fearing the empty place. and fawing off the left legs of others, feared their hams, and condemned them to the mines, which usage was accounted elemency. Some they fcourged to death, cut out their tongues, and strangled them. One Apphianus, being all disfigured with stripes, had his feet wrapped in flax, oyled all over. which being fet on fire, it ran over his flesh and consumed it, and petrced into the marrow within the bones, fo that his whole body distilled like to melting wax. Three dayes he was suffered to remain in prison after this torture. and when, by reason of his wounds he was ready to yield up the ghost, then was he thrown into the Sea. Others were forced by buckling, justing, and buffering, to kill one another. Others of mens estate were gelded and condemned to the quarries. Others were tormented grievously and chastized with imprisonment and fetters, of which number was Pamphilus, of all my familier any dearest friend, a man who among all the Martyrs of our time, faith English, excelled in every kind of virtue. He had his fides mangled with sharp razors, and then was ordered to be kept in the noisom stench of the close prison, where the rest of the Confessors remained, till at length he was put to death, being a Presbyter of the Church of Cafaraa, concerning whose life Eusebina wrote three books, and for his familiarity with, and affection to him, had the firname of Pamphilus. This variety of the tormenrs of Christians, appeareth from several passages in the seventh and eighth Books of his Ecclefiaftical Hillory, which so far exceedethall inferiour punishments, or (that I may speak in the phrase of Lawyers) the diminutiones capita, that we need not mention how Christians were denied the title of (b) Roman Citizens, (b) Tertul, But one kind of punishment far more grievous than the rest there yet was Apol. 1, 36. which more tormented Christians than all other tortures put together : and that was the loffe of their chaftity. This Engine battered the fort of Origen's constancy, who chose rather to facrifize to idols than be abused by an Æthiopian, as Suidas Writeth. (c) Tertullian giveth us another influnce, that we (c) Apol. c, ult. may enquire no further. "And indeed a few dayes fince, (faith he) you condemned a Christian maid to be rather prostituted to an infamous corrupter of her chastity, than to be exposed to the rage of a Lyon; you acknowledge there is no punishment nor kind of death, which is so intolerable to Chri-

22. Such was the entertainment Christians found in this World, now let us see how far they deserved it, as to their demeanour, and cariage; for there is no need to speak here to the two first objections. "The Heathers (a) be- (a) Tertul, ubi lieve a man could not make profession of Christianity, without being tain- supra c. a. ted with all forts of crimes, without being an Enemy to the gods, to Princes, to the Laws, to good manners, and to nature, and that a Christian could not be acquitted, unleffe he denied himself to be such an one. "But their cariage was fo quite contrary to all these surmises, except that concerning the worthip of Heathenish vanities, or Devils, under the name of gods, that they onely were the fervants of the true God, they onely were free from all forts of crimes, were the best friends and Subjects of Princes, of the Laws, good manners, and nature, and truly affirming themselves Christians, might justly in this respect have been acquitted from these accusations, "They (b) affembled together by troops in their prayers to God, as if thereby they (b) Identified, would carry by force the grant of whatfoever Prayers were prefented to him, c. 39. this being a violence agreeable to him; they prayed to him for the Emperours, their Ministers the Magistrates that had the exercise of their power, for the State, the tranquillity of the Empire, and the retarding of the gene-'ral diffolution that must put an end to all things. They affembled together to read the Holy Scriptures, and they read them according to the condi-tion of the times; what ferved either to admonify or confirm the faithful.

demeanous of In effect, the Scriptures nourished their faith, lifted up, and affured the Christians in confidence they had in God, neverthelesse they ceased not to confirm their their Assem- discipline by the strength of precepts they continually repeated. In these 'Assemblies, (saith Tereullian, for the former are also his words) we make exhorta-

exhortations and threatnings, and exercise Divine censures, which banisheth finners, and excludes them from our Communion: we judge them with very much circumspection, because we know that God is in the midst of usuand · fees what we do; and certainly it is a great foretelling of the judgment that God will one day pronounce against the wicked, when the Church moved with the enormity of their crimes, darts out upon wilful finners the Thunderbolts of excommunication, and deprives them of the participation of it's prayers, it's fociety, and all forts of holy commerce with it. 23. In our affemblies there are Bishops that preside, and have authority over all the faithful committed to their charge; they are approved by the fuffmeges of them whom they ought to conduct, and it is not bribes that we drive them this honour, but restimonies given of their good life. For sinishe Church of God nothing is done by the allurement of gifts; if there be among us any kind of treasure, the money laid up makes our Boligion not 'ashamed. And every one contributes a little sum at the end of the moneth. or when he will; but it is if he will and can; for none are constrained to give. If we get any alms it is of good will, riches gathered in this manner are as the pledges of piety; we do not confound them in eating and drinking with excesse; we make not use of them for the soul and southsom exercise of gluttony: but we employ them in feeding the poor, burying them, in comforting poor Orphans, in helping old men who have frent their best dayes in the service of the faithful, in helping the poor that have lost by "Thipwrack what they had, and in affifting them that ferve in the mines, are banished into Islands, or shut up in prisons, because they professe the Reliegion of the true God, that during the time they suffer for the confession of his name, they may be nourished by the stock of the Church. But it's a Arrange thing, that this charity among us gives occasion to some to blame us. See, fay they, how they love one another; this aftonisheth them, because they have one another. See fay they, how they are ready to die one for another; but as for them they are ready to kill one another. [A little after :] As we live with the same intelligence, as if we had all but one spirit and one foul; we have nothing in particular but our wives, of all things in the World there is nothing but wives, whereof we reject community; and on the contrary, among them of their wives onely there is a community with other men. [Again]: Now feeing we live together with fo much charity, that all our goods are common, why should they wonder if we make good chear? for it's one of the excesses you reproach us with; besides the infamous crimes whereof you accuse our repasts, you charge it with prodi-

24. In the same place: "But you need but consider the name given ro our repafts, to know the quality thereof. They expresse themselves with the fame word that fignifies Love with the Greeks; what soever the cost is that is made, it is profitable, for they gain alwaies in this expence, because it hath piety for it's foundation. It's a sweetnesse wherewith we comfort the want of the poor, but we do not treat them as you those infamous gluttons, who glory in felling you their liberty for the price of their good bits, wherewith they fill their bellies in the midst of a thousand indignities. But we will have the least served with our goods, because they we know, amongst 'all men, are the most acceptable unto God. Then seeing our feasts have so honest an end, consider what our disciplne should be in the rest of our actions, even those which more concern the duties of Religion; it permits nothing that is dishonourable, nor far from modesty. Before we go to table we are fed with heavenly meat, which is the Prayer we make to God; we eat as much as is necessary to satisfie one's appetite, we drink as much as is e permitted to persons that have a care of their purity. They that sit there take their refection with so much temperance, as they may remember they are obliged to worship God even at night. They entertain one another as People that know God hears what they say. After the repast done, they have washed their hands, and lighted the candles, they are invited to praise God and sing Pfalms

' Plalms taken our of the holy Scripture, or Hymns every one composeth e according to the capacity of his mind. By this it may be known, if they have committed any excesse at table; as the repast began with Prayer, so it ends; they go forth not in divers troops to defile their hands with the blood of men, not in several bands running in the streets, not to do insolencies; but with the same care they had in coming in, preserve their modesty and

425. Finally, Christians retire with so much stayednesse, that we may very well see they are not fed so much with corporal meats as the substance of heavenly and holy discipline. Certainly, it were but reason that this society of the Christians should be reputed unlawful, if it were like to that the Laws forbid; it were but good reason it should be condemned, if it were onot different to that which deserves to be condemned; if one would res proach it with the same things wherewith they accuse sactious societies. But tell me, Did we ever affemble to proure the hurt of any one? we are the 'same in a body, as when separated: as we are in particular, so we are in gee neral: that is to say, in whatsoever estate we are found, we injure no body; when any virtuous or godly People are affociated, when any pious or chaft e persons assemble together, their union should not be called a faction, but a Lawful fociety. Thus Tertullian, to whose words, as to the harmlesse cariage of the Christians in their Assemblies, Apostates witnessed, as appeareth from what Pliny the younger wrote to Trajan. As for the crimes supposed to be committed by them, they ever challenged any witnesse to be produced of them, and sufficiently consure the vain reports in their Apologies. They laughed at the fiction of the Asses head, and such like stuff, and as for worshiping Crosses, Octavius in his answer to Cecilius faith, Cruces etiam nec colimus nec optamus. Croffes we neither worship nor wish for. Neither did they meet for seditious ends, "as for the alteration of Governments, destruction of Princes, or changing of Magistrates. Though they rather than any of late time might pretend to Saintship, yet did they not make it an advantage to good and loy raise themselves; whereby they laid no claim to the riches, power, or dominion al Subjects, of the World; they did not hold that temporal dominion was founded in grace, nor that the true and spiritual Kingdom of Jesus Christ destroyed the right and interest of earthly Princes. They made no infurrections, covered on rebellious designs with the name of Religion, neither did by violence attempt a reformation; although they were so many thousands, as in all probability they might have born down all before them; though they filled all places, confilted of all degrees, and hereby shared in all interests, in power and intelligence, and by their combinations might have taken their opportunities, and enfly by force of arms made way for their defigns; yet obedience to their Princes they ever held most inviolable by the Principles of their Religion, and made use of no other weapons than prayers and tears, though for their own safety and preservation. Hear to this pupose what challenges Tertullian makes to such, as if he had not had truth on his side, would have been fufficiently ready to instance wherein the Christians offended, which they yet never adventured to do.

'26. In the midft of all these outrages have you observed that these People. who (as you think) have framed so strange a conspiracy, and on the other ' fide might be animated enough for revenge, by the punishments wherewith you take away their lives, endeavoured any thing against you to ressent the evil treating they have received? Think you that they want an occasion? Tertul, Applog.

when in one night onely a small number of torches would be enough to sa- 6.37.

cisfie their Revenge, if with us it were permitted to render evil for evil: but God forbid we should do so. A Religion that is all divine, ought not to revenge by the instigation of men, and must not think it strange to suffer that which is made use of to prove them. If we would declare against you as open, rather than pursue you as secret Enemies, might we not have forces and troops enough? It may be the Moors and Marcomanns, the Parthians, or what foever People they are shut up in the bounds of the Country they from vice, and adorned with Virtues; or if any were noted to be of contrary practice they were difowned, and the Censures of the Church cut them off Chap. 44.

from it's fociety. "We speak as boldly (faith Terrulian) of the Christians you put to death, for we have an unreproveable testimony of their in-

'inhabit, make a greater number of men than they that are foread throughout 'all the Universe; and have no other limits than that of the World. Our Re-'ligion is but of late, and we fill already all that your power acknowledgeth, Cities, Fortresses, Isles, Provinces, the Assemblies of the People, the Armies also, the wards and tenths of Rome, the Palace, the Senate. 'and the Publick places; Finally, we leave you but the Temples. What Wars were we not able to undertake? with what readinesse might we not arm our felves, although we should be the weaker? we that suffer our selves fo willingly to be killed, if in our Religion it were not rather lawful to let our selves be killed than to kill others, we could also make War against you without taking up arms, by casting our selves into a revolt; it were enough nor to live with you, and to separate our selves, our divorce would print ' shame in your foreheads. For if Christians, who make so great a multiquide of all forts of persons, should abandon you to retire unto some Country of the World dispersed from all society; truly the losse of so many Ci-'tizens, of what condition foever, would disparage your Government, and 'also our retreat would be a rude punishment to you; without doubt this so-'litude that would remain with you, this filence of all things, this general aftonishment of nature, even as if all the world were dead, would frighten vou; you might go seek Subjects to command, there would remain to you more Enemies than Citizens: now you have more Citizens than Enemies. because there are a greater number of Christians among you.

27. Thus we see their peaceable demeanour, how their minds stood asfected towards their Princes, let Tertullian also inform us. "As for us, in Apol, c. 30. the prayers we make for the Emperours, we call upon the eternal God, the true God, the living God, Oc. [In the same place :] It is to him to whom we Christians addresse our prayers, make them with hands opened and lifted up, because innocent; the head bare, because no cause to be ashamed when we pray to God. There are none tellethus the words we are to fay, because it is our heart that acteth rather than our tongue. We pray for all the Emperours, and ask of God that he would give them a long life, that their Em-'pire enjoy a profound Peace, their house happy concord, their Armies be innumerable, themselves assisted with good Councils, the People remain in their duties, no trouble arise in the World against their authority. In conclusion, we forget nothing the Prince can wish for, either as a man or as an Emperour. [A little after:] Whilft we implore the grace of God for the Emperours with our hands lifted up, and fretched towards Heaven, let irons peirce us, let us be put on gibbets and croffes, fires confume us, knives cut our throats, beafts devour us: A Christian while in prayer lifting up his hands to God, is in a condition fit to receive all forts of punishment : and therefore continue O Magistrates so affected to Justice; ravish our Souls whilst they are in prayers for the welfare of the Emperours, and make 'a crime of Truth and the Service of God. [In the following Chapter] We intreat them who believe our Religion takes no care of the prefervation of the Emperours, to examine the Laws of our God, to read our Books which we hide not, and which by divers accidents fall into other handsthan ours. They will learn there, that it is commanded by a superabundant charity, to pray to God for our Enemies, and to wish good to them Chap. 31. that persecute us. Now have we greater Enemies, and ruder persecutors, than those who make offended Majestythe ground of the crime they impute unto us? Holy Scriptures content nor themselves with this commandment, they have another more precise and clearer. Pray, fay they, for Kings, Princes, and Powers, that you may live in peace in the midth of publick tranquillity. [In another place:] But why should I stay longer in making known with what sence of Religion and Piety Christians honour Emperours? It sufficeth to say, we are obliged to render them our duties, as to Chap. 32. whom our Master hath commanded us so to do.

28. As these Primitive Saints were good Christians in the excercise of their Religion, and dutiful Subjects towards their Princes, so also good men, free from regrity, which we take also from your Registers. You who are imployed every day in judging those that are kept in prisons, and who terminate their processes by the sentences you give against them, of all the malefactors accufed before you of fo many forts of crimes, is there any of them charged with Murther, Robbery, Sacrilege, and other faults, to whom they im-' pure also that he is a Christian? either, when Christians are presented to be 'punished as Criminals; because they are Christians, is there any amongst them whose life is like that of other prisoners? all the Malefactors wherewith your prisons are so filled, that they are overcharged, are of your Religion; they are also of your Religion that make the Mines grone under the weight of their stroakes, they are the wretched creatures of the same Reli-' gion you are, wherewith the wild beafts fill their bellies. All those poor Criminals which your Citizens keep to make them cruelly kill one another before a bloody people, have the same opinion you have of the Deity. Fi-'nally, among all those wretched creatures there's not one Christian, unlesse 'he be charged by justice, because of his name Christian; Or if there be a Christian found attainted of the same crime, he hath no more the name *Christian, because he hath lost that divine quality in losing his innocency. [Elsewhere:] But some will say, even among us there are a people that give Chap. 46. themselves the liberty of doing evil, that free themselves from subjection to our Laws, from any what ever exact observation of what is legally commane ded by us. It is true there are some such, but so soon as they fall into this disorder, we hold them no more for Christians. The fear of God, and purity of his precepts constrained them to this holy demeanour; for opinion of men and their rules, as this our Author observeth, canot reach the heare, not procure that Virtue which is truly good. "The admirable fruits their doctrine produced (the knowledge whereof became publick by the commerce they had in the World) made so down-right a conflict with rude incredulity, that to defend herfelf the was forced to fay, that their profeson had no Divine matter in it, but was onely a Sect of Philosophy, that

29. Though there was some diversity of opinions amongst them, yet as we shewed before, they maintained mutual Love; and that herein they were highly eminent as to all pious effects, is already evident. Origen in his Work against Celfus (wherein he especially answereth to cavils raised against the Author and Doctrin of Christian Religion) takes off that prejudice that love and uni- might arife from diversity of opinions, by a comparison of this difference with ty of affection, the numerous (or rather innumerous) Sects of Heathen Philosophers. Ternullian layeth the great guilt of Herefie upon such, who being animated with the spirit of Philosophy, insected the purity of the Gospel with the corruption of their own opinions. In the fame place he acquainteth us what was the Primitive touch-stone of Doctrines most worthy now to be considered. "These People (saith he) that are separated from us have violated the Faith of Jefus Chrift, and we beat down their errors by this onely exception, Apolog. c. 47. that the true rule of Truth is, that which hath been taught by our Master, and transmitted to us by those holy persons, who had the happinesse to hear his 'Word, and receive his Divine Institutions; we shall shew in another place, that all which is not conformable to this rule, hath been invented by new Doctors, who came not till after the bleffed companions of the Sonne of obliged Christians to rank themselves there in the exercise of Moral

They forced 20. All these excellent qualities in those holy persons, might have sufficed Devils out of Devils out of bodies, and to to ftop the mouths of Calumniators, and had weight sufficient to have moved confesse the minds of all men to the truth. But that Victory which Christians obtained over Devils, might much more have convinced them of the power which SILLL

And good men.

They were

CHAR. VI.

866

was superiour to that of their false Gods. "Christians were wont to drive away these Devils from the bodies of men, forced them to confesse that they were 'no other than Devils, and that Jesus Christ was the Son of God, and his way the true Religion. [As to the former, first hear Terrullian :] But if Apolog c. 37:1 we were not near you, who would fnatch you away from these secret Enemies, whose malignant operations make so strange a confusion in your minds, and so horrible an alteration of your healths? I have heard speak of the possession of Devils, wherewish you are tormented, from whence we deliver you freely, and without reward; if we had the spirit of Revenge, it wefe enough to satisfie us, that these corrupted spirits might at all times e feize on your bodies, and that entrance therein were alwayes open to them. But as you do not think of that you ought, viz. fo dear a protection, you cease not to declare a People to be your Enemies, who do you no hurt, whose assistance is so absolutely necessary for you. It is true, we are Ene-'mies, yet not of men but of their errors. [In another place:] As for Devils or Genies, we are wont to conjure them, to drive them away from the bodies of men, whereof they are feized, and render them not the honours due to God only, by swearing by them. [Justin Martyr in his fifth * Apology:] Δαμωνιολήπτος γαις πολλώς, & c. For many possessed with Devils throughout the World, and this your City, whom many Exorcifts, 'Inchanters, and Conjurers could not cure, Many of our men through the 'name of Jesus Christ crucified under Ponsius Pilate have healed, and now also do heal, disarming and driving out of men those Devils that had possesfedthem. [In his Dialogue with Tryphon the Jew :] . Kard yole To onfuce-• τ@ , &c. For in the name of this the Son of God , the first-born of every creature, and born of a Virgin, and made a man subject to suffering, Pag. 311. and crucified by your people under Pontins Pilate, who died, arose from the dead, and ascended into Heaven, every Devil adjured is overcome and fubdued. [In another place of this Apology:] And now we who believe in Jefus Christ our Lord crucified under Ponius Pilate, adjuring all Devils Pag. 302. and malignant spirits, have them subject under our power. He affirmeth the same thing in other places.

31. That Christians constrained Devils to confesse themselves such, and to acknowledge the truth of the Gospel, in this matter hear also Tertullian: "If a man should bring before your tribunals one that were truly possessed of a Devil, if a Christian should command him to speak, this wicked spirit will confesse that he is a Devil, with as much truth as he faith falsely at ano- Apal. cap. 23. ther time he is a god. Let them present any one of these they believe to be wrought upon within by a deity; that in the ceremony of the Sacrifices they offer on the altars have the virtue of a God, in fenting the smell which goes out of the Sacrifices; who with force belch out words out of their ftomachs; within breathing declare Oracles; if this heavenly Virgin that promifeth rain; if this Alculapins who teacheth the fecrets of Phylick, who preserves the lives of them that must lose the same soon after, confesse not by the mouths of these Impostors, the segined inspirations of whom deceive the World, that they are but Devils, if the presence of a Christian takes 'not from them the boldnesse of lying, we are willing, that in the same place you shed the blood of this Christian, and punish him as a wicked person. [In the same Chapter:] Now seeing by our means your gods discover to you that they are no gods, and that all the other to whom men erect altars are 'none in like manner; but this at the same time they make you know, who 'the true God is, if it be this onely God whom we that are Christians worship, if we must believe of him what the Christians believe, if he must be served as their Laws ordain. When you conjure your gods in the name of Jesus Christ, do they ask who is that Jesus Christ? do they call the Hi-'sfory of his life a fable?' do they say he is a man of the same education as other men? that he was a Magician? that after he was dead, his disciples 'took away his body privately from the Sepulcher? and that he is now in 'Hell? fay they not rather, he is in Heaven? that he must descend to the terror of all the World? with horrour to the Universe? with the lamentaetion of all men but Christians? and that he shall come down on the Earth full of Majesty, as the Virtue of God, the Spirit of God, the Word, Wif-'dom, Reason, and the Son of God?

ftrength against them.

CHAP. V.

32. Whence Christians came to be so strong, as to wrest these confessions from them, hear him in the same place. "Now all the power we have of them, is the name of Jesus Christ who gives it us, it is the threatning we give them of the evils God is ready to pour on their heads, and which one day 'Ielus Christ must declare unto them. As they fear Jesus Christ in God, and God in Jesus Christ, they are under the Government of the servants of God and of Jesus Christ: so by the onely touch of our hands, and breath of out mouthes, the Devils seized with sear at the fight of the flames that en-' viron them are forced to obey us, to come out of the bodies they possesse, in despite of them, and with murmuring to suffer this shame in our presence, 'You that are wont to believe them when they lie, believe them when they s speak of themselves. None will tell alve to get shame by it, but rather to gain honour; one will sooner believe them that confesse against their own interest, than those that denie to their advantage. These testimonies which we have of your gods make men to be Christians; for we cannot give a full belief to what they fay, without believing in Jesus Christ our Master, Your gods kindle in our hearts the Faith which the holy Scripture teacheth "us, they strengthen our hope, and confirm us in the assurance we have of our Salvation. As for you, to honour them, you offer them also the blood of Christians; and is it were permitted them to lie when Christians intere rogate them, and labour to make you know the truth by their confession, they would take good heed of discovering your errors to you, as well for keeping the profit they have of them, and the honours you render them, as for the fear they might have, that in becomming your felves Chri-'stians, you drive them away as we do, from the bodies they torment with so "much rage. [In the beginning of the following Chapter: "We need nothing but the acknowledgement we have from your gods, when we make them confesse they are no gods, and when they answer us, there is no other God than the onely God we ferve, to purge us from the crimes of high-treafon and impiety to the Roman Religion. 33. No wonder then that these impure Spirits inraged at Christians, sought all manner of wayes to destroy them. But yet in their deaths they overcame them, and in all forts of indignities and tortures triumphed over their implacable adversaries; for The blood of the Martyrs was the feed of the Church. That this was so indeed, Tertullian also informeth us, the veracity of whom, as to these things alleged is unquestionable, because appealing to his adverfaries, he must needs in behalf of his cause produce such things as were most certain: the contrary whereof would have Apologized sufficiently for what he laboured to confute. We shall with the last words of his excellent Apology conclude this most delightful Subject. "But do what you e please, all inventions the most exquisite cruelty can advise you unto are to no "purpose; so far are they from profitting you, that contrarily they draw all their caemies the World to our Religion. The oftner you make an harvest of the Chriin their very estians, the oftner their number increaseth: their blood is a seed which dies on the earth, but puts forth prosperously. Many among you have laboured to perswade men to suffer constantly pain and death, (as Cicero in his Tufculans, Seneca in his Treatife against casual things, Diogenes, Pyrrhon, and Callinieus) but Christians have better raught constancy, by the examples they have given, in supporting patiently so many evils, than all the Philofophers with all their discourses. This same obstinacy, wherewith you reproach us, is an excellent mistresse of truth which we believe: for who is there not that striveth with contemplation to seek what it is? who after his e fearch made, comes not on our fide? who having imbraced the Faith of . Jefus Chrift, defires not to fuffer for him, that by his fufferings he may get the infinite treasures of the grace of God, and that in the price of his blood,

SIIII 2

They triumphed over Gauns.

they may obtain the pardon of the r faults; for the remission of all our fins, is the affured recompence of our punishments. This is the reason that when chev read your fentences of death unto us, we render you thanks: because by an happy emulation that meets between the Judgements of God, and the quidgement of men, at the same instant when you condemn us here below, God pronounceth our absolution in Heaven.

34. The Soldiers being at a stand after the murther of Antoninus Bassiamus, were without an Emperour for two dayes. Then hearing that Artabanus, the Parthian, was coming to revenge the injury offered to him, they made choice of Ardenting one of their principal Officers, but he excused himself by his age, and the dignity was conferred on Macrinus, by the especial indeayour of the Tribunes, who alone were conscious of the fact towards Anto- Loge Herodian. ninus. He gave battel to Artabanus, and made incredible flaughter of men 1.4. for two dayes, during which time, the Parthian knew nothing of his Enemies death, but on the next day being certified thereof by Macrinus , he re- Orofiumt. 7. ceived the Captives with the spoil taken in his Country, and making a League with the Roman Emperour, departed into his own Kingdom: Macrinus re- xibbilin. exturning to Antioch, by letters gave the Senate an account of his fuccesse, and cerps, ex Dione. endeavouring to remove all prejudice which might arise from the obscurity of his birth, promifed to rule with as much moderation as any. He was cheardarrinus fucfully owned, not so much out of respect to himself, as hatred towards his Predecessor, During the time he reigned, things were well reformed; but lying Olymp. 249. idle at Antioch, he gave up himself to pleasures, and keeping there the Sol- an. 1. diers against their inclination, thereby drew contempt and hatred upon him. felf, which wrought his destruction.

35. Masa a Phonician, sister to Julia the wife of Severus, had two daughters, Soamis and Mammea. The former had a fon named Boffianus fourteen years old, and the later one called Alexianus two years younger. Both these boyes were Priests of the Sun, in the Phanician language called Heliogabalm, and the elder being the chief, was also a youth of an excellent beauty, and for it was very much admired by the Roman Soldiers. Their Grandmother Masa hereat took occasion to affirm (whether truly or otherwise) that they were both the sons of Antoninus, who had been familiar with both her daughters, dwelling with her under the same roof. Having got great store of wealth by living at Court in her fisters time, she promised large sums to the Soldiers, in case the Empire could be devolved upon one of them. The Soldiers gladly closing with her offer, received them into their Camp; which Macrimu hearing of, neglected it, onely he fent Ju-lianus with a party against the Revolters; but this party allured with the light of the boy and money together, cut off their Captains head, and fending it back to Macrinus, were also received into the Camp. After this a battel was fought in the confines of Syria and Phænicia, wherein Macrinus having the worlf fled towards Italy, but was taken at Chalcedon, where he fell fick of his journey, and his head was struck off after he had reigned about fourteen moneths. He was more sharp towards his Soldiers than was suitable to his condition, being otherwise also very severe, so as he burnt Adulteters quick with their bodies joyned together. He was flain in the 54 year of his age, together with his son Diadumenianu, to whom he had given the title of Cafar.

Heliogabalus.

36. Amoninus Heliogabalus succeeding Macrinus, continued fill in his Office of Priest, wearing the ornaments belonging to it, and dancing continually in that Antick habit. He gave up himself to all filthinesse, luxury, and uncleannesse, and killed many that talked against his courses. He maried the Image of Pallas (which never had feen light, except when the City was burnt, fince its bringing from Troy) unto his god, as also that of Mrania (by which the Africans meant the Moon) reported to be brought out of Phanicia by Dido. He built a sumptuous Temple for his god, who was brought into it in a chariot adorned with gold and precious stones, the Priest himself leading the horses, and going backward all the way. He painted his face though he had much natural beauty, wvore Pearls in his thooes, never supped under the rate of thirty pounds, was drawn by Dogs in a Chariot up and down the Palace, alwayes fate either amongst Flowers or sweet Odours, and when he journeyed had no leffe then 600 Carriages in his train. Being told by the Syrian Priests that he should die a violent death, he provided filken Halters, Golden Knives, and a Turret floored with Gold and Pearl, faying, his death should be costly and luxurious, that it might be said, No man died in such a fort. Of his mother he was so fond, that he would do nothing without her, and carried her with him into the Senate-house. But these courses occasioned the ruine of them both.

37. His Grand-mother fearing these courses would bring him into contempt with the Soldiers, prevailed with him, though otherwise heady enough, to adopt Alexianus his Coulin German, that all might not miscarry together with him. She perswaded him to it, by shewing how hereby he might provide for his pleafures and attendance on his God, the other taking care of State affairs. He fought to train up Alexianus, now called Alexander, in his own way, and Mammaa having provided him Tutors, able men to bring him up it good literature, he either pur to death or banished the chief of them, as corrupting his fon. He preferred none but Players to publick Dignities, and gave the governments of Provinces to the filthieft amongst his staves. By these things he drew more and more upon him the hatred of the Soldiers, who all inclined to Alexander as a youth of good hope, who also had money from his mother for a bait, without which all had been nothing. Antoninus knowing this, endeavoured all wayes to poylon him, and this succeeding not, he gave out he was dead, to see how the Soldiers would take it, who hereupon mutined. To appeace them, he rook him along with him in a Chariot beautified with Pearl and Gold to the Camp. Here was Alexander saluted and honoured alone, no respect being given to Heliogabalus, who being incensed thereat, went about to animadvert upon such as made acclamations; but the Soldiers carching at this advantage, flew him, together with his mother, and those that accompanied him, their two bodies being tumbled up and down the freets were at length cast into Tiber. He thus died having lived 18 years, and reigned five: A.V.C.975. A.D.222.

Alexander.

CHEP. V.

38. Alexander then was received as Emperour, and ruled with great mo- Olymp. 250. deration and clemency, being kept from ill company by Mammea his mother, and, a. and otherwise of his own inclination abhorring bloud, so that in all his time V. C. 975. and otherwise of his own inclination apporting plouds to that in all his time not any one was put to death innocent and unheard. He carried himself with A.D. 222. great courtefie towards all; nay, Camillus attempting new matters, he onely dian, ubifuthanked that he was willing to receive that burthen which good men refused. pra. His faying was, Quod sibi fieri non vis alteri ne feceris. What thou wouldest Lamprid in not have done to thy felf, do nos to another. Although the peace which Ma. Alexand. crinus had made with the Parthian was differential to the Roman Empire, Eutropium 1.8. yet it pleased not the Parthians, who thought the perfidious nesses of Bassianus Hist. 16. c. 28. deserved much greater punishment. Thence arose distarisfaction, contempt, Orosum lib., and hatred amongst the subjects of Artabanus, the issue whereof was, that Ar_ cap. 18. taxares or Artaxerxes stirred up the Persians to the recovery of their antient honour, and translated the Kingdom from Artabanne, and the Parthians, upon himself, in the fourth year of this Alexander, 538 years after Alexander the Great, or rather in the 538 year of the Seleucida. Not content herewith, he sent to Alexander to demand what soever the Romans had token from the Persians, and having a great ambition to recover what ever had belonged to that Empire, invaded Mesopotamia, giving out he would reduce all Afia unto his power. Alexander was constrained to march against him, and so repelled and weakned him, though with great loffe of his own men, that for divers years no more was heard of him. By his Lieutenants he prospered in the Wars of Mauritiana, Illyricum, and Armenia, but being called for against the Germans who wasted Gall, either because he was despised for want of fuccesse in this expedition, for his severity, or rather for that the Soldiers loved to fish in troubled waters, he was traiteroully murdered, together with his mother, and Maximinus was fer up in his flead. Mammaa his mother was first instructed in Christian Religion by Origen, whom she called to her at Antioch, but afterwards learnt of the Gnofficks, 1. Openly to deny what the privately owned, and 2. to keep, and worship images of Christ. She instructed her ion in the same Doctrine, who would have made a Temple for Christ, but was prohibited faith Lampridius; that is, would have made one if he could have done it with the good will of the Romans. Ulpran the great Lawyer was his chief Justice, and was flain by the Soldiers. Paulus also, Pomponius, and Modestinus flourished in his time, which abounded with able men of this profession. Alexander was flain in Gall near Moguntiacum, on the fourth before the Nones of Ollober, having lived 20 years, and reigned 12. A.V.C. 088. A. D. 235. L. Catilius Severus, and L. Ragonius Quintianus being Con-39. Maximinus by whose procurement Alexander was murdred, was born in Thrace, his father being a Gosh, and his mother an Alane. Being at first an Herds-man, he was for the vastnesse of his body made a Soldier, and by degrees was preferred in the Army. He had been fer over the new raifed Soldiers, to train, and exercise them, and by his great valour, and enduring all Hered. lib.7,8. labour and toil together with them, procured their favour, and hereby his own rife. As he was a man of stupendous bulk and proportionable diet, so also of capitolimus avarice and cruelty, to the later whereof he was the more provoked by a con- Eutropius lib. 9. Spiracy or two, which were discovered ere they took effect. He overthrew Orofius tib. v. the Germans, and wasted their Countrey, threatning also to subdue all the sap. 9. Northern Nations as far as the Ocean, and had his other carriage been answerable to his valour, he might have enjoyed time and opportunity for the performance of much. This occasion of revolt from him was first given in Africk by his Officer at Carthage, whose rapacity so far incensed certain young men, that they killed him, and compelled Gordinuns the Proconful to take upon him the Purple, who being of the age of 80 years, was joyfully owned both by Senate and People. But he going about to revenge private injuries, destroyed himself, by constraining Capellianus who governed Mauritiana to come upon him with an Army, wherewith being worsted he hanged himself, his son having perished in the fight at the age of 46. They scarcely enjoyed the title

Maximinus made Emperour by the Soldiers.

Balbinus.

26 dayes.

Gardianus.

40. The Senate, that they might have some to oppose against Maximinus, chose two Emperors, Maximus and Balbinus; but the people not being fatisfied therewith, and being defirous to have a Prince out of the flock of Gordianus, they gave the title of Cafar to Gordianus his Grandson by his daughter, a boy of 12 years of age. A little after it hapned that two old Soldiers who had belonged to Maximinus going to the Senate-house to hearken for news . were flain by two Senators, which thing raifing a great tumult, the Soldiers in Town set the Citie on fire, vvhereby a great part of it vvas burnt down, and got them to their Camp. Balbinus vvas appointed to take care of Rome, and Maximus event into Italy to raise forces against Maximinus, who now marched fast for Rome. Finding no resistance at the Alpes, he accounted himself most sure of victory, but found so much at Aquileia as stopped his journey; for the Inhabitants furnished by the commodiousnesse of the place with all forts of Provisions most stoutly defended themselves. They threw down so much scalding Pitch and Sulphur upon his Soldiers, that they yvere not able to continue the florms, and the vvomen, 'tis faid, cut the hair from their heads to make Provision for bovy-firings. This unexpected oppoficion drove him to fuch a rage, that having no povver to torment the Enemy, he exercised his fury upon divers of his Captains whom he put to death, as if through their lazinesse and neglect the Town stood out. This cruelty, together with the scarcity of Victuals in the Camp (for the besiegers were so befieged that all Provisions were cut off from them) induced such of the Soldiers, as had their Wives and Children at Rome, to conspire against him. Together with him fell his fon, fuch an one as himfelf, whom he had named Cafar, the Soldiers crying out, that of an ill Litter not a Whelp was to be

Maximinus killed by his preserved. He also persecuted the Church by the fixth persecution, commanding that Governours onely and the principal Ministers of our Saviour's Do- Euseb. Hill. 1.6. Erine should be put to death. But to such an end came he, being the first c, 19, 69 in Emperour created onely by the Army without consent of the Senate, after he chron. had reigned three years, A. V. C. 991, A. D. 238. 41. Now to our continuation of Ecclefiaffical matters. In the first year of Alexander or the last of Heliogabains, the day preceding the Ides of Ottober. Calliftus Bishop of Rome was crowned with Martyrdom. The Sea was vacant fix dayes, and then succeeded urbanus the seventeenth Bishop, according to Damasus, on the twentieth of October, and first Feria. In the tenth of Alexander, on the eighth before the Calends of June died Urba-The Sea was vacant thirty dayes, and then Pontianus succeeded on the Damafus. eighth before the Calends of July, the fixth Feria. In the first of Maxi- Eufeb, minus, Pontianus being banished into the Island Sardinia, there died on the thirreenth of the Calends of December, and Authorus succeeded him, who in the year following on the third of the Nones of January was crowned with Martyrdom, because he had diligently gathered an History of the Martyrs, and laid it up in the Church. The feat was vacant thirteen dayes, and then was Fabianus elected on the seventeenth of Fanuary, and the first Feria, being the twentieth Bishop of Rome, according to Damasus. And about the * Eust. Hist. being suct wenter annual .

Bishops,

Heraclas who once was Origen's Uffer in the Lesson like to the Local state of th School of Alexandria was Bishop of that Sea, where he continued fixteen 35. years.

CHAP. VI.

From the death of Maximinus the first created Emperour without consent of the Senate, to the Monarchy of Constantine the first Christian Emperour, who reformed Religion, and translated the Imperial feat to Byzantium, the

HE news of Maximinus his death being brought to Rome, filled the City with extraordinary joy, having taken Maximus as he was listing men in Italy, who thereupon went to Aquileia, and received the Army, to which he pardoned all things past. Then returned he to Rome, where he and his Collegue managed matters with difcretion enough, could they have Herod, Capitol, agreed betwixt themselves; but the one being jealous of the other, and both zozimus l, l. endeavouting to grapple all the power into their own hands, thereby wrought Eutrop, 1, 9, to themselves sodain destruction. The Pratorian bands hated them both, as created by the Senate, and refolved for the removal of fuch an indignity offered to the Army, to make them away, which Maximus understanding, would have fent for the Guard of Germans, which he knew both to be faithful to him, and able to refift the power of the other; but Balbinus suspecting that he intended fomething against himself, would not suffer it; and so the Soldiers entering the Palace haled them out, and after all forts of indignities offered to their persons, upon report that the Germans were coming, flew them both. Now knowing no fit person whom they might prefer, and being affured it would be very acceptable to the People, they made choice of Gordianus, who had been formerly made Cafar. At his beginning so great an Eclypse of the Sun happened (April 2. on the second Feria, as Cappellus an Ectypic of the sun impressed () that the day seemed to be turned into night, and olymp. 254. nothing could be done in houses without candles. Sabinianus in Africk attempted new matters, but was flain. Gordianus being yet very young un- V.C. 991. dertook an Expedition against the Persians, over whom Sapores in his third A. D. 238. year began to reign, having succeeded Areaxerxes their first King. By the good conduct of Missithens his Father-in-Law he prospered very well, but he being flain or made away, the Soldiers not enduring the rawnesse of Gordia. nus, transferred the Soveraignty unto Philip, and killed him, after he had reigned fix years. Its observed, that all those nine that slew him perished by their own hands, their own fwords, and the very fame with which they de-Broved him.

Gordianus.

M. Julius Philippus.

2. M. Julius Philippus was by birth an Arabian of Trachonitis, his Father being a notable Captain of thieves in that Country. He made his fon partaker with him in the Imperial dignity. In his fourth year fell our the the 1000th of Rome, which was celebrated with great pomp, and all man- Eutrop. 1. 9. ner of Games, from April 21 to April 21 of the following year. Enfebius Victor. reports of him, that he was the first Christian Emperour, and that being defirous to joyn with the multitude in the Ecclesiastical Prayers, he could not be in chron. admitted till he had first rendred an account of his Faith, and joyned himself with fuch, as for their fins were examined, and fet in the place of penitents. therefore because he was faulty in many things, saith the Historian, he willingly obeyed, and declared by his works his fincere and religious mind rowards God. The Martyrologies will have him and his fon converted by occasion of the folemnity of the roooth year, and being baptized by Fabianus Bishop of Rome, after confession of his fins, to have been admitted to the Communion. But faith Cappellus, if any of this had been true, would the Senate that was so fee against the Christians have reckoned him amongst the gods? At least would not Decins have objected this as a crime against him?

The Scythians in his time infesting the Empire, he repelled by his Lieutenants. Marinus raising a Commotion in Pannonia, he sent Decius to quiet the Soldiers, who put the purple upon him. Philip then led an Army against this Usurper, and they met at Verona, where the old Emperour was defeated and flain, which news coming to Rome, his fon a child of twelve years of age was murdered by the Pratorian bands, after they had reigned about five Quintius Trajanus Decius, as Orofius calleth him, was born in Pan- Olymp. 257.

Decius.

years.

nonia. According to the custom he assumed his son into participation of the an. 1. Empre. He quieted at his beginning some motions in Gaul, but raised a N. D. 249. great one against the Church, being Author of the seventh Persecution out of Orollus lib. 7 hatred to Philip, or as others fay, having conspired against Philip, out of cap, 21. hatred to Christianity: by his edicts many were put to most cruel deaths. He Euseb. Hist. received his reward after a short time; for now the Gothes (originally inhabi- 1.6. c. 39. received his reward after a more time; for now the owners to originally minate tants Scanzia) invaded Thrace, and other places, both by Land and Sea, be- Zogimum lib.t. cause such of them as served in the Wars had been defrauded of their pay. Entrop. 1. 9. At the defire of the Senate, to which he commended the Commonwealth Pamponium in his absence, he marched against and overthrew them in several battels Latum. (notwithstanding that he lost his son, and Priscus Governour of Philippi revolted) and had perfected his Victory, but that he was betrayed by Gallus Hostilianus Governour of the lower Masia. He perswaded him to fight in a fenny ground, and then revealed his intention to the Enemy, by whom he was befer, and was shallowed up in a bog, so as his body could never be found. He was courteous enough to all but Christians, and gave satisfaction to Senate and People. He reigned two years and an half.

Gallus.

towards Christians, and his punishment. He clapped up an ignominious Peace with the Gothes, unto whom he promifed money, a thing scarcely heard of before among the Romans; and this not being long kept, the Gothes and Entrep. 1. 9. Scythians made incursions into Thrace, Macedonia, and Thessaly, and also Pompon, Latus, into Afia, making great spoils in all places. Many other Nations after their Victor. example rebelled, and made havock of the Provinces: the Parthians also peirced into Armenia, and thence expelled Tiridates the King. The Seythians proceeded to furiously, that they seemed to carry all before them, till that Emilianus a Moor, and who commanded the Legions in Pannonia, by promises drew on his Soldiers against them, and so repelled them, that he invaded their Country, for which fervice he was faluted Emperour by this

4. Vibius Gallus Hostilianus succeeded him, both in his Empire, his malice

Army. Gallus hearing of this, went presently against him, but was slain together with Volusian his son and partner in the Empire. Such was the end of him who perfecuted the Church of God, and chased away such holy men as praied for his peaceable and prosperous estate. The persecutions of the Euseb, Hist. 1. Christians in the dayes of Decius and Gallus were accompanied or followed c. L. with a most grievous Pestilence, which so vehemently raged, that there was Orosius 1. 7. scarcely any Province, City or house, but was almost wasted and ruined by it. 6.21. Gallus and Volustan his son reigned little more than one year. 5. Æmilianus enjoyed the dignity not long, for another Army near the

Valeri anus

CHAP. VI.

Amilianus,

Alpes creating Emperour one Valerianus, a man of noble descent, his Soldiers, lest they should incur any danger or trouble killed him after three Olymp. 258. moneths. Valerianns then taking the Government upon him in Rhatia, the V. (. 1006. Senare at Rome gave the title of Cafar to Gallienus his son. He was at first 4.D. 233. very courteous to the Chriftians, and so familiarly imbraced them, that his Latus, Palace was filled with Professors of the Faith; but afterward, he was per- Orofius ubi Palace was filled with Proteitors of the Faith; Dut afterward; He was pel-fwaded by the Master of the Egyptian Sorcerers to slay them, as Enemies fupra. to their Art, and hinderers of it's operation in their prefence; fo that he rai. 6.10. sed the eighth Persecution, wherein many perished. But God avenged the cause of his Saints upon him; for going against Sapores the King of the Perstans, he was taken prisoner, and could not be released, notwithstanding the Gallienus.

intercession of the Persian's confederates, who alleged, that the Romans the more they were overcome, the more vehemently they ever refifted. Sapares kept and used him as a stool to tread on when he got on horse-back, and at length pulling his skin over his ears, tortured him to death. Gallienus his son who all this time had reigned with him terrified hereat, stopped the Persecution of the Christians; but many of the Romans who had been the instruments of the Emperours cruelty, being to be punished as well as he, many Europ. 1.9. Nations fell like a flood upon the Roman Empire, Galtienus giving up himfelf to all wantonnesse and luxury. The Germans over-tunning Rhatia and part of Isaly, came as far as Ravenna, the Allemans also wasting Gall peirced into Italy. Greece, Macedonia, Pontus, and Asia, were overwhelmed with an inundation of the Gother and Scythians. Dacia beyond Danubius was perpetually loft, the Quadi and Sarmata feized on Pannonia, and the Parthians having got into their hands Mesopotamia, made incursions into

6. Gallienus neglected these motions, answering alwaies concerning these marrers, as if notwithstanding them the Empire might slourish and do well enough. He thus little minding the Commonwealth, the Soldiers almost in Victor. all places chose them Emperours; so that at this time there were no lesse than Politic de 30 thirry Tyrants. The most notable of these upstarts was Posthnmus, who Tyranis, reigned in Gall with great commendations ten years; he used much mode- Orofius ubi ratition, expelled the Enemies, and recovered Provinces. All those thirty supra.

out the Gothes from about Danubius; then returning to Rome, and there fell at length, either fighting with one another, or with the Emperour. But tus. Gallienus at last, being contemned, was slain, having reigned six years together with his father, and nine by himself, A. V.C. 1021. A.D. 268. His Succeffor was Flavius Claudius a Dalmatian born, according to his own defire, and the will of the Senate, who killing of the Gothes and other Barbarians to the number of 330000 men, and finking 2000 Vessels, the Senate decreed him a Golden Shield to be fet up in the Court, and a Statue in the Capitol; but to the great losse of the Commonwealth he was slain at Syrmium, when he had scarcely reigned two years. Into his place was advanced Aurelius Onintillus his brother, an excellent person; but being too good, Orosius 4.7. they that fer him up pulled him down , because they could not bear his gravity . 23. and stricenesse, killing him the seventeenth day after at Aguileia. Then reigned Palerius Aurelianus, born either at Syrmium or some place in Dacia, of mean parentage. Being by Claudius appointed to drive the Goths out of Thrace, he was after his death saluted Emperour. He was an excellent Soldier, and restored the Empire well night to it's former bounds. He drove punishing.

Quintillus.

Aurelianus.

Claudiue

CHAP. VI.

Carus.

Diocletian.

874

Tacitus.

Probus.

punishing some Seditious persons, he marched into the East, to reduce those parts to their former obedience.

7. In the dayes of Gallienus, the Persians having subdued Mesopotamia, and invaded Syria, One Odenaius an inhabitant of Palmyra, a Citie of this Countrey, gathering rogether a company of Boors, fell upon them, and fo ordered his affairs, that he beat them out of Syria, recovered Mesopotamia, and Orosius. incamped before Ctefiphon the Metropolis. Being flain after this Conquest, Zenobia his wife in right of her Children kept possession of the East together such in with Egypt. Aurelianus now going against her, in his way, in Illyricum, chron. Thrace, and other places, defeated fuch Enemies as he met, and then entring Zozimu lib. 1. Syria, after some trouble and danger, overthrew, and took the Queen her selfnear Antioch, and then recovered all her Dominions. But after his departure the Inhabitants of Palmyra killed his Garrison and revolted, which calling him back, he destroyed both the Citie and them therein, sparing neither Sex nor age; and after this recovered Egypt. Then returning into the West, he bent his endeavours against Terricus, who reigned in Gall. Terricus being vexed by his Seditious Soldiers, defired him, whom he termed Invincible, to rescue him from such evils, and betrayed his Army into his hands. Valerian Euseb. Hist. 17. growing proud upon such successe, first of all Romans ser a Diadem on his cap, 30. & in head, and adorned himself with Gold and Pearl. He began also to perse- chron. cute the Christians; but undertaking a War against the Persians, he was slain betwixt Byzantium and Heracles, through the malice of his Secretary, in the fixth year of his reign. In his first year, Hormifda the third Persian King be- Agathias. gan his reign, which lafted but one year. Him fucceeded Varane, and reigned three years, and him followed Narfes who continued 28. In his first year also died Plotinus the Platonist, who deciding all religion, perished through the just judgement of God by a filthy and painfull disease, although he had chofen a pleafant and wholefom place wherein to live in Campania. Now also flourished Porphyrins his Scholar, who of a Christian became a great Enemy to Christianity, and wrote 15 books against it, to which Eusebins answered in 30. of which 20 were extant in the time of Jerome, but at this day not Firmicus lib. T.

8. There was an inter-regnum after the death of Valerian for 8 moneths, Orofin lib. 7.

the Senate and Army straining courtesie the one with the other, at length the Senate made choice of Tacitus, a man of Consular Dignity, who in his fixth Entrop. lib.9. moneth died of a Feaver at Tarfus. The Senate defired him, that in case he should die presently, he would not leave his Children his Successors, but some Fl. Vopilous. man of approved worth and valour, as the necessity of the State required. This man was Probus; yet notwithstanding Florianus the brother of Tacitus invaded the Empire, but was cut off by Probus near Tarfus, within the space Zozimus. of two or three moneths. Probus unwillingly receiving the burthen upon Pomponius Lahim, managed the Government with great commendation. He recovered Gall our of the hand of the Francones a people of Germany, which now first feized on it, after many bloudy battels, and after this was ingaged in Civil Wars. For Saturninus was faluted Emperour in Egypt, who was overthrown also, and killed also against his mind, and the same successe he had against Proculus in Gall and Bonofus a Britain born. He overthrew the Sarmatians, subdued several barbarous Nations about Thrace by the terrour of his name onely, quieted all Asia, and forced the Parthian King to delire peace, which he granted. Returning afterward into Thrace, he planted feveral barbarous people within the Roman Empire, whereof fome revolting he chastized and reduced them. Now all things flourished exceedingly through peace and security, which made him something slight the Soldiers, who thereupon, as he was marching through Illyricum against the Persians, murdered him at Syrmium, though he fled for fafety into a fortified Tower. That faving undid him , Si vixero non opus erit amplius Romano Imperio militibus , a speech of great despair for the Soldiers. Witty and sharp speeches fallen from Princes have often given fire to Seditions. Surely, faith the most learned Viscount of St. Albans, Princes had need in tender matters, and ticklish times, to beware what they say; especially in those short speeches, which By abroad like Dares, and are though to be for our of their secret insentions. For as for large Discourses , they are flat things, and not so much word that a treamittie 9. M. Augelius Carus, of the Province of Narbon in Gall, succeeded Olymp, 165. him, who, when he had created Cafars his awo fons, Carinai and Numeria ann. 3. nut, restrained the Sarmanana, that upon the death of Probus threatned Italy: V.C. 1036. But going against the Persans, after he had recovered Mesoperamia, and ta- A. D. 283. ken the two noble Cities of Parthin, Cteliphon, and Cochis, he was slain by a Thunder-bole in his Tent near to the River Tigrie. Of his two lons, Name- Orofius, Eutrop. rianus was with him, and Carinus was left behind to look to Gall. Nume- Poplas, rianus returning out of the East as Conquerour , and tying fick in his Litter, was killed by Arens Aper his father in law, who gaped after the Empire. Scarcely after some dayes was this wickednesse derected by the stench of the Carkase, and then the Author of it being also discovered, Valerius Decoletianui, who governed the family of Carns, was chosen Emperour, and rewarded Aper as he had deserved. On the 15th before the Calends of December, and 20 dayes after, he entred Nicomedia in Purple. From the beginning of this Diecletian the Egyptians began a new Era, fetching its rife from the new Moon of Thoth the preceding moneth (August 29) which they called the Era of Grace for some reason or other. Cappellus observeth, that theflu-Etuating and vitious Chronology of Baronius henceforth beginneth to be right. For thinking, faith he, that he exhibited the years both of the true, and received Era of Christ, in truth, he exhibited neither the one fort nor the other. Beginning the Ara of Diocletian from the 284 year of our Lord, its true, and right, so that it be understood of the received, not of the true Ara of Christ: and the same is to be faid concerning the years of the following Emperours. But after this , Carinus and Discletian fought for the Soveraignty, and Carinus after much ado was fluin by his own Soldiers for his lasciviousnesse, which made an end of a bloudy and laborious 10. Dieclation then enjoyed the Dignity alone; but great stirs arising in Gull, Caraufius also who was set to defend the Sea-Coalts from the invasion of the Franks and Saxons, rather taking pare with them than otherwise, he was constrained to create Cefar, Maximianus Herculeus. He suppressed the motions in Gall, but commanding Caranfins to be killed, this man put on ph capas. the Purple, though a man of mean condition, and feized upon Britain. A. Europ, lib.9. chillens rebelled in Egypt, A frick was in trouble, and Narfes King of Per. Feftus Rufus. fia invaded the Eastern parts. Diocletian awakened with these dangers, promoted Maximianus to be Augustus, and they two adopted for Cafars Maximianus Galerius, and Constantius Chlorus, who married Theodora the wive's daughter of Herculeus, and by her had fix fons, as the other, the daughter of Dioclesian. Caranfins valiantly held Britain for feven years, and then was flain by Allettus, who having kept possession of the Island three years, was overthrown by Afclepiedorus. Constantius fighting gainst the Allemans in Gall, at first was worsted, but afterwards got a great victory, wherein 60000 of them are faid to have been flain. Maximianus Herouleus reduced Africk. Diocletian himself befieging Achillens in Alexandria 8 moneths, at length flew him therein, gave up the Citie to be plundred by the Soldiers, and vexed all Egyps with profcriptions and flaughters. Galerius was overthrown by the Per fian King, and fled to Dioclesian, who received him with great difdain, and made him run in his Purple Robe for some miles before his Chariot. Galerius much moved by this difgrace recruited his Army throughout Illyricum and Massa, and returning against Narses, routed his Army, took his Camp, his Wives, Sisters, and Children, many of his Nobles, and great Treafure, wherewith returning into Mesopotamia unto Dioclatian, he was then received most honourably; for he had taken Cteffphon, subdued Affrria, and recovered those five Provinces beyond Tigris, which revolted from Trajan.

The tenth Perfecution.

11: After this were the Carpi, Baftarna, and Sarmaians overthrown, and divers other Nations quieted, Dioclettan now suffered himself to be called Lord, and worshipped as a God: He in the Halt, and his Collegue in the West raised against the Christians the most heavy persecution that ever ver had hapned both for length and cruelty. The Soldiers were first begun with, whereof all such as would not facrifize to Devils were cashiered; but the persecutors proceeded to such cruelty and rage that some were Crucified, oreling at the others burnt alive, others roafted with flow fiers, and others pulled in pieces and by having their limbs made fast to boughs of Trees, which being brought toge-Eufeb, Ecclef. ther for that purpose, were afterwards suffered to return to their natural post-Hist. lib. 8, c. 3. tion. Some were starved to death, many slain with the sword, and many de- ... voured of wild beafts. Some were flead alive, others beaten to death by hot burning iron rods, and some returned to prison after their torments, there to languish away. Women were hung naked by one foot, and some had their breafts seared : no Sex, no Age, no condition was spared. Atterrible Earthquake followed in Syria, which deltroyed many thousands about Tree and Siden. But in the second year of this persecution Diocletian perswaded his Collegue, though unwilling, that they both might refign the Empire to the two Calars; so that he being seized with a fowl disease after he had almost reigned twenty years, put off the Purple at Nicomedia, and Maximianus Herculius the same day at Milain. The former withdrew to Salene into his own Countrey, and the later into Lucania.

Maximianus. Galerius, and Constantius Chlorus.

12. The two Cafars, Maximianus Galerius, and Constantius Chlorus Orosius. became Augusti after the refignation of their fathers in Law, and first of all others parted the Empire between them. To Conftantius fell Gall, Britain, Entropius li 10. Spain , Italy , and Africk; to the other Illyricum , with Greece, and Alia. Galerius created Cafars his fifter's two fons, Galerius Maximinus and Severus. The East he appointed to Maximinus, and intended Italy for Severus, if he could but take it from Constantins. For this purpose he kept at Rome as an Hoftige Constantine the fon of Constantins by Helena a British woman as some say, which he put away when he married the daughter of Maximianus. But Constantine made an escape to his father, who died at York Constantine. in Britain not long after, on the 25 of July, in the third year of his reign, he Olymp, 271. and his Collegue both the fixth time being Confuls, in the 1058 year of the ann. i. City, the 306 of the ordinary Fra of Christ, the first year of the 271 Olympiad V.C. 1058. ending. His fon Constantine in Britain was now faluted Emperour.

12. The Pratorian Soldiers at Rome named Emperous Maxentius the fon Idem of Maximianus Herculius, who together with Diocletian had refigned the Government. Against Maxentins, Galerins fent Severus, who belieging Aureiins Vi-Rome was betrayed by his Soldiers, and flying away was killed at Ravenna Hor. Now Maximianus Herculius ont of defire to recover the Empire joyned with Constantine, to whom he married Fausta his daughter by Entropia; then zozimus lib. 2. to obtain his design did he plot against both son and son-in-law, but being Oyosius. frustrated by both, hanged himself at Massilia, now Marfeils, a Citie in Euseb. Eccles. France. Maxentius his son, and Galerius Maximinus, otherwise disagreeing Hist. lib. 8. iovned in renewing the perfecution against the Christians, by Enfebins called Capp. 1 the fecond, which we understand of his age. But Galerius Maximianus Angustus made Licinius his Collegue in the Empire in the fifth year after the death of Constantius, in which year also Sapores the seventh King of Perfia began his reign. Galerius Augustus heightning the persecution of Christians by several cruel edicts, rotted within, and was eaten with vvorms, which crawled out of his belly, so that the Physicians not able to endure the stench of his body vvere put to death. Perceiving the hand of God upon him, in his own and Constantines name he recalled his Edicts, and at last miserably died. This was the second persecution, which if it be joyned with the former, both make up about 8 years. But this rest scarcely continued 6 moneths; for Maximianus being dead at Salona, Maximinus being nothing amended by fo fad an example, renewed the perfecution. His fury God chastized by purting him to flight before the Armenians vyhom he had provoked, as also by pefulence and famine, wherein by Gods Grace the humanity of Christians was as admirable as formerly their conflancy had been. Now the Roman Empire was under four Princes, viz. Confrantine and Maxentius fons of Emperours, and Maximinus and Licimus new raised men.

14. The chief men at Rome being wearied with the Tyranny of Maxentius fent for Constantine against him. Canstantine in his journey by the benefit of a famous vision tasted of Christianity, being formerly inclined towards it. The truth of the flory he confirmed to Engebins by an oath (as that Historian pra relleth us in the History of his life) and relateth it after this manner: A little Orofius, past noon he beheld the fign of a Crosse lively figured in the air, with an Inscription in it, containing these words: In hoc vince, In this overcome. He faid, that both he and his whole Army did wonder at so strange a prodigy. It's further said, that Christ appearing to him in a dream, commanded him to make the figure of the Crosse which he had seen, and to wear it in his Colours in the field. Proceeding against Maxentin', he overthrew his forces four times, although four times larger than his own; at the later time Maxemius flying amain towards Rome, was drowned in the River. Maximinus published an Edict against Christians, but was forced to sing a palinode twice, although his flattery was as unprofitable as his threats, for he died of an horrible difease at Tarfus. Then did Constantine and Licinius enjoy the Empire together. The former after his Victory over Makentins was confirmed in the Christian Faith, and owned Christ for the Author of his successe. Licinius complied with him for a time in incouraging the Christians; but afterwards plotting against him, he also began a grievous persecution against the People of God, changed the good Laws, and laid heavy impositions on his Subjects. Constantine being hereby constrained to make Warre upon him, overthrew him in Pannonia, and feveral times afterwards, for that he had renewed the War both by Land and Sea most perfidiously, and given the title of Cafar to Marinianus. At length he forced him to yield his person, and Licinius pur to deliver up his Robe by the hand of his wife, which was Confiantine's fifter, given him on purpose to oblige him. He sent him to The falonica, where he afterwards artempting new matters, he commanded him to be flin. 15. Thus did Constantine obtain the Monarchy of the Roman Empire, in the nineteenth year of his reign, the fourth of the 275 O'mpiad, A. V. constantine ob- C. 1077, A.D. 324. Six years after, in the 25 of his reign, he repaired Byzanzium, and making it larger than ever, caried from Rome the greatest part of the ornaments, and of Christian Senators, and calling it after himself Con-Buildeth Con fantinople, would have it also named New Rome, and to be head of the Roman Empire with the same right as the other. He first of all had designed to build a City near Sardis in Asia, afterwards begun one at Sigaum a Pro- Vide Ludevimontory of Mount Ida, in the Country of Treas. The third time the defign was cumin Augubegun at Chalcedon, where walls were erected; but fowls fracthing up and fin. de civitate carrying away the cords of the workmen to Byzantium a City of Thrace, up. Dei, lib, 5 c. 25.

Constantine converted.

Monarchy.

on it the Emperour pitched. This Town was first built in the third was of Simfonium in on it the Emperour pitched. This Town was first built in the third year of Chron. cathol.ad the thirtieth Olympiad; Hesschins saith by a Colony of the Argives, Ammi- A. M. 3347. anus by one of the Athenians, Velleius faith, it was a Colony of the Mile-Joan Bapiflam fians, and Marcianus Periegetos of the Megarians, being fo named from Egaatium in Byzan their Country-man and Captain of the Colony. It flood right over (onflamina l.2. against Chalcedon in a far better foil, which made Apollo term the foundary Rom, Principal Country Country Rom, Principal Country Count against Chalcedon in a far better foil, which made Apollo term the founders pum. of the later blind men, because they passed by so excellent a place. It ran through various fortune according to that influence which Greece had into it's affaires; as we have from time to time observed upon occasion. Severuthe Emperour almost destroyed it, but by the Soldiers of Galienus it was brought to ruine, and now restored and augmented by Constantine.

16. This Empire being now in it's declining condition, by reason of it's old age (for all sublunary things are subject to the viciffitude of time) and forely differmered by inward heats, into which want of hereditary Monarchy, and the horrid licentiousnesses a standing Army had thrown it, as also labouring under so huge a bulk, and so great a plethora as Nature could not well translating occasioneth the ruine of the Empire.

CMAP. VI.

govern, being forced as it were by Constanting to change its natural, suitable, constanting by and native air, by so violent an alteration contracted it's mortal infirmity. For as plants being transplanted out of their native foil into other regions divers Imperial feat in climate and quality, retain little of their natural virtue; so humane affairs, especially Dominions and Empires, by such great mutations lose their vigour and Rability, even also as we see it happenerh to several forts of Animals. For this cause the Senate would never consent to the Commons to depart from Rome to Veii, though a place much more pleasant and commodious, especially after Rome was burnt by the Galls. All great and fodain mutations as to the body natural. To to the body Politick, are ever dangerous. But this translation of the Imperial Seat to Byzanilum, feemeth also to have given forme occasion to a second error of Constantine, whereby dividing his Empire into three parts to his fons, of one great one he made three, with a notable diminution of authority and ftrength. For his fons falling out amongst themfelves, they so defeated one another, as the Empire was exhausted, and enervated amongst them.

For although it fometimes a little recovered under one Prince, vet remained it so lyable to divisions, that it seldom happened but it was divicame to passe, ded into Eastern and Western, till at length Odoacer King of the Herali and Turingi entering Italy with a great Army, cast Augustulus into such straights, that out of desperation he quirted the Western Empire, which happened about the year 476. The Hunni ere this had passed over Danubius. Alaricus King of the Vandals had taken Rome. The Vandals first seized on Andalufia, and afterwards on Africk : the Alani on Luficania (now Portugal) and the Gothes on the greater part of Spain, the Angli on Britain, and the Burgundians on Provence. Justinian the Emperour by driving the Vandals out of Africk and the Goths out of Isaly, did a little repair these decayes. but the effect thereof continued not long, for about the year 710 the Armies and Herefie of Mahomes began to disturb the Eastern Empire; and in a shore time the Saracens over-ran Syria , Egypt , Africk , Sicily , and Spain. About the year 735 they also seized on several parts of Gall. Thus was the Western Empire by little and little torn in pieces and cantonized. At length by a new title it came to Charls the Great, in whole family it scarcely continued 100 years, and then came to be Elective by feven Persons, and so continueth rather a resemblance of an Empire than otherwise unto this day. As for the Eastern, it continued so weak, that scarcely sometimes could it defend the Metropolis against the Saracens; much lesse could it afford any assestance to the other: and after the Saracens, the Turks got ground of it by little and little, till having for many years left the Emperours little more than an empty name, at last Constantinople also was taken by Mahomes the Great. No more at prefent by way of Anticipation, either concerning the decay of the Roman Empire, or of those particular Kingdoms, Principalities, and States that were cut out of it, all which are referred to the method of another Volume. But as we faid, the division of the Empire took it's original from the translation of the Imperial Seat to Byzantium, it increased by plurality of Princes, and came to perfection in the promotion of Charls the Great, after which there was no communion of Government, Laws, Magiftracy, or Councils, as had been before. Now to our continuation of Ecclesiastical matters.

Bishops,

18. In the second year of Decins was Fabianus Bishop of Rome crowned with Martyrdom on the fourteenth of the Calends of February. The Sea was vacant for one year, and then was chosen Cornelius, whose election displeasing some, Novatus ordained against him Novatianus. The year following Cornelius was Martyred on the eighteenth before the Calends of Ottober, and Lucius succeeded him, who shortly after was banished. In the second of Gallienus was he beheaded, and after a vacancy of 35 dayes. Stephen succeeded on the ninth of April the first feria, who interceding for Basilides condemned by the Spaniards, they defended their right against him, and condemned his usurpation against the Africans as appeareth from Cyprian's Epiftles, Epistles, as also that the boldnesse of the Roman Sea was now checked by all the Provinces. After three years Stephen was beheaded by the command of Valerian, and Sixtus succeeded him, who being beheaded when Laurence the Deacon was fried to death by the command of Valerian, Dionyfius fucceeded. After him came Felix, and then Encychianus, who being marcyred in the first of Carns, after nine dayes Cains succeeded, December 16. Cains was crowned with Martyrdom in the twelfth of Discletian, and after eleven dayes Marcellinus succeeded, who through sear offering incense to Idols, when he denied it, was overborn by the testimony of a multitude of witnesses, confessed his fault, and afterwards redeemed his credit by suffering Marryrdom, Marcellus succeeded him. After Marcellus succeeded Euschius, and then Miltiades, then Sylvester, who was Bishop at the time of the Council of Nice, in the twentieth year of Constantine, 19. After Alexander, Mazabanes was Bishop of Ferusalem untill the reign of Gallus and Volusianus, after him Hymeneus till the time of Aurelian. Then followed Zambdas and Hermon, according to (a) Enfebius, (a) Lib.7.6.19. who writeth, that the Sea of Fernsalem was alwaies honoured, and the succession continued unto his own dayes. After Hermon Macarius was Bishop, Socrat, and was present at the Council of Nice. In the Church of Antioch after Scholast. 1. 1. Phileins succeeded Zebinns, and then Babylas, who died in prison, in the cap. 9, 13. persecution under Decius. Him followed Fabius, him Demetrianus, and him Paulus Samofatenus the heretick, who denying the Divinity of the Son of God, was excommunicated, and deprived by the fecond Synod held against him at Antioch in the dayes of (c) Aurelianus. And when he would (c) Eufeb. 1.7. neither depart the Church, nor avoid the house, the Emperour was befought 6. 29, 30, (the first application to the Prince in this nature by the Christians) to interpose and command by edict, that fuch should have the house as agreed in doctrine with the followers of the Bishop of Rome and Italy. Domnus was by the Synod appointed to succeed him, after whom followed Timens, Cyrillus, Dorotheus, Tyraunus, Vitalis, Philogonus a Marryr, and (d) Eust athius, (d) Socrat. 1.1. who was at the Council of Nice. He fell into the Herefie of Sabellius, who 2. 9, 23. being the Scholar of Noetus, taught that the three Persons of the Trinity were but one; but they differed, in that Sabellins said not the Father to have fuffered. He was deposed by a Council held at Antioch. Eusebing Pamphilius Bishop of Casarea confuted him. After his deposition the Sea was vacant eight years. In the Sea of Alexandria after Heraclas, Dionyfins the Scholar of Origen was Bishop, in the third year of Philip. He reporteth in (a) Eusebius the peril he stood in , and the persecution he suffered under De. cius. He wrote of the Alexandrian Marcyrs to Fabins Bishop of Antioch; (c) Quem via. and to Novatus the Heretick, who being a Priest of Rome fell from his order, and calling his Sect Carbari, would not admit unto the Church such as fell after repentance, and he abhorred second mariage. Diony sins also wrote to Hermanien, to Steven, and Xiftus Bishops of Rome, unto Philemon a Minister of Rome, and unto Dionyfius Bishop of Rome. He consuted the Book of Nepos the Chilialt, and confounded in open disputation Coracion his disciple. Hitherto this error of the Millenaries propagated by Papias, had many of the Fathers that adhered to it, who yet held that Christ when he came was to do his own work, without any prejudice to Earthly Princes in the mean time. Some observe, that Dionysius firiking at this error, traduceth the Apocalypse, as also defending the distinction of Persons against Sabellius, seemeth to make three Essences. Many betook themselves to Dienysius Bishop of Rome, that he would reclaim him, and obtained it. After he had governed the Church feventeen years he died, and Maximinus succeeded him, whom followed Theonas, and him Peter, who was marryred under Diocletian. Him fucceeded Achillas, and then came Alexander, who was at the Council of Nice. Hee by preaching of the Trinity fomewhat curioufly, gave occasion to Arins one of his Clergy to fall from the Faith, as * Socrates in- * L. I.c. s.

20. In the fifth year of Philip whilft Fabianus was Bishop of Rome, Donatus the Bishop of Carthage died, and Cyprian succeeded him by consent of all men except Felicissimus, who, whilest the Heathens invaded his pattimony, endeavoured to deprive him of his Bishoprick. Felicissimus was ordained Bishop by Novatus, who also ordained Novatianus against Cornelius Vita or chille-Bishop of Rome. Yet Cornelius favoured Felic simus against Cyprian, and la Opriani. would have taken Cognifance of their businesse, whereupon Cyprian vehemently rebuketh him, and denies that any one beyond the Sea hath right to passe judgement upon any matters concerning Africk. And a little after. the pride of the Roman Sea was reprehended by all those of the Provinces. an occasion being given about Basilides, who being censured in Spain, complained to Stephen the Bishop of Rome. Cyprian was several times driven into exile. (a) Eusebius maketh him to have erred in rebaptizing Hereticks. (a) Lib. 7, 6, 3, In the fourth of Valerian died Origen seventy years old, a man of admirable parts, most austere life, indefatigable industry, and stupendious learning, but of impure Doctrine. Ferome sheweth how full of portentious errours his book weel αξοχών is. (b) Augustin saith, he held the Devil at length (b) Quem conshould be delivered from Hell, and affociated with the holy Angels, and for sale decivitate this, and other things, especially for holding alternate or successive blef- Dei 1,21, 6,17. fednesse and misery for ever, the Church did reject him. Pamphilus wrote an Apology for him. But his works are to be read with especial care, and especially his Commencaries upon the Scripture, concerning some of which Theodore (c) Beza paffeth this censure : Certe hoc ausim dicere, si hac sunt (c) In Rom. Origenis cujus titulum praferunt, bunc hominem fuisse selectum Diaboli or- cap.3. vers. 10. ganum Apostolica Dostrina evertenda destinatum ; for he evaporateth the folid and substantial Doctrine of the Gospel, into Allegorical, and aery No-

Book IV

21. But, God having exercifed his people by many a fiery trial, was pleafed to preferve the bush unburned, and at length to grant them Peace by Constantine, who proved a nursing father to the Church, taking away all penal Laws against them, and enacting new ones, not onely for their prefervation, but convenience and comfort. And as he preferved them from external violence; fo he also took care for their inward peace. This had been somewhat of late disturbed by the Heresie of Manes, from whom his followers were named Maniches, who began to publish his impure Doctrine in the first of Probus, in the 277 year of the ordinary, or received Ara of Christ. This fellow being a Persian, said that he was born of a Euseblacas. Virgin, that he was both Christ and the holy Ghost, and fent out twelve Disciples to preach his Doctrine, which was made up of many old Herefies hererofore named. But his, and other groffe opinions found not fuch entertainment as to procure so much disturbance as that of Arise did, who having as we faid heard Alexander the Bishop of Alexandrea discoursing curioully of the Trinity, and thinking that he maintained the error of Sabellius, in opposition to him fell to deny the blessed Trinity, and affirmed that the fon of God was like unto God in name onely; and not in fubstance. His Heresie having been condemned in many Synods, Constantine in the 20th of his reign A. D. 325, summoned a General Council to meet at Nice, where assembled 218 Bishops. In opposition to Arianism was framed the Nicene Creed, June 19. Hosius presided as he had done in the Synodes of Egypt, and first subscribed the Canons. Besides the condemnation of Arius, the Sanction concerning Easter made at Arles and in Palastine was confirmed. Moreover, twenty Ecclesiastical Canons were established, than which no good Author mentioneth more. Now were the Temples of Idols overthrown, and Churches Erected, the fervice of Devils was banished, and the vvorship of the true God owned and incouraged : now faith and patience triumphed over most redious and exquisite persecutions; and truth dispelled the Clouds of prejudice and errour.

Mr. George Her. R Eligion now flourish'd in Greece, where Arts bert his Church Rave her the highest place in all mens hearts. Learning was pos'd, Philosophy was fer. Sophisters taken in a fishers net. Plato, and Aristotle were at a losse. And wheel'd about again to spell Christs Crosse. Prayers chased Syllogisms into their den. And Ergo was transform'd into Amen. Though Greece took horse as soon as Egypt did, And Rome as both, yet Egypt faster rid, And Spent her period, and prefixed time Before the other. Greece being past her prime, Religion went to Rome, subduing those, Who that they might subdue made all their foes, The Warriour his dear skars no more resounds, But feems to yield Christ hath the greater wounds, Wounds willingly endur'd to work his bliffe, Who by an ambush loft his Paradife. The great heart stoops, and taketh from the dust A sad repentance, not the spoils of luft : Quitting his Spear, left it (hould pierce again Him in his members, who for him was flain. The Shepherds hook grew to a Scepter here, Giving new names, and numbers to the year. But th' Empire dwelt in Greece, to comfort them Who were cut short in Alexander's stem. In both of these Prowesse and Arts did tame And tune mens hearts against the Gospel came, Which using, and not fearing skill in th' one Or ftrength inth' other, did erett her I brone. Many arent, and strugling th' Empire knew (As dying things are wont) untill it flew At length to Germany, fill Westward bending, And there the Churches festival attending : That as before Empire, and Arts made way, (For no leffe Harbingers would ferve than they) So they might still, and point us out the place Where first the Church should raise ber down-cast face. Strength levels ground, Art makes a Garden there, Then showrs Religion, and makes all to bear, Spain in the Empire shar'd with Germany, But England in the higher Mictory Giving the Church a Crown to keep her state, And not go leffe than she had done of late. Constantines British line meant this of old, And did this mystery wrap up, and fold Within a sheet of paper, which was rent From time's great Chronicle and hither fent. Thus both the Church and Sun together ran Unto the farthest old Meridian. How dear to me, O God thy Counsels are! Who may with thee compare?

The Roman Empire.

FINIS.

The Council of Nice.

Origen.

Rell-

REA-

READER, there being many proper names in this work, which the Printers rarely meet with elewhere, this hath occasioned the more faults in the Impression; yet most of them are corrected by a frequent printing of them aright, especially towards the later end of the Book; most faults being onely the alteration of one letter in a word. Such of these, or others, that are most notable thus correct, and passe by the rest by thy candour.

P 4ge t.line 12. for cat it. yead.cat of it, p. 2. margior Mererum r. Mercerum, p. 7. 1.43. f. Irelan. r. Josian, p. 11. 1.22, f. Amonite r. Amoribite, p. 12. 1. 2. f. (Jesphon, r. Citsphon, p. 13. 1. 14 f. Pefen r. Refen, p. 21. 1. 47. f. Judac r. India, p. 24. marg. f. Affred. r. Atheneus, p. 34. 1.26. f. Damafecum, r. Damafeus, p. 39. marg. f. Deut. r. Orat, p. 78. marg. f. Phicium, r. Phicium, r. Physium, p. 88. 1.57. f. Generity r. Jerenty, p. 86. 1.21. f. catied r. varied, p. 88. 1.21. f. catied r. varied p. 88. 1 tians r. Aginetans, p. 91. 1.20.f. Generation r. veneration, p. 94. 1. 54. f. Aphutes r. Iphicles, p. 95. 1. 32. f. Ganchomathon r. Sanchomathon, p. 109.1.51 f.law r. cave, p. 111. 1.7. f. antient r. after, p. 116. l. 1. Grece, r. Crete, p. 184 1. 31 f. Pur. Sanchomathon, p. 109.1, $1.flaw r. cave, p. 111.1.7, f. antient r. after, p. 116.1.1.1.6 rece, r. Crete, p. 189 1.31 f. Pubares r. Bubares, p. 192. 1.46. f. Molfa r. Arolfa, p. 199.1.8 f. 161.v. 16, p. 213. f. penalt. r. 490.16. p. 214. 1.0. & 17. & 18. v. 489.8 & 490. p. 238.1.6. f. College and I. d. 6. p. 214. f. Covergens; r. Cornibhass, p. 299. 1.1. f. Monton r. Meton, p. 364. marg. Sordanus v. Tribonianus v. Tribonianus v. Tribonianus, p. 544. 1.32 f. Andicobus v. Antigonus, p. 783. 1.51. dele fell, p. 196. 1.8. f. Pobaccia v. Describonianus v. Tribonianus, p. 544. 1.32 f. Andicobus v. Arolfa, p. 783. 1.51. dele fell, p. 196. 1.8. f. Pobaccia v. Describa v. Induced v. induced. ibid. 1.55 f. Enemies v. Armies, p. 760. m. Principalities v. Provinces, p. 793. 1.6 f. Myphypofean v. Hypotypofean v. Hypotypofean v. Hypotypofean v. Hypotypofean v. Manicipi v. Marel v. Alvevi v. Arvevi v. Avevi, p. 859. 1.10. betwike Clemens & Alexandrinus, add called, p. 866. 1.18 f. fith v. fart.

Books printed for Henry Herringman, at the fign of the Anchor on the Lower Walk of the new Exchange.

He great Exemplar, the Life and Death of the Holy Jesus, by Jer. Taylor Dr. in Divinity, Chaplain in ordinary to his Majelty.

Astrea, a Romance in a Volumes in Folio.

Paulo Paruto's History of Venice, Translated by Henry Earl of Mon-

Bishop Andrews second Volume of Sermons.

The Grand Scipio, an excellent new Romance written in French by Monfieur de Vaumoriere, and rendred into English by Gil. Havers.

The History of the Commonwealth of Venice, by Tames Howel, Eig;

The Wall-flower, an excellent Romance, written by Dr. Baley.

Goshs , Swedes , Vandals , and other the needs of all Christian assemblies, by Northern Nations, written by Olans For, Taylor, Dr. of Divinity, Magnus, Arch-Bishop of Upfal, and Metropolitan of Sweden.

the fifth, and last Volume.

ten by Sir William Davenant

in five Volumes , written by the Right | with him. Honorable the Lord Brog bill.

fetting afide the higher Plea of Tus veral persons of quality. Divinum, from the Equity of the Levitical Law, or that of nature for facret fervices, and the certain apportioning Jy, a Comedy, the fourth book of Virby the undoubted Canon of the New gil, Status Achilleis, with Annotations, Testament, the labourers of the Lords A Panegyrick to General Monck, by Vineyard of the Church of England the Honorable Sr. Rob. Howard, are estated in their quota Pars of the Tenth or Tythe , per legem Terra, by civil Sanction, or the Law of the Land, Chambre, Physician to the Lord Chanwritten by C.E. Mr. of Arts.

The Art of making Devifes, by Tho. Blunt.

The Immortality of the Soul demostrated by the light of nature, by Doctor Charleton

Natural History of nutrition, life, and voluntary motion, containing all discoveries of Anatomists, and most probable fico-Anatomical, by. Dr. Charleton.

Epicurus's Morals collected partly out of his own Greek Text in Diogegenes Lacrius, and partly out of the Rhapfodies of Marcus Amonius, Putarch , Cicero, and Seneca , and faithfulle Englished by Dr. Charleson.

Ironodia Gratulatoria, Latin Poems, by Pa. Fisher.

The fiege of Rhodes.

The History of Sr. Francis Drake.

The cruelty of the Spaniards in Peru expressed by Instrumental and Vocal Musick, and by Arr of perspective in Scenes, &c. all three written by Sir William Davenant.

Unum Necessarium, or the Doctrine and practice of Repentance, by Jer.

Taylor, D. D.

A Collection of Offices and Forms A Compendious History of the of prayer publick and private, fitted for

A Collection of Letters made by Sr. Toby Mathews Knight, with a Clalia, an excellent new Romance, Character of the most excellent Lady Lucy Countesse of Carlile, by the Gondibert, an Heroick Poem, writ- fame Author, to which is added many Letters of his own to feveral persons Parthenissa, an excellent Romance of Honour, who were Contemporary Satyrical Characters, and handsom The civil right of Tythes, wherein Descriptions in Letters written to se-

Poems, viz. A Panegyrick to the King, Songs & Sonnets, the Blind La-

The Characters of the Passions written in French by the Sieur de la cellor of France, put into English by a person of quality.

Anthropologia abstracted, or the Idea of humane nature reflected in brief Philosophical and Anatomical Collections.

The Court of Rome, wherein is fet forth the whole Government thereof.

The Grand difference between opinions, of Phylicians concerning the France, Spain, and the Empire, with Oeconomie of humane nature, Metho- the Titles, Claims, and pretences to dically delivered in Exercitations Phyleach others Dominions discussed and stated by an Impartial hand, very nethe present Commotions, and great af- sure and facile training up of wouth fairs of Europe. . .

Confecrated to the glory of the Femi- all men, but most especially for such nine Sex, by Monsieur de Scudery, as undertake the charge to govern the Englished by 7. B. Gent.

Humane Industry, or a History of most Manual Arts, deducing the Ori- ten by Albert the Great, Bishop of Raginal Progresse, and Improvement of inbon, put into English by Sr. Kenelm them, furnished with variety of In- Digby Knight. Also a Conference stances and Examples, shewing forth with a Lady about choice of Religion. the Excellency of humane wit.

norable Robert Boy/.

A Prospective of the Naval Triand Famous Painter, by Gio. Fran- of the same Author. celco Busenello, Englished by Tho. Higgons, Esq;

Rais Rim'd to death, or a Collection of Ballets made on the Rump Par-

Dr. Fer. Taylors Rules of living braham Cowley.

and dving.

Sr. Walter Rawleighs Ghoft, or a Translation of Leslius de Providentia Numinis & Animi Immortalitate, written against the Atheists and Politicians of these dayes.

well guiding of Reason, and the Disco- lity. very of Truth in the Sciences.

Musarum Delitie, containing several pieces of Poerick wir, by Sr. John Menuis and Dr. Smith.

Poems, Flegies, and Sonets, written by the Bishop of Chichester.

All Horace his Lyricks, or his fourth book of Odes, and his book of Epods Englished.

Heroick Education, or choice

ceffary for theclear understanding of Maxims and Instructions for the most in the wayes of Eminent learning and A Triumphane Arch Erested and virtues, a Treatife very necessary for young Nobility and Gentry.

A Treatife of adhering to Godswrit-

The Royal Game at Chefs-Play. eraphick Love written by the Ho- sometimes the recreation of the late King Charls the first (of bleffed me-Certain Physiological Essayes, writ- mory) with many of the Nobility, ten at diffant times, and on fever 1 oc- Illustrated with almost an hundred cafions, by the Honorable Robert Gambels, being the fludy of Ricchimo the famous Italian.

A Diarium or Journal, divided into umph of the l'enetians over the Turks 12. Fornades in Burlefque Rhime, or to Signor Petro Libert, that Renown'd Droling verse, with divers other pieces

Satyrical Declamations at the entertainment at Rutland house, by Sr. William Davenant,

A Proposition for the advancement of Experimental Philosophy, by A-

A Discourse between the aforementioned Author and the Devil, concerning Oliver Cromwel.

The Ephesian Matron, or a Discourse upon the nature of Women.

The Roman, the Conversation of the A Devout Paraphrase on the 50th. Romans and Macenta in three excel-Plalm, by Math. Kellison, D.D. lent Discourses, written in French by A Discourse of a Method for the Balfac, Englished by a person of qua-

PLAYES.

The Enchanted Lovers. The Amorous Fantaim. The Noble Ingratitude. The Guardian, Cowley. Belius and Thetis. Loves labour loft. Hamlet Prince of Denmark. Romio and Tuliet.

T = T

The Method and Order of the whole Work.

I. BOOK.

Chap. I. Rom the beginning of the World , to the beginning of the first Empire. Chap. II.

The Babylonian Empire, from the first founding of it, to its utter de-Arnetion by Cyrus.

Contemporaries with the Babylonian Empire. Chap. III.

Of Sacred History, viz.

Sect. I. From the time of Phaleg, and division of the Earth to the departure of the Israelice's out of Sect. 11. From the departure of the Israelices out of Egypt, to the death of Solomon, and the rent of the Kingdom.

Sect. III. From the rent of the Kingdom, to the destruction of the Kingdom of Judah.

Sect. I V. The Kingdom of Israel, from the revolt of the Tribes, to their final Captivity under Salmanaffer.

Chap, IV.

The most antient Kingdom of Egypt. · Chap. V.

The most antient state and condition of Greece, with a description of its Kingdoms and Commonwealths, viz.

Sect. I. The state of Greece in general. Sect. II. The Sicyonian Kingdom.

Sect. III. The Kingdom of Argos.

Sect. IV. The most amient Kingdom and Commonvealth of Athens.

Sect. V. The most antient Kingdom and Commonwealth of Lacedamon.

Sect. VI. The most antient Kingdom of Corinth. Sect. VII. The antient Kingdom of Thebes.

Chap. VI. The Original and Kingdom of Rome, viz. Sect. I. The Original of the Citie of Rome. Sect. II. From the building of the Citie, to the de-Arustion of the Kingdom.

II. Book.

Of the Persian Empire and Affairs of the VV orld Contemporary with it.

Chap. I.

The Persian Empire, viz.

Sect. I. From the beginning of the Empire of Cy-rus, to the death of Cambyles his Son and Succeffor.

Sect. II. From the death of Cambyles, to that of Xerxes.

Sect. III. From the death of Xerxes, and beginming of Artaxerxes Longimanus, to the death of Artaxerxes Mnemon, containing the space of Sect. IV. From the death of Artaxerxes Mnemon, and the beginning of Ochus, to the death of Darius Codomannus, the space of 32 years.

Contemporaries with the Persian Empire. Chap, II.

The Affairs of the Gixcians among fi themselves,

Sect. I. Of such things as happened from the beginning of this Empire, untill the expedition of XCI-

Sect. II. Of such things as fell out among st the Gracians from their Victories at Plata and Mycale, untill the beginning of the Peloponefian VV ar, the space of 48 years.

Sea. III. From the beginning of the Peloponnesian VVar, to the ending thereof, the space of 27 years. Sect. IV. From the end of the Peloponnesian VVar, to the reign of Philip King of Macedonia, the space of 44 years.

Sect. V. From the beginning of the reign of Philip King of Macedonia, to the Monarchy of Alexder his fon, the space of 3.1 years.

Chap. I II. The Affairs of Sicily, viz.

Sect.1.

Sect. I. The first Names and Inhabitants of this Island, with a relation of such things as preceded the Perlian Empire.

Sect. II. Of such things as were Contemporary with the Perfian Empire.

Chap. IV.

The Affairs of the Romans, viz. Sect. I. From the banishment of Tarquinius, and first change of Government, to the alteration made by the Decemviri, the space of 57 rears.

Sect. II. From the Creation of the Decemviri, to the VVar of Priverna, which fell out the same year that Darius Codomannus died, the space of 121 years.

III. Book.

Of the Empire of the Macedonians, and Affairs of the VV orld Contemporary with it.

Chap. I. From the beginning of the Monarchy of Alexander, to his death, the space of fix years and ten moneths.

Chap, II.

Of such things as hapned after the death of Alexander, among ft his Captains, till their Cantonizing of his Empire into their particular Kingdoms. and taking the stile and title of Kings upon them, the space of 17 years. Chap. III.

From Alexanders Captains taking the title of King, to the death of Selencus the Inviver of them, the space of 24 years. Chap. IV.

The Macedonian Kingdom, from the death of Seleucus, to the Captivity of Perseus, and end of this Kingdom, the Space of 139 years.

Chap, V The Asian and Syrian Kingdom, from the death of Seleucus, to the reducing of Syria into the form of a Roman Province by Pompey, the Space of 220 years.

Chap. VI. The Egyptian Kingdom, from the death of Ptolomy the fon of Lagus, to the death of Cleopatra, and the reducing of Egypt into the form of a Roman Province, the Space of 254 years.

Contemporaries with the Empire of the Macedopians.

Chap. VII.

The Judaan Kingdam, or Principality of the Asmonans, from the departure of Antiochus Sideles from Jerusalem, to the reign of Herod an Alien, being by birth an Idumaan, the space of 98 years.

Chap. VIII.

The Affairs of Sicily, from the death of Timoleon, to the Sicilian , or first Punick VV ar , the space of 73 years.

Chap, I X.

The Affairs of the Romans, viz. Sect. I. From the VV ar of Privernum, to the first Punick VV ar , wherein the Romans first fee foot out of Italy, the space of 66 years. Sec. II. From the first Punick VV ar to that with Antiochus the Great, in which the Romans first invaded Alia, the space of 37 years.

Sect. III. From the War with Antiochus . and the invasion of Asia, to the destruction of Carthage, after which the Romans degenerated through security, the space of 45 years. Sect. IV. From the destruction of Catthage, to the

VV ar with Mithridates, which afforded the occasion to the first Civil VVar, the space of 18

Sect. V. From the War with Mithridates , and the first Civil War, to the Combination of Pompey, Craffus, and Gafar, termed by Vario, Tricipitina, which proved the ruin of the Popular Government, the space of 28 years.

Sect. VI. From the beginning of the Tricipitina, or first Triumvirate, to the absolutenelle of Inlius Cafar, the space of 16 years.

Sect. VII. From the absolutenesse of Julius Czfar to the end of the fecond Triumvirate, and the absolutenesse of Octavius Casar, or Casar O-Ctavianus, the Space of 15 years.

IV. Book

The Roman Empire.

Chap, I, From the absolutenesse o Octavius, to the death of Tiberius, the space of 66 years.

Chap, I I. From the death of Tiberius, to that of Nero, the last Emperour of Casass family, the space of 20 years.

Chap. I I I.

From the death of Nero, to that of Domitian, the last of the family of Vespasian, the space of 27

Chap, I V.

From the death of Domitian, to that of Pertinax. and the exposing of the Empire to publick sale by the Soldiers, the space of 97 years.

Chap. V. From the death of Pertinax, and exposing the Empire to fale, to the death of Maximinus the first elected Emperour without confent of the Senate, the space of 45 years. Chap. VI.

From the death of Maximinus the first elected Bmperour without confent of the Senate, to the Monarchy of Constantine , who reformed Religion, and Translated the Imperial feat to Byzantium, the Space of 86 years.

A Ta-

A T ABLE containing the special matters contained in the whole Work.

The first Number sheweth the Page, and the second the Paragraph.

Aron 38.19. maketh the Golden Calf 40.5. dieth 42.10. Aborigines, who, and whence 146.

Abraham born 31. 2. cometh into Canaan 32: 3. dieth 34. 9.

Achaus 107.4. Achaans whence descended ibid. Unite themfelves 524. 9. ingage in the Social War 520. 20. joyn with the Romans against Philip 540. 43. the dissolution of their Commonwealth how it came to passe 684. 1. Adrian Emperour, his story 833, 10. Ædiles Created, and their Office 436.43, &c. Ægialens foundeth the Kingdom of Sicyon 88.1. Ægialia Citie and Countrey, fo called after Æ-gialeus ibid. Egypt, the History of it 70. 1. not the gift of the Nile 81. 29. the Antiquity of its Kingdom ibid. its antient Government 83. 35. the division of it 84. 36. Courts of Juffice ibid. 37. Laws, Lawgivers, Customs, &c. 38. 39,40,41. Peolomy the fon of Lagus obtaineth it 505. 4. its Kingdom of the Lagida 585. I. &c. reduced into a Province by the Romans 607.41. and 744.20. Egyptos the brother of Danaus 76,18.

Egyptians revolt, and are subdued by Cambyses 179 6 by Xernes 193. 28. again revolt 211. 3. Subdued again by Artaxerxes Longimanus 212.5. again revolt 23 3.61. overthrown 240. 84. force the Persians to depart 241.85. again fubdued by Ochu 249. 11, yield themselves to Alexandar 262.48.

Egens King of Athens 108.6. Ægean Sea, whence so called 111.13. Egifthus 103.32.

Egina the Island 278. 18, the Inhabitants joyn with the Thebans ib. by giving earth & water to Darius, incense the Gracians ibid. War betwixt them and the Athenians 281. 25. ejected thence, and a Colony placed there by the Athenians 299.7.

Emilianus Emperour 873.4. Æmilius Paulus subdueth Perfeus 681.15.

Eneas 103.31. and 147.3. Estians led as a Colony into Afia 104.33. Æ1145 107,4.

Æthra the Mother of Thefeus 109. 7. and 11 2.

Esolians envy the Acheans 525.10. stir up Cian omenes of Sparta against them 525. 12. 0aute the Social War 528.18,&c.refuse Peace 538. 34. forced to make Peace with Philip 537. 36. joyn with the Romans against him 539. 40. having fall'n out with the Romans about plunder, move Antiochus and others againtt them 559.30. Subdued by Acilius 676.3. by Fulvius Nobilior 677.6.

Agamemnon 101. 27,&c. Agathocles the Sicilian Tyrant his extraction, rise,&c. 627. 1, &c. invadeth Africk 631. 7. returneth 635. 15. his second Voyage into Africk 656.17 returneth in ftealth ibid, 16. poyfoned 838.22.

Agathocles the Minion of Ptolomy Philopator 587.5. put to death by the people 585.8. Agenor the father of Cadmus and Europa 142.

Agefilaus obtaineth the Kingdom of Lacedamon 338. 8. invadeth Asia 232.59. recalled 235. 68 and 343.14. obtaineth a Victory against the Leaguers ibid. 15. overrunneth Argia 342.17. relieveth the Achaans 343.18. defendeth Sphodrias 348, 31. undertaketh a fruitlesse expedition against the Baotians 349. 32. assisteth the Egyptians against the Parsians 244. 94. and 361. 61. dieth 244. 96. and 3.62.61

Agis, son of Endamidas King of Lacedamon going about to amend the state of his Countrey is murdered by the Ephori 525, 10.

Agrarian Law at Rome 444.61,8cc. Agrippa (Vipsanius) victorious in Acquitaine

741.21.

741, 21. taketh the Island Leucas 743, 26. 1 his condition 748. 4. his advice to Ottavius Cafar for Democracy ib. an answer to his Arguments 750. 8. Cafar useth his industry 758. 23. his death 766. 39.

Agrippa Posthumus, Agrippa's Son by Julia the Daughter of Augustus 775. 54, &c.

Agrippa, Grandson to King Herod by his Son Aristobulus, made King of Judea by Cains 794. 2. accuseth Herod the Tetrarch , and getterh his Principality ibid, affilteth Claudius in his obtaining the Empire 796.7. killeth Tames, and dieth miserably 797.8.

Agrippa, son of Agrippa, 16 years old at his fathers death. ilid

Agrippina Vipsania , Daughter to Agrippa Vip-Jamus by the Daughter of T. Pomponius Atticus, the Wife of Tilerius Nero, put away 766.

Agrippina, Daughter to Agrippa by Julia Daughter of Augustus, Wise to Germanicus Cafar 777.58.

Agrippina, Daughter of Germanicus, married to her Uncle Claudius 800. 16. poysoneth him 802. 20. falls at odds with her Son Nero 804.24. made away by him 805.27.

Ajax, Son of Telamon 101.28.

Ajax, Son of Oilens ibid. Alcimus, High Priest of the Tews 572. 59. fent with Bachides against Maccabaus 574.61. his end ibid. 63.

Alba Longa built 149.7. destroyed 162. 21. Alcibiades his advise to his Uncle Pericles when a Child 296.30. hindreth the Peace with the Lacedamonians 313. 41. marcheth into Peloponnesus 314. 44. fent into Sicily 317. 51. condemned about the Herme ibid. flieth to Lacedammibid, acteth against his own Countrey 320. 61. defireth to return thirher 321. 63. recalled 324. 69. overthroweth Mindarus the Spartan 328.77. beliegeth Chalcedon 329.81. returneth to Athens 330.83. discarded 331. 84. made away by procurement of the thirty Tyrants 327.6.

Alexander, fon of Philip and Olympias, born 368. 12. succeedeth his father 378.35. demolisheth Thebes 380 39. paffeth into Afia 282.20. and 381.41. his first victory at Granicus 252. 23. his fecond at Iffus 256.34, &c. taketh Tyre 259.41. invadeth Judea 260. 45, foundeth Alexandria in Egypt 262. 49. his third victory over Darius at Gaugamela 266. 39. declared King of Asia 267. 62. burnerh in a frollick the Palace of Perlepolis 269.67. bewaileth the death of Darius 487.1, marrieth Roxane 492.10. croffeth the River Indus 493. 15. retreateth 495. 21. casteth himself into extreme darger 496.24, marrieth Statira the Antigonus fon of Echecrates deflined by Philip Daughter of Darins 500. 33. returneth to Babylon 502.57. dieth ibid. 38,8cc.

Alexander, son of Alexander the Great 506.5. murdred by Caffander 513.24. Alexander Balas the counterfeit King of Syria 576.65,8cc.

Alexander Zabinas, or Zabinaus, the counterfeit King of Swia $82.77,800.

Alexander Fannaus King of the Tews, his story 610.5.846.

Alexander fon of Aristobulus 617. 18. beheaded

by Pompey's order 618.19. Alexander and Aristobulus, fons of Herod by Marianne, accused by their father unto Augustus 796.43. put to death 770.44.

Alex inder Emperour of Rome 860.28. Allobroges subdued 689, their Ambassadors drawn into Catalines conspiracy 711.41. Amazons befiege Athens 112. 15. whether any of them came to Alexander the Great, according to the story 488.2.

Amilear defeated by Gelon 394.14. Amilear Barcas troubleth Italy with inroads 656.7. maketh peace with the Romans ibid. defeateth the Mercenaries 657.11. finisheth the War with them 659.15. his acts after the ending of the first Punick War 665. 30. his end ibid.

Amphyttion the fon of Deucalion 107.4? Amphystiones, the General Council of Greece, by whom founded 94.11.

Amyclas the fon of Lacedamon 121.2. Ancus Martins King of Rome, his ftory 162. 22,

Annual Magistrates at Athens 114.20. Annibal the fon of Gefco 397.20,&c.

Annibal Crucified by his own Soldiers 652.3. Annibal son of Amilear Barcas created General 665. 30, teketh Saguntus ibid. 31. paffeth into Italy 666.33. overthroweth the Romans at Canna 669.38. goeth down the wind ibid. 40. faceth Rome 671,44, recalled 673,50, over-thrown by Scipio ibid. flieth to Antiochus, whom he adviseth about the War with the Romans 558.28. (worn by his father upon the Altar when a Child never to be friend to them 559.30. & 665.30. worfted at Sea 561. 3 3.his death 679.11.

Antalcidas his peace 345.24. Antigonus his share in the Provinces after A. lexanders death 503. 3. made General against Eumenes 506. 8. thinketh of getting all into his power 507.10, the Caprains Combine against him 517.21. he, and the rest take the title of King 514. 26, his fruitlesse expeditions 515 1 &c. flain 516:4.

Antigonus Gonat as, fon of Denfefrius 522. 3. and Antigonus Doson King of Macedonia 524.9: &c. to the Kingdom 544.51! Killed ibid. 52.

Antigonus, fon of John Hyrcanus, killed by his ! brother Ariffolulus his command, uvon a falle acculation 609.4.

Antigonus, the fon of Aristobulus . the Parthians procure him to invade Indaa 522. 27. Cropeth off the Ears of his Uncle Hyrcanus 624. 30.taken in Ternsalem and beheaded 627.35 Antiochus Soter, son of Selencus 546.1. succeed-erh his father 547.2. Antiochus Theus, fon of Antiochus Soter, succeedeth his father 548.5.

Anticchus Hierax, brother of Seleucus Callinicus 549.7,8c.

Amiochus the Great succeedeth his brother Seleucus Ceraunus 550. 9. maketh War upon Ptolomy 553. 14. maketh an expedition into the East 556. 24. passeth over into Greece against the Romans $59.30. overthrown by Scipio 562.30, and 677.5. is flain 503. 38.

Antiochus Epiphanes succeedeth his brother Seleucus Philopator 563. 49: persecuteth the Jews for their Religion 566.45. his end 568.

Amiochus Eupator succeedeth his father Epiphanes 568. 51.

Antiochus Sidetes dispossesseth Tryphon $19.73. besiegeth Terusalem 580.74. flain 581.76.

Actiochus Grypus killeth Balas the usurping counterfeit 182.78.

Antiochus Pius 583.80,&c. Amiochus Asiaticus 584 82, spoyled of his Patrimony by Pompey ibid. and 709.36. Antiochus Comagenus dieth 776,56.

Amiochus Comagenus restored to his Kingdom, and part of Cilicia given him by Claudius 797. 8.

Amipater left in Macedonia by Alexander 381 42. overthroweth the Laced amonians 282.42. whether Alexander was poyloned by his procurement 502. 38 imployed in the Lamian War 505.4. chosen General with Antigonus, and the Protector of the Kings 506 7. dieth

Antipater, son of Cassander, killed his own Mother $17.6,8c.

Antipater the Idumaan, his extraction 614. 13. flirreth up Hyrcanus to recover his right 615.43. his great services to Cafar rewarded 618.20 diverteth his fon Herod from doing any mischief 620, 22. poysoned by Malichus ibid. 23.

Antipater, fon of King Herod, improveth his fathers displeasure against his brothers 769.43. put to death for plotting also against his fathers life 771.46.

Antonius (Marcus) Grandfather to the Triumvir, and an excellent Orator, killed by Ma-

Amonius (Caius) the Collegue of Cicero suppresseth Cataline 712.42.

Antonius (Marcus) fighteth under Gabinius in Egypt 599. 27. Tribune of the people he standeth for Cafat 727. 26. Conful with him 732.2. stirreth up the people against the Conspirators 734. 5. practizeth for his own advancement ibid. 7. being Triumvir he refufeth to spare Cicero 736. 10. followeth Cleopara into Egypt 738 16 his carriage in the East 739. 18. his extravagancies in Egypt 742.24 overthrown at Actium 743.26. killeth himself 744. 28. and vide 603. 35, Antonius (Lucius) Consul, out of envy to Octavius Cafar taifeth the Perusian War 738. 16.

Antoninus Pius Emperour, his story 335.15. Aurelius Antoninus Philosophus Emperour 838.

Apelles Tutor to Philip 53 1.26, &c. his Treason discovered 533.27. Apis fon of Phoroneus 590.2.

Aporheosis of the Roman Emperours, what

Appius Claudius the Decemvir his infamous Rory 461.93,&c. Appins the blind dehorteth from peace with Pyrrhus 648.11.

Appius Claudius Cauden first sent into Sicilie

Apries King of Egypt 80.26.

Aratus the Sicyonida 524. 9. poyloned by Philip

Arbaces conspireth against Sardanapalus 15.8. Archelaus General of Mithridates 618. 8. defeared by Sylla ibid. 9.

Archelans fon of Herod 771. 47. banished 772.

Areopagus the Council of it 108.5.

Argives refuse to joyn with the Greeks against Xernes 196.76. recover the Democracy 316.

Argonauts their expedition in the ship Argo to fetch the Golden Fleece 96.16.

Argos the Citie, and its antient Kingdom oo. 1, &c. the Kingdom divided into three parts 94. 12. laboureth under an unparalleld Sedition 353.43.

Argus the fon of Jupiter and Niobe 90. 2. Argyraspides joyn with Eumenes 508.12. betray him to Antigonus 510. 17. cunningly made away by Antigonus $11,20.

Arrideus, base son to Philip, declared King after Alexanders death 504. 2. killed by Olympias 517.18.

Aristodemus King of Messenia 104. 34. and Ariftides the Just 199. 44. and 282.30. Aristogiton and Harmodius kill Hipporchus 275. 10.

Ariarathes the fifth King of Cappadocia marrioth Antiockie Daughter of Antiochie the Great 559.29. and 575.64.

Ariarathes his suppositions son ibid.

Aristobulus, son of John Hyrcanus succeeding his father, assumeth a Diademe 609. 4. his cruelty against his mother and brethren ibid.

Aritobalia, younger fon of Alexander Jannaus, dispossesseth his brother Hyrcanus 614.13. carried prisoner to Rome by Pompey 617. 17 escapeth ibid. taken, and fent back by Gabinius 617.18. poyloned 618.19.

Aristobulus, fon of Aristobolus, drowned by Hered 768. 41.

Aristobulus and his brother Alexander put to death by their father Herod 770.44. Aristonicus contesting for the Kingdom of Pergamus is taken and ftrangled 686. 8.

Aristomenes Captain of the Messenians 135.38,

Arminius the German Captain 773.52. overthrown by Germanicus 776.57.

Arfaces revolve h from the Macedonians $46. 5 confirmeth his Kingdom over the Parthians

Arfes King of Perfia 251.16,846.

Artaxerxes Longimanus King of Persia succeedeth his father Xerxes 210.1.

Artaxerxes Mnemon succeedeth his father Ochus

219.25, dieth 244.97,&c.
Artemisa Queen of Halicarnassus followeth, Xerxes into Greece 200. 47. advifeth him to retreat 201.KI

Amenu sia, fifter, and wife of Mausolus, her love to him 250.15.

Affrian, stheir Empire 12.4,8c.

Aftyages King of Media 20,32. and 23,29,80 29.43. and 30.47. and 31.48.

Athens, the Citie and Kingdom founded 106.1. burnt by Xernes 199 45. by Mardonius 203 58. feized by a fearfull plague 300. 9. yieldeth to Lyfander 334.91.

Athenians take away the title of King, and make Archons for life 112.19.

Archons for ten years 114.19. Annual Archons ibid. 10. free themselves from the Pisistratida 276.13. rebuild their Walts 285.2, draw the chief power to themselves 286.5. defeated in Sicily 3 19.56, &c. admit of Oligarchy 323.66. change that Government 326. 74. their ridiculous ficklenesse after they forfook Monarchy 751.9.

Atreus King of Argos 100.24,&c.

Attalus, Uncle to Cleoparta, the wife of Philip 377.32. suppressed by Alexander 252. 20. Atteins Tribune of the people curfeth Craffus as he fers forward for Parthia 718. 8. Attilites Regulus Conful fent into Africk 654.

4. maketh War with a Serpent ibid. 5. defeated, and taken ibid. tormented to death by the Carthaginians 656.T.

Atlas, how many of that name 107.2. Aurelianus Emperour $73.6.

B Abylon 5. 12. its Empire ibid. &cc. granted to Belesis 16.12. taken by Cyrus 29.42. rebelleth against Darins, & recovered 185.10. entred by Alexander 267.62, recovered by Selencus 513.23.

Bacchanalia forbidden at Rome, because of horrid practices 679.9.

Bacchiada of Corinth, whence so called 139. 3. their Government 140.5.

Bacchides General of Demetrius Soter fent against the Jews 572. 59. against Maccabans 574.61. (weareth never more to molest the Jews 57 1.63.

Bacchus, who the true one 134.8. 143.5.

Bagoas the Eunuch 248.9, &c. murdereth Ochus and Arfes 251.16. punished by Darius ib.17. Ballianus Emperour 855.10

Belus, who 13.3. Belus Egyptian 77.19. Belefis, or Belochus, conspireth against Sardangpalus 15.8. obtaineth Babylon 17.15.

Belerophontes, fon of Glaucus the Corinthian 1 28.2.

Bellus binds, and murders Darius 270. 71. &c. taketh the title of King 488.2. delivered up to Alexander 489. 5. punished for his execrable treason 491.8.

Berenice her hair feigned to be taken up into Heaven by Conon the Mathematician 587.4. Bible Translated into Greek by the 72 Interpreters 585.1.

Bibulus Conful with Cafar 715.1. Bishops the first of all 792. 85. and 803. 22. and 813.44. and 827. 31. and 836.17. and 845. 36. and 856.12. and 871.41. and 878. 18, &c.

Bocchoris King of Egypt 79. 24. Bocchus King of Mauritania affifteth Jugartha his fon-in-law 661.20.

Boodicia the British Queen her resolution, and valour against the Romans 806.29. poysoneth her felf 807. 31.

Bolgins, or Belgins, Captain of the Galls 521.1. Brennus taketh Rome 478.34. invadeth Macedonia 521. 2.

Britain proved to have been antiently known, against Cambden 721.13, invaded by Julius Cafar 722. 16. passages there in Claudius his time 799. 13, &c. in Nero's time 806. 29. when it received the Christian faith 648. 42. passages there in the time of Severus 853.7. BriBritanicus, the son of Claudius 800. 16. poyso- | Camaledunum a Colony of Britain, now Maldon. ned by Mere 804.25.
Brutus (Junior the first

the first Roman Conful his story 173,45,8 and 416.5

Brutus (Mureus) one of the Conspirators a gainst Tulins Cafar 732.3. killeth himself

Bruens (Decimus) another of the Conspirators 732.3. killed, and his head fent to Antony 735. 8.

Bubares the Persian marrieth the Daughter of A. myntas 187.13. and 364.2.

Bucephalus, Alexanders horse 488. 1. a Citie

built where he died , and called Bucephalea

Burrhus Captain of the Guard helpeth to prefer Nero 804.23. he, and Seneca the cause of Nero's good beginning ibid. 24. hindreth Nero from killing his Mother ibid. 25. he, and Seneca consulted about purting her to death 805.27. dieth 808.32.

Admus his story 142.1,&c. Madmen the Theban Castle ibid. seized by the Lacedamonians 346. 26. recovered 348.

Carries, who they were 472. 22. and 838. 22. Cafar, C. Julius Cafar born 712. 43. his Parentage and Rife ibid. &c. getteth by bribery the High-Priest-hood 713.45. obtaineth the Consulship 714. 46. procureth Gall for five years 515. 1. marrieth his Daughter Julia to Pompey ibid. 2. his acts in Gall 717. 5. his Command continued to him for other five years 718. 7. defeateth the Germans 719. 10. his first expedition into Britain 722. 16. his fecond 723. 18. reduceth the Rebellious Galls 725. 23. invadeth Maly 727. 27. rifleth the Treasury ibid. goeth into Spain 728. 29. into Epirus ibid. overthroweth Pompey ibid. 30. honoured at Rome 729. 22. overthroweth Pharnaces 730. 33. Suppresseth Pompey's sons in Africk ibid. 34. his fons in Spain ibid. flain in the Senate-house 732. 3. his Character ibid. 4.

Cains and Lucius sons of Agrippa by Julia adopted by Augusius their Grandfather 763.

37. Caius 772.29. Cains Caligula Emperour, his story 793. 1,

Caleb 41. 45. Calydnus King of Thebes 142.1.

Callysthenes put to death by Alexander 242.12. Callythia the Priest of Juno at Argos 91.5. Calpurnius Flamma the valiant Roman Tribune

659.4.

Cambyles father of Cyrus the Great 23. 29. and 29.43.

Cambyses son of Cyrus the Great succeedeth his father 179. c. Conquereth Egypt 180.7. murdereth his brother and fifter 181, 9. dieth

Camillus 476. 30, &c. recovereth Rome from the Galls 479. 34. overthroweth them at the River Aniene 480. 38. dieth of the plague

Canna, the great overthrow of the Romans there 668.38

Candaules King of Lydia 24.32.

Capitol defigned, and in part built 171.41.finished and dedicated 421. 15.

Capua revolteth from the Romans 669. 39. retaken 671.44.

Carthage, the history of its foundation, success, and Government 388,4.&c. destroyed by the Romans 680. 22.

Carthaginians their disposition and Customs 392.11. defeated by Gelon of Syracuse 349.14. take Selinus, Himera, and Agrigentum 397. 21,8cc. besiege Syracuse 402.31. seized with a grievous plague ibid. 32. overthrown by, and overthrow Dionysius 405. 37, &c. receive another great overthrow from Timeleon 413. 54. their first League with Rome 422. 16. receive a great losse by shipwrack 630. 6. overthrow Agathocles 651. ibid. overthrown by him in Africk 632. 8. again 634. 12. fall out with the Romans the first time, and why 652. 1, 8cc. ingaged in War with their Mercenaries 656.8, &c. fall out with the Romans the second time, and why 665. 31, &c. the third time, and their destruction 682.18,800.

Carus Emperour 875.9. Caffander, son of Antipater 302. 38. feizeth on Macedonia 511.19. dieth 517.

Casius Author of the Agrarian Law at Rome 443.59,8cc.

Casins Quæstor to Crassus reduceth the Provinces after his death 719.9. his acts in Tudea 618. 19. one of the Conspirators against Cafar 732.3. he, and Brutus take extravagant courses for Treasure 7:7. 13. his grievous exactions in Judea 620. 23. killeth himself out of a misapprehension 738.14. Casivellaun, or Casibelline, Captain of the Bri-tans 723 18,8cc. Caftor and Pollux, called Diofcuri 121. 2. and 838.22.

Cato Porcius born, and whence named Cato 662. 22. against repealing the Oppian Law, and sent into Spain 675. 54. ever concluded his speech in the Senate with this saying, Carthage is to be destroyed 602. 18. dieth 683.20.

Cate (Marcus) top of Cate Salonianus . and . Grandion of Centorius, fent, out of hatred by Clodin, to spoyl Prolomy of Cyprus of his Kingdom 716.4. killeth himself at Utica Cecrops founderh the Kingdom of Athens 106.1.

Cenfors Created, and a Description of their Office 471.19.8c.

:Census instituted by Servius Tullius, and what

Chamia and Chemia, the same with Egypt o. 22.

Charilans, Nephew of Lycurgus 122.5, &c. Christ our Lord born 767. 40. executeth his ministry 778.62. Crucified 785.72. Testimo nies of Tews and Heathens concerning him ibid. 72.84C.

Christians, their condition amongst the Heathen, till Constantines time 857. 14, the reasons of the prejudice of Pagans against them ibid. 15. malicious flanders concerning the manner of their worship 858. 16. concerning the object of it 859. 17. accused of Sedition ibid. 18. wonderfull hatred against them 860. 19. the sad effects of it ibid. 20. their unblameable demeanour in their Assemblies 861, 22, good, and loval subjects 863, 25, good men 865. 28, eminent for Love and Unity of affection ibid. 29. forced Devils our of bodies. and to confesse the truth ibs 30. whence they had their strength against them 867, 32, triumphed over their Enemies in their very fufferings 867 33.

Chimara, what 138.2. Cicero, see Tallius.

Cimbri, who 691.21. overthrown by Marius 692.22. Cimon, son of Stefagoras, and father to Miltiades 281.27 Cimon, fon of Miltiades 282.29, dieth in Cyprus

214.13. his commendation 215.14. Cineas the Orator sent by Pyrrhus into Italy

647. 9. to Rome 648. 11. into Sicily 549. Cinna (Cornelius) Consultecalleth Marius 607.

4. rageth in Rome with him against Sylla's party ibid. 5. killed by his own Soldiers in his tourth Consulship 699. 11.

Claudius Emperour, his Hory 796 7. Claudius the second Emperour 873.6.

Clemens Alexandrinus 857.14. Cleombrotus King of Sporta, brother to Agelipolis, dieth in the battel of Leultra 351. 38. Cleomenes, fon of Anaxandridas King of Sparta 276.13,&c. dieth of the Phrenfie 279, 22.

Cleomines, fon of Leonidas King of Sparta 525. 10. destroyeth the Ephori ibid. deseated by Antigonus Doson 528. 26, his end in Egypt 588.6.

Cleopatra, fifter to Alexander the Great, and wife to Alexander of Ep 642. 2. being Widow of Perdiccas is mute by the pro-curement of Antigonus 5744 Cleopatra, Daughter of Antiochusthe Great married to Ptolomy Epiphanes 558.20.

Cleopatra, fifter, and wife to Ptolomy Rhilometor, after his death marrieth her brother Phylcon 594.18. their dissensions and reconcilement 595.19.

Cleopatra, Daughter of Ptolomy Philometor married to Alexander the Counterfeit 594, 17. and 576. 67. taken from him, and married to Demetrius Nicanor 577.68. her fon by Alexander Balas, called Alexander 578. 69. her two fons by Demetrius, Seleucus and Antiochus 582. 78. killeth the former ibid, offering a Cup of poylon to the other, is forced to drink it her felf 582.79. suspected of killing her husband ibid. 77.

Cleopatra, the other daughtet of Ptolomy Philometor married tomer Uncle Phylcon, after he had put away her mother 594. 18. her two fons, Lathurus and Alexander, and three daughters, Cleopaira, Selene, and Tryphana, by Phylcon 505.20. the Kingdom left at her difposal ibid. first taketh to her one son, and then another 506. 20. killed by Alexander her fon ibid. 21.

Cleopatra, daughter to Ptolomy Physicon, divorced from her brother Lathurus 506, 20, married to Antiochus Cyzicenus ibid. and 582.79. killed by her fifter Tryphana wife to Amiochus Grypus 583.70.

Cleopatra, daughter of Ptolomy Auletes, reigneth with her brother and husband Ptolomy Dionysius 599. 28. wageth War against her brother 600, 29, after his death married to her. fecond brother 602.34. hath a fon by Julius Casar ibid. poyloneth her brother 603.35. meeteth Amony in Asia ibid. their loose practices in Egypt ibid. 36. &c. War decreed against her by the Romans 604.37. maketh Antony ingage at Actium ibid, 38. betrayeth Pe-Iulium, and the Fleet to Cefar 605. 39. dieth by the biting of an Aspe 606, 41, and vide 738.16. and 742.23,8c.

Clifthenes changeth the number of the Athenian Tribes from four to ten 277.14. vide &cc.

Clitus killed by Alexander 401.10. Clodius getterh to be Tribune 715.3. his malice to Cicero ibid. to Cato 7:6, killed by Milo Cocalus King of the Sicani in Sicily 384 6. Codrus the last King of Athens his story 113.

Commodus Emperour, his thory 843.31, &cc. Conon the A henian 331.84.80. obtaineth a victory against the Lacedamonians, being made came of him 236.71.

Confuls, whence to called 414. 1. their power, rites, duration 415.2, &c. the first, who 416. 5. the first Pleberan Conful, who 482,42.

Constantine, son of Constantius Chlorus 876. 12. converted 877.14. obtaineth the Monarchy ibid. 15. buildeth Constantinople ibid. occasioneth the ruin of the Empire, how 878, 16, Constantius Chlorus, first Cafar 875. 10.then Emperour 876.12.

Corinth, the foundation of Citie and Kingdom 138. 1. taken, and razed by Mummius 6841. Corinthians, difference betwixt them and the Athenians 288. 9. betwixt them and the Corcyraans 201. 18. defeated in a Sea-fight 202. 20. labour under Seditions 342.16.

Corbulo prospererh in the East 805. 26, in Armenia 806. 28. again 808. 12. killed by Nero Coriolanus, his hiltory 437 45,&c. & 438.50,&c Councills 845.37. that of Nice 880.21.

Cranaus King of Athens, Successor of Cecrops

Craffus, M. Licinius Craffus defeateth Spartacus 706.28, he, Pompey, and Cafar make the Tricipitina 714.47. he, and Pompey obtain the Consulship by torce 718.7. rifleth the Temple of Terusalem ibid. 9. flain in his expedition against the Parth ans 710.0.

Crafus King of Lydia his ftory 25 35 &c. Cresphontes obtaineth Messenia 105.36. Crete, the flory thereof 100.0.

Curio bribed by Cafar laboureth hard for him 726.25. Curius Dentatus 645.6. defeateth Pyrihus 650.15.

Cyaxares King of the Medes 17 14. Cyprian Bishop of Carthage 880.20. Cyplelus Tyrant of Corinib 140.5, &c. (prbes and Axones 462.2.

Cyrus, fon of Cambyles, his birth and exploits 23.29,&c. releafeth the Tems out of Captivity 177.1. his end 178.2.&c.

Cyrus, fon of Darius Nothus 219. 24. conspireth against the King his brothers life ibid. 25. pardoned by his Mothers intercession 220, 26. marcheth up against his brother 221.30.wo. thipped as King 224.39. flain ibid. 40.

Adalus the famous Athenian Artist 384.6.

Danae, the Mother of Perfeus 93.9. Danans, the Egyptian 76.18. cometh to Argos

92. 74 Daniel, the Prophet 21.25. and 178.2. his feventy weeks 213.9.

Dardanus 100.26. Darius Medus, who 22.27,800.

Artaxerxes his Admiral 235. 69. what be- | Darius, son of Hystaspes, one of the seven Conspirators against the Magi 183. 3. obtaineth the Kingdom of Persia ibid. 4. reneweth the building of the Temple 184.7. his unprofperous expedition against the Scythians 186.11. dieth 192.27.

Darins Nothus, fon of Artaxerxes Longimanus 217,21,8cc.

Darius, fon of Artanerxes Mnemon, perisheth for Treason against his father 245-97.

Davius Codomannus, what he was 251. 17. overthrown by Alexander at Iffus 256.34.at Gangamela 266. 59. murdered by Bellus and others 271.73.

David, the King and Prophet 52. 36. his Sepulchre rifled by Hyrcanus 581. 75. by Herod 796.43.

Deacons, the feven first made 792.85.

Decemviri at Rome for making new Laws, their infamous story 462. 1,8cc.

Decius Mus Conful 644.5. Decius Emperour 872.3. Deioces, King of the Medes 17.14. Deibtarus defended by Cicero 721. I.

Deluge, the Universal one 2.5. three particular ones, of Ogyges, Deucalion, & Dardanus 107.3. Demaratus, son of Ariston, deposed by Cleomenes

279. 21. accompanieth Xerxes into Greece 196. 18.

Demetrius, son of Antigonus, and signamed Peliorcetes, overthrown by Ptolomy 512. 22, his attempts against Selenens 513. 24. his Victories against Ptolomy 514.26. by his too hot pursure undoeth all 516. 4. getting Macedonia aspireth after his former height 518. 8. but labouring to get, loseth all ibid, 10 and is forced to yield himfelf to Selencus $19.12. dieth in restraint $20.12.

Demetrius, son of Antigonus Gonatus, recovereth his fathers Kingdom 523.6.

Demetrius, son of Philip, sent as an Hostage to Rome 542.46. fent thither again 543. 49. his brother Perseus compasseth his death 543.51.

Demetrius Soter, fon of Seleucus Philopater, an Holtage at Rome 563. 40. desireth in vain to be restored to his father's Kingdom 569. 51. escapeth from Rome into Syria 571. 57. getterh the Kingdom, and killeth Selencus 572. 58. forbidden by the Romans to hurt the Tems 574.63. flain in battel 576.66.

Demetrius, fon of Demetrius Soter, dispossesseth Balas the Counterfeit 577.69. taken by the Parthian 579. 72. having recovered his Kingdom he is outed and flain 582.77.

Demetrius Eucarus, son of Antiochu: Grypus

Democracy unpracticable in any one large place or more 750, 7.

Descalion, his story and progeny 107.3. Diana. Dinna, het Temple at Ephelus burnt by Herofraius 26 8 12.

Dictator, his Original and Power 427.26,80.

Didb, her ftory 396.6.

Dioties modelleth anew the State of Syracufe

Divilefian Emperour 875 9

Dion the Syraculian, fon of Hipparinus 405.39. expelleth Dionyfins the younger 407. 43. flain 408.445.

Diomilus enflaveth Syracule and how, by degrees

396.19 &c. raketh Rhegium 404. 36. dieth 404.28.

Dionysius the younger succeederh his father 406. 39. expelled by Dibn 407.43. recovereth Syracule 408 46. again expelled to Corinth 411.57.
Dionysius Hidicarnasseus; the excellency of his

- history 471.19.

Dolabella Consul with Antony 734. 7. Beggerh Syria of the people ibid, declared an Enemy by the Senate, cauferh his Page to cur off his head 7 30.10.

Domitian, for of Vespalian, hid by Jupiter's Priest in the Capitol 817, 10. his ambition whileft a private map 819, 15, and 825.27. his ftory after he came to the Empire 825.

Dorus the son of Hellen 107.4.

Draco the Athenian Law-giver 114.21.

Drufus, Tribune of the people, labouring to reconcile the Senators and Equires, inlargeth the breach, and is flabb d 693.24.

Drufus, fon of Livin, wife to Augustus 765.

Drufus, fon of Tiberius 777.59. Dulcarnajin, what 262.50.

E After, great controversies about the observation of it 846.28.

Elephants, when first feen by the Europeans and Affaith 647.10. called by the Romans Lu-caboves 6 . 1 . 1 .

Epaminonda 350.34. his victory at Leuttra 351. 38. qu. flioned for his life 354. 46. fetteth upon Sparta 359. 57. dieth of a wound received in the battel of Mantinea 361. 60. his commendation ibid. &c.

Epaphus, the fon of Io 92.6.

Ephyra, afterwards called Corinib 138.1. Epidamnus, or Dyrrachium 291.17.

Epimenides, Dedicateth an Altar to the Unknown God, as it's thought 115.23.

Equites, or Knights at Rome, how ordered by the Cenfors 472. 22, the power of Judicature translated from the Senators to them 687. 10. how they brake out into an order by themselves ibid, what Officers were to be taken out of them, according to Macenas his model 755 16.

Effher not the wife of Xerxes but of Ochus

245. I. Evagoris Abdueth Cyprus 237, 75: belieged by the Officers of Armwerned he obtainerh peace 230 78. flain by Thrafidiens the Bunuch 241.86.

Emeliranin Sea, whence to called 36.14. Eumienes of Cardia, after Alexander's death hartrafflened him the Government of Cappadocia and other places 504. 3. left by Perdiccas in Afih he getterh the better 506.6. declared an Enemy ibid 7. worlted, befreged inlarged 507. 3, 9, and 10 his march into the noper Provinces co8 12, &cc. fighterh with Antigonus (89. 14, having the better, is betraved and killed $10.17,8cc.

Eumenes succeedesh his Uncle Philoserus in the Kingdom of Pergamus 546.4. getteth a great part of Afia 549.7.

Eumenes, fon of Aicalus, refuseth the daughter of Antiochus the Great 559.29. joyneth with the Komans against him ibid. 31. rewarded by the Romans in the Articles of Peace 762. 37. fore wounded by Perfeus his procurement in his return from Rome 545.53.

Eunus raiseth a Servile War in Sicily 68 < . 4. Enrypon King of Lacedamon 122.4. letteth loofe the reigns of Government 124.7. Europa, the rape of her 142.2.

Eusebius, firnamed Pamphilus, why 861.21.

Abii 300. flain by the Veientes 448.68. whether onely one boy remained ibid. 60. three fent Ambassadors to the Galls in behalf of the Clusivi 478, 33.

Fabins Maximus Rullianus , and Fabins Gurges his fon 6 45.6.

Fabius Rutilianus hardly faved from the Dictators feverity by the intercession of the people 64 3.2. and 428.28.

Fabins Max. Verrucosus made Vice-Dictator, by delaying breaketh the successe of Hannibal 668 37. will not hear of leaving Capua 671, 44, against Scipio's going into Africk 672.48.

Fabins Emilianus, after some successe forced to ask Peace on equal terms 684.2.

Falix, brother to Pallas the Freedman of Claudius, his Commands, Matches, and Tyranny 700. 16. accused, but pardoned on his brothers account 804.26.

Falisci 477.32. Faunus 147. 2.

Festus succeedeth Falix 804.26.

Fescennine Verses, what 660.17.

Fimbria killeth Flaccus, and headeth his Army 698.9. killeth himself 810.38.

Flamininus, the firname of Titus Quintins de-

Florus Procurator of Judga, his Tyranny the occasion of the Zewish rebellion 810.18 Preedom of the Givin given by Amonnys to all 88 8 200 when it was ibid 8cc.

Pance. Candine, the place where the Remans were fent under the yoak by the Sammites 644.3.

Abinius reduceth into Egypt Prolomy An. letes, and for that, and other great mifdemeanors is banished 598. 26, 8cc. and Gafate, Galls, whence so named 669.20. Galba Emperour, his flory 812,41, and 814, 1. Gallatians, or Gallo-Gracians, their planting in A-Pag22.3.

Galls set upon Clusium 478.33. take Rome ibid. 34. overchrown by Camillus 479. 31. again at the River Aniene 480. 38. go to feek their fortunes three feveral wayes 521. 1, 8cc. feared by the Romans, as fatal to their Cirie 663.26 overthrown, beg Peace 664.28. the War with shormended by Marcellus ibid. 20. revole, and reduced by Gafar 7.24.20. revols and reduced again 725,22,800.

Gallienus Emperour 873.5.

Gallio Proconsul of Achaia 809. 36.

Gallus Emperour 872.4.

Games Olympick 129.22. Ifthmian 112. 15. Terentine 660.18. Sacular ibid.

Ganymodes 100.26.

Gaugamela, the place where Alexander overthrew Darius, whence so called 265.56. why the battel of that place is given to Arbela 267.61.

Gelaner King of Argos 92.7.

Gelon 387.1. his acts after he got Syracufe 388. 3. and 3 94.14.

Gentius King of the Illyrians 681.15.

Germanicus, fon of Drusus Nero 766.37. adopted by Tiberius 77 2.49. envied by him 775. 56. prospereth in Germany ibid. under pretence of quieting the East is exposed to danger and treachery 776. 57. dieth of a lingring disease at Autoch ibid. 58. his issue 777.58

Gigun, or Gignon, the name of the Egyptian Hercules 71.2.

Gordian knot cut in pieces by Alexander 254:

Gracchus (Tiberius) the Seditious Tribune 685. 6,&c. killed 686.7.

Gracehus (Caius) his Sedicious brother 687. 9, &c. caufeth his flave to kill him 689.12. Greece, the antienter name of the Countrey 86.1. a general description of it ibid. &c. its particular antient Kingdoms $8.1.&c.

Greeks, or Teathoi, whence so called 86.1.

feareth Philip of Macedonia 539,42,800. and Grypns defeateth and killeth Balas the usurping Counterfeit 582. 78. expelled out of Syria 583.79. flain ibid. 80.

Gyges King of Lydia, his ftory 24.33,8cc. Gymnopadia of the Lacedamonians 126, 16, and 127.18.

IJ Emonia, Theffaly, whence so called

Hareticks, 827.32. and 836, 18,840. & 850.44. Halirrhodius, the fon of Neptune killed by Mars 108 5.

Hammon, the same with Ham, or Cham 4.9. and Harmonia, Daughter of Dardanus 143.3,&c. Harpegus the Mede, his story 23, 29, &c. aud 28.41.

Hasidaans, a. Femilb Sect, their Original, and what they were 608.3.

Hebrews, whence so named 32.6.

Helena, Wife to Menelans 101.27, and 103. 31. Helenus, fon of Pyrrhus 523.6.

Heliopolie, the Citie On in Egypt 36.15. & 84.3. Hellas, the antient 87.1. and 107.4.

Hellen, fon of Deucalion, whence both Countrey and People were named ibid.

Heliogabalus Emperour, his story 833.10. Helots, Lacedamonian flaves, whence so called, and their condition 122.4.and 128.19. Hellenistick Jews complain that their Widdows are neglected 792.85.

Helvius Pertinax Emperour $44.35. Hephaltion, the friend of Alexander, dieth of a furfet 501.36.

Heraelide, their return into Peloponnesus 104.35. thercules, how many of this name 95. 13. 14. Egyptian ibid. and 71. 2. Tyrian 95. 13. 14.

Gracian, or son of Alemena ibid. and 15.8cc. Hercules, fon of Alexander by Barfene 504. 1. murdered $ 14.25

Hermes Trifmegiftus 83.34. Hermione, daughter to Menelaus and Helena

Herod, son of Antipater, Governour of Galilee 619. 20. his notable forwardnesse ibid. 21. revengerh his fathers death 621. 24. escapeth out of Jerusalem wherein he was besieged 623. 28. cometh to Rome, and there is declared King of Judea 624.31. beliegeth Jeru-Salem 625. 32. again 626. 34. his Soveraignty over Judea confirmed Jerusalem being taken 627.35. maketh away Aristobulus 763.41. killeth Mariamne his beloved Wife ibid. repaireth the Temple of Jerusalem, ibid. 42. his Affairs decline after his rifling of Davids Sepulchre 769. 43. putterh his two fons to death 770. 44. a great Conspiracy against him ibid.45. killeth his fon Anipater & dieth 771.46. his Testament ibid. 47.

Herod

Herod Antipus, what part he had of his fathers

Kingdom 771.47. banished 794.2. Herod Philip, the first husband of Herodias 794.2. Herod, brother of Agrippa, King of Chalcis 797.8. Herodias, wife first to Herodes Philippus, then to Herod Antipas 792.2.

Herodorus the Historian 296. 31. Hieron obtaineth the Kingdom of Syracuse 641.

29. dieth 670.41. Hierusalem, a summary account of it by Tosephus 821.10.

Hipparchus, fon of Pifistratus, killed at Athens

Hippias, son of Pisistratus 120. 33. and 191. 25. and 275. Q. flain 281.26.

Hippocrates the Physician, his descent and eminency 362,63, his Oath 363,65.

Hippodamia, wife to Pelops 99.24.

Hirrius and Pansa Consuls, both die of their wounds 735.8

Hiltiaus the Milesian, Captain of the Ionians 186. 12. carried away by Darius into Persia 187. 14. dismissed through his own cunning 180, 20 taken, and put to death 191, 23.

Horaim, Conful, dedicateth the Capitol 421.15. Horarus Cocles, his ftory 423.18.

Hyantes, a people of Bautia 142.1. Hypermnestra, daughter of Danaus, and wife of Lynceus 93 8,86. Hyrcanus (John) succeedeth his father 580.74. openeth Davids Sepulchre 581.75, takes feveral places ibid. 77. and vide 6.7.1,&c. Hyrcanus, fon of Alexander Janneus 613. 10.

dispossessed of the Kingdom of his brother 614. 12. flieth into Arabia 615. 14. Pompe) restoreth to him the Priesthood, but forbiddeth him the Diadem 617. 17. goeth in an Embassy with Phasaelus to the Parthian General 622.27. his Ears cropped off by his Nephew Antigonus 623.30. murdered by Herod 768 41.

Acob born 34.9. getteth the bleffing ibid. 11. Tames, brother of John, killed by Herod Agrippa 797. 8.

Tames, fon of Alphem, first of all Bishops, and first Bishop of Terusalem 792. 85. killed by procurement of Ananus the High Priest

Tanus and his Temple, how, and when thut 158.12.

Talus son of Argus 91 5. Talus father of To 92.6. Icarus, his story 385 6.

Idai Dactyli 9 .3. Tews rebel 810.38. in Cyrene 822. 21. in Trajan's time 832. 8. in Adrian's time 833. 11. their flare thence till the decay of the Roman Empire 834.12.

gnatius Bishop of Antioch martyred by command of Trajan $30.4.

Ilium built 101. 26. taken by the Greeks 103. 31, burne by Fimbria 698.9. the Inhabicants condole with Tiberius for the death of his fon Drusus, and he with them for that of Heltor 777.59. Inachus 90.1. Io, daughter of Inachus ibid. Io. daughter of Peiranthus ot. 5. Io, daughter of Talus 93. 6. John Baptist executeth his Ministery 778,61. folm, brother of Tames, banished to Pathmos 827.32. his death 831.7.

Fonathan, brother of Judas Maccabaus, chosen Captain in his room 574. 6. circumvented, and killed by Tryphon 578.70.

Ion, the fon of Xythus, and Grandson of Denca-

Iones, whence descended 8.19. and 107.4. expelled out of Peloponnesus 105.36. led out as a Colony into Asia 114. 19. their twelve Cities there ibid, subduce by Crassus 25. 35. by Harpagus the General of Cyrus 28.41. the third time (having revolted) by Darius his Captains 189 19.

Tolephus the Tewish historian answereth the flanders of Apion and others 75.16.8cc. taken prisoner, and fortelleth Vespasian he should be Emperour 816. 6. exhorterh his Countrey-men in vain to yield 820. 16. accused 822. siehis Histories when made ibid. Iphitus reftoreth the Olympick folemnities 129.2.

Is, the wife of Osiris 70.2. and 71.3. Ifraelites, the number of them when they came out of Egypt 39. 1. their journeys through the Wildernefle 39.2,&c. paffe into Canaan 44. 16. Issus, a Citie of Cilicia, near to which Darius was overthrown by Alexander 256.33.

Isthmus, betwixt Egypt and the Red-sea attempted in vain to be digged thorow by Nero 80. 26. that of Peloponnesus by Nero 810.38. Italians require freedom of the Citie, and raise the Social War 604.25.

Judas Maccabaus succeedeth his father in protecting the Fews 567. 47. overthroweth Timolleus and Bachides 568.49. again victorious 569.52. flain 574.61.

Ingurtha, fon of Mastanabal, and Grandson of Masanissa 690. 16. the War with him ibid. taken and put to death 661.20.

Julia, wife of Marius, and Aunt to Julius Ca-

Tulia, daughter of Julius Cafar, married to Pompet 715.2. dieth in Child-bed 724.20.

Julia, daughter of Ollavius Cafar 763.37. first married married to Marcellus, then to Agrippa ibid. to Tiberius 766. 37. her incredible wantonneffe 766.38. and 774.54. diech ibid.

Julianus Emperour, his Hory 851.1,800. July, the moneth Quintilis, whence so called Tuno of Argos her first Priest 91.5.

Jupiter of Crete 90.12. how many of that name, and who ibid. 3. and 91.4. Jus , Civitatis , Municipii , Colonia, Latii , What vide 8 35.25.8cc.

Acedamon, the Citie built 120. 1. the anrient Kingdom thereof ibid. the Commonwealth 123. 8. fet upon by Epaminondar 359.57.

Lacedamonians grudge the Athenians 285. 2. the beginning of malice betwixt them 288, 9. ingage against them 298. 3. conclude a Peace 310. 33. kept from the Olympick exercifes 314. 43. the contrary dispositions of the Athenians and them 326.74. send to Athene about Peace 320.78, their behaviour after their overthrow at Leuftra 352. 39. overthrown by Antipater 382. 42. the infirmity & danger of their Commonwealth 751.9 Larinus 97. 20.

Latinus 147.3,&c. Latines built a common Temple at Rome 158. 36. make War upon Rome for Tarquinius 427. 26. overthrown at the Lake Rhegillus 430.32. overchrown 484.45,&c. Lavinia, daughter of Latinus 148.5. Lavinium, the Cirie ibid. &c.

Laws of Solon 117.28, of Lycurgus 124, 10. of Romulus 154. 5. of Carthage 392. 11. of Diocles 396.18. of Zalencus 409. 47. of Poplicola 419. 10, &c. Laws of the twelve Tables 464. 5. Civil Law its Original and Contexture ibid. that called Lex Regia 761.29. Lelex, whence Leleges, Lelegia, and Lelegis Lepidus pronounceth Cafar Diftator 728.29. a Triumvir 736.10. turned out 741, 23.

Letters brought by Cadmus into Greece 143.3. 5. Livy the Hifforian born 715.2. dieth 776. 57. Livia Drufilla, wife of Tiberius Nero, married to Octavius Cafar 765. 37. Inspected as guilty of Augustus his death 775:54.

Lucan the Poet put to death by Nero 809.35. Lucius Cafar, Grandson of Augustus 772. 49. Lucretia, her ftory 172.44,840.

Lucullus, Lieutenant to Sulla 698. 9. Consul, and fent against Mithridates 703.23. his acts against him ibid. &c. stirs betwixt him and Pompey in Galatia 708.33. at Rome 714.46. Lustrum, what, and whence 166.31. Lycurgus the Lacedemonian Law-giver, his story 122.5,8cc.

Lycurgus an obscure man made King of Lacedamon 530.22.

Lydians their descent 24.32. why so called ibid. their Royal families ibid. 33. Conquered by Cyrus 27.39. rendred effeminate 28.

Lyncens 92.8. Lysander made Admiral of the Lacedamonian Fleet 330.83. resumeth the Government at the defire of the Allies 3 32.87.taketh Athens 334. 91. Eclypseth Agesilaus whom he had preferred to the Kingdom 339. 10. his death and Character 340,12.

Lysias, Kinsman and Lieutenant of Antiochus Epiphanes, senderh forces against Judaa 567. 48. defeated by Maccabaus 568. 59. Guardian and Chief Minister of state to Antiochus Eupator 569.53. again defeated by Maccabaus ibid. maketh Peace ibid.

Lysimachus haththeGovernment of Thrace after Alexander's death 504. 3. combineth with Ptolomy and Caffander 513. 24. flain in the battel against Seleucus 520.14.

M.

Macedonia, the Countrey and Kingdom thereof 364.1.

Macro the Freedman of Tiberius affisteth Caligula in obtaining the Empire 793.1.

Macrinus Emperour 862. 34.
Macenas 741. 21. adviseth Ostavins Cafar to undertake the Government 749. 5. giveth him directions how to order his affairs 754,14. his death and condition 766.39. Maones, 24.32.

Mamertines, who, & whence so called 639. 24. ingage against Pyrrhus ibid, 25. Hieron fallerh upon them 640. 27. Hannibal the Carthagiman deceitfully tampereth with them 641.29. fend to the Romans for aid ibid. 30. and 652.1. Manlius Capitolinus aimeth at the Sovereignty to his own destruction 476.36,&c. Marcellus Conful, finisheth the War with the Galls 664. 29. besiegeth Syracuse 670.41. flain 672.46.

Mardonins son in-law to Darius leadeth forces unsuccessefully into Greece 191.24. perswadeth Xerxes to undertake an expedition thither 102. 28, &c. left behind in Greece 202.53. burneth Athens 203.58. flain in the battel of Platea 205.62,8cc.

Marius (Caius) Lieutenant to Metellus 661. 19. Consul ibid. taketh Jugurtha ibid. 20. defeateth the Cimmerians 692. 22. giveth occasion to the Civil War 695. 3. his cruelty 697.5. dieth ibid.

Marius (Junior) Consul 700.13. killeth himself ibid. 14.

Mattathias the Priest relisteth the rage of Antiochus Epiphanes 566.45,800.

Maulolus Prince of Caria his Monument 250.15. Maximianus Herculeus Emperous $75.10. Maximinus Galerius Cefar 875. 10. Emperour 876.12. Maximinus Emperour 870.39,800.

Medon, fon of Codrus, whence were named the Medentida 114.19.

Megalopolis built 353.42. and 356. 49. Memnon his Speaking Harne 72.8.

Mpemon the Rhodian , Darius his General 252 21, his death the ruin of the Kings affairs

Menas 27.7.

Menelaus 101.27,&c. and T21.2.&c.

Menenius Agrippa reconcilerh the Patritians and Commons 432.38. Menestheus the Adversary of Theseus 112.16. Mentor the Rhodian betraveth Sidon to Ochus 247.6,&c. rewarded by him 249.12. Mercurius Trismegistus 83.34.

Meffalina, wife of Claudius, and most unchast of all women 800.16.

Messenians, after the losse of their own fear, depart into Italy 137.44. recalled and reestablished after 208 years 353.42.

Metellus, many firnamed of that name 661.10. Moton the Aftrologer certainly perswaded of the future destruction of the Athenian Fleet 320. 59. inventeth the Cycle of the Moon 297.31.

Milo of Crotone, the famous Wreftler 285.35. Milo (Annius) Tribune of the people, laboureth for Cicero's restitution 716.4. killeth Clodins Miltiades the Athenian his Pedegree and Actioons 281, 27.

Mirdarus overthrown by Alcibiades 328.77. Minerva, many of that name 106.1. and 107.2. Mines 87 2. and 109.9. and 111.12. Minutius Falix 857.14.

getes, succeedeth his father 605. 1. causeth a Massacre of 80000 Italians and Romans in one day 607.7. forced by Sylla to beg Peace 698. 10. the second War with him 702. 21. the third 703. 22. flieth to Tigranes King of Armenia 704. 24. being defeated by Pompey, he flieth to Colchos, and thence into Scythia 708. 34,&c. his fon Pharnaces usurping, he killeth himself 710.28, his Character ibid.

Molon rebelleth against Antiochus the Great 550.11, killeth himfelf 557.13.

Monarchy proved the belt of Governments 749 5. Mofes 37.18. and 74.12,800.

Mummins, from ending the Achan War, called Achaicus 684.1. Municipia and Municipes amongst the Romans;

what 828 22.8cc. Mutius Scavola 423119. Myrsilus, vide Candaules.

Nabonasar King of Babylen 17.15. his Es raibid.

Nabonidus, who, 22.27,800.

Narcissus Freedman of Claudius 802, 20; made away by Nero 804.24. Naupattus, the Citie, whence so called 104.34.

Nectanebos, or Nectanebis, feizeth on Egypt 244. 95. flieth out of it 249.11.

Nehemiah repaireth the Walls and State of Terufalem 215.15.

Nero (Claudius) deluded in Spain by Afdrubal 671.45. Consul, he killeth Asdrubal, and casteth his head before Annibals Tent 672.47. Nero, fon of Domitius Nero, and Agrippina, fonin-law, and adopted fon of Claudius 800. 16. his flory after he came to the Empire 824,23.

Nerva Cocceius freceedeth Domitian 829.2. Nicanor his blasphemous threats 573. 60. slain ibid. 61.

Nicias 313.42. fent into Sicily 317. 51. miscarrieth with the whole Army 220,54. Nile, the River, whence so called 78. 22.

Nimrod, and his Kingdom 12.1,8c.

Ninias 14.6,8cc. Ninus 14.5.

Niobe 90.1. and 144.6. .

Nicetis, daughter of Apries, whether wife or mother to Cambyfes 179.6.

Noah 2. 4.8cc. Nama Pompilius King of Rome, his flory 157.

Numantia in Spain, taken by Scipio Æmilianus 685.4.

Chus, called Darius Nothus, King of Persia

Mithridates Eupator, fon of Mithridates Ener- Ochus, or Achafueros, fucceedeth his father 245. 1. Efthers husband ib. invadeth Phanicia 246. 4. Egypt 248.8. opposeth Philip of Macedonia 250, 13. murdred by Bagoas 251.16.

Octavius, Prator at Sea 681.15. first Consul of his family 560. 51. fent into Syria to burn their ships, and kill the Elephants, is slain ibid.

Ottavius, afterwards called Angustus, his birth and breeding 734. 6. the occasion of his preferment 735.8. flighted by the Senate, which procureth the Triumvirate ib. 9. returneth to Rome from the overthrow of Cassius & Brutus 738, 16. Antony and he fall out, and are reconciled 739. 19. they make a new agreement; and prorogne their power 741. 21. he | Paris, the fon of Priamus, called Alexander, and overthroweth Pompey ibid. 22. Amony and he fall out 743.25. he overthroweth him at A-Clime 743.26. maketh Egypt a Province 744. 20. and vide 604.37, &c. askerh the advice of Agrippa and Macenas about feeling the flate 748.4. followeth the advice of Magenas 758.23. dividech the Provinces betwixt him-felf and the Senare 760. 27. firnamed Auguflw 761. 28. the general course of his Admimiftration 765.35. fhutteth the Temple of Tanu ib. 36. his wives iffue & alliance ib. 37. reformeth the Calendar 766.38.dieth 774.54. Oedipus, his story 144.8,8cc.

Ogyges 142. I.
Ohmpiads, by whom begun & restored 129. 22. Olympias married to Philip 367. 11. being reje-Red by her husband, the incenfeth her fon A. lexander 377.32. her cruelty to Cleopatra 278. $4. faceriously checketh her fons vanity 262, 50. deftroyeth Aridens and his wife 511. 18. killeth Nicanor and others ibid.19. killed herfelf by procurement of Cassander ibid.

Onias obtaineth a Temple of God, like that of Ternfalem, to be built in the Province of Heliopolis in Egypt $71.56. and 593.16.

Onomarchus, General of the Phocians, defeated and hanged by Philip 371.18.

Oppian Law against the Pomp of women 675.

74. Opima Spolia, what, and how often got 474.26. Opimian Wine, what 689.12.

Oracles, Crasus deceived by one 26.37. Alexander King of Epirus 642.2. the Original of that at Delphi 369. 14. they generally cease, and why 787.78,&c.

Oreftes 103.33. Origen 861.21. and 880.20.

Oredes, King of Parthia, overthroweth Craffus 719.9. killed by his own fon Phrames ibid.

Ofiris, the same with Mizrains 70.2,8cc. Offracism at Athens, whence, and what 277. 16. Otanes, one of the seven Persian Conspirators against the Magi, 182.1. Othe feizeth of the Empire 814.20. Othryades the famous Spartan 143.33. Oxyartes, father of Roxana 492. 10.

Oxyathres, brother to Darius Codomannus present at the battel of Iffus 256. 34. well respected by Alexander 487. 1. Beffus delivered unto him to be punished 489.5.

Pallas, Freedman of Claudius 800. 16. and 802.20. and 804.24. Pamphilus the Martyr 861.21. Papyrius Dictator 643.2. and 428.28.

why 101. 27.

Parmenio fent over by Philip into Alia 377. 33. killed 488.3.

Parthians revolt from Antiochus Theus 546.5. Parthenia, their fory 135.37.

Parysatis, wife to Davius Nothus 219. 26. and 220.51.

Patronage and Clientship, what 153.3. Paul the Apostle converted 792. 85. his Travels 802.21. Martyred 813.43.

Paufanias, fon to Cleombrotus, and Tutor to Plifarchus, overthroweth Mardonius at the battel of Platea 204.61,&c. affecteth the Kingdom of Greece 286.4. being for that condemned he perisherh in Chalciacum 287.7.

Paulanias, fon of Plistonacles, and Grandfon to the fon of Cleombrotus, envieth Lyfander, and procureth imdemnity to the Athenians 336. 5. being condemned for making truce with the Thebans, he flieth to Tegea and there dieth 341.13.

Paulanias killeth Philip 377. 33. Pelopidas 354.44. and 356.49.

Pelops 99.24.

Peloponnesian War 297.1,8cc. Perdiccas, Alexander dying delivereth to him his Ring 503. 4. Governour of his Kingdom after his death 504. 2. flain 506. 6.

Pergamus, the Kingdom therof 547. 4. Periander, Tyrant of Corinth 141.7, &c.

Pericles, fon of Xanthippus 287.5 groweth eminent 200. 12, adviseth the Athenians to the Peloponnefian War, and why 296.29,&c. his death and commendation 301.12.

Perillus, maker of the brazen Bull 386.9. Perfeus, fon of Danae 93.9,&c.

Perfes, or Perfens, Philips base son, his story 543. 50,8cc.

Perfia, the Empire thereof 177.1,&c. Persecutions of the Christians, first 813. 43. fecond 827. 32. third 830. 4. fourth 842. 28. fifth 853. 6. fixth 871. 40. feventh 872. 3. eighth 873.5. ninth 876. 11. tenth ibid. 13. Petalism of Syracuse, what, and whence 396.16.

Peter the Apostle, whether ever he was at Rome 803.22. Martyred 313.43. Phanicians, who 45. 18. steal Io, the daughter of Fafus 92.6. Phalaris Tyrant of Agrigentum, his fory 385.8.

Pharifees, a Temish Sect, what, and whence 609.3. Pharnabazus, son-in-law to Artaxerxes, made General 240. 82. amulation betwirt him and Iphicrates hindreth their successe 24x. 85. and vide 230. 55, &cc. perswadeth the King to employ Coron 231.57. procureth the dellenction of Tiffaphernes 234. 64. defeated

Pharnaces, fon of Mithridates, tifeth against his father 710. 38. overthrown by Cafar 730.

33.
Phalacelus, fon of Antipater, made Captain of Jernfalem by his father 619.20. retained Captive by the Parthian General 623.28. dasherh our his own brains 624.30.

Philetarus the Eunuch, toundeth the Kingdom of Pergamas 547.4.

Philip, son of Amyntas, educated at Thebes 365.
4. first Guardian to his Nephew, then King ibid. 5. &c. changeth the name of Crenida into Philippi 366. 8. descateth, and hangeth Onomarchus 378.18. getteth Olynthus 372.21. Iulleth the Athenians asseep 373.24. endeth the Phocian War'374. ibid. otherwise victorious ibid. 27. &c. descateth the Athenians at Cheronea 376. 30. voted General of Greece, and matrieth Cleopatra 377. 32. stabbed ibid.

his commendations 378.34.

Philip, fon of Demetrius, succeedeth his Uncle Antigonus Doson 528. 18. ingaged in the Social War ibid. invadeth Etolia 531.24. and Peloponnesus ibid, 25, putteth an end to the Social War 533.28. entereth into Alliance with Annibal 534.31. droven from Apollonia ibid. poyloneth Aratus 335.32. worfted again by the Romans at Elis 536. 34. a general Peace betwirt him, the Romans, and others 537.36 incurreth hatred several waves ibid. 37. ingageth against the Romans 538.37. his fruitlesse expedition against Athens ibid. 39. courteth the Etolians in vain 539.40. beaten by Flamininus ibid. 42. fent with Ambaffadors to Rome 540. 44. overthrown at Cynoscephale 541. 45. and 674. 53. procureth Peace $42.47. diffarisfied ibid. 48. putterh to death his fon Demetrins 544. 51. dieth of Melancholy ibid. Philip, fon of Herod, and Tetrarch of Trachomtis 771.47, dieth 792.87.

Philip Emperour 872.2.

Philifus the Historian joyneth with Dionysus 399. 24. and 401.28. recalled out of banishment by Dionysus the younger 406. 40. his death 407.43.

Philomelus Captain of the Phocians in the Sacred War 368.13. flain 370,16.

Philotas, fon of Parmenio, put to death 488.3. Philopomen the Megalopolitan 679.11. Phlegon Trallianus wrote of the Eclypse which hapned ar out Saviours death 785 73.

Phocians, War decreed against them by the Amphysicious 370 15. Since by them 374.26.

Phocian the Good 380.40.

Photopeus 90.1.
Pissingua Trant of Athens, his story 118.29.
Pissopoyloneth Germanicus 776.58. for that condamned, killeth himself ibid.

Plague, horrible about the beginning of the Peloponnefian War 3,00.9. in Rome 453.77. and 482.43. in Carthage 401.29. in the Carthagiman Camp 402.32. in Africk 589.14. Plancus (Munacius) moveth in the Senare, that

Octavius Casar may be sirnamed Augustus 760.28.

Plata 205.62. befieged 301.11. yielded and razed 303.16.

Plate the Philosopher 363. 66. sold by Dienyfins 405. 37. returneth to Syracuse 406. 49.

Plantius, warreth in Britain 799. 13. & 808.15.
Pliny Jumor his Letter to Trajan, in behalf of Christians $31.6.

Podarces, the name of Priamus 101.27.

Polycrates, Tyrant of Samus, his flory 272.1.
Polysperchon, left by Antipater Protector of the Kings 507.9. inviteth Olympias into Macedonia ibid.11. reduceth her thither 510.18. perswaded by Cassander to make away Hercules
the son of Alexander 514.25.

Pompey (Quintus) forced to a dishonorable
Peace by the Numantines 685.3.
Pompey (Quintus) Confed with Sulla 666 a his Pompey (Quintus) Conful with Sylla 696. 3. his fon, and Sylla's Ton-in-law killed ibid. made away by his own Soldiers ibid. 4.

Pompey (Strabo) father to Pompey the Great, Conful with Cato 694, 27, did great fervice in the Social War ib. Proconful, killed with Thunder 607, 5.

pompey, afterwards called the Great, joyneth himself with Sylla 699. 12. Sens into Africk against Carbo, 200. 15. his other acts against Sylla's Enemies 702. 19. his other acts against Sylla's Enemies 702. 19. his other acts against 707. 31. defeateth Mithridates 708. 34. reduceth Syria into a Province 709. 36. Settler matters in Judaa betwixt Hyrcanus and Arisobalus 710. 39. with Crassus and Arisobalus 710. 39. with Crassus and Arisobalus 710. 39. with Crassus and Cessus and Consulship by force 718. 7. made Sole Consul 725. 21. the Civil War betwixt him and Cessus 726. 24. goeth to Brundusjum, and thence passed into Epirus 727. 27. overthrown on the plains of Pharsalum 728. 30. slying into Egyps, is there treacher outly slain 72. 93.

Pompey (Sextus) fon of Pompey the Great remaineth of all his fons 734. 7. recalled into Sicily ibid. caufeth a great famine 740. 19. which procureth an agreement with him ib. the Peace with him broken ibid. 20. defeated by Cefar 741:22. killed ibid. 23.

Ponius Pilaus fucceedeth Graus in Judaa 778.
61. condemneth Christ 785, 72. giveth Tiberius notice of his miracles 791.83, &c. fent to Rome to give an account of his slaughter of the Samarians 792.86, builhed to Vienna where he killeth himself 794.2.

Popi-

Popilius, the Roman Ambassador, imperiously commandeth Antiochus Epiphanes to quit E-

A TABLE.

Poppea Sabina married to Nero 808. 32. killed by him 810.36.

Porsent Maketh War upon the Romans 422. 17.
Porses King of India, Conquered by Alexander 494.17.

Porus and Dandion, Kings of India, fend Ambaffadots and Presents to Augustus 765, 36.

Poridad revolvesh from the Athenians 293. 22. belieged 294. 4. delivered up, and a new Colony placed therein 200.10.

Pratorfing, what 481.40.

Prexappes killeth Smerdis the fon of Cyrus 181.

Priamus 101.26,27.

Provas, King of Alba 149.7,&c.

Procles, from whence the Royal family of the Proclide at Lacedamon 1213,8cc.

Provinces divided by Augustus betwixt himself and the Senate 760.27.

Pfammentus, fon of Amasis 81.28. and 180. 7. Prelomy, 6th of Lagus 504.2 getteth possession of Egyp 505.4. his wives, and issue 585. r. Prolomy Errannas; fon of the tortner, sieth to rolomy Coraums, fon of the former, flieth to Selencus libid, killeth libid, and 520. 14. gettern Macedonia 521. 1. killed by the Galls libid.

Ptolomy Philadelphus, his (tory 585.1, &c. Ptolomy Euergetes 586.3, &c.

Ptolomy Philopator 587.5, &c. Ptolomy Epiphanes 589.8,&c.

Prolony Philometer 591.12.
Prolony Physica bidd, 2 contentions betwirt his brother and him tor the Kingdom thid. &cc. his cruelty after he obtained it 594 18. leaveth it to his wife to dispose of it at her plea-fare 503. 10. Piolomy Louburus 596.21. Pholomy Alexander the first ib d.

Ptblom Alexander the second 597.23.

Protony Auteres ibid. 24. expelled by his inbjects 598. 24. hireth Galbinius to restore him ibid. 26.

Protony Diony flus his eldelt fon 599, 28. a War betwirt him and his wife and fifter Cleopatra 600.29, &c. drowned 602.29, &c.

Ptolomy, the second son of Austers, married to his fifter Cleopaira 602.34, poyloned by her Publicati, who 688.11. relieved by Cafar 715.1.

Pylagora, who, and their Office 94.12.
Pylagora the Wite of Demosfhenes 304.20.
Pyrtha, the Wite of Dencation 107.4.

Pyrrhaa, The faly, so called from her ibid.
Pyrrhus, son of Aacida King of Epirus, restored to his Kingdom by Ptolomy his father-in-law 517.6. called into Macedonia by Alexander, fon of Cassander ibid. invadeth Thessay 518.

8. saluted King of Macedonia 519. 10. expelled thence by Lyssims 520.13. called into Italy by the Tarentines 647.9, defeatest Levinus the Consul 648. 10. marcheth towards Rome ibid. 11. called into Sicily 549. 13. and 639. 25. by his cruelty loseth all, and returnerh into Italy 640. 26. and 650. 14. defeated by Curius Dentatus ibid. 15. sealeth home 651. 16. expelleth Antigonis Gonatas, and recovereth Macedonia 52. 4. endeavoureth to restore Cleonynus the Spartan 523. 5. sain at Argos ibid. 8.

Pythagorus the Philosopher 285.35.

Q.

Quafter's Created at Rome, and the nature of their Office 420.11, &c.

Ì

Amesses the Citic built by the Israelites

Rhodians labour to keep in with all the Captains 512.2. Demetrius his fruitlesse attempt against them ibid.

Red-Sea, whence so called 36. 14.

Romans first see foot out of Italy 652. 2. first invade Asia 677. 5. degenerate through security after the overthrow of Carthage 682. 18. land 688. 5. first draw-civil blood of one another 686.7. their affairs never more prospered than under Monarchy 752. 10. the want of a King hindred the promotion of their affairs ibid. 11. their ridiculous alterations and seditions for want of it ibid. give up all their powerto Augustus by the Law called Lew Regia 761.20.

Rôme, the divertity of opinions concerning the founding of it 150.10, &c. built 152.1. taken by the Galls 478.34. fet on fire by Nero 808.

Rome, New Rome, Constantinople so called 877.

Royana married to Alexander 492. 10. wirth Child at his death 504. 1. killed with her fon by the procurement of Cassander ibid.

Rusinus, a coverous, but valiant man 649.13. removed from the Senate, and why 651.16.

S.

Salamina, the Island 115, 22, the fight there betwith the Greeks and Xerwes 200,40.
Salome, the fifter of Herod 768,41,8 c. and 770,44, and 771,46, and ibid.47.
Sammites, whence so called 483,44, defeated by blob.

ibid fend the Romans under the yoak 644.

Sardanapalus, his flory 15.8,80.

Saturninus the Seditious Tribune 692.29.

Scipio (Publius) Conful, defeated by Annibal, and protected by his own fon 666. 34. he and his brother victorious in Spain 669. 40. dettroyed by dividing their forces 670.43.

Scipio (Cneus brother of Publius) fent by his brother into Spain, overtheoweth Hanno, and

prospereth 667.35.
Scipio (sirnamed asterward Africams) protetecteth his father in danger 666.34. profpereth in Spain 672. 45 made Conful ibid. 48. distresser the Carthaginians so as they recall Hannibal 673. 49, &c. whom he also overthroweth ibid. 50. goeth Lieutenant to his brother into Afia 677. 4. called to account by the Tribunes 678.8. dieth 679. 11.

Scipio (Lucius brother to Africanus) made Conful 677. 4. fubdueth Amiochus the Great ibid. 5. and 561.35,&c. taketh the firname of Afiaricus 677.5. fined 679.10.

Scipio Nasica (Corculum) contradicteth Cato about the destruction of Carthage 682,18. Scipio Nafica (Serapion) procureth the destru-

Aion of Gracchus 686.7.

Scipio Amilianus sent into Spain 681. 17. secureth the Army 683. 20. made Conful, though under age ibid. 21. taketh Carthage ib. 22. taketh Numantia in Spain 685. 4. dieth fuddenly 687. 9.

Scythians overcome the Medes 20.22. mock Darius 186.11. overcome by Philip 375.29. Scianus his rife, fortune, and end 777. 59. poy-foneth Drusus the son of Tiberius ibid.

Selenens Governour of Babylon 508.13. flieth into Egypt 511, 20. recovereth Babylon and the Eastern parts 513. 23. flain 520. 14. and Scleucus Callinicus, and Pogon, succeederh his father Antiochus Theus 546.6.

Seleucus Ceraunus succeedeth his father Seleucus Callinicus 549.9.

Seleucus Philopator succeedeth his father Antiochus the Great 563. 39.

Seleucus, fon of Demetrius Nicanor, killed by his mother Cleopatra 582.78.

Seleucus, fon of Grypus 583.80. Semiramis, wife of Ninus 14.5,8c.

Seneca the Philosopher, School-master to Nero 804. 24. confulted about killing Agrippina 805.27. put to death by his Scholar 809.35. Lipfius his Apology for him ibid.

Sertorius riseth in Spain 702.19, murdred by Perpenna ibid. 20.

Servius Tullius, King of Rome, his flory 165.28.

Seventy Interpreters 585.i. Severus Emperont 851.2,&c. Sibyls, the number of them 171.42,&c. Sicily 282. 1.8cc. and 627. 1.8cc. Sicronians, and their Kingdom 88. 1.

Sidon 388.4. and 248.7. and 258.37. Silithrus 4. 8.

Sifygambris, Mother of Darius Codomannus, taraken by Alexander 257.35. dieth 403.40. Smerdis, fon of Cyrus, killed by order of his brother Cambries 181.9. Smerdis the Magician usurpeth ibid. 11,800. Socrates the Philosopher exerciseth upon Alci-biades the true Platonick love 327.6. his death 363.66.

Solon discourseth with Crasis about happinesse 25, 35, &c. the Athenians betake themselves to him for the repairing of their State 115. 21.

Softhenes the Macedonian represseth the violence of the Galls 521.2. deltroyed 522.2.

Sparta, the Citie, whence fortalled 120.1. Spartacus the Fencer 705. 27. deseated by Crasfus, and flain 706.28.

Sphinx, and her Ridle 144.8. Spurius Malius affecteth the Kingdom at Rome

Stagira, the Native Citie of Aristotle, rebuilt for his fake 378.35.

Statira, married to Artaxerxes Mnemon 218.23. poysoned by Parysatinhis mother 229.52.

Sufferes, Magistrates of Carthage, the nature of their Office 391.7.

Sulla, L. Cornelius Sulla, Quaftor to Marius in the War with Jugurtha 661.20. his Lieutenant in the Cimbrick War 692. 23. endeth the Social War 695.27. the War against Mithridates decreed to him 696.3. driveth.Marins from Rome ibid. forceth Mithridates to beg Peace 698. 10. getteth all Italy into his power 700. 14. publisheth Tables of proscription ibid. 15. rageth cruelly against perfons and places 701.15. maketh himfelf Dictator in perpetuum ibid. 16. layeth down his power ibid. 17. dieth ibid. 18.

Syracuse built 388.2. replenished with new Inhabitants 412. 52. feized by Agathocles 628. 3. befieged by Amilcar 633, 11. by Marcellus 670.41. Surprized and plundred ibid. 42.

Acitus Emperour 874.8. I Tanaoxares, or Smerdis, fon of Cyrus 179.5. killed by his brother Cambyfes 181.9.

Tantalus 99.24. and 100.26. Tarentines their Original, with a description of their Government, Gitie, and Conversation 646.8. their War with Rome 647.9. fend for Pyrrhus ibid. Subdued 651.17.

Tarquinius Priseus King of Rome , his flory 163. TarTarquinius Superbus his Original, and carriage, before, and after he came to the Kingdom 169.37,&c. banished 175.50. endeavoureth to recover his power 417.6. and 418.9. procureth the affiftance of Porfena 422.17. folliciteth the Latines 426. 24. raiseth a sedition at Rome ibid. 25. his party is overthrown in battel against the Romans 430, 32, dieth 413.33. charity may be allowed him in an indifferent cenfure 752.10.

Temenus, one of the Heraclida 104.34,&c. obtaineth Argos 105.35.

Temple of God at Terusalem built by Solomoni 54.42 repaired 58.8. burnt 64.24, recedified 178. 2. and 184.7. prophaned by Antiochus Epiphanes 564.42. repaired by Herod 768.42. burnt and razed 821 .18.19.

Temple, like that of Jerusalem, built by Sanballat, on Mount Gerizim 260.44.

Temple, resembling that of Jerusalem, built by Onias in Egypt 571.56.

Temple of Juno at Argos, built by Peiranthus

Temple of Diana at Ephefus, burnt, and repaired 368.12.

Terentime Games, what, and their Original 660.

Tertullian 856,13,8cc.

Tenta ; Queen of the Illyrians, bringeth a War upon her felf 662.22.

Teutones and Cimbri overthrown by Marius 602. 22.

Thais the Courtifane caufeth Alexander to burn · the Palace of Perfepolis 269.67.

Thebes in Baotia, the Citie and Kingdom 142.1 &c. betrayed 346. 26. recovered 348. 29. Philip therein putreth a Garrison 376.31. de-Stroyed by Alexander 380.39.

Thebans quit the Government of Kings 146.12. crave aid of the Aginature against the Athemans 278.18. left out of the League 350.34. fend Pelopidas to the Persian King 356. 49. perswaded by Epaminondas to look after Seamatters 358.54. destroy Orchomenus ibid. all their power and credit loft together with Epaminondas 361.59, &c. spent with the Phocian War, defire money of Ochus 372. 1 how used by Philip after the battel of Charonea 376.31 revolt from Alexander 379.38 exiles received by the Athenians after the destruction of their Citie ibid. 40.

Themistocles causeth the Athenians to look after shipping 195.35. his other devices to oppose Xernes 199. 44. procureth Xernes his flight 201. 52. and vide 282.30. his acts after Xerwes his flight 283, 32, his glory 284, 32. procureth the Athenians to rebuild their Walls 285.2 his banishment & death 287.7. Theramenes active for restoring the Democracy | Trajan Emperour, his story $20,2,8c.

at Athens 329.71, &c. instrumental in making Peace with Lacedamon 333.90, &c.murdered by the Tyrants for his integrity 335, 2. Thefens King of Athens, his flory 109.7. The mother of Athens 117.26.

Thrasybulus the Tyrant succeedeth his brother

Hieron at Syraonfe 394. 15. Thrastbulus the Atheman, his acts 329. 80. chofen General again 331.84. being in banistiment he ejecteth the thirty Tyrants 335,&c. fent against the Lacedamonians 344. 21, &c.

flain ibid. 22. his commendation ibid. brasymene, the Lake, where Annibal overthrew the Romans 667,36.

Thucydides the Historian, whence excited to write 296.31. General for the Athenians in Thafus 307. 28. his hillory 3 27.76.

Tiberiams his Letter to Trajan concerning Christians 830.5.

Tiberius Nero grants his wife Livia to Octavius

Cafar 765.37

Tiberius, his fon ibid, subdueth Germany 772.50. reduceth the Pannonians and Dalmatians 77.3. 51. feeleth Germany 774-53. succeedeth Augustus 775. 55. under presence of quieting the East exposeth Germanicus to danger and treachery 776.57. the Character given him by his School-mafter 777.60, would have Christ registred amongst the gods 791.83,&c. despised and revised by the Parthian King

Tigrames King of Amenia holdeth Syria 18. years 584. 81. receiveth and protecteth Mithridates his father-in-law 704. 24. overthrown by Lucullus 705.25. waiteth Cappadocia ibid. 26. fubmitteth to Pompey 709.35.

Tigranes, the fon, rebelling against his father flieth to Pompey 709.35. put to death ibid. Timpleon fent to the aid of the Syracufians from Corimb 411. 50. his acts ibid. 51. &c. his death and honours 414.56.

Tiffaphernes Governour of Lydia 218. 22. giverh intelligence to Artaxernes of the defigns of his brother Cyrus 231,29, intrappeth the Officers of the Greeks in their retreat 226. 44. impeached by Pharnabazus yet continueth in power 231.58, acteth according to the advise of Alcibiades 321.62. his Councils in the dark 325.71, fecureth Alcibiades 328.77. pur to death 234.64.

Titus, fon of Vespasian, serveth in Britain under his father 800 15. fent by him to bring forces into Judea 812.41, ordered by him to besiege Ferusalem 818. to. his actions against it till its destruction 819.15,&c. his ftory after he came to the Empire 824.25.

Tomyris, Queen of the Maffagetes, killeth Cyrus 178. 2.

Tribuni Plebis, when Created 434. 39. their power, privilege, tyranny, &c. ibi. 40. &c. their number increased to ten ibid. and 457.85.

Tribunes, several forts at Rome 435.42. Tricipitina, the Conspiracy of Pompey Craffus and Cafar 714 47.

Triumvirate of Cafar Antony and Lepidus 735.9. Trojans, their Original 100.26.

Troy built 101. 26. deftroyed by the Greeks 103.

32. vide Ilium. Tryphon (or Diodoins) fetteth up the fon of Balas against Demetrius Nicanor 578. 70. killeth Antiochus his newly madeKing to fet up himfelf ibid.71. dispossessed and flain 579.73. Tullius, M. Tullius Cicero suppresseth the Conspiracy of Cataline 711. 40. banished by Clodius 716.3, recalled ibid.4. defendeth Deiotarus 731. i. laboureth for an Amnesty after Cafar's death 733. 5. profcribed through the importunity of Antony 736.10. his death, extraction, and commendation ibid. 11.

Turnus 140.6.

Tyndareus, father of Castor and Pollux 121.2. Tyrant, whence, and whom it fignifieth 272,2. Tyrants, thirty inflave Athens $34.1.thirty Cantonize the Roman Empire 873.6.

Tyre, built, and its Kingdom 388.4. befieged by Alexander, and of an Illand made a Chersonefus 258.39.8cc.

Tyreaus the lame Athenian Poet 136.40.

7 Alerianus Emperour 875. 5. Valerius Poplicola, his story 178.45. and 417.7. and 418.9.

Varro Conful overthrown at Canna by Annibal

Varro, the greatest Scholar of all Romans, Conful 702. 20.

Varus (Quintilius) shamefully destroyed with his Army in Germany 773.52.

Veii, the Citie, taken by Camillus 476.31.

Verulanium, a Municipal Citie of the Romans in Britain 807.30.

Vespasian prospereth in Britain 800. 15. sent against the Tews by Nero 811.41. put upon feeking the Empire 815. 5. his acts in Judaa 816.6, &c. the Armies in the East declare for him 817. 9. the Lex Regia renewed in his behalf 822.22. his ftory till his death 823.23,

Virgil the Poet 765 36.

Virginius killeth his daughter 468. 13.

Viriathus, Captain of the Lusitanians, destroyed by Capie 684.2.

Vitellius (Lucius) Prefident of Spria 793.87,&c. Vitellius (Aulus son of Lucius) opposeth Otho 814.2. owned as Emperour ib. 3. his carriage 815.4,8cc. at a fland what to do 817. 10. killed 813.10.

Ulyffes, his story 101.28,8c.

Ar, the old Theban 145.10. Troian 100. 25. first Meffenian 131.27. fecond 135. 28. Thyrean 106.28 betwixt the Phocians and Dores 289.12. Corinthian 291.18. Peloponne fian 297. 1. Social 367. 9. Phocian or Sacred 368. 13. Lamian 505.4. first Punick 652.1. second Punick 666.33. third Punick 682, 18. Gallick Cisalpine 663.26, Achaick 684.1. Servile 685. 4. Allobrogick 689.14. Cimbrick 692.21. Social or Italick 693.25. Civil betwixt Sylla & Marius 696. 3, &c. hift with Mithridates 696.3. fecond 702, 21, &c. third 703, 22, Piratick 706.29. Gallick managed by Julius Cafar 717. 6. and 724.20. Civil betwixt Pompey and Cafar 726.24. Alexandrian 600.30. and 729 32. African 730. 34. Mutinian 735. 8. Philippian 737. 14. Perufian 739. 17. Egyptian Detwixt Octavius Cafar , and Antony and Cleopatra 604. 38. and 742. 25. Fudaick 812. 41, 8cc. and 816.6, &c. and 819.15, &c.

T Anthus the Bootian King 113.18. and 146.

Xenophon diffenteth from other Authors concerning Cyrus 24. 43. marcheth with Cyrus the younger against his brother 226. 44. chofen Captain into Proxenus his room ibid, the excellency of his Conduct in the retreamof the Greeks 228150 thore of him and his commendation 364.66.

Xerxes, fon of Darius by Atoffa, succeedeth his father 192.28. invadeth Greece 1 96.28. flieth 202,53. falleth into disorder after his return 207.68.&c. murthered 209.74.

Xernes, fon of Artanernes Longimanus, murthered by his base brother Secundianus 217.

Abinas, suborned by Ptolomy Physcon, getteth the Kingdom of Syria 582.77. defeated and flain ibid. 78.

Zalencus, the Law-giver of Locri, his model of Government 409.4.

Zelors, horrid outrages committed by them in Terusalem 816.7. fall out amongst themfelves 819.14.

Zopyrus, by mangling his face recovereth Babylon 185.10.

Zoroastres King of the Bullrians, rather Oxyartes 14.5. Zoroastres the Magician ibid.

Zorobabel layeth the foundation of the second Temple at Terufalem 178.2.